This beautiful place of resort, the Brandywine Springs, was opened last Monday, by Geo. Ferree, late of Carlisle, Pa., and we suppose will be well patronized when the weather gets warm enough.

DIGNITY HURT.—The Duchess of Sunderland resigned her office as mistress of the robes under Queen Vic., because Mrs. Norton, (celebrated for crim. con. with Melbourne) was introduced at Court.

SO MUCH FOR LIBELS.—The suit of Consul Trist against the New York Sun for libel, has been decided in favor of the defendant. So much for an attempt to muzzle the newspaper press.

PRICE OF A SLAP.—Mr. Raynor, member of Congress from North Carolina, has been fined in the courts at Washington, $50 for slapping the face of his colleague, Mr. Montgomery.

"The Whigs don't advance a single argument. With them it is all talk, talk."—Windsor Statesman.

Well, you ca n't say it is "all talk and no cider."—Claremont Eagle.

HAVANA.—Advices from Havana, received at New Orleans, furnish no news of consequence. Seven of the pirates recently taken at San Antonio were to be hung on the 1st of June. It is also stated that thirteen others had been taken.

STRANGE.—In a Court in New York, on Friday the jury were fined fifteen dollars each, because two of them dissented from a sealed verdict that all had previously signed. They dissented because their lives were threatened.

FOUND OUT BY HIS LAUGH.—A man was recently tried and convicted in England, for breaking some windows in a watch-house. He was identified by his laugh. The magistrate pronounced it good evidence.

PRETTY OLD.—There is a negro named Boston, a slave in North Carolina, who is near 107 years of age. Boston has good eyesight, is active for a man of his extreme age, and can walk a mile without fatigue.

A HANDSOME PRESENT.—The passengers that were on board the packet ship Poland when struck by lightning, have had made a beautiful silver pitcher to be presented to Capt. Anthony for his coolness and presence of mind on that unfortunate occasion.

MORE IMPROVEMENTS.—A steamboat to run to Albany was launched at N. York on Saturday. Her engines and boilers are on a new principle, and she, it is said, will consume but three cords of wood between the two cities. A great saving if it can be effected.

A gentleman while taking a walk in a garden in Baltimore lately, found that the earth gave way from under him and he narrowly escaped going to the bottom of a deep well, which had been covered over, and was not known to the occupants of the adjoining house.

DEATH OF THE KING OF PRUSSIA.—We noticed this death on Saturday. Before his decease, his bed was removed to the window, and at his desire, he was shown, reflected in a mirror, the defiling of his army. He bade it a last adieu, and resigning the regal power to his son, and quietly died.

ANOTHER STORM AT NATCHEZ.—Another storm visited Natchez on the 6th ultimo, causing considerable damage to the neighboring plantations, destroying fences, corn, negro quarters, gins, etc. Fortunately, the approach of the storm was preceded by a heavy rain, which prevented a repetition of the fatal effects af May 7.

DANCING.—"I am an old fellow," says Cowper, in one of his letters to Hurdis; "but I had once my dancing days as you have now, yet I could never find that I could learn half so much of a woman's real character by dancing with her, as by conversing with her at home, when I could observe her behaviour at the table."

TRAVELLING IN THE AIR.—A man out west proposes to carry the United States Mail through the air at the rate of 100 miles per hour. We have conversed with several æronauts at various times upon the subject, and we are satisfied that it is no more impracticable than travelling by steam.

A vessel recently arrived at Tampico, from Boston, with a cargo of ice; the custom house demanded sixty thousand dollars duty. The master refused to pay it, and threatened to let the whole melt, at which the heart of the collector melted, and he charged but one hundred and fifty dollars.

THE CROPS OF TEXAS.—A late number of the Austin Gazette says: "The farmers on the Colorado, in the neighborhood of Bastrop, are willing to contract for the sale of their crops of corn at the rate of fifty cents par money, per bushel. The yield of the early crops on the Colorado will this year be immense."

INDIANS CAUGHT AND KILLED.—Intelligence to the 12th, from St. Augustine, details the capture of three Indian warriors, a woman and child. Most of the men were killed. Another account is given of the death of three Indians and a white man, and the capture of several prisoners.

The St. Joseph's Times of the 9th ult. says that vessels were very much wanted, not a vessel in port being unengaged.—The stock of cotton was gradually decreasing, and sales making at ready prices, say 8 to 8½ cents for Georgia and Alabama notes. Stock of cotton on hand 4,735 bales.

"SOMETHING FOR GEOLOGISTS."—Under this head it is stated in the Greensburgh (Pa.) Sentinel, that some persons, being engaged in boring the earth, near that town, for salt water, and when at the depth of 712 feet, they struck a vein of bituminous coal, which was found to be upwards of five feet in depth.

STEALING A HOUSE.—A Scotch paper tells of a house at Edinburgh, that was repaired and left by the workmen at one o'clock on Monday, and which could not be found on Wednesday at all. It had been stolen away. Not even a hearth stone was left. It was a little store, and of course the theft was entitled a novel species of shop-lifting.

MURDER AND ROBBERY.—Mr. George Rice, while passing along the great road between Springfield and Westfield, Mass. when about three miles from Springfield, was shot dead, robbed of a small sum of money, and left. The body was not long after discovered, and the supposed murderer had been traced as far as Simsbury in Connecticut.

Capt. Hamilton, of the British Navy, lately visited Texas in the sloop of war Pilot, in order to procure the release of eight negroes who were conveyed to Texas some years ago from Barbadoes. He accomplished his object in regard to five of them. One was dead; the other two were supposed to have gone to the U. States.

MUNICIPAL LEGISLATION.—The city of Houston, Texas, has ordained that all persons found lying drunk in the streets, market house or inclosure, or any out lot within the limits of the city, shall be sentenced to work upon the streets of the city for a term not less than thirty days for the first offence, and not less than sixty days for each subsequent offence.

The trial in Washington of the Granite Cutters, for offences connected with a late conspiracy to increase their wages which had occupied the court and jury since Tuesday, was concluded on Thursday, with a verdict of guilty against all the defendants. Their names are Alexander Ledingham, Alvia Cole, Redman Burke, George Wex and Redman Burke, junior.

While the late King of Prussia lingered in his last illness, his stomach refused to retain even the smallest portion of nutriment. He was supposed to have been kept alive several days by a broth bath, which was ordered by his physicians.—His father, Frederick William II, was also kept alive for a brief period by inhaling clarified air, which was purified by a machine invented expressly for this purpose!

PITTSBURGH AND CLEVELAND.—We were struck with the change which the New Cross Cut Canal made in our business facilities at Pittsburgh. On going down to the Monongahela wharf at 3 o'clock on Thursday, we saw two steamers just preparing to leave port, and the following signs up, "Pittsburgh & Cleveland," and "Pittsburgh, Beaver and Cleveland."—Success to trade.—Harris' Intelligencer.

A STORM AT ST. JOSEPH'S.—We learn from the St. Joseph's Times that a severe thunder storm occurred at that place on the 8th inst. A Mr. Montgomery, of Bainbridge, Ga., was struck on the neck by a piece of glass which served the jugular vein, and notwithstanding surgical aid was immediately procured he died in fifteen minutes.

PROVIDENTIAL RESCUE.—We learn from the Savannah Georgian that the individual named Farley, who drifted to sea on a raft near Tybee, some days since, has been preserved from a horrid death, having drifted ashore on the same raft in the vicinity of Port Royal, after having been at sea from Tuesday until the Monday following, without any thing to eat or drink, except a little of the bark of an old oak tree.

On the passage of the Great Western, a sailor, in shifting the jib, lost his hold and fell overboard. The vessel went over him. The engine was stopped, the crew mustered and stationed at their posts, a boat manned and let down—the man, half a mile behind, was rescued, brought on board, and the vessel put under way—in the space of eight minutes.

GREAT LUCK.—Ship Memphis, hence, landed her passengers in Liverpool in 17 days. Capt. Nichols writes that he did not reef a sail or furl the maintopgaliant sail during the passage. The ship has a magnificent life launch of Francis's construction; and all the passengers were unanimous that they would never travel in a vessel which was not provided with similar boats.

CONGRESS AND THE PRESS.—It is the wont of some of the most disreputable members of Congress to villify the Press, to call it calumnious, scurrilous and vile. Now we insist that the press, including the very lowest journals, is more dignified, descent, and decorous than Congress, and its language and demeanor far more gentlemanly than that of a large class of honorable members.—Charleston (S. C.) Mercury.

MODERN IMPROVEMENTS.—About fifty years ago the celebrated Oliver Evans, of Wilmington, Delaware, predicted that the individual was then living who would see the day when a steamboat would run from New Orleans to Louisville in twenty-five days, and at the time was considered crazy. The steamer Edward Shippen recently made the trip from Louisville to this city and back in eleven days and five hours.—PICAYUNE.

The New Orleans Bee says: "Our Levees and store houses are nearly vacated, our streets dull, and mercantile men are retiring from their labors to gain a respite by which they will be enabled to commence the fall campaign with renewed vigor.

The Mississippi still continues at a very high stage. Fears are yet entertained that it may make its way into the city, although no measures of consequence have been taken to prevent such a disaster.

UPWARDS OF SIXTY PERSONS DANGEROUSLY POISONED.—We learn from the last Wellsville Gazette, that on the 18th ult. on board the steamer N. York, while ascending the Ohio river above Cincinnati, upwards of 60 persons were dangerously poisoned by eating corn bread, the poison having been infused in the bread or meal, and that all who took supper and eat of it, were taken with a violent vomiting. How the poison got in the bread, remains a mystery. No death had occurred.—Pittsburgh Intelligencer.

SKELETON.—We understand, says the Wilmington (Del.) Gazette, that in digging the foundation of the Water Witch Engine house, a few days since, several human bones were found, in what had apparently been the grave of an adult individual. Laying with them were also found a small hand cleaver, and two half cents, dated 1807 and 1809. A short distance above the bones, and apparently a part of the filling of the grave, was a thick coat of mortar. Although an event occurring within thirty years, as is indicated by the date of the coins, yet no knowledge appears to be possessed by any person of the circumstances of such an interment, and though shrouded in mystery, it may be the only evidence that will ever be presented that some homicide had been committed.

Money continues low. In evidence of this, we may mention that one of our best houses was offered a discount for all the "paper in circulation, with their endorsement, a day or two ago, at 5½ per cent." Indeed, some of the banks are puzzled to know what to do with their funds, especially as their receipts exceed their applications. Should this state of affairs continue long, they will find it impossible to make dividends in the fall. One thing is consolatory, however, viz: that a better condition of affairs for the resumption of specie payments could not exist. Indeed, several of our banks could resume now with perfect ease, provided some satisfactory arrangement as to the indebtedness of the United States Bank to them, could be made. Such an arrangement, we learn is now under consideration, and with a favorable prospect. Let a liberal and manly course be pursued on the part of all the Philadelaphia institutions, and every thing will soon assume a more favorable appearance. Stocks, we think, have reached the lowest point.—Bicknell.

THE BOUNDARY QUESTION.—The "Spy in Washington" writes: "I believe I am warranted in saying, that no formal, specific proposition has yet been made by the British to the American Government.—But that assurances have been given to our Minister, Mr. Stevenson, that the British, with some trifling variation, would accept the proposition, made, some time since, by our Government.

"As despatches were brought Mr. Fox by a special messenger (Mr. Schenley,) it is probable that they contain, in detail, the views of the British ministry.

"The outlines of the proposition made by the President (as I understand them,) were, that the line should be run by a joint commission; and that if there should be any disagreement between the commissioners of the respective Governments, the points in dispute should be submitted to some mutual friendly European power for adjudication. There is every prospect, therefore, that such a reference will be the result of the pending negotiations; that justice will be done, and that the peace of the country, maugre all the clamor of selfish war hawks, will be preserved."

Business Department.

We say to our Bro. Scott that nothing would afford us more pleasure than to attend his camp-meeting, to which he has kindly invited us, but our editorial duties, which are paramount to every other, will prevent us.—ED.

Samuel Benjamin, West Jefferson, O., writes us that it will be impossible for him to take the Western Recorder any longer than this year, and yet he has not paid us. See our terms. We cannot discontinue under these circumstances, unless we learn he is not good for the bill.

TIFFIN, O., JULY 1, 1840.

Dear Brother Springer: Since I had the pleasure of seeing you I have obtained a few subscribers for the Recorder. It is well received by the people generally, and all with whom I have conversed upon the subject, see its importance to the church in the west. Yet after all it is not supported as it should be. This conference ought to have at least, within its bounds, ONE THOUSAND SUBSCRIBERS, but I believe there are at present not more than six hundred. We have nearly fifty stations and circuits in this District.—Twenty subscribers in each, including missions, would make the above number, and I believe there are a few of those to whom forty numbers, or more, of the paper are sent, weekly, so that several must have very few subscribers.

Will the brethren, more especially the preachers, make a vigorous effort to increase the subscription list for our District, to one thousand, by the ensuing conference? I have no doubt it can be done. Let superintendents and assistants all work.

Brethren, the prosperity of the paper depends greatly upon you. The worthy brother who edits it has taken upon him a considerable amount of pecuniary responsibility. Its publication is necessarily attended with expense. Try then to collect its dues, and see that all who are able to take it, DO SO. Hoping these few hints will have the desired effect, believe me, yours, &c.,

GEORGE HUGHES.

Our subscribers, who are in arrears, will oblige us by IMMEDIATELY REMITTING the amount of their paper, as we much need money to "go ahead." Send to us any amount and we will pay the postage. No excuse.

As the Post Master General has decided that "a post master may enclose money in a letter to the publisher of a newspaper, to pay the subscription of a third person, and frank the letter, if written by himself," it is the same thing for a subscriber to address his letter, enclosing the pay for his paper to a Post Master who is publisher of a newspaper, in his official capacity by which it will come free.

We wish our subscribers to address their letters containing remittances for us, to "C. Springer, P. M. Meadow Farm, Muskingum O.;" also all letters on the official duties of our office as Post Master in the same way. All letters on other business, or business of a private nature should be addressed to us omitting the official signatures P. M. and we will pay for them.

Camp-Meeting Notices.

There will be a camp-meeting for Coshocton circuit, held on the farm of John Dean, Esq., two miles from Jacobsport, to commence on the 27th of August; we request the attendance of ministers and Members.

The Presidential meeting will be held at Bro. Furgeson's, White Eyes Plain, to commence on the evening of the 24th at 5 o'clock. Bro. Brown is requested to be present at the commencement of the meeting. Other ministers are requested to attend. M. N. WARREN, Sup't.

[We have no charges against you on the subject to which you refer.—ED.]

There will be a Camp-Meeting held on Lima circuit, Ohio, to include the third Sabbath in August; we request all who can make it convenient to attend. J. GUEST, Sup.

A Camp-Meeting will be held on the farm of John McKinney, between Sidney and Hardin, Shelby county, Ohio, including the third Sunday in August. Ministerial aid from the surrounding circuits, is strongly solicited.

JOSEPH PARKE.

A Camp-Meeting will be held at the Diamond, ten miles from Indiana town and county, Pennsylvania, to commence on the thirteenth day of August. It will be twenty-four miles from Blairsville, and 62 from Pittsburgh. Brothers Baldwin, Robinson, Shearer, Francis and Tipton, we hope, will not fail to be with us.

T. J. ADDIS, Sup. Clearfield ct.

We expect to hold a Camp-Meeting on Reho-both circuit, six miles west of Wilmington, Ohio, to commence on the Friday before the third Sabbath in August, and request the aid of Bros. Flood, McGuire, Hunt, Paul, Stephens, Evans, Hughey, Atkinson, Little, the Dalbeys and Hibben. ISAAC EDWARDS, As.

A camp-meeting for Zanesville circuit will commence on Thursday preceding the last Sabbath in August, on the land of Barnard Wortman, within half a mile of this office, on the old ground. Ministers and members of other circuits are pressingly invited to attend. The ministers from the western part of the District can go from this meeting in company to conference.

There will be a camp meeting held for the Ligonier Mission, near the turnpike leading from Ligonier to Youngstown, and about 2½ miles from the former place, to commence on the 28th of August next. We solicit the aid of brothers G. Brown, J. Robison, J. B. Shearer, T. J. Addis, W. Turner, S. Hazlett, W. L. Baldwin, J. Hopwood, D. Kinney, and J. M. Piper, together with any of our unstationed brethren of the adjacent circuits, who can assist us. W. W. TIPTON.

A camp-meeting will be held on the land of George Castle, 4½ miles from Mt. Vernon, Ohio, to commence the 21st of August; we especially invite brethren Springer, I. Thrap, Wilson, Davis, Marshall, Warren, Bamford, Tallentire, Bloomer and Cowl. We hope they can make it convenient to attend, but if any of the brethren cannot be with us, I should be glad if they would let me know soon as possible. M. SCOTT.

Stray Mare.

STRAYED from the subscriber living in Hopewell township, Muskingum county, O., on the 20th of June last, a light SORREL MARE, about 14 or 15 hands high, with a small blaze in the forehead and one white foot; no shoes on when she left. Any person returning said mare or giving information to the subscriber where she can be found, will be liberally compensated for his trouble.

NAAMAN R. GRANT.

Hopewell tp., Musk., O., July 8, 1840. 46

The New World--Quarto.

THE publisher of the NEW WORLD has the pleasure of announcing to the public, that in consequence of the immense circulation which this popular and mammoth sheet has obtained throughout the United States, and the numerous requests which have been made for its publication in a form better suited for the preservation of its valuable contents, he has commenced the issue of a QUARTO EDITION of the NEW WORLD, in sixteen large pages, containing nearly every article which appears in the folio, and will in addition be embellished with a piece of popular music. The form is a splendid one for binding, and will make a beautiful volume at the end of the year. Orders must be sent without delay, as only a limited edition will be printed. No. 1 of the QUARTO appeared on the 6th of June.

TERMS.—Four dollars per annum; Two copies for Seven Dollars; Three copies for Ten Dollars; Five copies for Fifteen Dollars. Payable in advance.

The New World--Folio,

IS published every Saturday morning, at No. 30, Ann street, New York, by J. WINCHESTER, and contains all the new works by the most popular authors in both hemispheres, together with a vast amount of other literary matter, Tales, Poetry, &c., and all the current news of the day.

TERMS.—Three Dollars per annum. Two copies for Five Dollars; Five copies for Twelve Dollars; payable invariably in advance, free of postage.

New York, July 8, 1840. 46

DEFERRED ARTICLES.

OBITUARY.—The Wilmington Journal announces the death of James Price, Esq., President of the Union Bank of Delaware.

The officers of the late Concord, N. H. Bank, are liable to the institution to the amount of more than $150,000. The Bank's nominal capital was only $100,000.

The Legislature of Pennsylvania has passed a law vesting the Court of Common Pleas of that State, with power to charter charitable societies, fire companies, &c. It is of doubtful expediency.

OBITUARY.— Edward Livingston, former Speaker of the Assembly, died at Albany, on Tuesday morning. He has been long known as a man of distinction and talents.

A DEAD RACE.—On Saturday last, Amos Core, of Doylestown, while riding a blind horse for a dollar, was thrown with dreadful violence, and killed by the animal's falling upon him.

Owen Holmes, Esq., of Wilmington, Delaware, died very suddenly on the 9th inst. of apoplexy, He was a lawyer of very extensive practice. and a candidate for election on the Administration ticket.

Capt. Stockton, implicated in the late Jersey Railroad disturbances, about passengers, has been fined twenty dollars and costs. Wm. Briest, indicted on a similar charge, was fined five dollars and costs.

Ensign Reade, of the 1st Royals, was instantly killed on board a steamboat, near Montreal, a few days since, by the accidental discharge of a loaded musket, upon the muzzle of which he was resting his chin.

HOW FAR IS IT TO CHURCH?—To judge from the reports of the missionaries, this is a question seldom asked in New Zealand. "I have had sometimes," says one of them, "my house beset before daybrake, by natives coming for instruction. They think nothing of coming the distance of ten miles and some twenty miles."

In Germany it is illegal for a young man to marry before he is 25, or any young woman before 18; and a young man, at whatever age he wishes to marry, must show to the police and priest of the commune that he is able, and has the prospect to provide for a wife and family. These remarks, says Mr. Combe, apply more especially to Wurtemburg. And here the peasantry are better off, more moral and refined, in fact, have a better taste, &c., than in England or France

The Wesleyan Missionary Society has two hundred and forty-one principal stations; three hundred and sixty missionaries: three hundred catechists and schoolmasters, four thousand assistants and teachers without salaries; seven foreign printing establishments; seventy-two thousand seven hundred and twenty-seven communicants; two hundred thousand attendant on the ministry of the missionaries; and fifty-seven thousand in the schools. More than twenty languages are used by the missionaries; and about $400,000 are raised annually by the British Methodists to promote this work of truth, love, and mercy. One hundred years ago that handful of seed was sown, the fruit of which now shakes like Lebanon. How adorable are the ways of God!

AN INTERESTING CEREMONY.—The corner stone of the First Methodist Protestant Church, of Spring Garden, was laid yesterday afternoon, in the presence of a large assemblage, at the corner of Eleventh and Wood streets. Several eloquent and impressive addresses were preached, and listened to with marked attention. Among the speakers were the Rev. Mr. Chambers, Rev. Mr. Shedrick, Rev. Mr. Brainerd, and the Rev. Thos. H. Stockton, pastor of the congregation. An interesting account was given of the rise, progress and present circumstances of the society, when, after an appeal from the pastor, a collection was taken up, and large subscriptions obtained, to aid in the erection of the church. In accordance with custom, a number of papers and periodicals were deposited in the stone, together with a copy of the constitution and roll of the society.—Philadelphia Pennsylvanian.

Thunder storms are generally more severe on the banks of rivers than at a distance—yet we believe that steamboats, although containing a vast amount of iron and other kinds of metal, are seldom struck by lightning. We do not recollect a single case—although it is likely that some instances are on record. Why are they less likely to be struck by the electric fluid than sailing ships on the ocean, which appears to be the fact? We pause for a reply.—Boston Mer. Journal.

The explanation is easy. All the iron about a steamboat operates as a conductor or a set of conductors, and draws off the electric fluid silently from the surrounding atmosphere. If a single rod will ordinarily protect a dwelling from lightning, how much more should a hundred tons of iron, extending upwards many feet above the promenade deck, and downward to within a few inches of the water, protect a steam-boat? It would be a miracle, almost, if a steam-boat should be struck by lightning, under such circumstances. Yet we recollect reading, 15 or 20 years ago, of a young woman being killed by lightning on board a steam-boat on the Mississippi. No other instance of the kind ever came to our knowledge.—N. Y. Jour. of Commerce.

DECLARATION OF AMERICAN INDEPENDENCE.

JULY 4, 1776.

WHEN, in the course of human events, it becomes necessary for one people to dissolve the political bands which have connected them with another, and to assume, among the powers of the earth, the separate and equal station to which the laws of nature and of nature's God entitle them, a decent respect to the opinions of mankind requires that they should declare the causes which impel them to the separation.

We hold these truths to be self-evident:—that all men are created equal; that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights; that among these are life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness; that to secure these rights, governments are instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed; that whenever any form of government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the right of the people to alter or abolish it, and to institute new government, laying its foundation on such principles, and organizing its powers in such form, as to them shall seem most likely to effect their safety and happiness. Prudence, indeed, will dictate, that governments long established should not be changed for light and transient causes; and accordingly all experience hath shown, that mankind are more disposed to suffer while evils are sufferable, than to right themselves by abolishing the forms to which they are accustomed.—But when a long train of abuses and usurpations, pursuing invariably the same object, evinces a design to reduce them under absolute despotism, it is their right, it is their duty, to throw off such government, and to provide new guards for their future security. Such has been the patient sufferance of these colonies; and such is now the necessity which constrains them to alter their former systems of government. The history of the present king of Great Britain, is a history of repeated injuries and usurpations, all having in direct object the establishment of an absolute tyranny over these States. To prove this, let facts be submitted to a candid world.

He has refused his assent to laws the most wholesome and necessary for the public good.

He has forbidden his governors to pass laws of immediate and pressing importance, unless suspended in their operation, till his assent should be obtained; and when so suspended, he has utterly neglected to attend to them.—He has refused to pass other laws for the accommodation of large districts of people, unless those people would relinquish the right of representation in the legislature; a right inestimable to them, and formidable to tyrants only.

He has called together legislative bodies at places unusual, uncomfortable, and distant from the depository of their public records, for the sole purpose of fatiguing them into compliance with his measures.

He has dissolved representative houses repeatedly for opposing, with manly firmness, his invasions on the rights of the people.

He has refused, for a long time after such dissolutions, to cause others to be elected; whereby the legislative powers, incapable of annihilation, have returned to the people at large, for their exercise; the State remaining, in the mean time, exposed to all the dangers of invasion from without, and convulsions within.

He has endeavored to prevent the population of these States; for that purpose obstructing the laws for naturalization of foreigners, refusing to pass others to encourage their migrations hither, and raising the conditions of new appropriations of lands.

He has obstructed the administration of justice, by refusing his assent to laws for establishing judiciary powers.

He has made judges dependent on his will alone, for the tenure of their offices, and the amount and payment of their salaries.

He has erected a multitude of new offices; and sent hither swarms of officers, to harrass our people and eat out their substance.

He has kept among us, in times of peace, standing armies, without the consent of our legislatures.

He has affected to render the military independent of, and superior to, the civil power.

He has combined with others to subject us to a jurisdiction foreign to our constitution, and unacknowledged by our laws; giving his assent to their acts of pretended legislation:

For quartering large bodies of armed troops among us:

For protecting them, by mock trial, from punishment for any murders which they should commit on the inhabitants of these States:

For cutting off our trade with all parts of the world:

For imposing taxes on us without our consent:

For depriving us, in many cases, of the benefits of trial by jury:

For transporting us beyond the seas to be tried for pretended offences:

For abolishing the free system of English laws in a neighboring province, establishing therein an arbitrary government, and enlarging its boundaries, so as to render it at once an example and fit instrument for introducing the same absolute rule into these colonies:

For taking away our charters, abolishing our most valuable laws, and altering, fundamentally, the forms of our governments:

For suspending our own legislatures, and declaring themselves invested with power to legislate for us in all cases whatsoever.

He has abdicated government here, by declaring us out of his protection, and waging war against us.

He has plundered our seas, ravaged our coasts, burnt our towns, and destroyed the lives of our people.

He is at this time transporting large armies of foreign mercenaries to complete the work of death, desolation, and tyranny, already begun, with circumstances of cruelty and perfidy, scarcely paralleled in the most barbarous ages, and totally unworthy the head of a civilized nation.

He has constrained our fellow-citizens, taken captive on the high seas, to bear arms against their country, to become the executioners of their friends and brethren, or to fall themselves by their hands.

He has excited domestic insurrections among us, and has endeavored to bring on the inhabitants of our frontiers the merciless Indian savages, whose known rule of warfare is an undistinguished destruction of all ages, sexes, and conditions.

In every stage of these oppressions we have petitioned for redress in the most humble terms: our repeated petitions have been answered only by repeated injury. A prince, whose character is thus marked by every act which may define a tyrant, is unfit to be the ruler of a free people.

Nor have we been wanting in attentions to our British brethren. We have warned them, from time to time, of attempts by their legislature to extend an unwarrantable jurisdiction over us. We have reminded them of the circumstances of our emigration and settlement here.—We have appealed to their native justice and magnanimity, and we have conjured them by the ties of our common kindred to disavow these usurpations, which would inevitably interrupt our connexions and correspondence. They too have been deaf to the voice of justice and of consanguinity. We must, therefore, acquiesce in the necessity which denounces our separation, and hold them, as we hold the rest of mankind—enemies in war, in peace friends.

We, therefore, the representatives of the United States of America, in General Congress assembled, appealing to the Supreme Judge of the world for the rectitude of our intentions, do, in the name and by the authority of the good people of these colonies, solemnly publish and declare, that these united colonies are, and of right ought to be, FREE AND INDEPENDENT STATES; that they are absolved from all allegiance to the British crown, and that all political connexion between them and the State of Great Britain is, and ought to be, totally dissolved; and that, as Free and Independent States, they have full power to levy war, conclude peace, contract alliances, establish commerce, and to do all other acts and things, which Independent States may of right do. And for the support of this declaration, with a firm reliance on the protection of Divine Providence, we mutually pledge to each other our lives, our fortunes, and our sacred honor.

JOHN HANCOCK.

Printed during the great procession in Zanesville, Ohio, July 4, 1840.

TOLEDO, (OHIO,) JUNE 10.

SINGULAR AND OMINOUS PHENOMENON.—During the night of May 25th the water of Lake Erie, in the bay and river at that place begun suddenly to rise, and soon swelled to a height, in front of the town, never before witnessed by the oldest inhabitants. The night was calm and still; no wind or storm had been observed to sweep over the country, with the exception of a few black and eddying clouds that had appeared in the horizon about sunset. There were no waves or unusual commotion in the water; yet it rose, in the space of a few brief hours, full four feet above its ordinary level, and nearly a foot higher than it has before been known to rise. What is the cause, or whence came this mighty swelling of the waters? Had this singular phenomenon happened in the days of olden time, under the reign of some despotic ruler, it would certainly have been hailed by the people as the forerunner of their deliverance from tyrannic oppression.

THE BANK OF THE UNITED STATES.—Some important changes are about to be carried into effect, in relation to this institution. The directors have determined to reduce the expenses and with this view about twenty of the clerks in the mother institution will be discharged on the 1st of July. However, we may regret the necessity for this course,—we cannot but approve the determination of the directors, under the circumstances. They would not have been doing justice to the Stockholders had they kept men in office when they had nothing for them to do. The President, Mr. Dunlap, has agreed to a reduction in his salary of $2000 per annum. Mr. Joseph Cowperthwait, the Cashier, has resigned in consequence of ill-health. His place is at present supplied by Alexander Lardner, Esq. To show that no want of confidence was felt as to Mr. C. he was unanimously elected a director.

There has hitherto been one Cashier, and three Assistant Cashiers of the Bank. The new arrangement dispenses with the three assistants.

The appointments to be made for the first July are all to be from the present officers; and all who may decline re appointment, or not to be elected, are to be allowed to draw their salaries to the end of the year 1840; an arrangement eminently creditable to the institution.

This new organization will touch also the branches; and the aggregate of saving will be about one hundred thousand dollars per annum. This sum is a pretty good annual interest on two millions of dollars.

Hereafter the President and Cashier will sign the notes of the Bank.

These changes have excited little sensation, and have met the approval of all who desire to see the Institution once more in a substantial position.—Bicknell.

DR. HINES.—The New Orleans papers furnish some particulars in relation to the recent movements of this notorious swindler. He was lately arrested in that city for negro-stealing; and while passing under the assumed name of J. W. Walker. The Advertiser gives the following account of his capture.

It appears that on being arrested by a lieutenant of the third municipality police, he requested of the officer, as a favor, to accompany him to some place which he named; this the officer complied with, but while on their way to the place designated, Walker, who is represented as a smart active fellow, bolted, and soon left the lieutenant a considerable distance in the rear. The chase was kept up, however—the pursuers increased, when some more active than others, were rapidly gaining on the runaway, when stopped by a fence or dyke, which Walker alone cleared at a bound. He then broke thro' the Catholic burying ground, unembarrassed by the numerous obstacles that impeded his course, and would have penetrated into the woods, had not an individual on horseback "headed" him—when he immediately shaped his course in a different direction and entered the Protestant burying ground, where owing to some more formidable obstacles than previously encountered, or to exhausted nature, he was captured, hand-cuffed, and committed to prison.

A COURT OF INQUIRY has recently been held in this city, by order of the President of the United States, to investigate the conduct of the gentlemen named in the following Order, charged, in a communication to the President from a committee appointed by the Democratic Convention of the city of Baltimore, with "employing the influence and patronage of their places to injure and persecute the supporters of the National Administration." The Washington "Globe" publishes the following:—Balt. Com. Jour.

OFFICIAL.

GEN. ORDERS, No. 20. Head Quarters of the Army, Adjutant General's Office, Washington, June 11, 1840.

I. The board of officers instituted by the direction of the President of the United States, whereof Brevet Brigadier General J. E. Wool, Inspector General, is President; and which convened at Baltimore, Maryland, the 25th of May, 1840, "for the purpose of investigating certain allegations made against Major T. W. Lendrum, Commissary of Subsistence, and Captain S. B. Dusenbery, Assistant Quartermaster, in relation to the manner in which they have performed their duty in the Subsistence and Quartermaster's Departments," has reported the following opinions:

1st. Opinion of the case of Maj. T. W. Lendrum.—"The board having patiently heard all the testimony which the parties interested have to offer, and after having carefully examined the proceedings, and a mass of documentary evidence, is of opinion, that there is not the slightest foundation for the accusations made against Maj. Lendrum; on the contrary, the board is of opinion that he has, free from all party feelings or political considerations, discharged his duties in the Quartermaster's and Commissary's Departments conscientiously, and with a single eye to the public good. In this opinion the board is cordially united."

2. Opinion in the case of Capt. S. B. Dusenbery.—"The board has heard the testimony which the parties interested have to offer, and after a careful revision of the proceedings, is unanimously of the opinion, that Capt. Dusenbery, as a disbursing officer of the Quartermaster's Department, has been governed by no other considerations than those of the public interest, and that he has honestly and faithfully discharged his duties."

II. The proceedings and opinions in the foregoing cases have been submitted to the President and are approved.

III. The board of officers, of which Brevet Brigadier General J. E. Wool, Inspector General, is President, is hereby dissolved. By order of

ALEXANDER MACOMB,
Major General Commanding-in-Chief.
L. THOMAS, Assistant Adjutant General.

We learn that true bills have been found by the Grand Jury at Trenton, against Captain Stockton and John Nagle, Esq., and also against several of the individuals of the Hornet line, in consequence of the recent railroad rows, about the disposition of passengers.

LETTER remaining in the Post Office at Meadow Farm, Muskingum, Ohio, on the 1st of July, 1840.

Rev. George Hughes.

C. SPRINGER, P. M.

Meadow Farm, July 1, 1840.

Dissolution.

THE partnership heretofore existing between S. B. Johnson and J. M. Kirkpatrick, under the firm of S. B. Johnson & Co. was dissolved by mutual consent, on Thursday 19th inst.

S. B. JOHNSON,
J. M. KIRKPATRICK.

Zanesville, March 31, 1840. 32tf

William Green,

CLOCK AND WATCH REPAIRER, SILVERSMITH, AND JEWELLER,

CAN be found at his shop on Main street Putnam, a few doors north of J. C. Guthrie's store, where he will do his best to accommodate customers. He keeps on hand an assortment of spectacles, watch trimmings, pencils, &c.

As far as we have tried MR. GREEN as a watch repairer he has given us good satisfaction.—ED.

April 22, 1840. 35tf.

Glass Manufactory.

THE subscriber having dissolved his connexion with the former company, has taken the GLASS WORKS below town under his own management.

WINDOW GLASS, double and single, all seizes, and of superior quality will be kept constantly on hand for sale on reasonable terms.—The experience of the proprietor, in the manufacture of the article, will insure all made to be of the best quality. Call and see.

S. B. JOHNSON.

Zanesville, Ohio, May 6, 1840. 37

Indiana Conference-Notice.

THE first session of the Indiana Annual Conference of the Methodist Protestant Church, is appointed to be held at LIBERTY MEETING HOUSE, (John Burton's) near Mt. Tabor, Monroe county, Indiana, commencing Thursday, October 1st, 1840. BRO. JOSEPH SIMPSON is requested to preach the introductory sermon, at 10 o'clock, A. M. of said day, and BRO. ELIJAH COLLINS to serve as alternate.

As this is to be our first session, let us with the help of the Lord, endeavor to begin right. In view of this, the committee respectfully make these few suggestions. 1. Let our brethren assemble in the spirit of devout prayer, that the Divine blessing and approbation may attend our enterprize. 2. Let them be in attendance promptly at the commencement of the session. 3. Let each superintendent prepare accurate returns of the numbers in society, with the names of unstationed ministers and preachers, in the various circuits and missions. 4. Should any ministerial member be prevented from attending, let him not fail to address the conference by letter, as required by rule of discipline, and communicate all needful information.

N. B.—It will be recollected that each mission, having three or more societies, embracing not less than thirty members, is entitled to elect and send a delegate to the Annual Conference, provided the missionary is entitled to a seat in said conference.

H. P. BENNETT, A. H. BASSETT, T. P. ARMSTONG. } Committee.

July 1, 1840. [Meth. Prot. please copy.]

The Brother Jonathan.

EDITED BY N. P. WILLIS AND H. HASTINGS WELD.

The Largest and Cheapest Newspaper in the World,

AND CERTAINLY AMONG THE BEST.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY, BY

WILSON & COMPANY,

At 162, Nassau Street, N. York.

TERMS, $3 PER ANNUM, IN ADVANCE.

UPON entering the second volume of this pioneer in the introduction of papers of its class, the publishers may be excused for congratulating themselves upon the continued prosperity and advancement of their periodical, from the issue of its first number, to the present time. Aware that competition is the life of business, they expected, and have met with rivals; but those rivals have, so far, been essential aids to the publicity and circulation of the Jonathan. New readers have been made, where, comparatively, few existed before, and the taste created for the elegant literature of the two hemispheres, carried into all parts of the country, and made accessible to all, has produced a demand for the Brother Jonathan, which it is gratifying to state is continually on the increase.

With such addition to their resources and emoluments, the publishers have aimed to give a commensurate increase to the value and interest of their sheet. In addition to the labors of the gentlemen whose names are announced as editors, the publishers avail themselves constantly of the aid of such occasional contributors as they can find space for.

For the foreign correspondence of the Jonathan the services of Isaac C. Pray, Jr., have been engaged; and his fine literary taste will also be exercised in the selection of things rare, new and worthy in the European literary mart. Selections from the cream of the foreign magazines will of course be continued.

MUSIC.—In the progress of improvement, a new feature has been added to the Brother Jonathan—the publication of new and popular music. Every paper will contain something in this way, new and pleasant—reference being had in the selection, rather to such pieces as all can sing and play, than to recherche compositions, suited only to the scientific. A new font of music type has been purchased, and a gentleman engaged to superintend this department, of excellent experience and knowledge of music.—This will enable us to give music a publicity which it never enjoyed before: to carry the same themes for carol to the sylvan maid in the farthest back woods, which delight the party in the city drawing-room. A simultaneous popularity will thus be enjoyed all over the country by such compositions as are adapted to the public taste, and worthy of the public favor.

Whatever other improvements may suggest themselves, will be adopted; and no pains spared to make the Jonathan a welcome visiter to all sorts of people, whose tastes are worthy of gratification. Other periodicals may be addressed to particular opinions—or to particular classes—Jonathan will wander free, "from grave to gay, from lively to severe," and strive, with all the aid he has enlisted, to compass the whole circle: to give, in a word, a Cyclopedia of whatever may be desirable in a literary magazine, and weekly newspaper. He appeal to the past for vouchers of what he can do—and what he can, he will.

TERMS—Three dollars a year, in advance.—For Five Dollars two copes of the paper will be sent one year, or one copy two years. In no case will the paper be sent out of the city unless paid for in advance.

☞All communications and letters should be addressed, postage paid, to

WILSON & COMPANY,
No. 162, Nassau street, New York.

O. WHITE, BOOK BINDER, No. 104 Main Street, Zanesville, Ohio.

January 15, 1840. 21tf

Dissolution.

THE partnership heretojore existing between the subscribers in the PUTNAM FOUNDRY, under the firm of HARTLEY & ANDERSON, was this day dissolved by mutual consent.

The Putnam Foundry will hereafter be conducted by J. J. Anderson & Co.

LEVI HARTLEY,
JACOB J. ANDERSON.

Putnam, Jan. 1, 1840. (Jan. 29: 23.)

Notice.

ALL persons indebted to the late firm of Hartley & Anderson, are earnestly requested to call at the Foundry and make settlement, as the change of owners makes this step absolutely necessary. We ask the attention of all persons concerned, to this notice.

J. J. ANDERSON & Co.

Putnam, Jan. 1, 1840. (Jan. 29: 23.)

NOTICE.—A. W. HOSMER is no longer acknowledged as our agent for the Rose of the Valley and Western Farmer; and the public is hereby cautioned against subscribing to him for either of those publications, until he gives a satisfactory explanation of his treatment toward us, or the reason why he has not remitted the money due this office, according to instructions.

Note.—Should Mr. Hosmer give us immediately, the explanation which his conduct calls for, we pledge ourselves to place him in a better light before the public than this notice will leave him in.

G. G. MOORE.

Cincinnati, May, 1840.

S. C. Haver,

IN the flourishing town of Putnam has on hand 40 or 50 SADDLES ready for sale, of different qualities, comprising nearly all the varieties in fashion in our Buckeye State.

A good assortment of Bridles and Martingales: Riding and driving Whips: between 180 and 200 Carriage and heavy draft Collars, which will compare and wear with any others made here or elsewhere.

Also, fine York, Dearborn, heavy team and common Farming Harness. A lot of first rate Carriage and Buggy Harness, (brass and silver plated.)

Trunks, vallises, saddle-bags, and double covered wagon whips, varying in quality and price to suit purchasers.

The only recommendation he now offers for his work, is the testimony and long experience of his old customers and friends. He is still anxious to please and accommodate those who may call on him, and hopes to share so much of the public patronage as his attention to his business shall merit.

Putnam, April 29, 1840. 28tf

PROSPECTUS OF THE CHRISTIAN REVIEW.

THE subscriber respectfully submits to public consideration, the following plan of a new periodical:

I. Its title—The Christian Review.

II. Its object—The advancement of Christianity.

III. Its matter—1. Sketches—
1. Of Bible Christianity.
2. Of Christian Churches.
3. Of Benevolent Institutions.
4. Of Scientific Institutions.
5. Of the Arts.

2. Historical and Geographical Illustrations.

3. Biographical Notices of the Wise and Good.

4. Reviews of Standard and Popular Literature.

5. Observations on the Affairs of the Nation and the World.

6. Current Intelligence—Poetry, &c. &c.

IV. Its means—1. A choice circle of Correspondents, qualified—by various and ample personal accomplishments, and by their social connexions and distinctions,—to supply all departments of the work, richly, with original communications.

2. A selection of the permanent and transient organs of all the interests and institutions enumerated,—both English and American, as far as practical.

V. Its Terms.—One number to be published, every month, beginning with July, in large quarto style, in the neatest style of the art, enclosed in a cover, well directed and punctually mailed.—Price, a single copy—$1.25 per annum. For any number over five copies, $1 each per annum. Payment must be made in advance.

With this brief outline of his scheme, the subscriber commits it to his friends and the public for such encouragement as they may see proper to extend. Subscriptions will be received at the Bookstore of Mr. J. Whetham, Chesnut street, above Sixth, or at the office of the Saturday Evening Post, Carter's Alley—or at the residence of the Editor, No. 10 Sergeant street.

THOMAS H. STOCKTON.

Philadelphia, May 12, 1840.

The subscribers to "The Methodist Protestant Letter-Press" will be supplied with the new publication, by which that is to be superseded. If, however, any of them shall wish to decline the new work,—when the first number shall reach them, let them duly mark and return it. If they do not return it, they will be regarded as subscribers and expected to remit the subscription price at once. The Agents of the "Letter-Press" are requested to aid in securing an extensive circulation for the "Review." It is desirable that the names of subscribers be forwarded immediately.

THE

WESTERN RECORDER

IS PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY.

☞The office of the Recorder is five and a half miles west of Zanesville.

TERMS.

1. The WESTERN RECORDER will be published weekly, on an imperial sheet, at $2 00 per annum, in advance: $2 50 at the end of three months; $3 00 at the end of the year.

2. No discontinuances will be allowed, except at the discretion of the publisher, until all arrearages are paid.

3. To all ministers having regular pastoral charges, who do any thing at all for the paper, if they will direct us where, a copy shall be sent gratis; any other who forward to us $10 00 for new subscribers, shall have six copies sent to any address he may give.

4. All letters designed for the paper, must be directed to "C. Springer, Meadow Farm, Muskingum, Ohio."

5. A failure to notify a discontinuance before the expiration of the subscription year, will be considered a new engagement.

CHARACTER.—The pages of the WESTERN RECORDER will be open to discussion on all moral questions;—it will give articles on Literature, Mechanics, Agriculture,—an abstract of Religious and Political intelligence, and whatever may be interesting and instructive to families in general. A portion of its columns will be open to Advertisements and Prices Current,—another portion to sustain the interests of the Methodist Protestant Church in the West.—These two latter objects will not likely occupy more than one page.

The RECORDER will take a firm stand against Clerical Supremacy.

THE WESTERN RECORDER.

C. SPRINGER, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER. | TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM IN ADVANCE. | Volume 1. | ZANESVILLE, OHIO, WEDNESDAY, JULY 15, 1840. | Number 47. | JOHN W. WHITE, PRINTER. | $2.50, IN THREE MONTHS; $3, END OF YEAR.

POETRY.

For the Western Recorder.

HAPPINESS.

ere is a thought above all others dear, umphant thought of immortality;
at raises hopes of happiness above hopes that linger round this lower sphere.
d what is there in man to elevate is high inspiring, thrilling thirst for bliss ove this world, to which his thot's are chained e kindred ledges to their native rock?
is there not a vital principle nich tasting happiness, although the dregs heavenly love, would grudge to leave below, d thus defraud him of his proper bliss?
nat bliss? poor feeble, purblind man would say, d shall I yield, what here made sure by fate nay possess, for that perplexing thought, nich may deception prove, or prove to be image only of deluded hope.
tease me not with such a mystery unknown things, of things which may not be, better is a little certain than mountain pile of what contingency y bring, or bring not, at the will of chance.
t reason says, and what is earthly bliss?
nat earthly bliss to man is measured out nly that which makes him sigh for more, rather feel that happiness—so called,
ticipated; so is happiness of heaven.

E. S———.

COMMUNICATIONS.

RELIGIOUS INTELLIGENCE.

CONNELSVILLE, PA., JULY 1, 1840.

Brother Springer: The work of the Lord is progressing among the people on Union uit. Many are seeking the Lord their God, ing the way to Zion with their faces thither- d, and saying, come let us join ourselves unto Lord in perpetual covenant that shall not be gotten.

We have just returned from a protracted meet- which we held at Fayette Furnace, in the arel mountain, at which we had a very inte- ing and refreshing season. The congregation large and attentive. We were favored with isit from Bro. W. W. Tipton, who labored lously and successfully,—fourteen were added the church. May they be faithful.

Since my last, we have held several protracted etings, at nearly all of which we had very in- esting revivals. As nearly as I can ascertain, lut one hundred and forty have joined us this r, and our prospects, in several places, are of encouraging character. Our chief hindrance extensive usefulness, at this time, is political tatement. In some places it is with difficulty t the minds of the people can be called off from tical affairs, long enough to listen to a sermon, where this is the case we "labor in vain," efforts are like "water spilled upon the und, which cannot be gathered up." O! that may overrule all to the promotion of the d of our country and His glory.

Yours, sincerely,

JAMES ROBISON.

WAYNESBURGH, PA., JULY 1, 1840.

Brother Springer: Since my last communica- n, we have held several interesting meetings this circuit. One at brother John Loar's, miles south of this place, which was quite eresting and profitable, throughout, and will ubtless, be recollected by some with grateful otions of soul, through eternity. Here, as l as at several other meetings, we were favor- with the labors of Bro. Wm. Ellis, which re highly appreciated among us. Eight joined in church fellowship, during this meeting.— nother meeting held at the Round School ouse, four miles east of this place, was in aracter, throughout, somewhat similar to the e described above. Here we were favored with labors of Bro. Shearer, of Union circuit, labored with much acceptability through the eting,—five joined the church. The cause of otestant Methodism is, we believe, second to ne in this region; and, we think this circuit at present in as healthy a condition, as at any mer period.

The highly excited state of the political world, these parts, tend to militate against the in- est of the church; if men were half as solicit- s and diligent in seeking salvation, the world uld soon be converted. What a pity it is at christians suffer themselves to be surpassed, zeal, by the men of this world.

We have it in contemplation, to hold a pro- cted meeting in Amity, embracing the Sab- th immediately preceding the sitting of con- ence. We solicit the aid of brethren who n make it convenient to pass this way on eir road to conference, as this place lies directly the Steubenville road, being about one day's le from said place.

Brothers Bobison, Shearer, Fordyce, Munhall, monton, Clawson, and any others who can nveniently attend, are invited.

Yours, in Christ,

JAMES HOPWOOD, Sup't.
Monongahela circuit.

For the Western Recorder.

THINGS THAT I LIKE.

I like to see young ladies and gentlemen, hile in church, spend the time that should be evoted to hearing the word of God and medi- ting thereon, in looking at one another and in lking. It shews a proper regard for the house God.

I like to see young ladies who are members of e church, decked out in all the gaudy trappings fashion; it shews their utter disregard for the in things of the world.

I like to see christians sleeping in church dur- ring the sermon; it shews they are deeply inte- rested in the discourse.

I like to see persons when leaving a class-room, giggling and laughing; it looks as though they had been engaged in devotional exercise, while in class.

I like to see class-leaders and the old mem- bers of the church neglecting their meetings for the sake of attending political gatherings; it is setting a good example to the young members.

I like to see christians get in a passion when the minister warns them of the danger of enga- ging too deeply in political strife; it proves them to be men of spirit.

O. F.

RICHWOOD, UNION, O., JUNE 30, 1840.

Dear Uncle: I take the liberty of forwarding some papers for inspection, in which you will find the following communications, viz: one on Party Spirit, and one on the Venality of the Press, which, though written some time since, will be found so peculiarly applicable to the present pe- riod, that I think your readers might be benefit- ted by an insertion of them in your columns.

Yours, respectfully,

C. SPRINGER HAMILTON.

From Alexander's Weekly Messenger.

VENALITY OF THE PRESS.

Among the numerous evils that are hanging over us at the present time, is the degradation of the public press; more especially when it is under the potent control of party spirit. The legitimate object of this mighty engine is to instruct mankind in useful knowledge, to spread before the world correct intelligence; to promote the cause of virtue and sound morals, to support the supremacy of law and justice, to elevate the mind and improve the heart, to maintain social order and good society, and to contribute to the happiness of the human family, by extending its radiant light, its genial rays, its benign influence, to the remotest bounds of the inhabited globe.

In the same ratio that it can do good when rightly conducted, it can effect evil when badly directed. How necessary, then, that its purity be preserved, and its abuses corrected. How necessary that its powers should be wielded by none but independent, intelligent, discerning, moral, chaste and elevated minds; guided and governed by honest motives, enlightened reason and philanthropic principles. In such hands, it would become the solar fountain of the intellect- ual world, the polar star to revolving thought, and a shining light to frail man. Its refulgent beams would enrapture the immortal soul; its harmonious links would form a golden chain, that would reach from earth to heaven. It would be a messenger of peace, pointing the weary pilgrims of time, through the bright vista of the future, to mansions of ceaseless bliss beyond the skies, where flow rivers of joy for evermore.

But alas! humiliating as the admission may be, the press has fallen from the lofty eminence it should have maintained, and has been prosti- tuted to accomplish the purposes of intriguing and designing demagogues. It has become the vehicle of acrimony and recrimination, of slan- der and abuse. Many of the editors of high toned partisan publications, seem to dip their pens in the gall of malice, ink their type with the essence of detraction, and propel their ma- chinery with the spirit of revenge. Each char- ges his opponent with crimes of the deepest hue, frauds of the basest kind, and of practices revolting to common decency. Could we believe the half that we read in some papers, honesty has fled from our land, patriotism has become extinct, and our elective franchise is submerged in the dark waters of perjury. That the venality of the press has done much to produce a crisis like this, is too true. That it will consummate these and all their consequent evils, unless checked in its mad, its ruinous career, is self- evident. Every reflecting man who understands fully the composition of human nature, and the natural consequences of a corrupt and corrupt- ing venal press, must come to this conclusion.

The mind becomes accustomed to its daily aliment, be that coarse or refined. Feed it with billingsgate slang from childhood up, and it will have no relish for food of a higher order, until transplanted from the hot bed of vulgarity to a more congenial element.

Our country is at this time flooded with parti- san prints, inflammatory in their character, scur- rilous in their language; blighting in their in- fluence, calculated to rouse the baser passions of men to action, regardless of private worth or public virtue, trampling under foot the rules of courtesy, decorum and decency; barren of useful intelligence, sound logic and rational investiga- tion; devoted entirely to the advancement of one set of men, and to the destruction of another; based entirely on selfish motives, recreant of the glory and prosperity of our common country, slaves to intriguing partisans, vitiating the taste, and misleading the judgments of their readers; scattering poison, misrule, confusion and anarchy, far and wide.

Against the venality of the press I most sol- emnly protest, and call upon every good citizen to place his veto upon it. Hurl from your doors all prints of this character, and teach their vile and inconsiderate authors, the danger of their course. Tell them that you love your country more than party; that you prefer truth to false- hood, decency to abuse, and courtesy to personal invective. If the editors of these violent par- tisan prints, will for a moment, pause and reflect upon the direful consequences resulting from the venality of the press, I am persuaded many of them would change their course, and put forth their noblest exertions to raise this mighty en- gine to its native dignity, and again place it upon a lofty and commanding eminence.

AMMONIUS.

From Alexander's Weekly Messenger.

PARTY SPIRIT.

From the regions of darkness a demon came forth,
And planted his standard of curses on earth;
In Eden's fair garden he first laid his plan,
To sever the ties that God made for man.

The seeds of fell discord, of hate, and of strife,
He there sowed profusely, embitt'ring life
With the virulent poison of base party spirit,
Regardless of virtue, of honor, or merit.

As mankind advanced and spread o'er the world,
His standard was planted, his banner unfurl'd;
He kindled volcanoes of partisan fire,
And roused to a flame political ire.

Beneath his dark colors, parties assembled,
Virtue was exiled, innocence trembled,
Anarchy mounted the car of confusion,
The people were blinded by party delusion.

If any stood firm on the basis of reason,
He branded their names with high party treason,
Thrust them in whirlpools of partisan faction,
And forc'd them in whirlwinds of party detraction

Old classic Greece and republican Rome,
Were lost in his vortex, dissolv'd in his foam:
His partisan lava has roll'd o'er the earth,
He's kindled his fires at each nation's birth.

If I'm not mistaken, this demon of late
Has raised his black banner within our State,
Has breath'd into many his partisan breath,
And threatened us strongly with discord and death.

His hand-maid, the mob, has shown her dark face,
And stamp'd our escutheon with shame and disgrace;
Confusion has mounted his volcanic car,
Our partisans seem to be panting for war.

Unless lucid reason should rise in her might,
And restore the deluded, the blinded, to sight,
And drive from amongst us this demon of hell,
It will soon be said of us, "lo! how they fell!"

'Tis no vision of fancy I hold to your eyes,
To raise your alarm and give you surprise;
Unless party spirit is check'd in its flood,
Our land will be deluged with rivers of blood.

When Washington bade his country—FAREWELL!
From his soul this kind warning yearningly fell:
"Beware, O! beware! of partisan strife,
"It burns with dire vengeance, it trifles with life:

"Beware, O! beware! of its serpentine breath,
"It leads to destruction; its vortex is death;
"Its miasma will poison the brave and the FREE,
"It will blight and destroy your LIBERTY TREE."*

Then these words, as by angels harmoniously sung,
From the voice of the HERO enchantingly rung;
"Columbia! Columbia! to glory arise!
"The queen of the world and the child of the skies!"

Let HIS precepts be heeded, his counsels rever'd,
That FREEDOM and LIBERTY long may be cheer'd:
Let partisan discord be banish'd afar,
And save fair Columbia from bloodshed and war.

AMMONIUS.

Philadelphia, Dec. 10, 1838.

*See his farewell address.

SELECTIONS.

DEATH WARRANT OF JESUS CHRIST.—Of the many interesting relics and fragments of antiquity which have been brought to light by the persevering researches of modern philosophy, none could have more interest for the philanthropist and the believer, than one which we copy below. "Chance," says the Courier des Etas Unis, "has just put into our hands the most im- posing and interesting judicial document to all Christians, that ever has been re- corded in human annals; that is the iden- tical death warrant of our Lord JESUS CHRIST." The document was faithfully transcribed by the editor, and is in hac verba:

Sentence rendered by Pontius Pilate, acting Governor of Lower Galilee, sta- ting that Jesus of Nazareth shall suffer death on the cross.

In the year 17 of the empire of Tibe- rius Ceasar, and the 25th day of March, the city of the Holy Jerusalem, Anna and Caiphas being priests, sacrificators of the people of God. Pontius Pilot, Governor of Lower Galilee, sitting on the presiden- tial chair of the Traetory, condemns Je- sus of Nazareth to die on the cross be- tween two thieves—the great and noto- rious evidence of the people, saying:

1. Jesus is a seducer.
2. He is seditious.
3. He is an enemy of the law,
4. He calls himself falsely the son of God.
5. He calls himself falsely the king of Israel.
6. He entered into the temple, follow- ed by a multitude bearing palm branches in their hands.

Order the first centurion, Quilious Cornelius, to lead him to the place of execution.

Forbid to any person whomsoever, ei- ther poor or rich, to oppose the death of Jesus.

The witnesses who signed the condem- nation of Jesus, are, viz:—1. Daniel Ro- bani, a Parisee; 2. Joannes Rorablo; 3. Ralphiael Robani; 4. Capei, a citizen.

Jesus shall go out of the city of Jeru- salem by the gate of Struenus."

The above sentence is engraved on a copper plate; on one side are written these word: "A similar plate is sent to each tribe." It was found in an antique vase of white marble, while excavating in the ancient city of Aquilla, in the king- dom of Naples, in the year 1820, and was discovered by the Commissionaries of Arts attached to the French armies.— At the expedition of Naples, it was found enclosed in a box of ebony; in the sacris- ty of the Chartrem. The vase in the chapel of Caserta. The French translation was made by the members of the Commission of Arts. The original is in the Hebrew language. The Chartrem requested earnestly that the plate should not be taken away from them. The re- quest was granted, as a reward for the sacrifice they had made for the army. M. Denon, one of the savans, caused a plate to be made of the same model, on which he had engraven the above senten- ces. At the sale of his collection of an- tiquities, &c. it was bought by Lord How- ard for 2,800 francs. Its intrinsic value and interest are much greater. A few years ago there was found at Cattskill, in New York, a 'shekel of Israel,' of the time of our Saviour. On one side was the representation of a palm leaf; on the other, a picture of the temple, with the words underneath, "Holy Jerusalem," in the Hebrew tongue. Relics like these, properly authenticated, have about them an inexpressible sacredness and moment. They seem to blend two worlds, and to carry human curiosity from the finite to the infinite.—Philadelphia Gazette.

From the Christian Advocate and Journal.

CHOIR SINGING.—It strikes me, Messrs. Editors, that, as your paper goes to parts of the country, which are seldom, if ever, visited by good instructors in vocal music, you might render important aid in im- proving choir and congregational singing, by occasionally introducing articles on these subjects. As a mere amateur, I can have nothing to offer which would com- pare with what some of your professional readers could send to you; but I shall make a few remarks with the hope of calling out those who are more knowing in crotchets and quavers.

Choir singing cannot produce its full effect, unless the air or treble is sung ex- clusively by females, and by small boys. For a man to sing this part is as impro- per as it would be for women to sing the bass. Men cannot, in fact, sing the air or treble as it is written. They may seem to themselves to sing it; but they sing a mongrel kind of tenor, which is an octive below the air or treble, and by so doing they not only spoil the air, but deprive the true tenor of its proper effect. According to the rules of compo- sition the parts should preserve a proper distance from one another. The mongrel kind of tenor which is produced by a man's singing the air utterly confounds the true relations of the parts.

It is sometimes pleaded in behalf of this practice, that females have not confi- dence enough to carry the air through, without assistance from the leader. Yet it is well known that they sing certain passages very well, without any such as- sistance. It is altogether from habits of long dependence on the leader, and not from want of ability, that they are con- tinually looking to him for aid. It may be well enough for him to sing the first line of the hymn with them, and perhaps strike the first note of each succeeding line. It is not his business to confine himself to any one part, but to prompt all the parts, as occasion may require.

I am, Messrs. Editors, a firm advocate of "the rights of women," and think that, when any man sings the air or tre- ble, all the ladies in the choir should stop short, and let him sing alone. But, though I am thus strenuous for "the rights of women," I do not like to see women encroaching on "the rights of men." This they do when they sing the tenor, or uppermost part, as it appears in the score of the Harmonist. The effect, then, is like that of singing two tunes at the same time. Some of the notes may harmonize; but, except in a few tunes, grating discord will certainly be produced.

There are two parts, and two only, which women can sing with propriety— the air or first treble, and the alto or sec- ond treble. And there are two parts, and two only which men can sing with pro- priety—the bass and tenor; unless they can sing in falsetto, and then they may sing the alto. These are very plain truths, and it might be supposed that all members of choirs know them. But, if they are known, they are frequently dis- regarded in the part of the country in which I reside, though the choirs of the Methodist Churches here are, in some re- spects, some of the best I ever listened to.

Few choirs are strong enough to give the proper effect to "Old Hundred," and tunes of that description. In singing these, the congregation should unite with the choir. But then the men in the con- gregation ought not to sing the air. I will not caution the ladies against singing the bass, for I never yet knew a lady guilty of that impropriety, though there would in strictness be nothing more im- proper in it than there is in men singing the air or treble.

These observations are intended to ap- ply to congregations in which choirs have been formed. In others, and in so- cial religious meetings, the men and wo- men must often of necessity unite in sing- ing the air. This has sometimes a very pleasing effect when the men do not sing so loud as to drown the voices of the wo- men.

In choirs in which the ladies have long been accustomed to having the leader sing with them, it cannot be expected that they will suddenly acquire confi- dence to carry their part without his constant aid; but they may be gradually made aware of their own musical talent.

AN AMATEUR.

DR. FRANKLIN, and Legislative Chap- lains.—Our great American philosopher has been usually ranked with those, who, among the renowned names of the world, can be claimed as a believer and follower of the Christian religion. Yet, in the testimony which is annexed, and which we do not remember to have seen before, there is such proof, both of religious faith and practical wisdom, as to outweigh many vague accusations.—N. Y. Amer.

Motion for Prayers in the Convention. —Mr. President: The small progress we have made, after four or five weeks' close attendance and continual reasoning with each other, our different sentiments on almost every question, several of the last producing as many noes as ayes, is, me- thinks a melancholy proof of the imper- fection of the human understanding. We indeed seem to feel our own want of po- litical wisdom, since we have been run- ning all about in search of it. We have gone back to ancient history for models of Government, and examined the differ- ent forms of those Republics, which, hav- ing been originally formed with the seeds of their own dissolution, now no longer exist; and we have viewed modern States all round Europe, but find none of their constitutions as suitable to our circum- stances.

In this situation of this assembly, grop- ing, as it were in the dark to find politi- cal truth, and scarce able to distinguish it when presented to us, how has it hap- pened, sir, that we have not hitherto once thought of applying humbly to the Father of Lights to illuminate our understanding? In the beginning of the contest with Brit- ain, when we were sensible of danger, we had daily prayers in this room for the Divine protection. Our prayers, sir, were heard—and they were graciously answered. All of us who were engaged in the struggle must have observed frequent instances of a superintending Provi- dence in our favor. To that kind Prov- idence we owe this happy opportunity of consulting in peace on the means of es- tablishing our future national felicity.— And have we now forgotten that powerful friend? or do we imagine we now no long- er need its assistance! I have lived, sir, a long time, and the longer I live, the more convincing proofs I see of this truth —that God governs in the affairs of men. And if a sparrow cannot fall to the ground without His notice, is it probable that an empire can rise without his aid?

We have been assured, sir, in the sa- cred writings, that "except the Lord build the house, they labor in vain that build it." I firmly believe this; and I also believe that without His concurring aid, we shall proceed in this political building no better than the builders of Babel; we shall be divided by our little, partial, local interests, our project will be confounded, and we ourselves shall become a reproach and a by-word down to future ages. And what is worse, man- kind may hereafter from this unfortunate instance, despair of establishing a govern- ment by human wisdom, and leave it to chance, war, and conquest. I therefore beg leave to move: That henceforth, prayers, imploring the assistance of Heav- en, and its blessings on our deliberations, be held in this assembly every morning before we proceed to business, and that one or more of the clergy of this city be requested to officiate in that ser- vice.

THE WORLD'S END.—During the last two or three centuries, upwards of thir- teen fixed stars have disappeared. One of them, situated in the northern hemis- phere, presented a brilliancy, and was so bright as to be seen by the naked eye at mid-day. It seemed to be on fire, appear- ing at first of a dazzling white, and then of a reddish yellow, and lastly of an ashy pale color. La Place supposes that it was burned up, as it has never been seen since. The conflagration was visible about sixteen months. How dreadful!— A whole system on fire, the great central luminary and its planets, with their plains, mountains, forests, villages, cities, and inhabitants, all in flames, consumed, and gone forever. Here we have a presump- tive proof of the truth, and a solemn il- lustration of a singular passage in a very old book—"The heavens shall pass away with a great noise, the elements shall melt with fervent heat, the world also, and the works that are therein, shall be burned up." What has been will be again. Our sun, and moon, and stars, and earth, will be destroyed by fire. "It is inscribed in the heavens," says Dr. John Mason Good, "foretold in the Scriptures, and felt in the earth." Such is the text, the comment may be found in Peter's 2d Epistle, 3d chapter, and 11th and 12th verses.

Quincy Sentinel.

BREAD STUFFS VIA CANADA.—The fol- lowing article, from a late number of the Cleveland (Ohio) Herald, conveys valua- ble commercial information:—Bicknell.

United States Flour, via Canada, is not admitted into Great Britain at a less du- ty than if shipped from U. S. ports. But Flour manufactured in Canada from wheat grown in the U. States, and ship- ped thence to England, is admitted on the same terms as if the wheat was grown in Canada. The duty on Canadian wheat and flour in Great Britain is fixed at a minimum and maximum rate, and not by progressive scale; when wheat is below 67 shillings per quarter, the duty is 5 shillings per quarter; when above that price, it is 6 pence per quarter. In this respect the Canadians have greatly the advantage of shippers from the United States. They know the duty they will have to pay on a barrel of flour cannot exceed three-fifths of five shillings ster- ling.

About 60,000 barrels of flour and 600,- 000 bushels of wheat will go from this port to Canada before harvest. The ob- ject in purchasing flour for Canada, was consumption there, and not shipment.— The wheat will be ground and exported, and the best description of Canada wheat will be exported in the berry.

It is also an error to suppose that U. S. flour can be shipped via Canada to the West Indies free of duty. Upper and Lower Canada are the only British pos- sessions into which United States flour can be admitted free. Corn or grain un- ground, meal or flour not made of wheat, bread and biscuit, are admitted free into ANY British possessions in North America. To be admitted free into the British West Indies, the flour must be manufactured in the British North American Provinces.

THE LAST YANKEEISM.—A yankee some two or three years ago contrived a way of making covered buttons, by just com- pressing an edge of metal and so in one moment threw a thousand women out of employment. Another Yankee by a dif- ferent application of the same idea, has contrived to put on buttons without sew- ing, and that too, so that they can never come off. The invention is only appli- cable to metal buttons, and chiefly to those for suspenders and straps under boots. The button is made in two parts, the eye being a bolt with a large head. It is put through the cloth and a hole in the button, when a single blow rivets the two parts together, never to be separated. The thing is admirable; and already the man who was fortunate enough to get possession of the thought, is making his fortune with more orders on hand than he can supply. The same idea was ap- plied to eyelet holes not long since, and at once the ladies were relieved from a great deal of labor, and could belay them- selves much tauter than before. Let the Yankees alone, and in a little while they will have strawberry pickers, and whortleberry racks, and all such things. —N. Y. Jour. Commerce.

AN ANECDOTE.—Some time after the conclusion of the Revolution, a young American was present in a British theatre, where an interlude was performed in rid- icule of his countrymen. A number of American officers being introduced in tat- tered uniforms and barefoot, the question was put to them severally—

"What was your trade before you en- tered the army?"

One answered "a tailor," another "a cobbler," &c.

The wit of the piece was to banter them for not keeping themselves in clothes and shoes; but before that could be ex- pressed, the American exclaimed from the gallery—"Great Britain beaten by tailors and cobblers! huzza!!"

Even the Prime Minister, who was present, could not help smiling, amidst the general peal of laughter.

ENVY.—Envy is a destructive princi- ple. It differs from emulation, in that the former always seeks to bring down the favored object to a level with the de- graded being by whom this passion is ex- ercised, while the latter breathes an as- piration to become like what we admire in others. Envy is the very dark spirit of hell which Satan breathes, and through which he was once cast out of Heaven. It is the very essence of hate, seeking no good, for its possessor, and only evil for others.

THE SHREWD REPLY.—The retort cour- teous was fully experienced by the cel- ebrated counsellor, Jack Lee, on the northern circuit; for, being engaged in examining one Mary Pritchard, of Barns- ley, he began with, "Well, Mary, if I may credit what I hear I may venture to address you by the name of Black Moll." "Faith, you may master lawyer," said she, "for I am always called so by the blackguards."

THE QUICKEST TRIP EVER MADE.—The steamer Meteor, arrived at St. Louis a few days ago from New Orleans, making the trip in five days and five hours, including all delays; the quickest trip ever made. She made the trip down and back, in 14 days and 5 hours.

WESTERN RECORDER.

ZANESVILLE:

WEDNESDAY, ... JULY 15, 1840.

More of the Eldridge Affair.—An arrest of somewhat mysterious character, connected with the forgeries charged upon Dr. Eldridge, has taken place in New York. The New York Courier & Enquirer of yesterday remarks that in connexion with this matter, a very singular affair has recently occurred at the New York Police office, and one which puzzles the heads and brains of the wisest of the magistrates and officers.—Bicknell, 7th.

Since the arrest of Eldridge, and within some three weeks past, a series of letters, seven in number, addressed to Eldridge, have been intercepted by the keeper of the Moyamensing prison. These letters are all signed by "Tompkins P. Fellows," and are dated at New York or Rochester. They are very unintelligible in their character, and all relate to the same or a similar subject. The following, a copy of one of them, we subjoin, which will serve as a fair specimen:

City of New York, }
June 21st, (Friday,) 2 o'clock, P. M. }

Mr. W. M. Eldridge:

The forged paper on the bank at Philadelphia I still hold, but have not presented it for fear of detection. I have made several heavy draws since your arrest and hold the money; if they will take bail, I will be your bail; nobody will suspect me of being in concert with you, unless you tell of me; now while I am "Riting," I will write as poor as possible so as not to be detected. I want you should write to me as soon as possible. Direct your letters "Tompkins P. Fellows." I have got a plenty of drafts on the Bank at New Orleans, and no one knows nothing about it. The talk is here you have got to go to the State Prison. Say nothing, but write soon.

I still remain your friend,
T. P. Fellows.

N. B. I have reason to think that unless you are cunning, I shall be detected; if I do, they cant send me no how, for I can bail. My writing is in the left hand. I suppose you can understand it.

One check on the Bank, $2,100 paid.
One New York, $3000, all drawn.
Albany Bank paid $200.
The other draft not yet presented.
T. P. Fellows.

J. Y. * * * G.

The letter was endorsed,

"Make them believe you are crazy, if possible; if not, take the other course."

No intimation whatever, was given to Eldridge of the receipt of these letters.

The keeper, advised by the Philadelphia Police, enclosed the letters to O. M. Lowndes, Esq. our late worthy Police magistrate, asking his advice and co-operation in the matter. Mr. Lowndes advised that letters should be addressed to Fellows, at our city post office, in the name of one of the gentlemen employed as counsel for Eldridge, and should be written as apparent replies to Fellows' letters. This was accordingly done. The letters were received here, and were taken out of the office by a genteel well dressed young man, apparently about 20 years of age. The letters were called for in open day, and generally read at the office by the recipient, without any effort at concealment on his part.

A watch was set, and on Tuesday as he called for the last letter, he was taken into custody by A. M. C. Smith, officer, and taken to the police. An explanation of his conduct was demanded of him, but he refused to disclose any thing of his residence, family, business, or aught else than that he was the veritable Tompkins P. Fellows, alluded to in the letters. He has been several times brought up for examination, but no clue to the mystery has he yet divulged. He at first refused counsel, but a last said that if the magistrates thought it advisable, some legal adviser might be assigned him. Yesterday, Mr. A. D. Russell appeared and said that he had been employed by a friend of Fellows' to act as his counsel.

This employment of counsel was too a mystery to the magistrates, for every exertion had been made to conceal the fact of the accused's arrest, and to prevent any one from having access to him. He was again brought up for examination yesterday, but he utterly declined answering any questions whatever, and was remanded. This is altogether one of the most curious affairs that has for a length of time occurred in our Police. Some suppose that it is from the beginning all a hoax. If so, the hoaxer is certainly paying for his "good joke" very dear.—Others think that Fellows is crazy, insane or slightly "cracked;" but there seems to be a good deal of "method in his madness," if such be the case.

The most plausible supposition is, that it is an attempt—a plan artfully laid—to induce the magistrates to believe that Eldridge was connected with others in the practice of his villanies, and that the parties to this scheme seek to divert the attention of the public from the principal object, Eldridge's conviction, to make him a witness, perhaps, with a promise of immunity in the event of his making disclosures, or something of the like. It is all, however, a matter of speculation and conjecture, and from present appearances, will so continue to remain.

The water that flows from a spring, does not congeal in the winter. And those sentiments of friendship which flow from the heart, cannot be frozen by adversity.

The North Eastern Boundary.—On Monday last, as will be seen by reference to our Congressional proceedings, the President submitted to the Senate some highly interesting and important documents relative to the North Eastern Boundary Question. The state of that dispute, as gathered from these papers, gives better prospect of an ultimate settlement than ever, though negociations, explorations, and surveys, may protract the matter a long time yet. The substance of these papers may be stated as follows, and agrees with what has been their rumored tenor:

England consents to a joint commission for survey and exploration, and to the proposition of the United States for the submission of the difficulties to arbitration, in case of a disagreement in the exploration and survey. Accompanying the acceptance from England is a demur on the part of the British Minister, to some of the propositions of the United States, in reference to the survey. The grounds of exception are not stated in the note of Mr. Fox to Mr. Forsyth, but the British Minister expects, by an early opportunity, an amended counter draft to the American proposition, to be submitted to the consideration of the President. He states also that he expects to be furnished with the draft of a fresh local convention or agreement, to prevent border collisions while the survey is proceeding.

This, then, will be perceived to be the state of the case: the joint survey, with the principal of arbitration and the view of settlement of the question are agreed upon; and all that remains is to settle the form and details. On the part of England a temporary treaty or convention is proposed, to last while the survey is proceeding. Mr. Adams' prediction that war will not come out of the matter for many years, if ever, is as good as verified.

In communicating the correspondence between the British Minister and the American Secretary, to the Senate, the President says that he cannot doubt that with the sincere disposition on the part of both governments to presevere amity, the details can be arranged. He speaks of the report of Messrs. Mudge and Featherstonhaugh, the British Commissioners, as not yet adopted by that Government, but likely to be used in the discussion, by the British Ministry; and therefore recommends a similar step of immediate exploration and survey on our part, for the use of the American Government. The report of Messrs. Mudge and Featherstonhaugh is among the documents submitted. It is said in the correspondence of the Express to be drawn something on the principle of betweenity—to yield much on the part of England, but to claim more; to disregard the treaty of 1783, and to give to England nearly all she wants, and give the United States something now belonging to Great Britain.

The letters between the two diplomats contain nothing that we have not already stated with the exception of assurances of high respect, and distinguished consideration; and a review of the recent steps taken in the controversy, already familiar to the reader. As a mark of courtesy and consideration toward the United States, the British Government has communicated the map and report of Messrs. Mudge and Featherstonhaugh to the President of the United States, before laying those documents before Parliament. The correspondence, between the representatives of the governments, which is, of course, the representatives of the spirit of those governments, marks a disposition on both sides to approach the decision of the mooted question in the best and most conciliating disposition.— Bro. Jonathan.

The Boundary Question.—The Madisonian says:—"We understand that the despatches from England to our Government, and the British Minister, contain nothing definite on the subject of the North Eastern Boundary. They state, however, that by a packet which was to have left England on the 13th of this month, additional communications would be transmitted. It is understood that Great Britain will accept the proposition of this Government, under certain modifications."

OPIUM WAR WITH CHINA.

At a meeting held this day, at Freemason's Hall, London, the Right Honorable Earl Stanhope in the Chair, the following resolutions were adopted:

1. That this meeting, whilst it most distinctly disavows any party or political objects, and deprecates most strongly, any such construction being put upon its efforts, deeply laments that the moral and religious feeling of the country should be outraged, the character of christianity disgraced in the eyes of the world, and this kingdom involved in a war with upwards of 350 millions of people, in consequence of British subjects introducing opium into China, in direct and known violation of the laws of that empire.

2. That, although the Chinese have not been heard in their defence, the statements adduced by the advocates of the war, clearly establish the fact, that the East India Company, the growers of, and traffickers in, opium, and British subjects who received the protection of the laws of China, have been throughout the wrong doers; therefore this meeting (without reference to the conviction of many, that all war is opposed to the spirit and precepts of the Gospel) holds it to be the bounden duty of the government immediately to effect an equitable and pacific settlement of the existing differences with China.

3. That all traffic in opium with the Chinese being contraband, the opium which was surrendered to their government was justly confiscated; and that to demand payment from the Chinese—to make reprisals upon them—or for this country to give compensation to the British merchants thus engaged in smuggling, would be to sanction, and even to grant a premium for crime.

4. That the petition now read be adopted by this meeting, and presented to both Houses of Parliament; and that the Right Honorable Earl Stanhope be requested to present the same to the House of Lords, and Lord Sandon to the House of Commons.

5. That the resolutions of this meeting be published at the discretion of the committee; and that a copy of them, in the Chinese language, be transmitted through the High Commissioner Lin, to the Emperor of China.

6. That the chairman be requested to sign the petition on behalf of the meeting.

Stanhope, Chairman.

7. That the cordial thanks of this meeting are due to the Right Honorable Earl Stanhope, for his able and impartial conduct in the chair.

April 24, 1840.

ITEMS.

Miles King, Esq. has been re-elected Mayor of Norfolk.

The summer in Pensacola has been marked by excessive drought.

A brother is not always a friend: but a friend is always a brother.

The corner stone of the "capitol" in Iowa city, was to be laid on the 4th inst.

A drought has prevailed in Nova Scotia for more than a month.

Naval.—The United States ship Erie sailed from Havana on the 12th inst. for Cape Antonio, in search of pirates.

The St. Louis New Era says the experiment is making in Boston of shipping a cargo of lead to Canton.

Dabney, the late teller of the Bank of Virginia, has been admitted to bail, in the sum of $30,000.

Hon. Daniel Webster passed through this city on Saturday on his way to Boston.—New York paper.

Governor Seward has issued a proclamation offering $250 for the arrest of Lett, the convicted incendiary.

The British steam-ship Argyle, seized a few days since in New Orleans, has been released.

The reported capture of Fort Crum, in Florida, by the Indians, and the murder of its garrison is contradicted.

A gentleman recently from Upper California, states that a British surveying party were busily engaged in surveying the coast in that vicinity.

The ship Arab of this port, with about 1800 bales of Cotton was destroyed at Mobile by fire on the 17th of June.—New York paper.

Most of the free banks of New York have made provision for the redemption of their bills, either in New York city or in Albany.

The Wilmington, Delaware, Gazette, announces the appearance of small pox, in the manufacturing district, along the Brandywine.

It is computed that there are in the United States 2,800,000 slaves. The computation will shortly be confirmed or set aside by certainty; by the census returns.

The Boston Transcript learns from Capt. Pendleton, of brig Cocheco at that port, that the seven pirates condemned at Havana, were to have been shot on a staging off the More, on the 8th ult.

Musket Ball.—A new mode of forming musket balls by machinery, instead of casting them, has been invented in England, and the process has been adopted by the Board of Ordnance at Woolwich.

Keeler, the watchman who was bit sometime since by a rabid dog at New Orleans, died there on the 15th. This is the second person who died within a brief period in that city of hydrophobia.

David Wickliff, a soldier in the Revolution, who was wounded at the memorable battle of Brandywine, died on the 18th ult. in Fauquier county, Virginia, in the eighty-sixth year of his age.

It is computed that there are in England one million of horses, used for labor—and two hundred thousand for pleasure—all of which are supposed to consume the produce of seven millions of acres.

When I am at a Whig meeting I instinctively put my hand upon my pocket.—Dr. Duncan.

Pshaw, Doctor! Nobody wishes to steal your whiskey-bottle.—Prentice.

Mr. Samuel Canby's Durham cow 'Blossom,' on his farm at Woodside, Delaware, yielded an average of thirty-five quarts of milk per day, during the week ending on the 19th ult.

Truth.—He who speaks lightly of female society, is a numskull or a knave—the former not having sense enough to discern its benefits, and the latter hating the restraint it lays on his vices.

It appears to be now generally conceded that Queen Victoria will soon gratify the hopes of England in the perpetuity of the throne and dynasty in her branch of the royal line.

The Belgian Giant has got back to Peale's, and will remain there day and evening for a week. He has created a great sensation South, wherever he has been; and will be a wonderful card during the holidays.

How to live Peaceably.—The late Mr. Clarke, of Frome, being asked by a friend how to keep himself from being involved in quarrels, replied, "By letting the angry person have all the quarrel to himself."

Farmers, look here!—Beat this if you can!—A Calf two years and four months old, raised by Robert Hitchman, and slaughtered by John Barger, of Mount Pleasant, weighed 654 pounds, clean beef.

Register, July 4, 1840.

The Newark Daily Advertiser reports the death, on Monday, of Mr. Abraham Cruser, late sheriff of Middlesex, N. J.—He was taken sick at church on the day previous, and his physicians pronounce the case Asiatic cholera.

A Veteran.—A man named Francisco Beaureguard, of Boucherville, died on Monday week, at the Grey Nun's Hospital in Montreal, at the extraordinary age of one hundred and seven years, nine months, and five days.

We learn from the St. Louis Bulletin of June 20th, that Mr. James Wilson, clerk of the steamer Prairie, has absented himself with $4000, and the clerk of the steamer Daniel Webster has gone off with $14,000.

Still they Come.—About 3000 emigrants have arrived at this port from Germany, &c. within the last three days. They are pouring also into Philadelphia, Baltimore and New Orleans, but in smaller bodies.—New York paper.

A Texas editor accused a brother editor of having but one shirt, and says he borrowed that. To this the second editor replies that the first is so poor that he has been obliged to sleep under a wheelbarrow for the last three months.

What is a more disgusting sight than drunken man?—Picayune.

Lovely women in the state of inebriation, by all odds.—New York Chronicle.

You may stand aside, sir. We have no further questions to ask.—Picayune.

All the Banks of this State are by law required to redeem their notes from July 1st onward, at half per cent. discount, either here or at Albany. A large number, we see, have made new arrangements with the New York State Bank at Albany, for this purpose.—New York paper.

A Personal Encounter.—The Ozark Standard says: "A rencounter occurred in this place, on Tuesday last, between Maj. J. P. Campbell, receiver of the public moneys, and Col. Griffin P. Saunders, of Newton county, in which the latter was severely wounded."

Swindling.—The Cincinnati Gazette of Tuesday says:—"We have been informed that a merchant of Indiana recently purchased $3,300 of goods in New York, on credit, intercepted them in this city, sent them to auction, and had them sold for $1,100."

After discourses delivered on last Sabbath, in the Union Methodist Episcopal Church of Philadelphia, by Rev. Mr. Kenneday, collections were made in behalf of the Church in Natchez recently destroyed by the late tornado, and $350 collected.

Up to the 20th inst., 535 vessels had arrived at Quebec, being an increase of 47 over the arrivals to the same period last year.

The number of emigrants arrived at Quebec to the 20th inst., show an increase over the same period last year of 11,033.

Judge Story recently pronounced a decision in Portland, setting aside a speculative purchase of Eastern land, on the ground of a mistake of its value, by the purchaser. The opinion is highly important, as effecting a great many contracts.

The Insanity of Boz.—We regret to find the rumor, which has been once current, and then again contradicted, re-affirmed in a private letter received by the editor of the Mirror. The letter speaks of the painful statement as being without any doubt true.

At a public meeting recently held in London, Mr. Sturge stated, that of 17,205 barrels of gunpowder, exported in 1835, from Liverpool more than 16,000 were destined for Africa, to be used in the eternal wars to be carried on to supply the slavers with victims.

Navigation of the Wisconsin.—The navigation of the Wisconsin river is much improved the present season. The channel is deeper and not obstructed by sand and bars as much as heretofore. Two steamboats have made five trips this season with heavy freight.

The Governor of Mississippi has closed the charter of the Mississippi Railroad and Banking Company by proclamation for refusing to pay specie when a note of $5 was presented at its counter. By a new law, the Banks of that State are required to pay specie for notes of that denomination and under.

Laughing and Crying.—Democritus, who was always laughing, lived 109 years; Heraclitus, who never ceased crying, only 60. Laughing then is best; and to laugh at one another is perfectly justifiable, since we are told that the gods themselves, though they made us as they pleased, cannot help laughing at us.

Warning to Dogs.—The Newburyport Herald mentions that a fine large dog was killed on the railroad on Wednesday. He undertook to oppose the passage of the train over his master's premises—probably thinking it had rather a suspicious look; but the locomotive was not to be trifled with, and poor Tiger is no more.

Mississippi Banks.—According to the Natchez Courier, Gov. M'Nutt has issued a proclamation to the effect, that the following named Banks have forfeited all their banking powers, viz:

Fernado Railroad and Banking co.
Benton and Manchester Railroad and Banking company.
Mississippi Railroad company.

Bleeding at the nose, it is said, if it be ever so violent and protracted, may be permanently stopped by the individual using some salt beef which has been grated fine with a grater, in the same way that he would take snuff. Two or three pinches are said to be sufficient to stop any fit of bleeding.

The British Consul at New Orleans, who has been accused of giving certificates of freedom to blacks, not entitled to it, has addressed a letter to the Mayor, in which he vindicates his conduct, and says that henceforth he will give no certificates of freedom to persons of color claiming to be British subjects, without first submitting such persons claims to the mayor, and obtaining his approval.

Miss Millford, a lady of good sense and excellent taste, says that her most favorable name is Mary—a name which is as common as a white violet, and one that has something indescribably sweet and simple, and fit for all wear, high or low, suits the cottage or the palace, the garden or the field, the pretty or the ugly, the old or the young.

Drapery should never form a part of the furniture of a room intended for music. It destroys reverberation, by absorbing the sound. A writer in the London Quarterly Review affirms that he sensibly felt a damp cast upon the voice of a singer in a small room, upon the entrance of a tall lady habited in a long woollen cloak.

Painful Rumour.—The Baltimore Sun says:—"It was reported by a gentleman who came on in the cars last evening from Washington, that a challenge had passed between Messrs. Jenifer and Shepard, members of Congress, the former of this State, and the latter of North Carolina, in consequence of some uncivil things said to each other in the House of Representatives, and that a duel would take place. We hope it is incorrect."

United States Bank—No Dividend.—At a meeting of the Board of Directors of the United States Bank, held yesterday, it was deemed inexpedient to declare any dividend for the present. In the opinion of those who are well acquainted with the affairs of the Bank, this is the best course that could be adopted in the existing state of the institution. It is believed that the non-declaration of dividends for a short time, will prove to be ultimately beneficial to the stockholders. —Bicknell, 7th inst.

Conviction and Escape of Lett.—We learn from the Syracuse Signal, that Lett, the Canadian, has been convicted of an attempt to burn the steamboat Great Britain, at Oswego, and sentenced to seven years imprisonment in the state prison at Auburn. He passed through Syracuse on Friday night on his way to prison, in custody of the sheriff, and when within four miles of Auburn he made his escape from the car while going at the rate of 20 miles an hour. One hundred dollars is offered by the sheriff for his apprehension.

From China.—The Boston Advertiser says: "A letter from Canton, dated February 18, supposed to have come by the brig Argyle to the West Coast of America, and thence over land to the Gulf of Mexico, has been received in Boston by a mercantile house. It states that the American vessels were detained in consequence of the high prices of teas, which had risen from two to four taels. The blockade was expected to take place on the receipt of further despatches. The Chinese evinced no disposition to yield."

A formidable gang of Brigands, approached near the city of Mexico, on the 6th ult. and a battalion of Mexican soldiers were ordered out, but they refused to march against them. Whenever any of these robbers are arrested, they are rarely condemned; and then only to imprisonment, where, it is said, they invariably die of starvation. This treatment is viewed with so much horror by the citizens and soldiers, that they are exceedingly reluctant to aid in putting them into the hands of the government.

The patient of a late English physician, imagined that he had a leg of mutton hanging to his nose, and walked nearly double, to prevent the dangling joint from hitting his knees. The cure was simple. He was taken into a dark room, where a person was stationed with the reality, and on cutting off just the tip of his nose, the mutton was let fall on the floor. On opening the window shutters, the patient was convinced he had got rid of his load, and walked in an upright posture ever afterwards.

Painful Intelligence.—The United States Philadelphia Gazette of June 29, says:—A letter now before us, from Harrisburg, mentions the reception at that place of the painful intelligence that the Hon. Samuel McKean, late United States Senator for Pennsylvania, attempted suicide in a fit of insanity on Tuesday last, at his residence in McKean county, by cutting his throat with a razor. Although Gen. McKean was alive when the letter giving the information was written, yet, it is added there was not the slightest prospect of his surviving many hours.

Churches in Philadelphia.—According to Tanner's Philadelphia City Guide, for the current year, the following is the number of churches in that city, as set forth alphabetically, in detail:—African 7; Baptist 11; Catholic 5; Congregational 1; Dutch Reformed 2; Episcopal 14; Friends Meeting Houses 4; German Reformed 1; Independent 1; Jews Synagogue 1; Lutheran 4; Methodist 15; Moravian 1; Mariner's 3; New Jerusalem 1; Presbyterian 26; Unitarian 1; Universalist 2—Total 100.

The Burning.—The Burning Mountain at the head of the West Branch Rail Road, which attracted so much attention last year, is still raging, more furiously than ever. It has burned out about three hundred yards from its place of starting, and as it reaches the top, where ventilation is more freely afforded, it increases in intensity. The water running from the mine, is very hot, and so strongly impregnated with alkaline substance as to have eaten off all the iron from the rail road track. It is well worth a visit from the curious.—Miner's Journal.

The Phil. Inquirer gives the following account of an operation for Abscess in the Lungs, by Dr. Bethell, in that city:—"An incision was made about three inches long between the sixth and seventh ribs. A gumelastic tube was introduced into the cavity of the abscess, and the pus drawn off by means of a pump. The orifice was kept open and the tube applied until the pus (which amounted to 24 ounces,) was entirely removed. The patient immediately after the operation became entirely relieved; his cough subsided, and his respiration became easy.—He is now convalescent, having had no symptoms since the operation, and remains under the care of Drs. Bethell and Taylor.

An Important Decision in Illinois.—We learn from the Republican that the Supreme Court of Illinois, lately in session at Springfield, have pronounced their decision in the case so long and ably argued at the previous term of the Court. The case involved the right, under the Constitution of the State, of an alien to vote.—The Court affirmed the judgment of the Circuit Court, which declared that an alien had not the right to vote. Illinois and Michigan are the only states of the Union in which this privilege has been accorded to citizens not naturalized.—So far as the first named State is concerned, this construction of the Constitution can no longer prevail.

Lett the Incendiary.—The Syracuse Journal says:—The notorious Lett, on his escape from the railroad cars near Auburn, remained in the woods near by, from the time of his escape until Saturday night, when he repaired to a house whose inmates promised him protection. The next day, however, the man with whom he was staying, went to Auburn and procured help, who returned with the intention of arresting Lett, but he, getting a hint of their approach, jumped from a back window, without coat, hat or shoes, and fled for the woods. After the men had taken their leave of the house. Lett returned, obtained his clothes, and stock of provisions, when he left.

Do not put the plough into the corn, if you have, as you may have for a trifle, a cultivator or horse hoe. It severs the roots, which are the mouths of the plants, turns up and wastes the manure, which should always be applied to this crop, and deprives the plants of more than half their pasture. Hill your corn but slightly. Hilling renders it more liable to suffer from drought, and induces it to throw out a new set of roots, the old ones being in a manner useless, by being buried too deep and beyond the reach of the influence of heat and air, the indispensable agents of nutrition and vegetable growth.—Buel's Cultivator.

A Newspaper in Families.—A newspaper taken in a family seems to shed a gleam of intelligence around. It gives the children a taste for reading; it communicates all the important events which are passing in this busy world; it is a never failing source of amusement, and furnishes a fund of instruction which will never be exhausted. Every family however poor, if they wish to hold a place in the rank of intelligent beings, should take at least one paper, and the man, who possessed of property sufficient to make him easy for life, and surrounded by children eager for knoweldge, is instigated by the evil genius of cupidity, and neglects to subscribe for a newspaper, is deficient in the duties of a parent or a good citizen.

The New Haven Heralds recounts a portion of the beauties of drunkenness in the following paragraph:

We saw on Monday in State street, a boy of about 16 years of age, whose countenance, dress, and gait, showed him to be in a state of beastly intoxication. He was supported by a little boy, seemingly his brother, who appeared to be not more than seven years of age. His little hand was fastened with a firm grip upon his brother's back, while with the other he held the drunkard's arm, the latter every moment seeming about to fall and break beneath his slender support. The little one seemed entirely abstracted from all else but his charge, while the tears that streamed down his cheeks, showed how deeply that effected him.

LE RECORDER.

ZANESVILLE.

ESDAY, ... JULY 15, 1840.

D. Gallagher, of Cincinnati, Ohio, is in writing the life of the late Charles .

ess.—The Sub Treasury Bill has passed ses.

olution to adjourn, on the 21st inst., has ed both Houses.

Lebanon Star of the 10th instant, says: erable damage was done to the Dayton e by the heavy rains of Tuesday last.— three of the large culverts were swept d other parts of the road badly washed."

Methodist Protestant Church of Charles- ., spent a portion of the 4th of July in exercises. The Rev. A. McCaine, de- discourse suited to the occasion. This tter way to celebrate our national inde- e.

ave received the July number of "Bick- ounterfeit Detector and Bank Note This is the most complete Detector of eits in the country, and ought to be in is of every business man, especially in ult state of the currency at the pres-id one of the heaviest falls of rain this ek ago, in the morning before day, in hborhood of this office, that we ever re- By flooding the meadows, it has injured, me cases ruined a considerable portion We believe the excessive rain and was not very extensive.

itions were introduced in the quarterly ce of St. Paul's station, of the Methodist l Church, of Lowell, Mass., censuring General Conference for authorizing the ts of Annual Conferences to dictate ess of those bodies, and for depriving embers of the right to bear witness on rials, &c., but the presiding elder refused he question on the resolutions, and d the conference. The quarterly confer- n re-organized, appointed its own chair- d resolved, that hereafter, they would residing elder his quarterage, who re- put any question which came before the y conference. We should judge this n would have a very salutary influence.

Crops.—The wheat, in this vicinity, is ll cut down. It turns out to be full bet- was expected, though in many instan- light. Some of the best fields are much with the rust. The crop is better in this hood than any other part of the county examined. The following is from the an Farmer, and we hope its sentiments ect:

had cut out for insertion notices of the f the crops in various sections of the , but we have concluded to embrace the a short compass, as there is a sameness which obviates the necessity of detail. ore observed, the Hessian fly has pretty y appeared, and in some cases made sad ret we feel fully justified in expressing ion, founded on an examination of the s from many parts of the country, and ill be fully, if not more than an average wheat; the injury in some places being an made good by the abundance in oth- here is expected in this city this day (1st crop from North Carolina. The oats, d grass are uncommonly fine, and are ex- to yield most luxuriantly; the early part eason was unfavorable to the corn, and ks wore a blighted appearance, but it has ently recovered, and looks well. The o the rye from the rust has been pretty , and there will, no doubt, be a partial of the crop; in Lancaster county, Pa., o we note an exception to this remark. stuffs generally are very abundant. On le, the husbandman has abundant cause itude to Him who is "the giver of every d perfect gift," for the abundance with is labors have been crowned."

last Aurora is down, in the form of a quite heavy on the clergy of this place, for ing the Whig celebration, on the 4th in- and the names of six are given. It is probable, if these clergymen had attend- Mr. Sheplor's and assisted Bro. Lamb* in wotions, it would all have been right .; but then, the whigs would have grum- s hard, and no doubt, censured equally are not personally acquainted with all the entlemen named, but some of them we have for many years, and so far as morality gnified ministerial deportment are con- , they are excelled by no clergyman of our ntance. But still we must say, we think it for clergymen to participate in these 4th of stivities, more especially when they assume ty political character. It subjects them sure on the part of those keen-eyed crit- o are always looking out for objections, hose greatest merit is to find fault; besides, are some honest christians who think the ce wrong, and would be grieved to see their ter participating in it. A great mind e would not only "avoid every appearance l," but if "meat made his brother to offend ould not eat it while the world should ."

m these considerations we declined accept- written request, on the part of the Printers' iation, to participate with them in cele- g our national independence, as a body, on th instant. We considered the invitation respectful, and had we consulted nothing ur private feelings, we would have been o join them, but when we considered our c relations, though it required an effort, we had to yield to what we considered our paramount duty, which was to abstain.

*The same number of the Aurora, in descri- the democratic celebration, at the "Hotel r. Sheplor, Market street," says, "an ap- riate and fervent prayer was offered up to hrone of grace, by Mr. Lambe." Rev. Ja- Lamb.

We do not make these remarks for the sake of having something to say upon the subject, but because we feel it our duty to improve every passing event to make correct impressions on the minds of our readers. Nor do we suppose our public character is less exceptionable than these ministers who have been the subject of censure; though not culpable in this matter, we may have been in other particulars. The public, in reference to this question, will decide for themselves.

It may not be known to some of our readers that there is an exciting controversy now going on in the Protestant Episcopal Church, both in England and in America, in relation to the use of certain ceremonies in the church, which it is said she should have retained when she separated from Popery. Wishing to keep our readers advised of the state of the ecclesiastical world, we will give a long article from the Wesleyan Observer on the subject. This will show that the most powerful minds are often paralized by the touch of superstition, and that there is, even in this enlightened age, a great deal of grave nonsense exciting the attention of our most learned men.

The Oxford Tracts, or Peuseism.—We have given some attention for some months past to a discussion under the above caption which has been going on in several Protestant Episcopalian periodicals in England and in the United States. That our readers may understand the origin and nature of this discussion, we would observe that some few years since a number of talented and as we should judge pious ministers of the Protestant Episcopal Church, connected with Oxford University, England, commenced the issuing of tracts periodically under the name of the Oxford Tracts. The design of these tracts appear to be to show that the reformation from Popery which resulted in the dismemberment of the English Church from the Church of Rome, was so ultra in its character as to remove certain important principles and usages which were considered by the earliest fathers of the church, if not of divine origin, having at least the divine sanction.—They designed farther to restore to their former place and authority these principles and usages. That this subject may be more distinctly understood, we shall avail ourselves of an extract from a writer of the Christian Advocate and Journal. The following he quotes from Blackwood's Magazine:

"Where are our prelates, when so much nonsense is going on in the heart of the great Protestant University? The questions in debate now are, whether men shall turn their heads to the east, or to some other quarter of the compass, during the reading of certain creeds. Whether the clergy shall wear little crosses on the tips of their scarfs? Whether they shall put the bread and wine on the table in the chancel with their own hands, or by the hands of the church warden? Whether they shall put them primarily on a little table apart, or in a recess in the wall?—Whether they shall make a bow to them, as they advance to the table, or omit that piece of politeness? Rev. Mr. Townsend, it seems, had said, curiously, that all these tricks savored of Popery! Dr. Pusey, for it is no less than the Hebrew professor and canon of Christ's church, who feels aggrieved, proceeds formally to vindicate the orthodoxy of these prodigiously childish persons who think they are thus restoring the purity of the church. Hume, in his history, observes, with keen and due contempt, that 'the most furious quarrels of the sectaries were about surplices, rails to the communion table, the position of the reading desks, and such other trivialities.' And are we to have all this nonsense renewed, and solemn men in doctors' hoods thinking that they are not committing the most arrant foolery by scribbling either for or against them? and all this frippery when the very existence of the church is at hazzard,—when a rabble of legislators in the streets are howling for her plunder, and Popery, like a wild beast, is foaming at the threshold? Let Oxford bestir herself while she remains a University, leave those pompous trifles to their obscure squabbles, and add something manly, honest and rational, to the national defence of Christianity."

They and their disciples, in Europe and America, are rapidly leaving the vantage ground of truth, and step by step, descending into the gulf of Popery; and that their heresies are precisely those of anti-Christ.

1. They vehemently abjure the very name of Protestant.

"The English Church, as such, is not Protestant, only politically,—that is, externally. It claims to be merely reformed, not Protestant." (See Tracts for the Times, No. 72, p. 32.) Again: "To hurry me down the steep of ultra-Protestantism, to its uniform end, the denial of the Lord who bought them." (Ibid., No. 77, p. 36.) "The very name of Protestantism, cold and negative, and skeptical, as it is, ought to be abolished among us." "That odious Protestantism! I am more and more indignant at the Protestant doctrine on the subject of the eucharist. You seem cramped by Protestantism," &c. &c. &c. (Froude's Remains, volume i. pp. 322, 391, 404, 425.)

2. The Romish Church is avowedly to be regarded with reverence and affection.

"Is it then a duty to forget that Rome was our mother, through whom we were born to Christ?" (Tract No. 77, p. 33.)

"O! mother Church of Rome, why has thy heart Beat so unruly to thy northern child?"

Lyra Apostolica, p. 229.

"The Reformation, every where but in England, is declared to be a positive evil and misfortune.

"As to the reformers, I think worse and worse of them. Really, I hate the reformation and the reformers more and more. The reformation was a limb badly set,—it must be broken again, in order to be righted." (Froude, pp. 379, 389, 433, vol. i.)

4. Tradition is made an essential part of the rule of faith.

"We may say, 'The Bible, and nothing but the Bible,' but this is an unthankful reception of another great gift, equally from God, such as no Englishman can tolerate. But we take the sounder view, that the Bible is the record of necessary truth, or matters of faith, and the Church Catholics' tradition is the interpreter of it."—(Tract No. 71, p. 8.) Hence they talk of 'Revelation, including scripture and antiquity,' of equal authority.

"If it were possible that the Catholic Church could, in the highest and exactest sense, meet in a Catholic council, we should receive its sentence as infallible truth. In proportion, then, as a general council realizes this idea, we hold its decision in reverence." (British Magazine, vol. xii. p. 254.)

5. Monachism and the celibacy of the clergy.

"You must have dissent or monachism in a Christian country; so make your choice." (British Magazine, vol. ix. p. 366.) "Great towns are beyond the sphere of the parish priest, burdened, as he is, with the endearments and anxieties of a family." (Ibid., p. 368.) "The present state of things in England makes an opening for reviving the monastic system." (Froude, vol. 1. p. 322.)

6. Transubstantiation has no great evil in the eyes of this sect, though Crammer, Ridley and Latimer went to the stake in resistance of this precise heresy. Hence, the tracts call "the table," "the Lord's table," &c., most significantly, "the Altar," and they constantly assert the bread and wine to be "the body and blood of Christ," though the Rubrics of their church uniformly call the elements, after consecration, "the bread," for, "the bread and wine." (See Froude, vol. i. p. 326.)

"I should like to know why you flinch from saying, that the power of making the body and blood of Christ is vested in the successors of the Apostles." Again, in the tract No. 52, p. 7, we read, "Can any devout man reckon it a matter of small moment, whether the minister with whom he communicates be a minister by apostolic succession or not? In the judgment of the church it makes no less difference than this: whether the bread and cup which he partakes of shall be to him Christ's body and blood, or not!"

7. The virgin is raised to the rank of an intercessor in heaven, and is to be regarded as superhuman. The Christian Knowledge Society lately erased from one of its publications, the phrase, "The mother of God," rightly judging it to be Popish. The British Critic demands its reinstatement; contending, on the authority of the Council of Ephesus, for thus styling the "blessed virgin." And Mr. Newman, in one of his sermons, p. 8. eulogizes her in similar strains. And the 75th number of the Oxford tracts is made up of selections from the Romish Breviary, of which the editor says: "It is a reappropriation of a treasure which is ours as much as the Papists." Among these prayers thus reappropriated to Protestant use, we find the following:

"Grant, O Lord, we beseech thee, that by the glorious intercession of blessed Mary, ever virgin, we may enjoy eternal bliss." (p. 53.) "Holy Mary and all the saints, intercede for us to the Lord. Therefore, I beseech thee, blessed Mary, ever virgin, the blessed Michael, archangel, the blessed John Baptist the Apostles, Peter and Paul, all saints, and thee, my Father, to pray the Lord our God for me." (p. 61.)

8. Prayers for the dead and to the saints are both advocated. Even Dr. Pusey says:

"Prayer for God's departed servants,—since knowing them to be in a state of imperfect bliss until the resurrection, whenever we pray for the final coming of God's kingdom, we do in fact, (if we have any thought for the departed,) pray at the same time for the perfecting of their bliss." (p. 23, Dr. P.'s answer.) "May their souls rest in peace." (Tract No. 75, p. 148.) "Blessed Lawrence, martyr of Christ, intercede for us." (Ibid., p. 119.) "Let us keep fasts and vigils with the blessed apostle Peter, whose deeds of grace, working together with our prayers, we may obtain what we seek through our Lord Jesus Christ," &c. (Ibid., p. 168.)

9. The power of absolute and discretionary absolution and reprobation, are claimed for the "succession" directly. (See Lyra Apostolica, p. 219.)

10. The seven sacraments of Popery are virtually admitted, by attributing "sacramental efficacy" to the five offices of the church, other than the two sacraments recognized by Protestants. (See British Magazine, vol. vii. p. 521; and Palmer's Treatise, vol. ii. p. 440.)

11. The Oxford writers are resuming all the mummeries which our reformers rejected, as the crucifix, crossing, holy water, chrism, holy oil, &c., &c. Hence their poet, p. 14:

"Whene'er across this sinful flesh of mine,
I draw the holy sign,
All good thoughts stir within me," &c.

See also, tract No. 75, p. 177: "In saying their 'worthy fruits of penance,' the conscience of every one is addressed, that he may obtain by so much the more advantage of good works by penitence, as he has incurred heavier loss by sinning."

"It appears to me plain that in all matters which seem to us indifferent, or even doubtful, we should conform our practices to those of the church which has preserved its traditionary practices unbroken." Froude, p. 836.

From the above it will be seen that several very important changes are being advocated by the Oxford writers. The controversy in England has assumed a very serious aspect and has called into exercise the talents of some of the first writers of the age. According to accounts, the tracts which have been circulated there have made an extensive impression on the mass of the community, and without the checks of a salutary investigation would soon make a great change in favor of Popish mummeries. As already intimated, the doctrine of the tracts have their advocates and opponents in this country. The former are among those called the high church party, and the latter those of the low church.

The New York Review, the accredited Episcopal organ of the high church interest in this country, has attempted to defend the most offensive doctrine of the tracts, and argued in favor of all the innovations which they are designed to introduce. It contends that the "articles and liturgy," which every "churchman" should acknowledge as "the expounder of Scripture and are the test of orthodoxy on all material points," and it challenges proof of "their contrariety to our church's doctrine."

The high church periodicals of the city of New York appear to be deeply infected with the Oxford theology, and censures those venerable pastors of their own denomination who make a stand against these innovations. The New York Churchman, an able periodical, agrees with the New York Review in advocating the doctrine of the tracts. A large share of its columns have been occupied with eulogies apon the superior piety and learning of the writers of the tracts.

The Episcopal Recorder, published at Philadelphia, the organ of the low church party in the Protestant Episcopal Church, is altogether at issue with the Churchman as to what the "church does think," and their flocks, therefore, must be greatly at a loss as to what "they are to think," until their clergy shall settle the irreconcilable differences between them. Both sides quote articles, liturgy, rubrics, standard authors and holy fathers, for and against the Oxford tracts, and it is apparent, like holy mother, or "dear sister," as they call Romanism, they show that the "infallible church" has spoken both ways at different eras of "venerable antiquity."—And, indeed, every impartial reader of church history, knows that the testimony of the holy fathers in different periods, and even that of the same holy fathers, may be quoted in direct contradiction to themselves and each other, and that too, on the most essential doctrines, as well as ritual observances. Hence the impossibility of "taking what the church thinks," unless we have "a more sure word of prophecy" than "holy fathers," even those of the Nicerne age, to which the Oxford writers attach great authority.

A work entitled "Ancient Christianity and the Doctrine of the Oxford Tracts, by Isaac Taylor," of some 550 pages, has recently been published. This is probably the ablest work written against the Tracts, and is well worthy the perusal of those interested. There are several considerations which press themselves upon us upon an examination of this subject.

We learn not only the impossibility, but the great impropriety of attempts to suppress discussion in this age of inquiry, upon subjects so important as those of the moral integrity of the church. In the case before us, we see a number of the most able divines of the English church attempting to introduce into belief and use what the fathers of that church considered so erroneous in principle and dangerous in its tendency, that they even suffered martyrdom against them. From the character of the Oxford writers, apparently both for piety and intelligence, there would be great danger of the introduction of errors, which might soon assimilate that church to a substantial conformity to Popery.—But this great evil will be prevented, by the very able manner in which its evangelical clergy are meeting and exploding these errors. Their press is free, and so long as it remains so, the truth will stand upon its own merits The discussions of this subject have been conducted in a very able, decided and evangelical manner. They are carried on in periodicals under the patronage of their own church, and apparently without the least fear that such discussions will injure the interests of the church. We hardly know which to admire most, the spirit or the manliness with which they are conducted. In the language of a late writer they have learned to make the distinction between an opponent and an enemy.—The writers in this church, though making great claims to the antiquity of its principles and usages, are nevertheless desirous that those principles and usages should be understandingly adopted and maintained.

This is as it should be. All principles and usages which will not bear the light of candid investigation, are to be suspected. On this point we wish, however, to be definitely understood. We neither recommend nor approve the spirit of captious controversy. We could no more engage in such controversy, than we could spend our time in idle or unprofitable conversation.—But there is an immense difference between the appropriate discussion of important principles and usages, and that of captious controversy. Such discussions are intimately connected with the vital interests of the church of God. There always are, and of necessity must be, a multitude of minds which will need to be informed on important subjects. Intelligent investigation properly conducted must to such minds be immensely beneficial. And even on profounder minds, which may in many respects be highly cultivated, the power of principles will not be felt until they are seen through the light of diligent inquiry. These remarks will apply to the whole economy of the Methodist Episcopal church. This economy should be understood; and the more so, as it may be subjected to quite important changes every four years. Besides, principles and usages work their way into existence and authority imperceptibly. What was once a custom or a usage at length becomes a law.

Investigation becomes more sternly important, when it applies to the existence of great evils, especially if those evils derive any sanction from civil or ecclesiastical legislation. The good man should be like a patriot, a philanthropist and a christian. The whole race of mankind constitute the brotherhood, for whose welfare he is bound to be interested.

The Portsmouth Gazette states that small-pox of a very fatal character prevails at Seabrook.

A country clergyman, who wished to prepare the children of his parishioners for saying their catechism, asked a simple lad what his godfathers and godmothers did for him. "Truly," replied Tony, "I don't know what they will do, but I am sure they have done little enough yet."

Cut small grain before it becomes dead ripe, for the following reasons: 1. If omitted, bad weather may intervene and delay the harvest too long. 2. Dead ripe grain wastes much in harvesting. 3. Early cut grain makes the best flour. 4. When any portion of the culm or straw is ripened, or become dry, there is no farther supply of nourishment from the soil; and the grain then gets as much food from the cut as it would from the standing straw. Hence, when the straw turns yellow under the ear, however green the rest part of it may be, the grain should be cut. And when the straw becomes badly affected with rust or mildew the sooner it is cut the better.

Episcopal Prerogatives.—Some account of the proceedings of the quarterly meeting conference of St. Paul's station, will be found in another column. Such collisions between presiding officers and the bodies over which they preside, are certainly to be regretted,—especially when they take place in the church of God. But we know not how they can be avoided. Bishops and presiding elders have their views of duty, and so have the annual and quarterly conferences.—The claims of accumulated and accumulating power forbid a yielding on the part of these officers. And the great principle involved on the other hand, in regard to human rights, make a yielding on the part of the conferences altogether out of the question. It cannot—it should not be done. Hence, these collisions will continue to exist till bishops and presiding elders cease to be absolute, or the church is rent.—Wesleyan Observer.

Lead Mine—Valuable Discovery.—A valuable vein of the above mineral was recently discovered by the workmen, who were engaged in quarrying limestone on the land of Messrs. Sesholiz & Bergstrusers, about two miles below Sunbury.—The species of ore discovered, is what minerolagist term Galena or the Sulpheret of lead the most valuable and productive of all the lead ores, and in fact the only kind that occurs in sufficient quantities by itself, to justify its working. In appearance, it much resembles the ore at Galena, Ill., excepting that here it occurs in a massive form, while the ore at Galena, we believe, occurs principally in cules.

The vein, which appears to be about two feet in thickness, traverses a large body of compact limestone, which forms at that place, a bold and precipitous rock, washed by the Susquehanna. The breadth or extent of the vein, has not yet been fully ascertained; but so far as it has been exposed, it presents a breast of about sixteen feet in breadth. Some of the specimens we have seen seem to be equally as rich as the best ore at Galena, and will, on an average, we think, yield from 60 to 70 per cent. Several persons from the neighborhood have melted the ore in a common iron ladle and cast bullets of pure metal.—Sanbury Gazette.

Glorious News.—This is an imposing caption, but we can find no other more suitable to the occasion, or better expressive of our sentiments and feelings, on announcing the interesting intelligence which we have the pleasure of now doing. The cause of virtue and loveliness has had a signal triumph. The ladies of Turkey, after centuries of mean and unmanly opposition, are about to be admitted to the exercise of their just rights and privileges. The French papers give us the pleasing and highly gratifying intelligence, that the Sultan has determined that the ladies of the empire, shall adopt European customs; thus achieving a triumph over Musselman bigotry and prejudice, which will doubtless be followed by the happiest consequences. To set the example, the ladies of the Imperial Harem and the wives of the ministry, have made their appearance in public, to the great astonishment of the citizens of Constantinople, who could scarcely believe their eyes, when they saw these hitherto invisible beauties promenading openly. The alteration of the rank of women in Turkey, will effect an important change in all the relations of society there, and we hail the occurrence as one of deep and universal interest.

Business Department.

RECEIVED PAY FOR RECORDER.

From J. A. Mills for O. Clawson,	-	$3 00
" J. Burns, for W. Hawkins, S. Simeson, or Jemison, 2 each, and one for J. G. Barr.	- -	5 00
" A. B. Hoard,	- - - -	2 00
" J. Hopwood for Geo. Davison,	-	2 00
" I. Thrap for Rich'd. Davison,	-	2 50
" G. Hughes for W. Campbell,	-	2 00
" O. White for Mrs. Robinson,	-	2 00
" T. Foster for A. Little & J. Smith,		5 00
" H. L. Prunock for S. Mickle,	-	2 00
" George Clancy for Mary Russell,		2 00

LETTERS RECEIVED.

J. Burns, S. Benjamin, A. B. Hoard, J. Hopwood, 1 sub.; Geo. Hughes, 5 subs.; H. B. Smith, D. Lynch, N. T. Timmons, J. J. Amos, H. L. Prunock, T. Foster, R. E. Lafetrer, G. Clancy, J. T. Forsythe, T. M. Gilson, A. H. Bassett, S. W. Thornton, S. Carlin, M. N. Warren, 2 subs.; J. A. Mills, W. L. Baldwin, 1 sub.; and V. J. Powelson.

The P. M. Harveysburgh O., informs us that we must stop the paper of H. M. Johnson when the year is out. If he pays us up we will.

In reply to Bro. Clancy's queries we inform him that Bro. M. Wheeler of Short Creek, O., is Cr., Bro. Peay formerly of Wheeling, Va. has not paid.

Some person forwarded to us the name of Nancy A. and S. Evans as a subscriber to the paper at Mt. Pleasant Ia. The P. M. informs us there are no such persons there—that's the way it goes.

The P. M. at Findley, O., informs us that M. Bright refuses to take his paper out of the office, and yet he has paid us for it. Will the preacher who resides there be so good as to let us know what is the matter?

Mr. Timmons, we have received neither of your former letters, which we much regret. They could not have came to Zanesville, or they would have been immediately forwarded to us. Accept the paper, if you please, to the end of this volume, should we never hear of the lost.

We received a letter from Coshocton county, directing a paper to be sent to J. R. or J K. to "West La Fayette Johnson Post Office." Will Bro. Warren please to let us know what the name of this office is,—wetherer it is West, whether it is La Fayette, whether it is Johnson, or whether it is all these put together. All we want in any case is simply the name of the post office, county, and state to which the paper is to be directed.

Tiffin, O., July 1, 1840.

Dear Brother Springer: Since I had the pleasure of seeing you I have obtained a few subscribers for the Recorder. It is well received by the people generally, and all with whom I have conversed upon the subject, see its importance to the church in the west. Yet after all it is not supported as it should be. This conference ought to have at least, within its bounds, one thousand subscribers, but I believe there are at present not more than six hundred. We have nearly fifty stations and circuits in this District.—Twenty subscribers in each, including missions, would make the above number, and I believe there are a few of those to whom forty numbers, or more, of the paper are sent, weekly, so that several must have very few subscribers.

Will the brethren, more especially the preachers, make a vigorous effort to increase the subscription list for our District, to one thousand, by the ensuing conference? I have no doubt it can be done. Let superintendents and assistants all work.

Brethren, the prosperity of the paper depends greatly upon you. The worthy brother who edits it has taken upon him a considerable amount of pecuniary responsibility. Its publication is necessarily attended with expense. Try then to collect its dues, and see that all who are able to take it, do so. Hoping these few hints will have the desired effect, believe me, yours, &c.,

George Hughes.

Our subscribers, who are in arrears. will oblige us by immediately remitting the amount of their paper, as we much need money to "go ahead." Send to us any amount and we will pay the postage. No excuse.

As the Post Master General has decided that "a post master may enclose money in a letter to the publisher of a newspaper, to pay the subscription of a third person, and frank the letter, if written by himself," it is the same thing for a subscriber to address his letter, enclosing the pay for his paper to a Post Master who is publisher of a newspaper, in his official capacity by which it will come free.

We wish our subscribers to address their letters containing remittances for us, to "C. Springer, P. M. Meadow Farm, Muskingum O.;" also all letters on the official duties of our office as Post Master in the same way. All letters on other business, or business of a private nature should be addressed to us omitting the official signatures P. M. and we will pay for them.

Information Wanted.

DANIEL RIBLET, son of Daniel Riblet, who left Hagerstown in the year 1820 or 21, and has not been heard from by his aged father and sisters, since the year 1825. Any information respecting him, so that we can hear from him, will be thankfully received.

Please direct your letters to John Dillon, Zanesville, Ohio.

☞The Wheeling papers as well as the papers throughout Ohio, will confer a great favor by giving the above at least one insertion.

July 11, 1840. 47

Stray Mare.

STRAYED from the subscriber living in Hopewell township, Muskingum county, O., on the 20th of June last, a light SORREL MARE, about 14 or 15 hands high, with a small blaze in the forehead and one white foot; no shoes on when she left. Any person returning said mare or giving information to the subscriber where she can be found, will be liberally compensated for his trouble.

Naaman R. Grant.

Hopewell tp., Musk., O., July 8, 1840. 46

Prospectus
OF THE AMERICAN
WESLEYAN OBSERVER.

THIS paper has now reached its 20th No. It has been before the public long enough to have its true character understood. The time for which it was started, (six months,) has now nearly expired. Only six numbers more remain to be issued. As many of our correspondents in different places have expressed a desire that the Observer should be continued, we would say, that provided a sufficient patronage can be obtained, it shall be continued, at least, for one year longer. The editors, who are both pastors, find it too great a burden to conduct this paper and do justice to their people. If, therefore, the Observer is continued, it will probably be necessary for one of the editors to relinquish his pastoral duties, at least in part, and devote more attention to the paper. This will make it indispensable not only that the present subscription list be kept good, but that it be considerably increased—as it now barely pays the paper maker and the printer; the editors obtaining their whole support from their people.

Should the Observer be continued, it is believed, that with the experience which the editors now have, they can, by giving more attention to the paper, make it a truly interesting sheet. And no pains will be spared on their part to accomplish this object.

The general character of the paper will remain the same as it has been. We shall, however, be able to give our readers a greater variety of valuable matter than we have hitherto done. The General Conference has been the all-absorbing subject for several months past—extended discussions respecting its probable results having commenced several weeks before it assembled. We trust, however, that these discussions, and especially the reports of its doings have not been without interest.

The subject of American Slavery, with the best means for its peaceful abolition, will occupy more space in our columns than any other single topic; yet none of the moral enterprises of the age will be forgotten. To all these, as well as to the cause of general education and sound literature, the Observer will be constantly devoted. While it will be emphatically a FREE DISCUSSION paper, it is intended that it shall be an interesting and useful family newspaper to such as take no other. General, as well as moral and religious intelligence, will find a place in our columns.

With the party politics of the day, we shall have nothing to do, farther than to carry out our principles as friends of universal liberty, by the use of all moral and lawful means, to invest our oppressed countrymen with their alienable rights; believing this to be the most solemn duty of every American citizen, whatever be his profession.

Our columns will be open, to a limited extent, to the discussion, pro and con, of the different systems of church polity, IF any of our correspondents shall wish to write on these subjects. It is but a small portion of our columns that we propose to devote to this discussion. The M. E. Church holds that no form of church goverment is laid down in the scriptures—yet it is a matter of doubt whether there is magnanimity and free inquiry enough in said church, to support a paper, whose columns are open at all, to a discussion of this question. But we shall see. We do not intend that any violent attacks shall be made upon the church or her officers; but mean to confine ourselves principally to a discussion of the abstract question. And we wish it to be distinctly understood, that this and every other subject which may be discussed in our columns, will stand on its own merits. No party is responsible, either for the sentiments of the editors, or their correspondents. We are not an official organ of any party.

The Observer will be printed as heretofore, on fine paper and new type, at one dollar for six months, or two dollars per annum in advance. It is, however, the wish of the editors, that all subscriptions now to be made, should be for the term of one year; as it is not their intention to continue the paper after the first of August next, unless they can get sufficient encouragement to continue it, at least, one year from that time. All subscriptions must be accompanied with the cash. We have determined to do none other but a cash business. This is best for all concerned. We shall not, therefore, move one step beyond the first six months, till we can see our way clear. And of our present subscribers, or others, who may wish to remit to us money, can do so through any Post Master, without expense to them or ourselves.

Any person who will send us the pay, free of expense, for five copies, shall be entitled to a sixth copy gratis—and in that proportion for any larger number.

Those who favor the project of continuing the Observer, will have the goodness to send in their subscriptions at once, for one year, commencing with the first of August. We wish to know, with the least possible delay, whether our paper is to be continued or not. All who may send us their subscriptions, shall have the money refunded, without expense to them, if the paper should not be continued.

Jotham Horton,
Orange Scott.

Lowell, Mass., June 18, 1840.

P S. Address "American Wesleyan Observer, Lowell, Mass" 3w47

YOUTH'S DEPARTMENT

From the Youth's Cabinet.

UNCLE WILLIAM, No. 9.

CITY AND COUNTRY.

Many children in the country have heard so many fine stories about Boston and New York, that they have begun to think that they must be delightful places.

A person with a contented mind can enjoy himself in a city, but it is no easier to find happiness here than it is in the country. Indeed, when I have told you a few facts about New York, perhaps you will think it is not so easy.

Here we are surrounded by wicked men and boys. The air we breathe is polluted by the effluvia from living hogs, putrid carcasses, and filthy drains, which carry off the dirty water, loaded with decaying animal and vegetable matter, from 30,000 houses, containing 250,000 persons. Here

We see ten thousand baneful arts combined,
To pamper luxury and thin mankind.

But we can never enjoy perfect freedom here. We are always under restrainst, because we feel that multitudes are looking at us.

A city gentleman who has a family of bright children, has lately moved fifteen miles out of town, mostly for their benefit. One of his boys said he was very glad he was going into the country, because he thought it would be so pleasant to pull off his shoes and stockings and run in the fields.

Only a few rich families here enjoy a privilege which the poorest country child enjoys,—that of running in the fields among trees and flowers. Between Varick and Hudson streets, there is a beautiful square green field. It is cut up by curved gravel walks, where a person may ramble among flowers, under the shady trees. Benches are placed along in the walks, where those who are tired of walking, can sit down and enjoy the pleasing prospect. I pass this field every day, but I never entered it.

"Why not?" perhaps a hundred voices inquire.

Because it is surrounded by a great iron fence, much higher than my head, and the iron doors are always locked.

It is the private property of some wealthy families who can enter it with keys. But the favored few, who go in, cannot feel free as the child in the country, who roves through valleys and meadows, by babbling brooks, among rocks and waterfalls; or who penetrates the ever-varying forest, where nature's free musicians attend his steps; or climbs the high hill where his delighted eye takes in a prospect like that which Dyer has tried to paint in the following lines:

Ever charming, ever new,
When will the landscape tire the view?
The fountains fall, the rivers flow,
The woody valleys, warm and low;
The windy summit, wild and high,
Roughly rushing on the sky;
The pleasant seat, the ruined tower,
The naked rock, the shady bower,
The town and village, dome and farm,
Each gives each a double charm,
As pearls upon an Ethiop's arm.

The city field of which I spoke, is called St. John's Park. But the prospect here must soon "tire the view." On all sides, it is bounded by the high walls of brick houses. It has no murmuring brooks, and birds seldom sing in the trees. It is true, those who walk in it have the proud consciousness that they enjoy a pleasure of which the throngs of common people around them are deprived. But this selfish feeling does not seem to have attractions enough to draw them often from their close rooms. I should think the walks were "solitary," at least three quarters of the time. And when they are occupied, I never hear such hearty laughs, and merry shouts, or see such nimble feet as I have often seen in the country.

When the privileged ones leave their homes, they walk over the hot pavements and apply their great key to the massy bolts, and then saunter about in their silks and broadcloth,—the younger children occasionally driving a hoop or tossing a ball,—but all their movements appear to lack hilarity and freedom.

Several young friends of mine have lately moved into the country. Do you think they write back that they wish to return to the delights of the city? O no, I have the letter which one of them wrote to her father, in which she says: "I would like to go to New York and make a visit, but I do not want to go back there to live." This was not written from some splendid country seat, a few miles from here, but from a small town in the interior of New Hampshire. Another writes: "It is so pleasant, here in the country, I wish you was with us." Their mother, who is with them, puts in a few words in the same letter, in which she says: "To be permitted once again to breathe the sweet country air, to me is delightful."

The mother of a little girl who has moved to Vermont, in a letter to a friend in the city, says: "Harriet has fine times in skipping over the hills and rocks, in fishing and gathering wild flowers and greens; and then the birds and frogs sing so delightfully! She only wants M— or S— for a companion, and she would be in her element."

I hope all our country readers will prize the privileges they have and make the most of them. Remember that "God made the country and man made the town." God pronounced all His works very good, and that which satisfied Him is good enough for us. But men are always dissatisfied with their own works, in the cities. They are often finding fault, pulling down and building anew.

But let us not forget that whatever places we may be shut out from on earth, we all have free admission to those heavenly fields "dressed in living green," where —"Everlasting spring abides,

And never-withering flowers."

And where the prospect is so delightful, that,

Could we but climb where Moses stood,
And view the landscape o'er,
Not Jordan's stream, nor death's cold flood,
Could fright us from the shore.

If any of us are forever excluded from those blest abodes, we shall have to reproach ourselves by reflecting that an "abundant entrance" was purchased for us at a great price, and we were urged to go in, but would not. O come to Christ now, and live near to Him, that you may enjoy His society forever.

UNCLE WILLIAM.

VARIETY.

THE JEWS.—Major Noah expresses the opinion that the number of Jews in the world may be estimated at nearer six millions than three. He says:

"There are more than a million in Poland and Russia; in all Asia there are full two millions; half a million in Austria; in the Barbary States and Africa, a million; in all Europe two millions and a half. We do not think during the most splendid periods of Jewish history that they ever exceeded four millions, but then their colonies and countries held tributary in Europe and Asia, amounted to many millions more. For example, at one period all Spain paid tribute to King Solomon; and all Spain and Portugal, at this day, are descendants of the Jews and Moors; and there are many thousands of Jews, in both those countries, now adhering in secret to the ancient faith of their fathers, while outwardly professing the Catholic religion. All the familiar Spanish and Portuguese names—Lopez, Mendez, Carvalho, Fonseca, Rodrigues, Peirara, Azavedo, Montefiores, &c. &c.—are of Jewish origin. Their numbers, therefore, never will be accurately known until the restoration, when thousands who, from convenience and pride, and some from apprehension, conceal their religion, will be most eager to avow it when their nation takes rank among the governments of the earth."

A CAST IRON FENCE.—The uses of iron are every day becoming more apparent. Too much importance cannot be attached to the value of this metal, and to the many objects to which it may be applied, Ships, houses, steamers, machinery, domestic utensils, and a thousand other purposes, might be enumerated. We observe also, in a late number of the Cincinnati Gazette, a notice of about 100 feet of cast iron fence, which is to be seen in that vicinity. The Gazette says:

"It was erected in four feet pannels, very tasteful in cast, and to our mind, at least equally durable with some of the fancy wrought-iron palings, which cost from five to six dollars per foot; while the fence we allude to, can be erected at an expense not exceeding two dollars and seventy-five cents per foot. It is of a more showy character than any iron castings of a similar construction, heretofore introduced; and we are assured by those who are competent to determine such matters, that notwithstanding the objections that may be made to the general use of iron fence pannels, on the supposition that they are easily broken, that they are less subject to the influence of frosty weather, than could be expected, until a fair test had been made as to the truth of the assertion, which we are credibly informed has been made, and that the castings are not in the least affected by the weather, as is common to the hollow ware exposed to the changes of season."

MURDER MOST HORRIBLE.

Chambersburgh, June 11, 1840.

One of the most shocking murders, or rather massacre of an almost entire family, that ever cast a stain upon civilization, was perpetrated in Cromwell township, Huntingdon county, Pennsylvania, on Saturday the 25th ultimo. The prominent particulars as gathered from an individual present at the examination, are these. William Brown is the father of the murdered family, which consisted of the parents and six children; the eldest daughter was married to a Robert McConahy, who lived on his father-in-law's premises as a tenant. Brown it seems is a rough man, addicted to intemperance, and, when in this condition, was in the habit of threatening to kill some of his family, though never known to have attempted any thing of the kind. He was in the habit of working in the neighborhood at carpentering, whilst McConahy conducted the farming operations. On Saturday morning, the old man and his eldest son, aged about 21, left home for their places of employment; shortly after which McConahy proposed to the next eldest son and a younger one to "go hunting," at the same time directing the daughter and another of the boys to do some work in a corn-field, McConahy's wife having the day previous been conveyed to a friend's house, at some distance, by her husband. After the above disposition had been gone into, the whole family was dispersed, except Mrs. Brown, who remained in the house. McConahy and the two boys, on the hunting excursion, had not proceeded much beyond half a mile from the house, when the reports of guns were heard; and, when the bodies of the two boys were afterwards found, it appeared that the oldest, a stout boy, had not been mortally wounded by the shot, that he had made desperate battle, until overcome by his merciless assailant, who finally cut his throat. While this scene was enacting, the smaller boy ran some distance, but was pursued, shot, and beaten to death, and, with his brother buried beneath leaves and other rubbish.

Shortly after this, the girl and her brother, engaged in the corn-field, were attacked; the girl was shot, but there was ample and painful evidence to show that the first wound was not fatal, and that she resisted the murderer with extraordinary power, which ceased only when both arms were broken and her throat cut from ear to ear. The boy here, as in the other case, appeared to have been first shot, and then beaten and stabbed until life was extinct. The bodies were then covered up. The next object of the fiend incarnate was the mother of those murdered children. She was found in the house and was despatched with a common butcher knife, and her head was nearly severed from her body, though not without manifestations of having resisted her destroyer to the extent of her power. She was buried in her bed, and the blood carefully wiped off the floor. The murderer then stationed himself in the barn, with two loaded rifles, at a point commanding a view of the door of the dwelling-house, and awaited the approach of the next victims. The first was the eldest son, who, when upon the threshold of the door, received a fatal shot, and fell dead upon the spot. He was dragged inside the house, and the door closed.—Next came the father, who, upon putting his hand to the door, found it fastened, upon which he made some exclamation of dissatisfaction, and at the same moment heard the report of a gun, and felt that a ball had passed so close to his eyes as to cause considerable pain: in a moment after, another discharge of a rifle sent a ball so as to cut a part of his ear, graze his whiskers and pass through his hat. He then cast his eyes toward the barn, and discovered a person hastily turn round the corner, directing his course to the woods.

Upon effecting an entrance into the house, Mr. Brown found his eldest son upon the floor, dead, and upon further examination discovered his wife concealed by the bed-clothes, life also extinct. He then communicated the dreadful circumstance to his neighbors, who immediately instituted a search for the other members of the family, who were found as already described, the searchers being lead in the right direction by the reports of the guns previously heard. The next question was, Who is the murderer? The character and habits of Brown at once gave color to the suspicion that he had returned home maddened, as thousands have been before him, by intoxicating liquor, and had thus put into execution his oft threatened and unnatural purpose. He was secured; but, fortunately for him, he had remained sober that day, and only needed to bring his proofs to satisfy all that he could not be the murderer. McConahy, the son-in-law, was present, and, in reply to an insinuation from him unfavorable to Brown, the latter at once accused him as the criminal, averring that he was the man he saw running from the barn, &c. This soon resulted in the liberation of the old man and the securing of McConahy—who, in all the subsequent examination, became more deeply involved in condemning circumstances, and was finally committed to Huntingdon jail to await his trial in August.

Providence seems to have interposed, to frustrate the designs of the assassin. If McConahy is the guilty man, the only object he could have had in view was to destroy the whole family in order to secure the property of his father-in-law to himself; and it would seem that the calculation was that the public would be ready to conclude that Brown had perpetrated the dreadful slaughter, and then committed suicide—a conclusion that might have been produced if he had fallen by the shots aimed at his head, and if he had left his employment prepared for such a deed, by intoxication.—Repository.

POSTAGE.

THE PENNY SYSTEM IN GREAT BRITAIN.—The example of England, in relation to the penny postage system, will, we trust, be speedily emulated in this country.—The scheme, if successful, will contribute greatly to the diffusion of knowledge, and hence to the dissemination of virtue.—Therefore it is especially entitled to the consideration of a government like ours, republican in form and spirit, and having in view the greatest good of the greatest number. In the United States Senate on the 10th ult., Mr. Webster submitted a resolution, declaring it expedient to inquire into the utility of so altering the present regulations of the Post Office Department, as to connect the use of stamps or stamp covers, with a large reduction of the rates of postage. It is not probable that the measure will be finally acted upon this session, but the subject is one of deep interest, and may be said to come home to the business and bosoms of nineteen-twentieths of the citizens of the United States. The penny system went into operation in England on the 6th of May, when postage stamps were issued from the Treasury office. The following official order, which was published at the same time, will in some measure explain the system:

The Lords of the Treasury having fixed the 6th of May next for the issue of postage stamps, on and after that day all letters written on stamped paper, or enclosed in stamped covers, or having stamps affixed to them, the stamps in every such case being equal in value or amount to the rates of postage now chargeable on such letters, if pre-paid, will pass free of postage in whatever part of the United Kingdom they may be posted.

In those cases where the value of stamps on the letter is less than the amount of the postage to which it would be now liable, if pre-paid, the letter will be charged double the amount of such difference on delivery. An inland letter, for example, weighing more than half an ounce, and not exceeding an ounce, if bearing only a penny stamp, will be charged twopence, on delivery.

The same regulation applies to letters pre-paid by money, where the full and proper rate of postage has not been paid in advance.

Stamps may be used for printed votes and proceedings in Parliament; if the stamps, however, should be less in value than the proper rate of postage to which these documents are subject, only the difference, and not double the difference, is to be charged.

Stamps may also be used on foreign, colonial, and ship letters, &c., outward. If any letter, however, addressed to places beyond sea, shall bear an insufficient number of stamps, it will be sent to the dead letter office, to be returned, in all practicable cases, to the writer. Stamps are not permitted to be used on letters arriving in the United Kingdom from the colonies or foreign countries. In such cases, therefore, letters will be chargeable with the same rates as they would if not bearing stamps.

All these regulations will be applicable to newspapers in those cases where they are liable to postage.

It must be distinctly understood, that it is optional with the public either to use stamps, or to forward their letters, &c. pre-paid, or unpaid, as at present.

The instructions issued in December, and on the 4th of February last, remain in full force; the only alteration being, that the stamps are permitted to be used in certain cases, instead of the postage being paid in money.

We are indebted to a member of Congress for some further information upon the subject. The stamps are each embellished with a portrait of the Queen, together with various devices of trade and commerce. The rates of postage are as follows:

Inland Letters not exceeding half an ounce, are charged one penny.

Exceeding half an ounce, but not exceeding 1 ounce, twopence.

Exceeding 1 ounce, but not exceeding 2 ounces, fourpence.

Exceeding 2 ounces, but not exceeding 3 ounces, sixpence.

And so on, an additional twopence for every additional ounce. With but few exceptions, the weight is limited to 16 ounces. Unstamped Letters are charged double postage on delivery. Those insufficiently stamped, double the amount of such insufficiency.

COLONIAL LETTERS.—If sent by packet, twelve times; if by private ship, eight times the preceding rates.

FOREIGN LETTERS.—The packet rates are too various to be enumerated here. The ship rates are the same for Foreign as for Colonial Letters. As regards both Foreign and Colonial Letters, there is no limitation as to weight. All sent outwards, with few exceptions, must be prepaid by money, or by stamps; and those going by private ship must be marked "Ship Letter."

PRICES OF STAMPS.

At a POST OFFICE.—Labels, 1d. and 2d. each. Covers, 1½d. and 2½d. each.

At a STAMP DISTRIBUTORS's, as above, or as follows:

Half ream, or 240 Penny Covers, £1 2s. 4d. Penny Envelopes, £1 1s. 9d. Quarter-ream, or 120 Twopenny Covers, £1 1s. 4d. Twopenny Envelopes, £1 1s. 1d.

At the STAMP OFFICES in London, Dublin and Edinburgh, as above, or as follows:

2 Reams, or 960 Penny Covers, £4 7s. 0d. Penny Envelopes, £4 5s. 0d.—1 Ream, or 480 Twopenny Covers, £4 3s. 6d. Twopenny Envelopes, £4 2s. 6d.

Covers may be had at these Prices, either in Sheets, or cut ready for use.—Envelopes in Sheets only, and consequently not made up. No one, unless duly licensed, is authorized to sell Postage Stamps.

The Penny Stamp carries half an ounce (Inland,) the Twopenny Stamp one ounce. For weights exceeding one ounce, use the proper number of Labels, either alone, or in combination with the Stamps of the Covers or Envelopes.

MONEY.—Coin, if enclosed in Letters at all, should be folded in paper, sealed, and then fastened to the inside of the Letter; but, to avoid risk, a money order should be used whenever practicable.

Bicknell.

Camp-Meeting Notices.

A Camp-Meeting will be held on the farm of John McKinney, between Sidney and Hardin, Shelby county, Oho, including the third Sunday in August. Ministerial aid from the surrounding circuits, is strongly solicited.

JOSEPH PARKE.

There will be a camp-meeting for Coshocton circuit, held on the farm of John Dean, Esq., two miles from Jacobsport, to commence on the 27th of August; we request the attendance of ministers and Members.

The Presidential meeting will be held at Bro. Furgeson's, White Eyes Plain, to commence on the evening of the 24th at 5 o'clock. Bro. Brown is requested to be present at the commencement of the meeting. Other ministers are requested to attend. M. N. WARREN, Sup't.

There will be a Camp-Meeting held on Lima circuit, Ohio, to include the third Sabbath in August; we request all who can make it convenient to attend. J. GUEST, Sup.

We expect to hold a Camp-Meeting on Reboboth circuit, six miles west of Wilmington, Ohio, to commence on the Friday before the third Sabbath in August, and request the aid of Bros. Flood, McGuire, Hunt, Paul, Stephens, Evans, Hughey, Atkinson, Little, the Dalbeys and Hibben. ISAAC EDWARDS, As.

A Camp-Meeting will be held at the Diamond, ten miles from Indiana town and county, Pennsylvania, to commence on the thirteenth day of August. It will be twenty-four miles from Blairsville, and 62 from Pittsburgh. Brothers Baldwin, Robinson, Shearer, Francis and Tipton, we hope, will not fail to be with us.

T. J. ADDIS, Sup. Clearfield ct.

A camp-meeting for Zanesville circuit will commence on Thursday preceding the last Sabbath in August, on the land of Barnard Wortman, within half a mile of this office, on the old ground. Ministers and members of other circuits are pressingly invited to attend. The ministers from the western part of the District can go from this meeting in company to conference.

There will be a camp meeting held for the Ligonier Mission, near the turnpike leading from Ligonier to Youngstown, and about 2½ miles from the former place, to commence on the 28th of August next. We solicit the aid of brothers G. Brown, J. Robison, J. B. Shearer, T. J. Addis, W. Turner, S. Hazlett, W. L. Baldwin, J. Hopwood, D. Kinney, and J. M. Piper, together with any of our unstationed brethren of the adjacent circuits, who can assist us. W. W. TIPTON.

A camp-meeting will be held on the land of George Castle, 4½ miles from Mt. Vernon, Ohio, to commence the 21st of August; we especially invite brethren Springer, I. Thrap, Wilson, Davis, Marshall, Warren, Bamford, Tallentire, Bloomer and Cowl. We hope they can make it convenient to attend, but if any of the brethren cannot be with us, I should be glad if they would let me know soon as possible. M. SCOTT.

LETTER remaining in the Post Office at Meadow Farm, Muskingum, Ohio, on the 1st of July, 1840.

Rev. George Hughes.

C. SPRINGER, P. M.

Meadow Farm, July 1, 1840.

Dissolution.

THE partnership heretofore existing between S. B. Johnson and J. M. Kirkpatrick, under the firm of S. B. Johnson & Co. was dissolved by mutual consent, on Thursday 19th inst.

S. B. JOHNSON,
J. M. KIRKPATRICK.

Zanesville, March 31, 1840. 32tf

Dissolution.

THE partnership heretofore existing between the subscribers in the PUTNAM FOUNDRY, under the firm of HARTLEY & ANDERSON, was this day dissolved by mutual consent.

The Putnam Foundry will hereafter be conducted by J. J. Anderson & Co.

LEVI HARTLEY,
JACOB J. ANDERSON.

Putnam, Jan. 1, 1840. (Jan. 29: 23.)

Notice.

ALL persons indebted to the late firm of Hartley & Anderson, are earnestly requested to call at the Foundry and make settlement, as the change of owners makes this step absolutely necessary. We ask the attention of all persons concerned, to this notice.

J. J. ANDERSON & Co.

Putnam, Jan. 1, 1840. (Jan. 29: 23.)

Glass Manufactory.

THE subscriber having dissolved his connexion with the former company, has taken the GLASS WORKS below town under his own management.

WINDOW GLASS, double and single, all seizes, and of superior quality will be kept constantly on hand for sale on reasonable terms.—The experience of the proprietor, in the manufacture of the article, will insure all made to be of the best quality. Call and see.

S. B. JOHNSON.

Zanesville, Ohio, May 6, 1840. 37

Indiana Conference-Notice.

THE first session of the Indiana Annual Conference of the Methodist Protestant Church, is appointed to be held at LIBERTY MEETING HOUSE, (John Burton's) near Mt. Tabor, Monroe county, Indiana, commencing Thursday, October 1st, 1840. Bro. JOSEPH SIMPSON is requested to preach the introductory sermon, at 10 o'clock, A. M. of said day, and Bro. ELIJAH COLLINS to serve as alternate.

As this is to be our first session, let us with the help of the Lord, endeavor to begin right. In view of this, the committee respectfully make these few suggestions. 1. Let our brethren assemble in the spirit of devout prayer, that the Divine blessing and approbation may attend our enterprize. 2. Let them be in attendance promptly at the commencement of the session. 3. Let each superintendent prepare accurate returns of the numbers in society, with the names of unstationed ministers and preachers, in the various circuits and missions. 4. Should any ministerial member be prevented from attending, let him not fail to address the conference by letter, as required by rule of discipline, and communicate all needful information.

N. B.—It will be recollected that each mission, having three or more societies, embracing not less than thirty members, is entitled to elect and send a delegate to the Annual Conference, provided the missionary is entitled to a seat in said conference. H. P. BENNETT, A. H. BASSETT, T. P. ARMSTONG. } Committee.

July 1, 1840. [Meth. Prot. please copy.]

The New World--Quarto.

THE publisher of the NEW WORLD has the pleasure of announcing to the public, that in consequence of the immense circulation which this popular and mammoth sheet has obtained throughout the United States, and the numerous requests which have been made for its publication in a form better suited for the preservation of its valuable contents, he has commenced the issue of a QUARTO EDITION of the NEW WORLD, in sixteen large pages, containing nearly every article which appears in the folio, and will in addition be embellished with a piece of popular music. The form is a splendid one for binding, and will make a beautiful volume at the end of the year. Orders must be sent without delay, as only a limited edition will be printed. No. 1 of the QUARTO appeared on the 6th of June.

TERMS.—Four dollars per annum; Two copies for Seven Dollars; Three copies for Ten Dollars; Five copies for Fifteen Dollars. Payable in advance.

The New World--Folio,

IS published every Saturday morning, at No. 30, Ann street, New York, by J. WINCHESTER, and contains all the new works by the most popular authors in both hemispheres, together with a vast amount of other literary matter, Tales, Poetry, &c., and all the current news of the day.

TERMS.—Three Dollars per annum. Two copies for Five Dollars; Five copies for Twelve Dollars; payable invariably in advance, free of postage.

New York, July 8, 1840. 46

O. WHITE, BOOK BINDER, No. [illegible] Main Street, Zanesville, Ohio.

January 15, 1840. 21tf

William Green,

CLOCK AND WATCH REPAIRER, SILVERSMI[illegible] AND JEWELLER,

CAN be found at his shop on Main str[illegible] Putnam, a few doors north of J. C. Gu[illegible] rie's store, where he will do his best to accom[illegible] date customers. He keeps on hand an ass[illegible] ment of spectacles, watch trimmings, pencils,

As far as we have tried Mr. GREEN as a wa[illegible] repairer he has given us good satisfaction.—[illegible]

April 22, 1840. 35tf.

S. C. Haver,

IN the flourishing town of Putnam has on h[illegible] 40 or 50 SADDLES ready for sale, of dif[illegible] ent qualities, comprising nearly all the variet[illegible] in fashion in our Buckeye State.

A good assortment of Bridles and Mart[illegible] gales: Riding and driving Whips: between [illegible] and 200 Carriage and heavy draft Collars, wh[illegible] will compare and wear with any others m[illegible] here or elsewhere.

Also, fine York, Dearborn, heavy team [illegible] common Farming Harness. A lot of first [illegible] Carriage and Buggy Harness, (brass and si[illegible] plated.)

Trunks, vallises, saddle-bags, and double [illegible] ered wagon whips, varying in quality and pr[illegible] to suit purchasers.

The only recommendation he now offers for [illegible] work, is the testimony and long experience of [illegible] old customers and friends. He is still anxi[illegible] to please and accommodate those who may [illegible] on him, and hopes to share so much of the pu[illegible] patronage as his attention to his business s[illegible] merit.

Putnam, April 29, 1840. 28tf

The Brother Jonathan.

EDITED BY N. P. WILLIS AND H. HASTINGS WI[illegible]

The Largest and Cheapest Newspaper in the Wo[illegible]

AND CERTAINLY AMONG THE BEST.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY,

WILSON & COMPANY,

At 162, Nassau Street, N. York.

TERMS, $3 PER ANNUM, IN ADVAN[illegible]

UPON entering the second volume of [illegible] pioneer in the introduction of paper[illegible] its class, the publishers may be excused for [illegible] gratulating themselves upon the continued p[illegible] perity and advancement of their period[illegible] from the issue of its first number, to the pre[illegible] time. Aware that competition is the life of [illegible] siness, they expected, and have met with riv[illegible] but those rivals have, so far, been essential [illegible] to the publicity and circulation of the Jonath[illegible] New readers have been made, where, comp[illegible] tively, few existed before, and the taste cre[illegible] for the elegant literature of the two hemisphe[illegible] carried into all parts of the country, and m[illegible] accessible to all, has produced a demand for [illegible] Brother Jonathan, which it is gratifying to s[illegible] is continually on the increase.

With such addition to their resources [illegible] emoluments, the publishers have aimed to [illegible] a commensurate increase to the value and in[illegible] est of their sheet. In addition to the labo[illegible] the gentlemen whose names are announce[illegible] editors, the publishers avail themselves consta[illegible] ly of the aid of such occasional contributor[illegible] they can find space for.

For the foreign correspondence of the Jonat[illegible] the services of Isaac C. Pray, Jr., have b[illegible] engaged; and his fine literary taste will als[illegible] exercised in the selection of things rare, [illegible] and worthy in the European literary mart. [illegible] lections from the cream of the foreign magaz[illegible] will of course be continued.

MUSIC.—In the progress of improvemen[illegible] new feature has been added to the Brother J[illegible] athan—the publication of new and popular [illegible] sic. Every paper will contain something in [illegible] way, new and pleasant—reference being ha[illegible] the selection, rather to such pieces as all [illegible] sing and play, than to recherche composit[illegible] suited only to the scientific. A new font of [illegible] sic type has been purchased, and a gentle[illegible] engaged to superintend this department, of [illegible] cellent experience and knowledge of musi[illegible] This will enable us to give music a publi[illegible] which it never enjoyed before: to carry the s[illegible] themes for carol to the sylvan maid in the [illegible] thest back woods, which delight the party in [illegible] city drawing-room. A simultaneous popula[illegible] will thus be enjoyed all over the country by s[illegible] compositions as are adapted to the public ta[illegible] and worthy of the public favor.

Whatever other improvements may sug[illegible] themselves, will be adopted; and no pains spa[illegible] to make the Jonathan a welcome visiter to [illegible] sorts of people, whose tastes are worthy of g[illegible] ification. Other periodicals may be addresse[illegible] particular opinions—or to particular classe[illegible] Jonathan will wander free, "from grave to g[illegible] from lively to severe," and strive, with all [illegible] aid he has enlisted, to compass the whole cir[illegible] to give, in a word, a Cyclopedia of whatever [illegible] be desirable in a literary magazine, and wee[illegible] newspaper. He appeal to the past for vouch[illegible] of what he can do—and what he can, he will.

TERMS—Three dollars a year, in advance. For Five Dollars two copes of the paper will[illegible] sent one year, or one copy two years. In [illegible] case will the paper be sent out of the city [illegible] less paid for in advance.

☞All communications and letters should [illegible] addressed, postage paid, to

WILSON & COMPANY,
No. 162, Nassau street, New York

THE

WESTERN RECORDE[illegible]

IS PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY.

☞The office of the Recorder is five a[illegible] a half miles west of Zanesville.

TERMS.

1. The WESTERN RECORDER will be publi[illegible] ed weekly, on an imperial sheet, at $2 00 p[illegible] annum, in advance: $2 50 at the end of th[illegible] months; $3 00 at the end of the year.

2. No discontinuances will be allowed, [illegible] cept at the discretion of the publisher, until [illegible] arrearages are paid.

3. To all ministers having regular pasto[illegible] charges, who do any thing at all for the pap[illegible] if they will direct us where, a copy shall be se[illegible] gratis; any other who forward to us $10 [illegible] for new subscribers, shall have six copies sent [illegible] any address he may give.

4. All letters designed for the paper, must [illegible] directed to "C. Springer, Meadow Farm, Mus[illegible] ingum, Ohio."

5. A failure to notify a discontinuance b[illegible] fore the expiration of the subscription year, w[illegible] be considered a new engagement.

CHARACTER.—The pages of the WESTE[illegible] RECORDER will be open to discussion on all n[illegible] ral questions;—it will give articles on Liter[illegible] ture, Mechanics, Agriculture,—an abstract [illegible] Religious and Political intelligence, and wha[illegible] ever may be interesting and instructive to fa[illegible] ilies in general. A portion of its columns w[illegible] be open to Advertisements and Prices Curre[illegible] —another portion to sustain the interests of t[illegible] Methodist Protestant Church in the West. [illegible] These two latter objects will not likely occu[illegible] more than one page.

The RECORDER will take a firm stand again[illegible] Clerical Supremacy.

THE WESTERN RECORDER.

C. SPRINGER, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.
TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM IN ADVANCE.

Volume 1. ZANESVILLE, OHIO, WEDNESDAY, JULY 22, 1840. Number 48.

JOHN W. WHITE, PRINTER.
$2.50, IN THREE MONTHS; $3, END OF YEAR.

COMMUNICATIONS.

For the Western Recorder.

HN WILLIAMS AND THE NEW INDIANA CONFERENCE.

Mr. Editor: I feel constrained to take me notice of the letter of Br. John Wilms, which appears in your 44th No. informs us that Br. Alexander and nself were appointed by the quarterly nference of White River circuit, to dress a letter to the committee for anging the time and place for holding first session of the Indiana Conferee. I regret that he did not inform us at specific object the quarterly conferee had in view in the appointment of s committee, or to what purport they re instructed to make their communiion. For, from the face of the brother's ter, it would seem as the effusion of a lding Committee, appointed to arraign motives and trample upon the feelings unsuspecting brethren, who are strig in the divine fear faithfully to disarge their duties as servants of the urch. I have too much confidence in good sense of the quarterly conference White River circuit, to entertain the ought that that body could ordain, for committee, so unmerciful a castigan. I am gratified, withal, to learn that r excellent brother Alexander had no nd in this affair, for the writer lets us ow that in the absence of his fellowmmitteeman, he did take it upon himf to discharge the duty enjoined by quarterly conference. Now, should e the fact, that in the performance reof, our brother has transcended his erogative, I think it hardly in place for n to find so much fault with another mmittee appointed by another conferee, because, forsooth, they have not en out of his eyes and acted precisely cording to his mind. How unfortunate is, that the Ohio Conference did not ake our committee responsible to the arterly conference of White River rcuit, for then, doubtless, our brother uld long since have obtained an adjustnt of this matter in a "legal way."

Brother W. complains of our using disetion when there was given us no "discretionary power." Well, perhaps none is given us. But pray, was discretiony power given to our brother by his arterly conference, and has he used it screetly? He gives us to understand at he is not satisfied with the reasons signed by our committee in their "Circular" for asking an expression from r brethren in the various circuits, reecting the establishment of an Indiana nference at this time, and he pronouns the whole proceeding illegal. Really, r. Editor, the Indiana folks will, I trust, kept pretty straight in conducting the fairs of their new conference, for you rceive they have men of law to look ter them. Not wishing to take up ace in quoting from what has before en published, I would just beg of the ader, in justice to the committee, to fer to our Circular contained in your 0th number, and see whether or not in s judgment the reasons therein set forth e as trivial as in our brother's estimaon, and whether or not our committee ave manifested any disposition to depart om law.

Brother W. appears to be tried beyond rbearance, because the committee have ot sooner announced the time and place r the first meeting of our new conferce. He deplores it as an omission of very important duty. "Not one word," e observes, "concerning the appointent has as yet made its appearance in e Recorder." But pray, were the comittee instructed how soon to make the nnouncement? Their istructions were, give due notice." And indeed, the comittee did not know but that three or four onths previous would be sufficient time. would mention however, that up to the 0th of May last, we had not received a najority of votes, (illegal, as our brother ays,) in favor of the measure. The ction in Madison circuit, on that day, dermined the matter with us. The time nd place were then fixed upon, and the notice prepared for the Recorder, dated June 1st., just four months previous to he appointed time, though unfortunately, t did not reach the editor in time to apear sooner than July 1st. Had all our rethren been so kind as to respond early o the call, as they were pressingly solicited, the Report would have been published long ago. I regret that our dear brother became impatient so soon. Even before he wrote his letter, the business was fixed,—and behold, as it happens, his wishes are precisely met, both respecting the time and place.

I do trust that our brethren, who live remote from the place of conference, will kindly bear with us in this case. They might indeed murmur, but we, as yet, hear no complaint. And we assure them that one who lives within the same circuit where the conference is to meet, has chastised us sufficiently for our short-coming. He hardly stays his hand at the "forty stripes save one." Only listen a moment. First, he tacitly impeaches our "moral integrity," merely because we happened to differ from him in judgment upon a measure, which till now, we verily tho't no man could take exceptions to. Afterwards, he goes on to express a fear that "the committee is either opposed to the measure, or under the influence of those who are, and that the object is to defeat, at least for the present, the success of said conference, and thereby prevent its establishment." O, christian charity! whither hast thou fled? I pray to our merciful Saviour, that he may forgive my brother this unwarrantable, this cruel attack upon his well-meaning brethren; for that Saviour knows that a more groundless imputation throughout could not have been devised. Why, even before the days of the gospel of love, it was a scriptural precept under the ancient dispensation: "Let none of you imagine evil against his brother in your hearts." And simply to imagine evil against brethren, would be less injury than to publish it through the land, from Boston to Iowa city.

Br. W. speaks as though the brethren of Indiana had once legally disposed of the question (of division) "in conference," and remarks that he was not a little surprised that they should be "called upon to go again through the tedious process of voting," &c. Did our brother know that although the Ohio Conference held their last session within the State of Indiana, the question might have been disposed of in that body by a majority of almost two-thirds, without a single vote from Indiana? Or did he know that the measure was proposed in conference by an Ohio man, and that it was opposed in conference by Indiana men? Other questions I might propose, but for the present, I think proper to forbear. Some Indiana brethren, we know, favored the measure, but we were much in doubt that it would be the general voice of our people in this State that a separate conference should at this time be established. Wherefore, we have great consolation—we rejoice in the fact, that the question has been put to the test. And knowing now, that a majority approve the measure, we enter into it with better courage, and better hope of success.

But this process of voting, &c., our brother pronounces illegal. We grant that it is without law, but not contrary to law. As the reasons of the committee for requesting an expression of our brethren throughout the State have been published, as above mentioned, I wish not here to repeat them. But I would observe that until the letter of our brother appeared, we knew not that the course was objected to by any. But on the contrary, had the committee proceeded to the fulfillment of their duty, agreeably to his suggestion, they apprehended the imputation of "illegality" from the very letter of their instructions, upon grounds which I wish not now to occupy space in stating, and trust it will not be found necessary hereafter to trouble your readers with.

I wish to observe that I had no hand in addressing an official letter to Br. W. by order of conference as he intimates. I never saw the letter, and heretofore knew nothing of the "doctrine" it contains. I declined serving on the committee which addressed to him the letter, and was excused, because, deeply sympathising with the brother in the individual case to which he makes allusion, I was opposed to the action of conference in the case, and voted in the minority. And lo, he hath requited me.

Finally. I regret the necessity of this vindication. I have never cherished other than the kindest and most brotherly feeling towards Br. W., and I certainly still cherish towards him the same good will. I trust, therefore, that my reply to his letter will be received in the like friendly spirit.

Respectfully, &c.,
A. H. BASSETT.

Utica, Indiana, July 3, 1840.

For the Western Recorder.

RUSH COUNTY, IA., JULY 4, 1840.

Mr. Editor: In the 40th number of your liberal paper, (I say liberal, because in it we find brethren are permitted to enjoy the privilege of a free and untrammelled enterchange of their views on the various topics that are now agitating the christian churches,) I discover you have taken some notice of "Querist," who called in question the right of a conference of ministers and laymen to make rules, &c., for the brethren, unless such rules or acts are in strict accordance with the word of God, or can be plainly proved thereby. Such rules only, "Querist" says, can be made authoritatively binding upon intelligent men in these enlightened days. Don't you admit this, my brother? Surely you do when you take into consideration how we all endeavored to condemn a certain rule in the Methodist Episcopal Discipline, which, after saying if they persist in such pernicious practices let them be expelled. ☞shewing they are laid aside for a breach of our rule, and not for immoral conduct.☜ O shame! shame!! What, expell a disiple or a follower of the blessed Jesus from church privilege, acknowledging at the same time the expulsion to be only for a breach of our human rule, and not for immoral conduct!

Mark what I now write, all such rules will sooner or later be disregarded and dwindle into disrespect by the churches, and the children of the adorable Redeemer will be fully brought to see that Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church, and that what he has spoken, and that alone, will be considered the only sufficient rule of faith and practice. Such as still endeavor to carry forward those oppressive and men made rules will be ashamed and confounded. May God hasten the period when we all shall build on the great platform of the gospel, when we all shall be one that have been made believers through His word.

Mr. Editor, you really have an agreeable, or rather an easy way of sliding round matters, not only in the above case, but also on the subject of justification by faith. However, the Dan and Jane story is a pretty good illustration. I would much prefer, my brother, seeing that you are one among the master builders, for you to explain matters on gospel principles, and not answer by asking questions or supposing cases. You give the sects and parties the right to interpret scripture, and they will in turn prove any thing from the book of God, from the assumptions of Popery, through the whole range of ridiculous opinions, to the vageries of Mormonism. All history proves this to be correct, and knowing that our conference, composed of ministers and laymen, is also a sect, I present it as a strong argument why the Head of the Church never authorized them to make rules to govern His children,—He has made His own rules for His kingdom.

If you see proper call me New Light, but don't mention Anarchist. It is incorrect, for he or she that strictly complies with the gospel requirements, undoubtedly respects wholesome regulations of discipline, and comes far short of throwing off the proper restraints of government, and turning liberty into licentiousness. You remark that the spirit of the times in general tends to anarchy. But, in my opinion, for centuries past, the saints have been taught, and compelled to observe, the decisions of conferences, synods, &c., at the risk of their lives or reputation, different religious bodies having from time to time made and enforced rules upon their membership unauthorized by the word of God; these are now growing into disrespect with the churches, and causing many, perhaps, to throw off the wholesome restraints of the moral discipline given by Jesus Christ, while it is causing many others to incline to be men worshippers in order that they may receive honors from the hands of their superiors. All such, when disappointed run mad, being ready to embrace any thing so that they are elevated. May God save our church from such corrupt, unprincipled men, and grant us an increase of whole hearted souls, for Christ sake. "QUERIEST," alias J. J. AMOS.

Our brother cautions us not to say anarchist to him. We have always been in the habit of calling things by their proper names. However, we wish to say, we are entirely satisfied that he does not mean to be any thing else but an honest, good citizen, and a worthy member of the church of Christ. And he is probably as successful in maintaining these characters as most men. But still he will bear with us while we say that his position and language, tend to anarchy, although he may not so intend. When he applauds men for neglecting the acts of a conference, and talks about "disregarding" church "rules," what is this but anarchy? Whenever the church passes a rule it is obligatory on all her members, and none can disregard it without being chargeable with anarchy; though each member has the right to investigate its propriety, and procure its abolition, by all proper means, yet while it remains on the statute book, if any "disregard" it they are assuredly anarchists. Our only remedy is, after we have made suitable effort to procure its repeal, and fail, if in our opinion it involves essential principles of conscience, is to retire from that particular church, and seek one, if we can find any, where the difficulty does not exist.

But we are told, sects and parties may err as well as individuals. True; but they are not so liable to go estray as individuals are. At least so thought Solomon, when he said, "in the multitude of counsellors there is safety." When a man enters into either a civil or religious community, he is assuredly under obligations to be governed by the majority.—It would certainly very illy become him to "disregard" the law or rule, as the case might be, of this majority, because he might take it into his head that the one was unjust or the other anti-scriptural.

We admit that all public bodies are bound by the paramount obligations of scripture; we admit also that they are liable to err, and in many instances have erred. But still it would be rather a back handed way of doing business to require whole communities to submit to the dictation of an individual or two, as to what was scripture or what was justice. Inasmuch then as all are liable to err, let the multitude of counsellors determine what is right, and let the balance be bound to submit.

As to tyranny, so called, it is not the only evil in the world. Anarchy, which may be called the tyranny of the multitude, is, in our judgment, by far the greater calamity of the two. If you wish to see its principles exemplified, in civil affairs, read the history of the cold blooded scenes of the French revolution; if in ecclesiastical, acquaint yourself with "New Light"-ism, which has thrown its influence against church order, until it has became a wreck all over the country.
—EDITOR.

For the Western Recorder.

SUGGESTION—LITERARY.—We write in brief, Mr. for Mister, Dr. for Doctor, and why not Br. for Brother? I like this better than Bro., and have used it for several years past. It is more convenient than the latter abbreviation, and I think looks better. I am pleased to find that several editors of religious journals have adopted it. What think you, Mr. Editor?. A. H. B.

RELIGIOUS INTELLIGENCE.

FARMINGTON, OHIO, JULY 6, 1840.

Br. Springer: It may be cheering to the friends of Zion to hear, through the Recorder, that we are still prospering and getting along pleasantly on Georgetown circuit. We have some adverse winds to contend with, but the pleasant, healthful gales of Divine grace overrule and encourages us onward. Our congregations are generally good, and our class-meetings are spiritual and interesting, but not as regularly attended by some of our members as is desired. Negligence of this kind often tends to embarrass the spiritual growth of society, especially when those who ought to be pillars in the church, teach, by their example, the babes in Christ, to neglect this mean of grace. Such ought to be careful, lest the blood of souls be found on their skirts.

Our third quarterly meeting commenced the 23d of May, at the Waddle meeting house, which was truly a meeting owned and blessed of God. We have at this place a small, but respectable society, who, surrounded with circumstances of rather a discouraging character, have struggled hard for existence, and blessed be God, their faithfulness, to some extent, has been rewarded with cheering success. Many of our episcopal friends and some of other denominations were in attendance at our meeting, and appeared to enjoy with grateful hearts a participation in that precious and well-timed season of grace with which it was so abundantly favored. Seven made application for membership, all of whom appeared desirous of salvation through the blood of Christ. Some of them profess to have realized the pardoning mercy of God in the remission of their sins. May God grant this people abundant success on earth, and eternal triumph in heaven!

On the 4th instant, we commenced a protracted meeting at Bridgeport and closed it on Monday night. At our commencement, it seemed rather forbidding. Political excitement and the 4th of July celebration seemed to have more influence over the minds of the multitude than the cross of Christ. However, the thick cloud of gloom seemed to have passed away on Sabbath morning, and the cheering rays of the sun of righteousness began to dawn upon us. The melting presence of our God was abundantly manifested in our love-feast meeting, and some of our episcopal friends, in this, shared with us. Before our meeting closed, the convicting power of God was felt in the congregation. On both Sabbath and Monday evenings, several flocked to the anxious bench, when invited, desiring the prayers of God's people. Nine joined the church on this occasion, which makes an addition of fifteen or sixteen to Bridgeport class this year. I take pleasure in saying, that I believe our cause will still live in this place, though some charitable people may have voluntarily preached its funeral some time ago. It not unfrequently happens that the funeral of our principles is noised abroad without much signs of death. We have a society of nearly thirty here at this time, many of whom appear to enjoy the life and power of religion. About seventy have been added to this circuit this year.

Yours, in gospel bonds,
GEORGE CLANCY.

LANCASTER, OHIO, JULY 13, 1840.

Mr. Editor: When a church, through mistake, employs a wolf in the place of a shepherd, the result is generally bad.—Such were its effects upon this station; we found it last fall in almost a perishing condition. For a few weeks in the beginning of the year, the prospect of raising the church again was indeed small. But we soon learned that the Lord had not cast off His people. The threatening cloud began to roll back, the scattered ones of the flock began to come again into the fold. Zion began to assemble herself, clad in her beautiful garments. The bright rays of a Redeemer's love fell upon His followers, and coming tokens of good encouraged us to persevere in our feeble efforts, the result of which has been, by the blessing of God, a gradual increase of good things; so that we, to this hour, look with encouragement to God for greater blessings.

Our meetings, throughout the year, have been interesting. The deep feeling of the soul, the glad heart of the believer and the friendly intercourse of brethren, could but proclaim the praise of Zion, and say that her march is onward.

Since you had a report from this place, by the President, we have had an addition of thirty-one, making our increase for this year—ninety-seven. The greater portion of those who have joined of late, reside in the neighborhood of Clarkesburgh, nearly two miles from town, where we have the prospect of a large and interesting society. This place has been much celebrated for wickedness, so much so, that it was thought to be hardly worth while to make an effort for its deliverance. But we commenced and felt like persevering. Many have been converted; the opposition to the religion of the Bible has ceased and the good effects of the work are seen and acknowledged by all.

We have also, at this place, organized a flourishing Sabbath School of between sixty and seventy scholars, having a competent number of teachers, which makes the second school, under our care, connected with this station. Upon the whole, I think, the church here has naught to fear but her own sins, for if she lives holy, God will exalt her and establish her goings. W. MAYNARD.

RISDON, OHIO, JUNE 24, 1840.

Br. Springer: Our third quarterly meeting was held near Van Buren, Hancock county, Ohio, at Br. Warner's. We had the aid of Br. Guest and others, who preached to profit. Hard hearted sinners cried for mercy. Some professed a change of heart—eight were added to the church. We have received in all, this year, forty-two.

Yours, &c.,
SAMUEL W. THORNTON.

NEW HAGERSTOWN, O., JULY 4, 1840.

Br. Springer: Our little circuit is advancing, both in numbers and piety.—We recently held a protracted meeting at Centre meeting house; good was done.

Yours, in Christ, T. FOSTER.

REMEMBER ME.

When evening's sun is streaking
With red—the western sky;
When morning's light is breaking,
And shadows flee away:

When twilight's lonely hour
Breathes nature's lullaby,
And sheds its mildest power,
Oh! then—remember me.

YOUTH'S DEPARTMENT.

DEATH OF A SUNDAY SCHOOL GIRL.

AS TOLD BY REV. MR. O'NEIL.

In the course of my travels through Ireland, to inspect the Sunday Schools, I happened to stop at the town of C.; and hearing one of the Sunday school children was very ill, I went to see her. I found her ill indeed in body, but was delighted to witness her perfect resignation, and to hear her say, "O, sir, I now feel the benefit of having attended a Sunday School; for now texts and hymns return to my mind which I there learned, and which at the time did not seem to make much impression."

There was something particularly interesting about this little girl, that I was induced to lengthen my visit at C., for the purpose of seeing her again. I did so for three days successively; on the morning of the fourth, when I went to her bedside, I was struck with the visible change in her for the worse; her glazed eyes convinced me death was near. After looking at her earnestly for some time, I said:

"Jane," (her name was Jane Collins,) "I feel that you are dying. Do you fear death?"

"O no, sir," she said, without hesitation; "for I know that my Redeemer liveth. He hath passed through the dark valley of the shadow of death before me, and though it may be dark, still it is but a shadow."

Then raising her poor emaciated hands over the bed clothes, she ~~clasped~~ them together, and with a solemnity and deep feeling which were truly affecting, she turned her dim eyes upwards, and with a pause between each word, said:

"Wonderful, Counsellor, Mighty God, everlasting Father, Prince of Peace."

After a few minutes, I said:

"Jane, I wish you to speak more to me about yourself, that I may have something to tell to others which may be of use to them. I go much among Sunday school children, and I wish to carry something from you to them."

She pointed to a door at the other end of the room, and said:

"Sir, will you close that door?"

I did so. She then said:

"About myself, sir, I have little to say; but O! my poor mother and sister, if I could say any thing that could be of use to them; they are careless and indifferent about their souls."

I said,

"Do try; perhaps what you would say now, might make an impression."

She then beckoned me to open the door I had closed, and to call her sister. On opening it, I saw a girl who appeared older than Jane, sitting alone, crying bitterly. I said to her,—

"Your sister is dying; she cannot live many minutes. You had better come and hear what she has to say to you."

The girl ran to the bed, and in an agony of grief, clasped the poor dying child in her arms, and kissing her several times, called out,—

"O, sure you won't leave me; sure my darling sister won't leave me."

Little Jane gently laid her hand on her sister's arm, and in a tone I can never forget said,—

"The lips you now kiss will soon be cold; but kiss the Son lest He be angry, and so ye perish from the right way."

She then drew her Bible from under the bed clothes, and giving it to her sister, said,—

"This is my last; take it, keep it, and O study it; it will lead you in the right way."

Her voice now grew so weak, I was obliged to lean over her, that I might catch her last words. Her head sunk upon the pillow, and I could just hear her whisper, "Jesus is the way, the truth, and the life," before her lips closed to open no more.

I left the room more than ever impressed with the importance of Sunday schools, and feeling most assuredly that the Lord vouchsafed to bless them. I was afterwards told that before this child began to attend a Sunday school, she was a bad, wicked child, totally ignorant, and was in the habit of standing at her mother's door, to throw stones at the children going to the Sunday schools.

WESTERN RECORDER.

ZANESVILLE:

WEDNESDAY, ... JULY 22, 1840.

A Dreadful Deed.—The neighborhood of Juniper street, between Race and Vine, was thrown into a high state of excitement yesterday, at about one o'clock, in consequence of the cry of "Murder! Murder!" from a woman whose head was seen at an upstair window of a brick house of good appearance. A number of persons immediately rushed to the spot, when the wretched being was observed to reel and fall. It was then ascertained that her throat was cut from ear to ear, and apparently in three gashes. The blood gushed forth in a torrent, while the life of the suicide or murdered—for it was impossible at first to discover which—ebbed rapidly away. The scene presented was one of the most appalling kind. Just at the head of the stairway, was a pool of blood, which was tracked up and down the stairs by the persons whom curiosity had drawn thither. The house was but poorly furnished, and has long borne a doubtful character. The deceased died in about an hour after her first cry was heard; and at the time our informant left, her bleeding body was still prostrate in the fatal room, while all sorts of stories were in circulation as to the cause and authorship of the tragedy.

One individual stated that a man was seen to leave the house by jumping out of the window, and locking the gate behind him. A young woman in the lower story refused to explain the affair, and manifested indifference. A man was also present, and exhibited very little concern upon the subject. The instrument employed was a razor, which lay upon the floor broken in half. The deceased was about twenty-eight years of age.—She married when very young, against the will of her parents, who are respectable citizens of Philadelphia, and subsequently parted from her husbond, with whom she had not lived for several years. Her sister was sent for, but fainted away on viewing the sanguinary scene.

P. S. Since writing the above, we have been informed that the name of the deceased was Julia Anne Jordan. The house is chiefly occupied by Mr. Davis, his wife and two children. The verdict of the coroner's jury was to the effect, that the deceased came to her death from wounds inflicted with a razor, but whether by herself or others, is unknown.

There were cuts on the hands, as well as upon one arm, as if received during a struggle; at least, such an inference may be drawn by many. The circumstances attending this deed of horror, are of a somewhat mysterious character.—Bicknell.

Money Found.—A letter from New Haven, published in the New York Herald, says:

An Irishman named Wm. Thompson, who has been engaged as a day laborer for some time past, by Abraham Bradley, Esq., of this city, in excavating the earth from the foundation of a building in Elm street, discovered on Monday last a brick vault in the cellar, about two feet square, and, on removing the planks that were laid upon the top, a stone jar presented itself, which was filled with doubloons and other pieces of gold, nearly all of which bore date prior to 1768. His wits prompted him to relay the plank for the night, and cover them over with dirt.—When all was quiet last evening, he proceeded to the spot and removed the deposites with all the grace and ease of a Swartwout or a Price, and this morning, informed his employer he had worked long enough. He showed a number of the pieces to his fellow-workmen, but would allow none to handle them. He told the owner of the house and lot, who, by the by, is one of the richest men in New Haven, that he had only found 300, but one of his companions says, he said there were three handkerchief loads.—Bicknell.

Another Bank Defaulter.—We state, with pain, that Benjamin Smith, who some time since left this city in a mysterious manner, is now discovered to be a defaulter to the amount of $100,000, to the Bank of Pennsylvania—in which institution, he had held the office of teller. This scheme of plunder was carried on for nearly eight years, without any suspicion being excited. The Bank is now engaged in investigating his accounts.—Mr. S. was about the last man likely to be suspected. A member of the society of Friends, correct in his habits and grave in his deportment, the affair has excited no little surprise. It is to be hoped he will be arrested and fully punished.—Bicknell.

We learn with great regret by a private letter from Washington, that Matthew L. Davis, Esq., so well known in the political world as the "Spy in Washington," was attacked on Tuesday evening by paralysis in his right arm and leg. He had been perfectly well till within a short time of the attack. Though absent from his home, we are gratified to know that he is surrounded by the best medical advisers, and by "troops of friends" who will minister to his wishes with the most watchful interest. Mr. Davis at the last accounts was cheerful and in perfect possession of all his mental faculties.—New World.

Mr. E. Early, Librarian of the U. S House of Representatives, died suddenly on Monday last.

Resumption.—At a meeting of the Board of Directors of the Bank of the Metropolis, held at Washington on Monday, resolutions were adopted that all the notes or bills of the institution in circulation, as well as special deposites, be paid in specie on demand; that they will also meet their other engagements; and expressing no doubt that it will be convenient for the other banking institutions of the District to adopt a course equally satisfactory. The Directors of the Farmers and Mechanics' Bank of Georgetown, have also resolved to pay their notes in coin on demand.

Very Late from the Pacific.—The Journal of Commerce says, a correspondent, under date of Panama, May 29th, informs us that war had been declared by Peru against Bolivia, and that the rebellion in the Province of Pasto (one of the Southern Provinces of New Granada) had broken out afresh. To add to the troubles of the times, the small pox was raging there, and also in the Isthmus, to an alarming extent. The dates from Payta were to May 5th, and from Buenaventura to the 15th.

Commodore Elliott's Sentence.—We learn from the National Gazette, that the sentence of the Court Martial, which recently tried Commodore Elliott in Philadelphia on sundry charges, is suspension from his functions for four years, and the withholding of his pay for two years.—Whether the President has approved this sentence, and on what charges it is immediately founded, we do not see stated. The Gazette avers, that its information is positive.

As an evidence of the abundance of money in Philadelphia, we may mention that one day last week, one of our best houses had no less than 20 notes, amounting in the aggregate to $12,000 discounted at one of our Banks. The truth is, there is little or no good business paper in market. $10,000, observed a Broker to us on Saturday, would absorb all the floating paper worth having, in the hands of all the note sellers in the vicinity of the Exchange.—Bicknell.

An old gentleman living at Palmyra, Fluvanna county, Va., was lately killed by his pigs while engaged in feeding them in the wood. He had sent a negro to feed the pigs, but the man returned greatly alarmed by their fierceness. The old gentleman, thinking the fears of the negro were foolish, went himself into the wood with the feed, and some time after he was found dead with his face and limbs greatly mangled.

Murder and Suicide.—At New Orleans, on the 26th ult., an altercation took place between two carters, Wm. O'Conner and Philip Smith, in the course of which the former plunged a dirk into the latter, killing him instantly. When he perceived what he had done, he stabbed himself with the same weapon, inflicting eleven wounds. He was not dead, and it was thought that the wounds would not prove mortal.

The Growing West.—Charles Cist, Esq., who is engaged in taking the census at Cincinnati, says—I found a lady who, at the age of 29 had fourteen children, the oldest being born on her fourteenth birth-day! And another—a case more remarkable—in which her son stood by her side within a few months as old as she was when married, and the mother not yet 26! Consequently the mother was about 13 when married.

Joseph Bohall, the wretch who murdered Richard Brown and his wife, in the town of Leon, Cattaraugus county, about two weeks since, has made a full confession of the deed. It appears that he had no other motive but to obtain one hundred and fifty dollars, which he supposed Brown had just received. He got only eighty.

The King of Hanover.—By a report made to the Legislature by Willis Hall, the Attorney General, relative to the title of the trustees of the Pulteney Estate, to lands in Steuben and Allegheny counties, N. York, it appears that Ernest Augustus, Duke of Cumberland, and now king of Hanover, is one of the present acting trustees to that estate.

Bust of Webster.—Our thanks are due to Mr. Clevenger, the sculptor, for a fine cast of his noble bust of Webster. It is not only a most striking and accurate likeness, but a fitting monument to the great genius of the man. Intellect sits like a king upon the throne of that firm and mighty forehead!—New World.

Two canal boats got foul of each other 22nd ult., near Rome, in this state, and during the altercation which ensued, Daniel Van Schaik was kicked twice in the abdomen by Boyington Barnes, and so badly hurt that he died in about 15 hours. Both were boatmen. Barnes has been arrested and committed to prison.—ib.

The Swartwouter caught at New Orleans a few days back was A. J. Mackie, the Secretary of the Lancaster and Harrisburgh Railroad Company, who absconded some few weeks since, with $5000 of the company's money. About $3,500 of the money were recovered.

A son of Elias Inman, of Hartford, was drowned on Sunday, in presence of his father, who was too drunk to assist him.

Hope is the greatest mainspring of virtue. It gives action to all animated existence. It is the bread which feeds ambition, the incentive to perseverance, the compass to virtue, the shield to christianity, and the only solace in death. If it is blighted, the pilgrimage of life is like a troubled sea—we float down its dark stream like the lost mariner on the bilowy deck. Aided by its cheering beams, the immortal mind looks beyond time, and anticipates the beauty of another, a happier existence. The beauty of the rainbow vanishes in the storm; the meteor's flash is but a moment; the glittering gems of heaven will one day go out; the sun himself be extinguished, but the star of Hope shines beautifully forever.

Do as You Would be Done Unto.—The horse of a pious man living in Massachusetts, happening to stray into the road, a neighbor of the man who owned the horse put him into the pound. Meeting the owner soon after, he told him what he had done; "and if I catch him in the road again," said he, "I'll do it again," "Neighbor," replied the other, "not long since I looked out of my window in the night, and saw your cattle in my meadow, and I drove them out, and shut them in your yard—and I'll do it again." Struck with the reply, the man liberated the horse from the pound, and paid the charges himself. "A soft answer turneth away wrath."

Riches.—The good which is in riches lieth altogether in their use; like the woman's box of ointment, if it be not broken and poured out for the refreshment of Jesus Christ, in his distressed members, they lose their worth. The covetous man may, therefore, truly write upon his rusting heaps, "these are good for nothing." He is not rich who lays up much, he that lays out much: for it is all one, not to have, as not to use. I will, therefore, be the richer by a charitable laying out, while the worldling shall be the poorer by his covetous hoarding up.

The Crops in Maryland.—The Snow Hill (Worcester county) Banner, of the 7th instant, says:

"For the last two weeks, our farmers have been engaged in harvesting their wheat crops, and more unfavorable weather for this employment, they have not had for many years. Cold north-easterly winds, attended with rain, have prevailed during most of the time; the wheat is represented to be greatly injured by the rust; so much so, in some cases, as scarcely to be worth the trouble of saving it. Oats look well, and corn, where it has not been injured by excessive rains, is tolerably fair."—Bicknell.

The Crops in Missouri.—The St. Louis Era of the first instant says:

"The harvest this year commenced a week or two sooner than usual. The early part of last week was peculiarly favorable for this business, but for two or three past days, heavy rains have very much retarded it. The wheat crops are said to be very fine."—Bicknell.

We were mistaken last week, in supposing that Dr. Trevitt, lately appointed Secretary of State by Gov. Shannon, was the individual who last winter denounced Camp-meetings as "floating doggeries." We were led into the error by the remark of a gentleman from the country to that effect; and as is our practice in all such cases, we hasten to make the amende honorable. That language was used by Dr. Glover, and not by Dr. Trevitt.—Urbana Gazette.

Culture of Silk.—Seneca Lapham, of Salem township, in Champaign county, this day presented to the Auditor of said county, the affidavit and certificate, required by the Statute, showing that he had raised fifty-two pounds of Cocoons; and received an order on the Treasurer of the county for $5,20, the bounty allowed him by law.

Urbana, July 13, 1840. ib.

The St. Louis Gazette mentions that two steamboats have been chartered to bring down the 8th regiment of infantry from Prairie due Chien. This regiment is 640 strong, and will be stationed at Jefferson Barracks till September, when it will proceed to Florida.

The difficulties between Great Britain and Naples had not been settled. The British Government, it was said, had resolved on sending six ships of the line to Naples. A French squadron of the same force was also to proceed thither.

"There is no truth in men," said a lady in company, "they are like musical instruments, which sound a variety of tones." "In other words, madam," said a wit who chanced to be present, "you believe all men are lyres!"

A. H. Everett, who has been absent on a mission to Havana, arrived at Charleston, S. C., via Savannah, Geo., on the 20th ult., and proceeded immediately to Washington. His message was to investigate the charges against Consul Trist.

Five men were killed at Newark, N. J., July the 4th, by the bursting of a cannon; and a man in Amboy had his arm blown off by the accidental discharge of the cannon he was loading.

Kings never hear the voice of truth until they are dethroned, nor beauties until they have abdicted their charms.

Why do we say, when friends are taken from us we loved them too well, therefore they are taken from us;—it is not thus; there is one tie less to bind us to earth, and one cord more to draw us heavenward.

Col. Page has been re-appointed Postmaster of Philadelphia, we believe to the satisfaction of all parties in Philadelphia. The office was never under better management.

Hiram Munn and Vincent Palmer, "Patriots," whose sentence has been postponed by legal technicalities to a recent period, have been condemned to death at Toronto, U. C.

The Philadelphia Inquirer has dates from Jamaica to June 9. The trial of Ward, the Baptist minister, charged with instigating the late revolt, was proceeding, and created great excitement.

The Nantucket Islander says: "An editor, from the necessity of the case, must be an unhappy creature, whether located in a cabbage garden or a paradise."

The two rascals who robbed the Swiftsure coach near Palmyra of about $80,000, have been taken. One of them is the notorious Viele, who had just escaped from jail at Canandaigua.

The board of visitors at West Point state that three hundred officers of the army have resigned since the commencement of the Florida war.

The Legislature of Connecticut have passed a law abolishing death as a capital punishment in all cases, substituting imprisonment for life.

Why was Eve, when walking with her first born son in her arms, like a modern dandy! D'ye give it up? Because she carried a Cain.

The receipts of Flour at New York by the Canals, from the opening of navigation on the 20th April to the 6th of July, were about 343,000 barrels.—Bicknell.

Fashionable Life.—Johnson, in one of his plays, makes the devil declare, that the pains in his native country, were pastimes to the life of a person of fashion.

Aristotle says—That to become an able man in any profession whatever, three things are necessary, which are nature, study and practice.

The Rage of Politics.—We question if ever there was a time since the people of these United States became free and independent, when political strife and party warfare raged with greater violence than at the present time. If we believe what both the great political parties, which now divide the country, tell us, we shall most assuredly have appointed, to the chief Magistracy of our nation, two presidents. And the means to which many of the leaders of either party resort to secure the election of their respective candidates, is deserving of the utmost scorn and indignation of virtuous and enlightened freemen. On the fourth inst. our city was nearly deserted of its male population, owing to two celebrations, the one at Lexington by the democratic party, and the other at Concord, by the whig or Harrison and reform party; both in Middlesex county. The large share of patriotism possessed and shown forth by every individual attending these meetings, aroused by means of log cabins, empty casks, labelled hard cider, and mottoes heaping the vilest stigma upon our rulers and our people, was wonderful indeed.—The remarks of some of our contemporaries on these great political meetings, are certainly ludicrous, not to say inconsistent. On taking up one of their papers we noticed that at Lexington two thousand and five hundred people were crammed into a meeting house to listen to the harangue of one of their leaders, giving a space to each individual certainly smaller than we should like to occupy. We see, also, that ladies (!) take an active part at these political meetings—walk in the processions, give toasts, &c. We suppose these things are not countenanced by a party that declaimed so loudly against a woman in Boston, because she happened to receive a few votes for a certain office sometime since.

But to look at the matter as a whole. How differently is this great anniversary of our nation's freedom celebrated from what it was in former times. Then all,—men, women and children of all ages, parties and denominations, could harmoniously unite to celebrate our county's jubilee. Now when this day arrives, our people are divided into sects and parties. But we will not despair of the honor and sobriety of our people, for the rising generation are setting a good example; that is, if we may judge by the young of our own city. Here, while their elders were abroad, their minds excited with party zeal, the children and youth assembled beneath a shady grove, and there, in prayer and praise, acknowledged their gratitude to their Maker for the countless blessings they enjoy. How great the contrast!—Lowell Souvenir.

Influence of War upon Human Life.—Among the distinguished men who fell victims in the war of the American Revolution was Colonel Isaac Hayne, of South Carolina; a man who, by his amiability of character and high sentiments of honor and uprightness, had secured the good will and affection of all who knew him. He had a wife and six small children, the eldest a boy, thirteen years of age. His wife, to whom he was tenderly attached, fell a victim to disease; an event, hastened not improbably by the inconveniences and sufferings incident to a state of war, in which the whole family largely participated. Colonel Hayne himself was taken prisoner by the English forces, and in a short time was executed on the gallows under circumstances calculated to excite the deepest commisseration. A great number of persons, both Englishmen and Americans interceded for his life; his motherless children were presented on their bended knees as humble suitors for their beloved father; but all in vain.—During the imprisonment of their father, his eldest son was permitted to stay with him in prison. Beholding his only surviving parent, for whom he felt the deepest affection, loaded with irons and condemned to die, he was overwhelmed with consternation and sorrow. The wretched father endeavored to console him, by reminding him that the unavailing grief of his son tended only to increase his own misery; that we came into this world merely to prepare for a better; that he was himself prepared to die, and could even rejoice that his troubles were so near an end. "To-morrow" said he, "I set out for immortality; you will accompany me to the place of execution; and when I am dead, take my body and bury it by the side of your mother." The youth here fell on his father's neck, crying, "Oh, my father! my father! I will die with you! I will die with you!" Col. Hayne, as he was loaded with irons, was unable to return the embrace of his son, and merely said to him in reply, "Live my son, live to honor God by a good life; live to serve your country; and live to take care of your brothers and little sisters." The next morning Col. Hayne was conducted to the place of execution. His son accompanied him. Soon as they came in sight of the gallows, the father strengthened himself and said; "Now, my son, show yourself a man! That tree is the boundary of my life, and all my life's sorrows. Beyond that the wicked cease from troubling, and the weary are at rest. Don't lay too much at heart our separation; it will be short. 'Twas but late your dear mother died. To-day I die; and you my son, though young, must shortly follow us." "Yes, my father," replied the broken-hearted youth, "I shall shortly follow you, for indeed I feel that I cannot live long." And this melancholy anticipation was fulfilled in a manner more dreadful than is implied in the mere extinction of life. On seeing his father in the hands of the executioner, and then struggling in the halter, he stood like one transfixed and motionless with horror. Till then, (proceeds the narration,) he had wept incessantly; but soon as he saw that sight, the fountain of his tears was staunched, and he never wept more. He died insane; and in his last moments often called on his father in terms that brought tears from the hardest hearts.

GENERAL CONFERENCE OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH.

Again are we led, in our monthly duties, to notice the proceedings of this body; indeed, we hardly know where to begin, as there are so many things, in our opinion, decidedly wrong and deserving of exposure. We sometimes have thought, on this subject we might as well be still, for men appear to be governed more by interest than principle; and while it is their interest to uphold wrong principles, they will not heed us. But then, in the midst of such reflections, some favorable tide in our affairs sets in, and we are greatly encouraged in our toil; and with elevated feelings, we look upon our "Banner" as it floats to the breeze, and inscribe upon it the imperishable motto, "Truth is mighty and will prevail." The fact is, we despair of convincing the clergy of the Methodist Episcopal Church of their unjustifiable claims. They appear determined to hold on and increase their system of absolute tyranny: but we write for the public in general, and as many of their members who will dare to hear us. We had hoped at least, some degree of courtesy would have been extended to those who petitioned the conference on the subject of lay representation, &c., but in this we failed, and present, as proof, the following report:—

"The committee to whom was referred the petitions and memorials on the subjects of a moderate episcopacy, the election of presiding elders by the Annual Conference, have bestowed upon the matters submitted to them, the attention which they conceived to merit, and submit the following report:

"It appears that the petitions and memorials, on these subjects have been obtained by a concerted operation, under the direction of a single intellect, inasmuch as nearly every petition on any one of these subjects is not only substantially, but literally the same—most of them being printed slips, cut from some newspaper, and where they are written, literal copies of such as are printed.—This fact induced a conviction in the minds of the committee that these petitions and memorials are the result of agitation and not of original dissatisfaction on the part of most of the persons signing those petitions and memorials; and, therefore, by no means deserving the same consideration as if they were the spontaneous expression of the dissatisfaction of the petitioners and memorialists. But were it otherwise, the number of petitioners is so very small in proportion to the entire membership of the Methodist Episcopal Church, that in the opinion of the committee, these petitions and memorials, regarding not individual grievances, but general interests, are entitled to no other consideration than that to which they are entitled as mere arguments in favor of the courses indicated. And as the committee have not seen reason to attach much importance to them in this light, they are not prepared to recommend the measures which are called for by these petitions and memorials.

"Moreover, the committee having witnessed the operation of the present system of Methodist Episcopal Church government, and being persuaded that its operation has been eminently useful, would require the most cogent reasons to induce them to recommend changes so important and so fundamental; especially as two, at least, of these changes have been, after long, grave and deliberate consideration, recently declined by the Methodist Episcopal Church. The committee refer to the proceedings of the General Conference of 1828, for the light in which the election of presiding elders by the Annual Conference was then viewed; and the decision which was made by the church on these subjects.

"With the views above presented, the committee can do no other than present the following resolution, viz:

"Resolved, That it is not expedient to change the form of our church government in any of the matters suggested in the petitions and memorials which have been under the consideration of the committee.

"All of which is respectfully submitted. W. Winans, Chairman."

Really, we hardly know what to say to this report, whether to turn it into ridicule or gravely meet it and expose its falsities. So far as it refers to lay representation, we feel like turning it into ridicule, as that will be as likely to convince them of their error as any thing else. The proceedings of the late conference, when compared with the proceedings of the General Conference of 1824, reminds us of an anecdote we sometimes tell on temperance occasions, and is intended to prove the inconsistency of the drunkard, and it will be found to apply with peculiar force to the late General Conference. The drunkard returning home at a late hour, says: "If my wife is not up when I get home, and my supper in waiting for me, I will whip her; what right has she to go to bed before I get home? and if she is up waiting for me I will whip her, what business has she up so late, burning my candles?" From the anecdote it is plainly seen that it was not the faults of the wife which were to secure her the whipping, but the mind of the husband was intent on so doing.

It was not owing to any defect on the part of the petitioners which caused them not to be granted, but a wilful, premeditated concert by which they long since determined that "their ministrations shall not be authoratively controled," by the laity. In proof of our opinion, we refer to the two reports, one of 1824, the other of 1840. In the first, they assign as a reason why reformers cannot have their petitions granted, a want of unanimity, or concert of action; their views were so discordant they could not comprehend what would satisfy them. This decision give rise to the origin of the union societies, but before the next General Conference, fearing a concert of action, the reformers were expelled, but now in the present report see what they say:

"It appears that the petitions and memorials, on these subjects, have been obtained by a concerted operation, under the direction of some single intellect, inasmuch as nearly every petition, on any one of these subjects, is not only substantially, but literally the same." Here, then, are two reasons given why the petitions on lay representation may not be granted, and as in the anecdote, the reasons are direct extremes. How men can act so inconsistently we know not, perhaps they did not remember the action of 1824, or if they did, it could not be considered as binding on them, as in four years after they became "the divinely authorized" expounders of God's word and moral discipline, consequently as their infallibility only commenced in 1828, they do not feel bound to regard as obligatory, their uninspired opinions, although expressed in General Conference. So far, then, as petitions are concerned on the side of the laity in begging for their rights, we would say they might as well petition the Dey of Algiers, or Nicholas of the Russians, to give up their claims, as the General Conference. They cannot do it as they have stated their consciences are involved, consequently it is hopeless. Nothing remains for you now but submission or expatriation. The report states that "two at least of these changes, have been, after long, grave and deliberate consideration, recently declined by the Methodist Episcopal Church." So far as our knowledge of the above matters go, we are at a loss to determine from what source the committee obtained their information. If they mean by the terms "long, grave and deliberate consideration," to convey the idea that the subjects were long, and gravely, and deliberately discussed before the whole church, this is not the case, for the church authorities took care that the members only received one side of the "long, grave and deliberate discussion," and we have no doubt on our mind that if the rulers had only let the whole matter gone on, long since, a lay representation would have been introduced into the councils of the church. They speak of these subjects being before the General Conference of 1828, and the light in which it viewed them, but how careful are they not to tell how the presiding elder's question was smothered to death by the fraternal kindness of the presiding Bishop—after some little discussion on the above resolution, "on motion, the report was adopted by a very large majority."—M. P. Banner.

HE RECORDER.

ZANESVILLE:

NESDAY, ... JULY 22, 1840.

r more numbers will close the first volume l Recorder. Our subscribers will recol- at after the close of the year, THREE ARS, according to our terms, will be due; ying before that time fifty cents will be We do not wish the discontinuance of od paying subscriber, but if any are de- ued to forsake us, they must let us know the close of the volume, or, according to erms, they will be considered as having a new engagement. We wish our friends make a renewed effort to procure as many ubscribers as possible to commence with st number of the second volume.

paper, we believe, has given almost entire ction, so far as we have been informed.— ave succeeded, in this particular, far better ve anticipated. But we have devoted our- ntirely to its interest, and spared no ex- to make it acceptable. According to the nt of reading matter we give, it is the est journal in this section of the country. of the papers, in this quarter, are chiefly ned by their advertising patronage, but is supported almost entirely by subscrip- which makes it necessary that we should h larger list, and more prompt paying sub- rs, than the papers generally.

ur patronage should increase so as to jus- , we can enlarge at any time, to double m, with but few dollars expense, as our and apparatus are of that kind. And so s the present embarrassment in the mone- affairs of the country, shall have passed off, obably will enlarge, should we continue. ve call on all our friends to stick by us h this moneyed pressure. Do not, by easing small burden from your own shoulders, a greater one on some body else. We are g to work ardently and perseveringly for ublic benefit, should we see evinced a wil- ss to sustain us at our toil. But, should forsaken and left to struggle with the dif- ses of our task alone, we shall be apt to and faint by the way.

give the following extract from a private , dated the 14th instant, from Br. Brown, resident of the District, who was return- om a visit to the churches along the nor- border of the State. Br. Brown, we believe, no interest in politics, nor do we insert the t with a design to have any political bear- ut merely to give a view of the present of the public mind. We regret to see so political excitement. It is entirely un- ly to human happiness. It turns kindred eighbors into bitter enemies, and draws off attention from other important duties:

politics were religion, the whole north be very far advanced in grace. Even the have their log-cabin meetings—eating y cake—drinking hard cider and cracking al jokes in high Yankee style. We can- pe to prosper much until after the presi- al election is over. There is more talk who is to rule this nation, than who is to judge the world. The fever is up—Ve- is verging to an eruption. If other States ke this State, the administration will be ed. "God putteth down one and setteth other." "The kingdoms raged, the nations moved." Yet God setteth above the storms, uling all, and on Him should be our reli- Put not your trust in princes or in the men of the earth—"The judge of all the will do right."—Still our cause has had erity in most places. So I think reports ow at conference."

e New England Conference of the Metho- piscopal Church, from the last accounts, olding its annual session, in Lowell, Mass. conference has, we believe, a majority of ion members. We have been waiting to at course will be pursued in relation to brethren in the north-eastern corner of this who have been sacrificed for their princi- or at least, driven from the church. We der the whole morally bound to share the f the thousand. If the abolitionists at the retain their standing in the old church sorsake these proscribed brethren, in their inity, without procuring something to be for them, we shall think their code of mor- somewhat defective, unless we have some ent light upon the subject. And as far as n learn, since the General Conference has their condition so easy, the eastern ab- nists are sitting down contented in the ship." Every indication, of the confer- above, so far as it has proceeded, seems to y this conclusion.

the late New England Conference, says the eyan Observer, "a good abolition brother" d, that, "if episcopacy were as large as the there would not be as much RADICALISM him as would make a bunch as large as a !" He goes, of course, for the emancipa- of the colored men, but for the bondage of hite. Wonder if this were Br. Sunderland?

. George Brown in a private note to us, says, Hughes and I may be at your camp-meet- not certain." By all means come if possi- you are both comparative strangers in this ter, and so far as acquainted, have gained onfidence of the people, so that you could ere be more useful. We will see that your ses in attending the meeting are settled.

iladelphia Casket.—We have received the number of this superior work. This is the nd specimen number of volume 17. It is mpanied with a splendid steel engraving,— e Gypsy's Warning." But somehow or other, umber sent us has but 12 pages, though it bits the contents of a full number.

ott, in reply to Oliver, and Smith, in reply albey, are received, but not until after the gements for this paper were made. Accord- o turn, Scott being first forwarded, shall ar in our next, and Smith in the following r.

Congress has abolished the land offices at Steubenville, Zanesville and Marietta, and attached the unsold lands in those districts to that of Chillicothe.

Deficiency of the Crop.—One of our neighbors, who harvested about 30 acres of wheat, says he will not have more than two hundred bushels.

Considerable of the grass in this vicinity is so badly sanded, from the heavy flood some time since, that it cannot be cut; the crop is very light, owing, probably, to the grass being killed out by the two remarkably dry seasons past.

The Roman Catholic Church held a general council, in May past, in Baltimore. There were present one Arch Bishop, twelve Bishops, and the representatives of the different religious orders, constituting the "Fourth Provincial Council" of the Roman Catholic Church in the United States.

Methodist Episcopal Church Joining the Masons.—Not long since we noticed the ceremony of laying the foundation stone of an edifice in Massillon, Ohio, designed for the double purpose of an Episcopal Meth. meeting house and a Masonic Hall; the last Protestant informs us that on the 4th inst. the corner stone, was laid, of a building intended to answer the two-fold purpose of a Hall, for the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and a Methodist Episcopal Chapel, in Havre de Grace, Maryland.

The Sabbath Schools of Pittsburgh, Pa., celebrated the anniversary of American Independence, in a very animating and splendid manner. About 5 or 6,000 children and teachers repaired to the grove of Major Craig, up the Allegheny, above the town, in steamboats and carriages, where refreshments were provided, and where a number of impressive addresses were delivered. There were in attendance several thousand spectators. The Alleghenytown schools spent the day in the same way in the grove of Mr. Church, to the amount of about 1800 scholars and teachers, with several hundred spectators. Beside these there were several other schools, in Pittsburgh and its suburbs, which celebrated the day separately, or in union with others, at one of which there is said to have been nine hundred children present. On the whole it must have been a grand day of Sabbath School excitement.

New York Petition and Protest.—At the late General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church a petition was presented from the city of New York, signed by over one thousand names, purporting to be members of said church, praying the conference to "re-affirm the language of the church in 1785 on the subject of slavery," &c. On the presentation of this petition Dr. Bangs expressed great surprize at seeing so many signatures connected with that subject from the church at New York, and on his own responsibility returned this petition to some of his friends in the city to have the subject "sifted," upon which a corps of some twenty or thirty were organized to reconnoitre the city, to interogate the petitioners, and to ascertain the state of the case. A protest was made out against the petition, in which said petition is denounced as the blackest "falsehood and forgery," and to sustain this charge ten specifications, with accompanying evidence are given. According to the protest the disclosures were of the grossest and vilest kind. When this "Protest" was presented to the General Conference, it produced a greater excitement, probably, than any event or question during its session. Such was the shock, at these supposed disclosures, that a southerner observed they were enough to "make a dead man tremble in his grave," and even abolitionists denounced the petition before hearing the other side.

We noticed this matter at the time, and waited to see the issue before we said any thing about it. We were inclined to the opinion, from what we knew of the spirit of the corps, that the petitioners were grossly slandered by the protest. We know by experience, that the rulers of the M. E. Church never want for a man to say what is necessary to injure an opponent, or to prove what their interest requires. We do not mean these remarks to apply to the great body of the church, but to the men in power and to their creatures around them. Indeed, we are loath to say all we have seen and know upon this subject. The honor of christianity requires that, as far as consistent, we should throw a veil over these things.

But to the protest. It comes to pass when the Petitioners defend themselves, that if their statements and testimony are to be believed, there never was a greater "falsehood and forgery" than the "Protest,"—never was a viler attack, in the history of moral crime, upon reputation. To shew how the parties are at issue we will give one particular as a sample of a score that the case affords. The ninth specification of the Protest, says, "neither of the persons who were employed in obtaining these signatures (to the petition,) are members of the church, one of them having been expelled in 1839 for immorality, and the other having been long out of the church. For this reason, the immediate agents of this dark business are wholly irresponsible to our church authorities, and were probably employed in this work on this account," &c. The other party, after furnishing testimony that John Fordyce and H. H. Degen were the persons who procured the signatures to the petition, also procure the testimony of these two gentlemen under oath, the first stating he had been a member of the church for ten years, and the latter seven, and that they had neither of them withdrawn, in that time, or been expelled that they knew of. The statements of the respective parties being now before the public, we think the candid and reflecting must see that the Protesters are greatly in error. Even suppose there were some irregularity in procuring petitioners, the occasion did not call for such a display of vituperation and abuse.

We shall take the liberty from this occurrence to remark, that the episcopal brethren profess to have a special commission "to spread scripture holiness over the land," and often more than indicate that they have done a larger portion of good than any other sect, and that their people are the best in the nation. Methodism, we believe, was first established in New York, and that place is now considered as the metropolis of the church; of course it is there we are to look for a fair specimen of Methodism. If the doctrine of the Protest be true the church in New York has hundreds of as great scoundrels as there is on earth; on the other hand, if the shewing of the petitioners is to be relied on, there must be many better men, than the Protesters, in the penitentiary. This account of themselves is all confined to their own church, so, according to their own shewing, they are spreading scripture holiness with a witness.

The following was sent to our office in handbill form, with a request to insert it in our paper:

MYSTERIOUS JUDICIAL PROCEEDINGS.

The following official report of the proceedings of the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, appeared in the church paper, May, 1840:

"On Thursday, May 21st, Bishop Morris presented 'a letter from Tennessee, signed by J. H. Harris, respecting the trial of Lewis Garrett.—This was read, and together with a document in possession of the itinerant committee, signed by Ferguson, was referred to a special committee of three.'

"On the next day, P. Akers, L. Pierce, B. M. Drake, were announced as the committee on the case of Lewis Garrett."

A "committee on the case of Lewis Garrett"!!! who is unapprised of the investigation—unrepresented—no communication from him noticed or "referred"—at a distance—not having the privilege afforded by the Roman law, of being heard, or having "license to answer for himself"!! But this exparte investigation was had, and the committee made their report, May 30th—that there "were referred to them two memorials from six individuals, praying that special attention be paid to the records of the Tennessee Conference, to ascertain whether there was any misrule or mal-administration in the trial and expulsion of L. Garrett, &c." There are two important admissions in this report. 1st. "That the minutes of the alleged trial of said local preacher, before the committee, and those of his expulsion BY the quarterly meeting conference, were not before the Annual Conference." 2d. That "charges of misrule or mal-administration were preferred against the presiding officers, not by an appellant, but by an accuser"—mark these admissions. The "officers" charged were F. E. Pitts and R. L. Andrews—the "accuser" was L. Garrett—and the Annual Conference adopted a resolution, acquitting the accused and condemning the accuser; or did "judge and determine" the case of "said local preacher," who was not "an appellant," although "the minutes of the alleged trial were not before the Annual Conference"! Was there no "misrule" or informality in this? Is it not without a parallel in the history of judicial proceedings? Is there no "misrule or mal-administration," in a court exercising appellate and judicial authority, determining cases "in the absence" of the record from the court below—acquitting the impeached, and trying and condemning the prosecutor, without putting the latter on his defence? The report admits, that "the minutes of the alleged trial before the committee" and "of expulsion BY the quarterly meeting conference, were NOT before the Annual Conference"—no truly: "there was no vote relative to crime or penalty; that was done by the presiding elder"—this is clearly proven by the record, and conclusive evidence—and minutes of suspension BY a committee, and "expulsion BY a quarterly meeting conference," do not exist any where.—It is further admitted, that "documents were read, although not as testimony." Now, where did the committee find evidence to sustain such an important judicial decision as that contained in the resolution "adopted unanimously" by the Tennessee Conference, October, 1837, whose journal they were examining? They mention no evidence—and yet they were not "able to detect any misrule or mal-administration in the premises"! The "charges preferred against the presiding officers" were, "for misrule"—in "claiming the right to judge of the magnitude of an alleged offence, and apportion the punishment." This was believed to be the province of the committee and quarterly meeting conference, who "were not permitted to judge of motives or intentions," but of "facts only"—and gave "no vote relative to crime or penalty." These charges involved a question of law—the inquiry was, "what is law in the case?"—the episcopacy claim the right to judge, and it is conceded to them—but the Annual Conference was permitted by the presiding bishop to "judge and determine," that "the spirit of the discipline or law was fully complied with," and that too in "the absence of the minutes"—the only legal or certain evidence of a fair trial according to discipline! Could the "special committee" "detect no misrule" here, "from the records of the Annual Conference?" when they seem to have found no evidence at all, on which to found such a judgment! And what is the conclusion of the report, adopted by the sage General Conference? Why, it is no conclusion at all, for want of the evidence, "the minutes!" It is a solemn, exparte nothing—ah! worse than nothing—but to notice the case, to deepen the wound! Nothing done, nothing recommended to satisfy memorialists, or to put the subject to rest!

It is true, that Mr. P. T. Scruggs, the mover of the resolution adopted by the Tennessee Conference, writes, under date of April 13, 1840, "a witness proves" that "guilt and expulsion were both included" in the "ONE VOTE"—on which the conference decreed that "the committee and quarterly meeting conference by one vote passed upon the guilt and expulsion of said Garrett." In "Pitts' defence," the term guilty is used six times. Guilt is defined, "justly chargeable with a crime, wicked"—an able jurist says, "criminal intent, the quo animo, constitutes crime in all offences. My judge, (Mr. Pitts,) Messrs. Green, Maddin and seven local ministers, said: September 15, 1838, "believing in the purity of his (L. Garrett's) intention." Now, if words are the true signs of ideas and lexicons are to be relied on, and the church record and the testimony of seven credible members of the quarterly meeting conference are true, the use of the epithets guilt and guilty, as above, is groundless, false and unjust.

I forwarded in due time, certified copies from the journal of the quarterly conference of Nashville station, addressed to the committee on the episcopacy, and directed to the care of Rev. D. McJilton, Baltimore. If received (and it is said they were) they were not noticed or referred to the "special committee," although the absence of said minutes was wanting to enable them to arrive at some conclusion. The copies of record were accompanied by a remonstrance against the unjust stigma resting on my character, by an illegal and odious record on the Journal of the Tennessee Conference.

The spirit of christianity and of real Methodism are, good will to all, and injury to none—in discipline, merciful and forbearing—and in punishing, reluctant and conservative—and in nothing more prominent, than in opposition to persecution, ill-judging and harsh measures, even with enemies. In my case, I had done nothing that should have provoked the resentment even of an enemy. My alleged offence, even if true—of a breach of contract, by publishing a small newspaper—could not have injured any one, or if any, the church only, in the matter of a few subscribers; and yet, for this heinous alleged offence, every principle of christianity and Methodism must be violated and disgraced, under cover of church authority, to persecute, degrade and exclude from the pale of the church an aged member, who, till then, had been an accredited minister, of long standing and of unsullied character, themselves being judges. How contrary to that spirit which wept over persecutors, and prayed for forgiveness even for murderers; but the contrast is greater, when it is considered that my persecutors themselves have admitted, that my offence was "an error of the head" only—and yet, for an error of the head, I have been persecuted, expelled illegally and denied investigation or redress by every tribunal in the church, and the unjust stigma suffered to remain on the records. I appeal to christians, if such conduct is not anti-christian and disgraceful to the christian name—and to impartial citizens of all classes, if it is humane, patriotic or just in any sense of these terms—and I would respectfully remind all, that such outrages of all law, both human and divine, should not be chargeable upon real christianity, which is forbearing, lenient, full of mercy and good fruits. I have asked no favor but that of impartial investigation and "license to answer for myself," which would be granted by any christian or civil tribunal, where law and equity prevail; but the rulers of the Methodist Episcopal Church have set both at defiance, and seem to be more anxious to cover and protect their official acts than to exercise mercy, truth and justice. I therefore, most solemnly protest against such conduct, as neither christian nor Methodistic, and again call for and challenge a full and impartial investigation—if they continue to refuse, they must bear the disgrace of cruelty, inhumanity and a dread of exposure, with an intelligent community. Truth and justice suffer nothing from fair trial—and Church sanction can never reconcile oppression with benign christianity. L. Garrett.

July, 1840.

ITEMS.

Three riots occurred at Chelsea, near Boston, on the fourth.

Chemical Bank Notes, fives altered to fifties, are in circulation in New York.

Fifteen counterfeiters were recently arrested at La Fayette, Louisiana.

About $30,000 of dry goods were sold at auction at St. Louis, on the 30th ultimo.

The North American Review contains a well written article on the writings of N. P. Willis, in which the poet is considerably praised.

About five thousand barrels of flour arrived at New Orleans during the three last days of June. The price was $3,62½—retail $3.75.

A child at Baltimore, swallowed several percussion caps a day or two ago, and died soon after in great agony.

According to the book of Jasher, recently published, Naomah, the daughter of Enoch, was five hundred and eighty years old when she was married to Noah.

A Canada paper states that about 5000 Indians of the United States have purchased a lot of land near London, U. C., and intend to remove thither.

A new trial was ordered in a law case in New York a day or two ago, in consequence of the incompetency of one of the jurors, who was a foreigner, and did not understand the English language.

The Sunday School and Temperance celebrations throughout the country, on the fourth of July, were among the most creditable and appropriate demonstrations on that gratifying occasion.

The amount of merchandise which left Cleveland on the Ohio canal downwards, during the month of June this year, was but little over 2,000,000 lbs. The amount last year during the same month, was over 8,000,000 lbs. or nearly four times as much.

A Murderer and Counterfeiter Arrested.—A man named Gunter, who some time since committed a murder in Pulaski county, Missouri, has been arrested at Jefferson city, for circulating counterfeit money. A companion named Rogers was also arrested at the same time. The counterfeits were on the Delaware and Hudson Canal Company.

That Statute.—For several years the Philadelphians have been threatening to erect an equestrian statute to Washington. In 1833, a corner stone was laid in Washington Square, with all due form and ceremony. Since that time the matter has apparently slept, until on Tuesday last, when a meeting was called at the Exchange, G. M. Dallas, Esq., in the chair. It was resolved to cast an iron statute, smelted with Pennsylvania Anthracite, and Pettrich, the sculptor, was instructed to furnish a model.—General George McKeim, M. C., of Reading, has made a donation of the iron; and a committee of three were appointed to solicit funds.

On Saturday, 20th ultimo, Alexander Atkinson, Esq., of Camden county, Georgia, for several years a Senator in the Legislature of that State, was murdered in a barbarous manner by some of his own negroes, lately purchased, whilst reproving them in the field for not performing their task. Eight of them were apprehended while endeavoring to escape in a boat.

The First Appearance of a Steam Boat at an African Capital.—As we neared the city, we observed every opening crowded with dark groups of human beings. The whole length of the sinuous wall was surmounted by a moving line of heads, and at the landing-place, outside the principal gate, as well as on some cliffs a little further off, they were in immense numbers. No situation could be more favorable for witnessing the prodigy which we presented, and doubtless the whole population of Rabba saw us approach. We must, indeed, have been an extraordinary spectacle. Independent of the phenomenon of moving so rapidly without men to paddle, which is the ne plus ultra of their ideas of locomotion, the Alburkah, thatched nearly fore and aft, must have looked like an immense moving house; not much to be admired, it is true, but this was remedied in some measure by dressing her in flags of all colors, which took off the attention of the spectators from the shapeless mass below. We stopped abreast of the landing-place, near the principal gate; and, on letting go the anchor, a salute of seven guns was fired, preceded and followed by three cheers, which were responded to by the shouts of the thousands on shore. We congratulated one another, in having at last reached this important point, and acknowledged the goodness of the Great Preserver from all dangers, in having suffered us to proceed so far in safety with our limited means. It was a reward for all the privations we had suffered, and we hoped after recruiting our strength by a little rest and good living, that the same protection would enable us still further to prosecute our interesting voyage.—English publication.

FOREIGN NEWS.

From the Brother Jonathan, June 11.

ENGLAND.

The packet ship Sheffield, Capt. Lyon, arrived on Tuesday with dates one and two days later from London and Liverpool. There is, of course, little news.

A serious market riot occurred at Limerick on the 1st of June, the people coming down with the cry "down with the forestallers." Several wagoners were despoiled and trundled into the river—and quiet was restored only by calling out the artillery, a regiment of infantry having proved insufficient.

The English government have sent six ships of the line to Naples, the difficulty becoming more serious.

The excise revenue of Ireland will fall short £750,000.

Morrison, the Hygeist, took fifty pills on the day of his death—and refused to see a physician. He said if the pills would not cure him nothing would, and died a consistent quack.

American stock and railway shares are said to be held in England to the value of $200,000,000.

Three booksellers of Manchester have been indicted for selling Shelly's poems.

The House of Commons have ordered to be prepared for Parliament, "Copies or extracts of any communications between the governments of Great Britain and France, respecting the removal of the remains of Napoleon Bonaparte from St. Helena to France."

Her Majesty and Prince Albert attended the Epsom races, June 3d. Victoria looked well with her white dress and sky blue silk drawn bonnet, and feathers and ribbons of the same colors.—The Prince rode down the course on horse back but soon returned. Little Wonder took the Derby stake, and Prince Albert immediately presented the rider with an elegant whip.

Two bankers in Lombard street and other parties in Liverpool, have been cheated out of about $24,000, by a wholesale manufacturer of London, who has been in the habit of putting into circulation forged acceptances.

Died recently, at Shepton, Somerset, John Scott, aged 105. When 100 years old he reaped an acre of wheat in two days, with ease.

FRANCE.

The coffin preparing to receive the remains of Napoleon, is to be of solid ebony, in the shape of the ancient sarcophagi, and large enough to enclose the coffins in which the Emperor lies at St. Helena, so that his ashes may not be disturbed. The funeral pall is in velvet, strewed with gold bees, bordered with a broad band of ermine; at each corner is to be placed an eagle, embroidered in gold, and surmounted with the imperial crown.

The French government has found it necessary officially to contradict the rumors of Marshal Vallee's defeat in Africa, and to affirm a victory.

Admiral Baudin was to proceed to Buenos Ayres, clothed with military and diplomatic powers to terminate the differences with the Argentine Republic.

SPAIN.

Continued success appears to mark the Queen's cause. Strong hold after strong hold of the Carlists is taken possession of—the Cortes deliberate in quiet and tolerable unanimity, and the war may now be regarded as mutually closed.

THE EAST.

There is little news from the East. The Circassians continued their successes against the Russians. In Damascus affairs were assuming a most favorable turn for the Israelites, the barber, and most of the individuals examined, having retracted the evidence which the fear of tortures had extracted from them.

JAMAICA.

Papers received at this port, three days later than those which came via New Orleans, give further mention of the difficulties with the colored population. At Falmouth, the trial of Ward, arraigned for harboring the negroes who resisted the civil authorities on the 20th of May last, was continued, but had not yet been bro't to an end. Great excitement has attended the whole course of the proceedings, and it is supposed if Ward is condemned that it will be the occasion of still more violent outbreaks among the black population. Ward is described as a Baptist clergyman, of intrepid character, who has fastened the attachment of a large number of the apprentices.

TEXAS.

Advices from this country to the 3d June do not furnish any thing of importance. The rumor that the Mexican General Arista is approaching Texas is revived, but his force is now reduced to one thousand men, and his object is said to be to cut up the Federalists, who are forming within Texan border.

The rumor that the Texan fleet has received sailing orders is confirmed.

The fall of Campeachy before the Federalists is not confirmed, though the rumor is renewed.

Business Department.

Br. Crall, your paper has been regularly forwarded; every issue for eight months, they have been put in the Post Office, on the day of their date. On examination, we see that in our package book, we have your office "Richmond," instead of "New Richmond," as per your letter. We will alter and try again. If we can find the numbers missing, we will forward them.

Br. Stephens, of Springfield, O., says, that near one hundred copies of Br. Shinn's book were subscribed for in and near that place, and that the subscribers are wondering why they hear nothing from them. They can be forwarded to William Steel, of that place, care of P. Murray, merch't.

The fourth quarterly meeting for Pisgah circuit will be held at Olive Green, embracing the third Sabbath in August. C. Woodruff.

July 22, 1840.

A Camp-Meeting will be held on Eagle creek, Hancock county, Ohio, in the neighborhood of Br. Ramsbottom's, to commence on the 7th of August. S. W. Thornton, Supt.

Br. Maynard, of Lancaster, can send us the money, if he wishes, and we will send it to Br. Stockton.

It will be seen by the following prospectus that Br. Stockton has changed the name of his intended paper.

PROSPECTUS

OF THE

CHRISTIAN WORLD.

THE subscriber proposes to establish a periodical publication, to be entitled—"The Christian World."

The main object of this work will be, the advancement of christianity. To this object, whatever personal and social interests it may be desirable and becoming to connect with it, will be regarded not only as subordinate but subservient.

The plan contemplates a series of sketches, illustrative of Bible Christianity, in its essential, peculiar, and incomparable glory;—of organized christianity, as witnessed in all the churches and the benevolent societies auxiliary to them;—and of the connexions of christianity with the institutions of government, literature, science and the arts. In addition to this highly interesting and important succession of subjects, it is intended to furnish, in a Miscellaneous Department, an attractive and useful variety of historical and geographical descriptions; biographical characters and incidents; poetry; reviews; current intelligence, &c.

The means that will be chiefly relied upon for the fulfilment of this plan, are the following:—1. The services of a choice circle of correspondents, qualified, by ample personal accomplishments, by their social connexions and distinctions, to supply all departments of the work, richly, with original communications. 2. An extensive selection of the most valuable, regular and occasional publications, both English and American; especially such as may be consulted as organs of the interests and institutions comprehended in the plan.

TERMS.—One number, of eight pages, in large quarto form, enclosed in a cover, will be published every month. It will be printed in the neatest style of the art; on fine, white paper, with new and handsome type, cast and kept expressly for this purpose. Price:—a single copy, $1.25 per annum; five copies, or more, to one order, $1.00 each per annum. Distant subscribers must pay in advance; city subscribers, on delivery of the first number. Subscriptions will be received, in the city, at the Bookstore of Mr. J. Whetham, Chesnut street above Sixth, and at the office of the Saturday Evening Post, No. 36, Carter's Alley. Communications, post paid, may be addressed to the editor,

Thomas H. Stockton,

No. 10, Sergeant street, Philadelphia.

The first number will be published as soon as efficient arrangements can be secured. If, during the first year of its publication, it shall succeed in exciting the common christian interest that is necessary to sustain it, and make it the medium of general usefulness, it will probably be enlarged, or published more frequently.

Philadelphia, Pa:, July 22, 1840. 48

Stray Mare.

STRAYED from the subscriber living in Hopewell township, Muskingum county, O., on the 20th of June last, a light SORREL MARE, about 14 or 15 hands high, with a small blaze in the forehead and one white foot; no shoes on when she left. Any person returning said mare or giving information to the subscriber where she can be found, will be liberally compensated for his trouble.

Naaman R. Grant.

Hopewell tp., Musk., O., July 8, 1840. 46

Dissolution.

THE partnership heretofore existing between the subscribers in the Putnam Foundry, under the firm of HARTLEY & ANDERSON, was this day dissolved by mutual consent.

The Putnam Foundry will hereafter be conducted by J. J. Anderson & Co.

Levi Hartley,

Jacob J. Anderson.

Putnam, Jan. 1, 1840. (Jan. 29: 23.)

MISCELLANEOUS.

[BY REQUEST.]

From Alexander's Weekly Messenger.

INCONSISTENCY.

A full account of the bold and successful career of this arch enemy, would involve the history of mankind, from the fatal hour when the foul stain of transgression was stamped on the fair escutcheon of Adam, to the present moment. She has exercised her baneful influence over the human family in every age, in every country, and in every clime. She rose, like a phœnix, from ashes, in the blooming bowers of Eden, and planted her standard, marked with the insignia of curses, on the mournful ruins of Paradise. From there, it has waved in triumph over deluded mortals and the wreck of nations. To rob man of the image of his God and seduce him from the path of true happiness, has been the height of her ambition. That she has been faithful in the prosecution of her designs, the records of every nation bear fearful testimony. That she is still swaying her iron sceptre over millions of the human race, is equally true. That her exertions will relax only with the last note of time, may be inferred from the past and the present. Her ceaseless course is onward, searching every avenue of mind, assailing every weakness of the heart. But few are to be found, who have not, at any time, sacrificed at her altar. Her cunning is proverbial, her courage undaunted, her industry untiring. Human misery is her richest food; reason and wisdom, her most hated enemies; prudence and discretion, her bitterest foes.

As they have emerged from their dens of filth and scum, she has taken to her bosom, ignorance, superstition, bigotry, fanaticism, faction, and the whole family of evil passions.

Her first shout of victory grated harshly through the air, when the forbidden fruit was severed from its parent stem. Angels heard the discordant sounds and wept; justice recorded the sad catastrophe in anguish; incarnate God beheld it with an eye of pity, entered special bail for the trembling culprit, and cancelled the awful penalty on Calvery's lofty summit.

With the blood of Abel, Inconsistency spangled banners with crimson, and, as time rolled on, the scarlet hue was more deeply imprinted. The old world was convulsed by her reckless power, for centuries, and its fairest portions swallowed by her whirlpools of destruction. The streams of Europe, Asia, and Africa, have been tinged with the purple current, drawn from the veins of millions by the keen lancet of Inconsistency. The ancient and powerful kingdoms of the earth; the hundred cities of Crete; the splendors of Babylon; the republics of Greece and Rome; Carthage, with its seven hundred thousand inhabitants; Athens, with its forums and lyceums; all fell beneath the ruthless hand of Inconsistency. Many of the philosophers and sages of the classic land; many of the most prominent actors, who, for centuries, guided the destinies of the mistress of the world; a large proportion of the sixty-four emperors; most of the ambitious generals; many of the most eloquent orators and ablest statesmen, whose talents attracted the public gaze, were sacrificed at the sanguinary shrine of Inconsistency. The great Pompey; the proud Tarquin; the bloody Nero; the ambitious Cæsar, and the exiled Bonaparte, sunk beneath the withering blasts of Inconsistency.

Leaving these dismal scenes, over which ages have rolled, let us trace the meandering course of this Pandora, in our own day and generation. By exposing some of her wiles, and by portraying some of her most prominent features, it may induce some individual to wrest himself from her iron grasp, and to return to the path of wisdom.

In matters of religion, many are under the control of Inconsistency. In the days of the Apostles, there was one faith, one God, and one baptism. The partition walls of sectarianism were then unknown to the followers of the Lamb. Charity, humility, peace, forbearance, and a concert of action, were the marked characteristics of primitive Christians. Love to the cause and love to man, pervaded their hearts. Dissensions and controversies were unknown; no conflicting tenets were promulged; no intricate dogmas imposed. Fishermen could then preach the everlasting gospel, under which thousands were converted in a day. No collegiate diploma was then requisite to prepare a man to proclaim the victories of the cross, or point the sin-sick soul to the Heavenly Physician. No studied rhetoric ornamented the story of redemption; simple truth, in its native dress, enraptured the immortal mind, and poured upon it a flood of light. No splendid fixtures adorned their places of worship; the manger was not forgotten. Show and vain price met a merited rebuke; the golden calf of Fashion was not worshipped; pure religion, unalloyed with conjecture and enigmatical construction, was taught with power and success. How changed the scene; how conflicting is modern theology.

"Religion should extinguish strife,
And make a calm of human life;
But, those who chance to differ
No points that God has left at large,
How fiercely do they meet and charge—
No combatants are stiffer."

Infidelity, in all its various shades, is a legitimate child of Inconsistency. The man who understands the physiology of the word; the philosophy of nature and of mind; the man who has made himself acquainted with the anatomy of the human body, with its thousand springs, with the powers of reason, and with the over revolving circuit of his own soul, and denies the existence of Him "who spake, and it was done; who commanded, and it stood fast;" disrobes himself of the noblest qualities bestowed by creative wisdom, and sinks himself to the level of a brute. All things, from the leaf that vibrates in the breeze, to the ethereal sky, spangled with stars, proclaim the existence of a God. All rational intelligences sanction the assertion. Most assuredly, there is a Supreme Being, who rules, with unerring wisdom, in the kingdoms of NATURE, PROVIDENCE and GRACE. Reason, dictates that of all others, this position is the most safe. The contrary tends to misery in this life, and, assuming that its base is correct, its superstructure is ruinous.—Moral rectitude is the substratum of human happiness; infidelity, the destruction of social order.

Vice, from the larceny of a pin to the most tragical homicide; from the common fib to the blackest perjury, is the spawn of Inconsistency.

Are you in the habit of profane swearing? This is one of the snares of this arch enemy, and lessens you in the estimation of all good society. It is without excuse, without object, and like shooting at the wind.

Are you in the habit of lying and deceiving? This is another web of this fell destroyer, and will stamp you with infamy unless you reform. "An honest man is the noblest work of God."

Do you foster a disposition to steal small articles? You are under the dictation of Inconsistency, and, unless you break the spell, this propensity will increase, and destruction will be your certain fate. Break off this allegiance at once, and save your reputation from premature death.

Are you in the habit of intemperance? This is one of the iron cages of Inconsistency, and, unless you burst the bars and regain your freedom, you will be plunged headlong into the dark abyss of poverty and disgrace. If you regard your present and eternal welfare, escape for your life.

Are you addicted to gambling? You are on the enchanted ground of Inconsistency, amidst deadly pitfalls and dens of adders. You are on the confines of the dungeon of despair, and the whirlpool of ruin. Retrace your steps quickly, or you may sink to rise no more. Every moment you remain is full of danger and big with consequences. The magic coil may be thrown around you, and your doom sealed forever. A blackleg is as heartless as an Algerine pirate.

Are you given to lewd company?—Theirs is the banqueting house of Inconsistency, whose every draught is intoxicating poison, every viand a hook full of barbs. It is the repository of blighted reputation, the absorber of connubial felicity, the receptacle of misery and wo. Retreat from it as you would from the jungle of a tiger, or the lair of a lion. Your safety depends on flight; linger not an instant; its chambers lead to the shades of death. Its allurements charm to ruin, its fascinations dazzle to bewilder, its inmates flatter to destroy. Its atmosphere is more direful than the cholera, its miasma more deleterious than the plague.

Are you attached to company whose business it is to defraud their fellow men? or who are thieves, burglars, robbers, counterfeiters, or forgers? These are the guerilla parties of Inconsistency, and if you continue in their ranks, they will, sooner or later, land you in the prison or on the gallows. Every step you proceed with them, is one of peril. The eyes of the law are flashing upon you, its sentinels are in every direction watching your movements. The sword of justice is drawn, ready to cut you asunder. Dissolve yourself from the unhallowed union, return to the path of rectitude, resume the mantle of honesty, and avoid the vials of wrath that are already poised over your head.

Are you wandering in the mazy labrinth of ignorance, superstition, or bigotry? These are the beams of Inconsistency thrust into your eyes by some of her faithful allies; clouding your vision; enslaving your mind; darkening your soul; deranging your senses; chilling your heart; depriving you of the most refined enjoyments of life, and crippling your noblest powers. Emerge from your isolated habitation of damps and fogs; bare your bosom to the genial rays of intelligence, reason, and charity; extricate your talents from nature's dark quarry; throw off the galling yoke of superstition; banish the hydra of bigotry; open your eyes to the light; seize upon the pleasures of liberty, and fulfil the design of your creation. Remain no longer amidst stagnant pools of loathsome vapors, where serpents hiss and plagues devour; and you may yet bathe in rivers of delight, and be free indeed.

Are you under the influence of fanaticism? This is the tornado of Inconsistency, filled with the besom of destruction; leaving in its dismal wake oceans of blood, governments dissolved, and nations ruined. Fanaticism prompted the crusades, that were urged on for nearly two hundred years, convulsing Christendom to its very centre, sacrificing two hundred millions of the human family, and spreading disease, misery, and wo, far and wide. The torch of fanaticism has kindled the martyr's faggot, and ignited the funeral pile from the earliest ages. Its dangers are increased by the powerful lever of an approving conscience, urging its subjects to the most vigorous action. Its principle is not changed; give it power, and the flames of its mania would soon envelope our enlightened land in curling smoke. It would gladly kindle a fire in the north, and in the south, that fountains of blood could not quench, or the skill of patriotism arrest. Unless carefully guarded against, it will yet prostrate the fair fabric of our union, and leave LIBERTY to expire, amidst the chaotic ruins of her own citadel. Its black clouds are rising in potentuous array, and, unless they are dispersed by the wand of reason, they will burst upon our yet happy and prosperous country, with a tremendous fury. Let every patriot pierce them with the pointed rod of inconsistency, that their electric fluid may be conducted harmless to the earth.

Are you, under any circumstances, in favor of faction? This is the avalanche of Inconsistency, and carries on its vibrating bosom, terror, dismay, and revolution. Before you move a finger to put this destructive mass in motion, pause and reflect. Read the pages of ancient and modern history, and learn how many millions have been crushed by its ponderous weight. Remember Greece and Rome; remember the scenes that have been acted in England, Ireland, and in our own country, within the present generation; and, if you possess and exercise common sense, you will raise your voice and influence against faction, and in support of social order and the supremacy of the laws. This dangerous enemy is abroad in our land; demagogues grow bolder as time advances; mobocracy is gathering new strength; pistols, dirks and bowie knives, are multiplying; and each succeeding year is urging us towards the vortex of dissolution. Faction in miniature, is almost of daily occurrence, and several of our large cities have, within the last few years, witnessed a fearful amalgamation and combination of detached parcels, from this mighty avalanche.

Unless Inconsistency, Fanaticism and Faction, are arrested in their bold career, some lingering spirits, who aided in the glorious achievement of our independence, and the consolidation of our confederation, may live to see the silken cords cut, the golden chain severed, our national union dissolved, the car of civil discord rolling over our land, and our bright sun of liberty blotted from the firmament of FREEDOM. If you love your country, if your value your blood-bought privileges, if you desire to perpetuate our republican institutions, and preserve, untarnished, our nation's glory, and the sacred boon transmitted to us by the sages and patriots of '76, banish these fell destroyers. Unless checked, they will gather new force, and present a front regardless, pressed on by a rear rushing to conflict. This is no picture of fancy, but a dread reality. Our union dissolved,

In vain, with tears, our fate we may deplore,
We sink, like stars, that set to rise no more.

Are you conversant with political corruption? This is the volcano of Inconsistency, with a crater more dangerous than Mount Etna. Its burning lava will dry up the purest streams that flow; wither the fairest flowers that bloom; destroy the noblest edifice that can be reared. Its mountain waves buried the ancient republics; consumed the ancient kingdoms, and blotted them from the map of the world. Inconsistency would gladly consign us to the same fate. The sulphureous affluvia from her volcanic bowels is already mingled with our atmosphere; a tremulous motion in our body politic has been repeatedly felt; and, unless we fortify ourselves against eruptions, we may be suddenly destroyed, and that without remedy. Unless we prevent the enemy from throwing together the combustible materials that exist among us, ready cut and dried, they may amalgamate, and form a volcanic mass that a single spark will kindle to a flame more terrible than Vesuvius. Let every patriot unite in purging our country from political intrigue and corruption, by preserving, pure and undefiled, our elective franchise, and by banishing from public trust, every man known to be infected by this dangerous malady.

Does wild ambition reign in your heaving bosom? This is the forked lightning of Inconsistency. By its devouring flame, nations have been melted like wax; governments consumed, and kingdoms dissolved. It bears on its fiery billows all the "black spirits and white, blue spirits and gray," that are found floating on the waves of discontent. It is ever ready to lead fanaticism, faction, and all recruits that offer their service. Its deleterious fluid is generated in the Leyden jar of self-aggrandisement, and directs its liquid streams towards every object of its desire, regardless of means and consequences. It commingles with every thing that lies in its way, calculated to increase the magnitude and force of its volume. But, unfortunately for those who generate and put it in motion, it is uniformly charged with their own destruction, and expire amidst the flames of their own kindling. Its brilliant flashes struck the spires of Greek and Roman fame; they trembled, tottered and fell. Its vivid light illuminated the path of Bonaparte to the rock of St. Helena, where he lingered, languished, and died. Its scorching rays have driven many, in our country, from the pinnacle of popularity, and paralized them for life. It is a dangerous element, quench it while you can, it may rise above your control.

Are you an office seeker? The Lord have mercy on your soul. Your chance is in the lottery wheel of Inconsistency, where there are ninety-nine blanks to a prize. The day of miracles is past; five thousand can no longer be fed by five loaves and two fishes. Anticipation will not keep you from starving, political promises will not clothe you. Cease to follow this ignis fatuus, or, a hundred to one, you will be lead into the regions of disappointment and the quagmire of penury. If you value your peace and reputation, never volunteer to run the political gauntlet; if you value your time, do not spend it in office hunting. When you are called by the strong voice of your country, then it is time enough to enter the thorny arena of public service.—Among its briars and brambles, you will get sufficiently lacerated, should you enter at a late period.

Finally, let me admonish all, to shun each of the characters I have briefly, but faintly portrayed. In the name of philanthropy, in the name of human rights, in the name of liberal principles, in the name of American freedom, in the name of our departed sires, and in the name of Heaven, let me entreat those who value our liberty, and prize our government, to watch, with an Argus eye, the dear bought privileges we so eminently enjoy, and guard against every encroachment of INCONSISTENCY, under whatever mask she may appear. If we are true to ourselves, our REPUBLIC may be preserved for centuries; if we suffer this fell destroyer, with her myridons, to march on in triumph, our years will soon be numbered, our prosperous career soon finished, and the nations that now admire and respect us, will cease to pay us deference, laugh at our calamity, and cling to crowns with new delight.

AMMONIUS.

Camp-Meeting Notices.

There will be a Camp-Meeting held on Lima circuit, Ohio, to include the third Sabbath in August; we request all who can make it convenient to attend. J. GUEST, Sup.

A Camp-Meeting will be held on the farm of John McKinney, between Sidney and Hardin, Shelby county, Ohio, including the third Sunday in August. Ministerial aid from the surrounding circuits, is strongly solicited.

JOSEPH PARKE.

We expect to hold a Camp-Meeting on Rehoboth circuit, six miles west of Wilmington, Ohio, to commence on the Friday before the third Sabbath in August, and request the aid of Bros. Flood, McGuire, Hunt, Paul, Stephens, Evans, Hughey, Atkinson, Little, the Dalbeys and Hibben.

ISAAC EDWARDS, As.

A Camp-Meeting will be held at the Diamond, ten miles from Indiana town and county, Pennsylvania, to commence on the thirteenth day of August. It will be twenty-four miles from Blairsville, and 62 from Pittsburgh. Brothers Baldwin, Robinson, Shearer, Francis and Tipton, we hope, will not fail to be with us.

T. J. ADDIS, Sup. Clearfield ct.

A camp-meeting for Zanesville circuit will commence on Thursday preceding the last Sabbath in August, on the land of Barnard Wortman, within half a mile of this office, on the old ground. Ministers and members of other circuits are pressingly invited to attend. The ministers from the western part of the District can go from this meeting in company to conference.

A camp-meeting will be held on the land of George Castle, 4½ miles from Mt. Vernon, Ohio, to commence the 21st of August; we especially invite brethren Springer, I. Thrap, Wilson, Davis, Marshall, Warren, Bamford, Tallentire, Bloomer and Cowl. We hope they can make it convenient to attend, but if any of the brethren cannot be with us, I should be glad if they would let me know soon as possible. M. SCOTT.

There will be a camp meeting held for the Ligonier Mission, near the turnpike leading from Ligonier to Youngstown, and about 2½ miles from the former place, to commence on the 28th of August next. We solicit the aid of brothers G. Brown, J. Robison, J. B. Shearer, T. J. Addis, W. Turner, S. Hazlett, W. L. Baldwin, J. Hopwood, D. Kinney, and J. M. Piper, together with any of our unstationed brethren of the adjacent circuits, who can assist us. W. W. TIPTON.

There will be a camp-meeting for Coshocton circuit, held on the farm of John Dean, Esq., two miles from Jacobsport, to commence on the 27th of August; we request the attendance of ministers and Members.

The Presidental meeting will be held at Bro. Furgeson's, White Eyes Plain, to commence on the evening of the 24th at 5 o'clock. Bro. Brown is requested to be present at the commencement of the meeting. Other ministers are requested to attend. M. N. WARREN, Sup't.

Indiana Conference-Notice.

THE first session of the Indiana Annual Conference of the Methodist Protestant Church, is appointed to be held at LIBERTY MEETING HOUSE, (John Burton's) near Mt. Tabor, Monroe county, Indiana, commencing Thursday, October 1st, 1840. Bro. JOSEPH SIMPSON is requested to preach the introductory sermon, at 10 o'clock, A. M. of said day, and Bro. ELIJAH COLLINS to serve as alternate.

As this is to be our first session, let us with the help of the Lord, endeavor to begin right. In view of this, the committee respectfully make these few suggestions. 1. Let our brethren assemble in the spirit of devout prayer, that the Divine blessing and approbation may attend our enterprize. 2. Let them be in attendance promptly at the commencement of the session. 3. Let each superintendent prepare accurate returns of the numbers in society, with the names of unstationed ministers and preachers, in the various circuits and missions. 4. Should any ministerial member be prevented from attending, let him not fail to address the conference by letter, as required by rule of discipline, and communicate all needful information.

N. B.—It will be recollected that each mission, having three or more societies, embracing not less than thirty members, is entitled to elect and send a delegate to the Annual Conference, provided the missionary is entitled to a seat in said conference. H. P. BENNETT, A. H. BASSETT, T. P. ARMSTONG, } Committee.

July 1, 1840. [Meth. Prot. please copy.]

Glass Manufactory.

THE subscriber having dissolved his connexion with the former company, has taken the GLASS WORKS below town under his own management.

WINDOW GLASS, double and single, all seizes, and of superior quality will be kept constantly on hand for sale on reasonable terms.—The experience of the proprietor, in the manufacture of the article, will insure all made to be of the best quality. Call and see.

S. B. JOHNSON.

Zanesville, Ohio, May 6, 1840. 37

Prospectus
OF THE AMERICAN
WESLEYAN OBSERVER.

THIS paper has now reached its 30th No. It has been before the public long enough to have its true character understood. The time for which it was started, (six months,) has now nearly expired. Only six numbers more remain to be issued. As many of our correspondents in different places have expressed a desire that the Observer should be continued, we would say, that provided a sufficient patronage can be obtained, it shall be continued, at least, for one year longer. The editors, who are both pastors, find it too great a burden to conduct this paper and do justice to their people. If, therefore, the Observer is continued, it will probably be necessary for one of the editors to relinquish his pastoral duties, at least in part, and devote more attention to the paper. This will make it indispensable not only that the present subscription list be kept good, but that it be considerably increased—as it now barely pays the paper maker and the printer; the editors obtaining their whole support from their people.

Should the Observer be continued, it is believed, that with the experience which the editors now have, they can, by giving more attention to the paper, make it a truly interesting sheet. And no pains will be spared on their part to accomplish this object.

The general character of the paper will remain the same as it has been. We shall, however, be able to give our readers a greater variety of valuable matter than we have hitherto done. The General Conference has been the all-absorbing subject for several months past—extended discussions respecting its probable results having commenced several weeks before it assembled We trust, however, that these discussions, and especially the reports of its doings have not been without interest.

The subject of American Slavery, with the best means for its peaceful abolition, will occupy more space in our columns than any other single topic; yet none of the moral enterprises of the age will be forgotten. To all these, as well as to the cause of general education and sound literature, the Observer will be constantly devoted. While it will be emphatically a FREE DISCUSSION paper, it is intended that it shall be an interesting and useful family newspaper to such as take no other. General, as well as moral and religious intelligence, will find a place in our columns.

With the party politics of the day, we shall have nothing to do, farther than to carry out our principles as friends of universal liberty, by the use of all moral and lawful means, to invest our oppressed countrymen with their alienable rights; believing this to be the most solemn duty of every American citizen, whatever be his profession.

Our columns will be open, to a limited extent, to the discussion, pro and con, of the different systems of church polity, IF any of our correspondents shall wish to write on these subjects. It is but a small portion of our columns that we propose to devote to this discussion. The M. E. Church holds that no form of church goverment is laid down in the scriptures—yet it is a matter of doubt whether there is magnanimity and free inquiry enough in said church, to support a paper, whose columns are open at all, to a discussion of this question. But we shall see. We do not intend that any violent attacks shall be made upon the church or her officers; but mean to confine ourselves principally to a discussion of the abstract question. And we wish it to be distinctly understood, that this and every other subject which may be discussed in our columns, will stand on its own merits. No party is responsible, either for the sentiments of the editors, or their correspondents. We are not an official organ of any party.

The Observer will be printed as heretofore, on fine paper and new type, at one dollar for six months, or two dollars per annum IN ADVANCE. It is, however, the wish of the editors, that all subscriptions now to be made, should be for the term of one year; as it is not their intention to continue the paper after the first of August next, unless they can get sufficient encouragement to continue it, at least, one year from that time. All subscriptions must be accompanied with the cash. We have determined to do none other but a cash business. This is best for all concerned. We shall not, therefore, move one step beyond the first six months, till we can see our way clear. And of our present subscribers, or others, who may wish to remit to us money, can do so through any Post Master, without expense to them or ourselves.

Any person who will send us the pay, free of expense, for five copies, shall be entitled to a sixth copy gratis—and in that proportion for any larger number.

Those who favor the project of continuing the Observer, will have the goodness to send in their subscriptions at once, for one year, commencing with the first of August. We wish to know, with the least possible delay, whether our paper is to be continued or not. All who may send us their subscriptions, shall have the money refunded, without expense to them, if the paper should not be continued.

JOTHAM HORTON,
ORANGE SCOTT.

Lowell, Mass., June 18, 1840.

P S. Address "American Wesleyan Observer, Lowell, Mass" 3w47

The New World--Quarto.

THE publisher of the NEW WORLD has the pleasure of announcing to the public, that in consequence of the immense circulation which this popular and mammoth sheet has obtained throughout the United States, and the numerous requests which have been made for its publication in a form better suited for the preservation of its valuable contents, he has commenced the issue of a QUARTO EDITION of the NEW WORLD, in sixteen large pages, containing nearly every article which appears in the folio, and will in addition be embellished with a piece of popular music. The form is a splendid one for binding, and will make a beautiful volume at the end of the year. Orders must be sent without delay, as only a limited edition will be printed. No. 1 of the QUARTO appeared on the 6th of June.

TERMS.—Four dollars per annum; Two copies for Seven Dollars; Three copies for Ten Dollars; Five copies for Fifteen Dollars. Payable in advance.

The New World--Folio,

IS published every Saturday morning, at No. 30, Ann street, New York, by J. WINCHESTER, and contains all the new works by the most popular authors in both hemispheres, together with a vast amount of other literary matter, Tales, Poetry, &c., and all the current news of the day.

TERMS.—Three Dollars per annum. Two copies for Five Dollars; Five copies for Twelve Dollars; payable invariably in advance, free of postage.

New York, July 8, 1840. 46

Notice.

ALL persons indebted to the late firm of Hartley & Anderson, are earnestly requested to call at the Foundry and make settlement, as the change of owners makes this step absolutely necessary. We ask the attention of all persons concerned, to this notice.

J. J ANDERSON & Co.

Putnam, Jan. 1, 1840. (Jan. 29: 23.)

Dissolution.

THE partnership heretofore existing between S. B. Johnson and J. M. Kirkpatrick, under the firm of S. B. Johnson & Co. was dissolved by mutual consent, on Thursday 19th inst.

S. B. JOHNSON,
J. M. KIRKPATRICK.

Zanesville, March 31, 1840. 32tf

The Brother Jonathan.

EDITED BY N. P. WILLIS AND H. HASTINGS WEL

The Largest and Cheapest Newspaper in the World

AND CERTAINLY AMONG THE BEST.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY, B

WILSON & COMPANY,

At 162, Nassau Street, N. York.

TERMS, $3 PER ANNUM, IN ADVANC

UPON entering the second volume of th pioneer in the introduction of papers its class, the publishers may be excused for co gratulating themselves upon the continued pr perity and advancement of their periodic from the issue of its first number, to the prese time. Aware that competition is the life of b siness, they expected, and have met with riva but those rivals have, so far, been essential a to the publicity and circulation of the Jonatha New readers have been made, where, compa tively, few existed before, and the taste creat for the elegant literature of the two hemisphere carried into all parts of the country, and ma accessible to all, has produced a demand for t Brother Jonathan, which it is gratifying to sta is continually on the increase.

With such addition to their resources a emoluments, the publishers have aimed to gi a commensurate increase to the value and int est of their sheet. In addition to the labors the gentlemen whose names are announced editors, the publishers avail themselves constan ly of the aid of such occasional contributors they can find space for.

For the foreign correspondence of the Jonath the services of Isaac C. Pray, Jr., have be engaged; and his fine literary taste will also exercised in the selection of things rare, n and worthy in the European literary mart. S lect o is from the cream of the foreign magazin will of course be continued.

MUSIC.—In the progress of improvement, new feature has been added to the Brother Jo athan—the publication of new and popular m sic. Every paper will contain something in t way, new and pleasant—reference being had the selection, rather to such pieces as all c sing and play, than to recherche composition suited only to the scientific. A new font of m sic type has been purchased, and a gentlem engaged to superintend this department, of e cellent experience and knowledge of music. This will enable us to give music a publici which it never enjoyed before: to carry the sar themes for carol to the sylvan maid in the f thest back woods, which delight the party in t city drawing-room. A simultaneous popular will thus be enjoyed all over the country by su compositions as are adapted to the public tas and worthy of the public favor.

Whatever other improvements may sugg themselves, will be adopted; and no pains spa to make the Jonathan a welcome visiter to sorts of people, whose tastes are worthy of gr ification. Other periodicals may be addressed particular opinions—or to particular classes Jonathan will wander free, "from grave to ge from lively to severe," and strive, with all t aid he has enlisted, to compass the whole circl to give, in a word, a Cyclopedia of whatever m be desirable in a literary magazine, and weel newspaper. He appeal to the past for vouche of what he can do—and what he can, he will.

TERMS—Three dollars a year, in advance. For Five Dollars two copes of the paper will sent one year, or one copy two years. In case will the paper be sent out of the city u less paid for in advance.

☞All communications and letters should addressed, postage paid, to

WILSON & COMPANY,
No. 162, Nassau street, New York.

S. C. Haver,

IN the flourishing town of Putnam has on ha 40 or 50 SADDLES ready for sale, of diff ent qualities, comprising nearly all the varieti in fashion in our Buckeye State.

A good assortment of Bridles and Marti gales: Riding and driving Whips: between 1 and 200 Carriage and heavy draft Collars, whi will compare and wear with any others ma here or elsewhere.

Also, fine York, Dearborn, heavy team a common Farming Harness. A lot of first ra Carriage and Buggy Harness, (brass and silv plated.)

Trunks, vallises, saddle-bags, and double c ered wagon whips, varying in quality and pri to suit purchasers.

The only recommendation he now offers for l work, is the testimony and long experience of h old customers and friends. He is still anxi to please and accommodate those who may c on him, and hopes to share so much of the pub patronage as his attention to his business sh merit.

Putnam, April 29, 1840. 28tf

William Green,

CLOCK AND WATCH REPAIRER, SILVERSMIT AND JEWELLER,

CAN be found at his shop on Main stre Putnam, a few doors north of J. C. Gut rie's store, where he will do his best to accomm date customers. He keeps on hand an asso ment of spectacles, watch trimmings, pencils, &

As far as we have tried Mr. GREEN as a wat repairer he has given us good satisfaction.—E April 22, 1840. 35tf.

O. WHITE, BOOK BINDER, No. 1 Main Street, Zanesville, Ohio.
January 15, 1840. 21tf

THE
WESTERN RECORDER

IS PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY.

☞ The office of the Recorder is five an a half miles west of Zanesville.

TERMS.

1. The WESTERN RECORDER will be publis ed weekly, on an imperial sheet, at $2 00 p annum, in advance: $2 50 at the end of thr months; $3 00 at the end of the year.

2. No discontinuances will be allowed, e cept at the discretion of the publisher, until a arrearages are paid.

3. To all ministers having regular pasto charges, who do any thing at all for the pape if they will direct us where, a copy shall be se gratis; any other who forward to us $10 for new subscribers, shall have six copies sent any address he may give.

4. All letters designed for the paper, must directed to "C. Springer, Meadow Farm, Mus ingum, Ohio."

5. A failure to notify a discontinuance b fore the expiration of the subscription year, w be considered a new engagement.

CHARACTER.—The pages of the WESTE RECORDER will be open to discussion on all m ral questions;—it will give articles on Liter ture, Mechanics, Agriculture,—an abstract Religious and Political intelligence, and wha ever may be interesting and instructive to fa ilies in general. A portion of its columns w be open to Advertisements and Prices Curren —another portion to sustain the interests of t Methodist Protestant Church in the West. These two latter objects will not likely occu more than one page.

The RECORDER will take a firm stand again Clerical Supremacy.

THE WESTERN RECORDER.

SPRINGER, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER. | Volume 1. | ZANESVILLE, OHIO, WEDNESDAY, JULY 29, 1840. | Number 49. | JOHN W. WHITE, PRINTER.

TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM IN ADVANCE. | $2.50, IN THREE MONTHS; $3, END OF YEAR.

COMMUNICATIONS.

For the Western Recorder.

Br. Editor: These are harvest times. [illegible] who are somewhat conceity, and [illegible]rown to be half-hands, in the harvest fields, are called gougers—they fall [illegible]he distance ahead, on the land, take [illegible] they can of the grain in their [illegible]s, trample down with their feet and [illegible] more than they earn, and so puff [illegible]tlow along, leaving some half invaded paper behind them to bring up the [illegible]. Just so Br. Thomas Oliver assists [illegible]ohn Carey in the management of a [illegible]y conceited and sophistical reply, to [illegible]f notice taken by me, some time in [illegible] of the Pleasant Hill Anti-Slavery [illegible]utions.—At best he is but a half-[illegible]—a mere gouger—ill tongued, and [illegible]onsequential.

"[illegible]assing over," says Br. O., "several [illegible]s which may be more appropriately [illegible]ered by the persons attacked," &c. [illegible] he shows himself the half-hand [illegible]er, going ahead on the land, leaving [illegible] work for the reaper behind.—It [illegible]l have been much to his credit to [illegible]left it all, and to have kept in the [illegible] waiting for the growth of his beard. [illegible]ever, the root of the matter is in [illegible] He is "constrained," he tells us, "[illegible]otice" my production.—Its "sentiments are so objectionable"—"so dishonorable to a professor of religion"—"shallow sophistry to which Br. Scott has had [illegible]emerity to affix his name"—"wicked and cruel, and calculated to bring upon [illegible]land, the fiery indignation of the [illegible] of Hosts"—"rife with the rankest [illegible]sy"—"one heart at least, (Scott's) [illegible]s itself against the appeal," (in favor [illegible]e oppressed)—"strangles its holiest [illegible]ions, and shrinking back, coward [illegible]from its duty, seeks to cover its disgraceful retreat by the senseless cry," [illegible]—"guilty in this attempt to throw off [illegible]onsibility,of the most arrant nonsense [illegible]t something worse"—"farrago which [illegible]as served up to us"—"new divinity [illegible]e pro-slavery school"—"it furnishes [illegible]antle as ample as the devil himself [illegible]d wish, with which to cover from [illegible]stian rebuke, every iniquity that [illegible]t can conceive, or hand execute," as [illegible]bery, adultery, Sabbath breaking, [illegible]der and slavery"—"to escape the re[illegible]e of the church," &c.—"so advises [illegible]J. Scott"—"this non-committal of the [illegible]rch is a device of the arch fiend, [illegible]ereby he hopes (he and Scott together [illegible]ppose) to lead her captive at his will" [illegible]that any of her professed friends so [illegible]ously seconding the efforts of the evil [illegible], is most deplorable"—"the doctrine [illegible]ch I have been reviewing," (with holy [illegible]geance) "as heretical in itself and dangerous in its tendency."—Of course Br. [illegible]s a heretic hunter—perhaps M. P. Insitor of Pittsburgh. According to the [illegible]trine which I have advocated Br. O. [illegible]s the church 'might as well revolt [illegible]m God openly and at once, and give [illegible] its adhesion to the devil." He calls [illegible] doctrine "carnal expediency, the Delilah that has shorn it (the church) of its [illegible]ength, that she may give it into the [illegible]nds of the Philestines." Again he calls [illegible]'substituting for the commandments of [illegible]d, the traditions of men."—Again the [illegible]urch "excusing its non-compliance with [illegible]e commands of God"—"as Br. J. Scott [illegible]s attempted to do, in his pretended re[illegible]ew"—"an attempt to transfer the for[illegible]er (the church) in a lump, to the father [illegible] lies."

The foregoing is a sample of Br. T. [illegible]iver's very beautiful style and manner. [illegible] could not feel satisfied," says he, "that [illegible] (Scott's piece) should pass unreproved."—So here I stand on the top of 'Winding Ridge'—reproved! Handsomely re[illegible]oved!—done too in all the meekness [illegible]nd gentleness of christianity! What [illegible]an upon earth could have done it so [illegible]weetly, or half so well?

But in sober seriousness, I do not de[illegible]erve one jot or tittle of all this vituperation, which Br. O. calls reproof, and a little more age and experience, will, I trust, [illegible]each my reprover, that he is greatly in [illegible]error, in his course, in relation to what I [illegible]ave written. The two quotations he [illegible]makes from me, go directly against the Church having a right to array herself against the State. I need not transcribe [illegible]hese quotations in this place. I know [illegible]hat Br. O. can get plenty of ultra abolition authority for arraying the Church against the State. But can he get any New Testament authority? Slavery is a great moral evil now, and it was so in the days of Christ and His apostles. But Br. O. cannot, if it were to save him from wearing the skin and the yoke of a slave all the days of his life, show one single passage of scripture, in the New Testament, where our Lord or His apostles, for the purpose of the abolition of slavery, did authorize His church to array itself against the Roman empire, or in its ecclesiastical capacity, to attempt to control civil affairs in any way. Obedience is taught christians, in the New Testament, to the Powers that be, and if in any thing civil government is oppressive or wrong, christians are left free, along with other citizens, to take part in remedying the evil. But as a church, acting in an ecclesiastical capacity, we are always to keep in mind that Christ's "kingdom is not of this world,"—as a church we are not to "fight," or go to war with the governments of this world, or attempt to control civil governments by church influence, for this would lead at once to war, in which the church would be wasted and destroyed. Now, if this view of the matter is correct, it will follow of course, that Br. J. Carey's resolution denouncing American slavery, i. e. slavery as sustained by the United States government, and the governments of the several slaveholding States, was wrong; and unauthorized by the New Testament.

But here it may be asked, what is the church to do in relation to slavery—a legalized moral evil? Answer—1. Let her do all she can consistently with her real character, as the genuine spouse of Christ, against it within her own borders, faithfully carrying out into practical effect, the principles and precepts of her Head and Sovereign. Thus will she be a "light to the world"—"a city set on a hill."—2. Well instructed christians will not forget, when they come to act as citizens, at the polls, and elsewhere, the good and liberal lessons taught them in the church, and will act accordingly. Thus, without direct attack upon civil government, or endangering the church's existence, or purity, the principles of liberty may be extended throughout the world.

But this will not do for Br. Oliver—good man! zealous soul! nor yet his friends, the ultraists. "Abolitionists (he tells us) believe that the church, as a church, has a solemn duty to perform in relation to slavery." "By moral suasion or by political power, she cannot be released from her obligation to cast the abomination from her," &c. This quotation shows—1. That Br. O. is for making the church to use not only "moral suasion," but also "political power." 2. This "political power," as well as "moral suasion," the church is to wield, "to cast the abomination from herself." What! bring in "political power" into the church to crush slavery, and then carry ecclesiastical power into the State to overthrow it there. Why, Br. O., this is amalgamation with a witness. 3. Such amalgamation of Church and State as this brother goes for, would prove a more horrible corruption than slavery itself.

I have not noticed all Br. Oliver's remarks, nor was it necessary. Should he write again I will try to instruct him a little more fully in relation to the distinct metes and bounds, of Church and State operations. On this subject most of the abolitionists are much confused. I have no ill feeling towards Br. O., but cannot respect him as an accomplished gentleman. My reason for this, the reader will judge of, when he looks at the vileness of his language and remarks, in the foregoing part of this paper. I should have left him to suffocate, by the strength of his own stench, only for a belief, that the single circumstance, of holding him up as he is, to public notice, would have a tendency to benefit his morals, as a writer, in time to come. Should he amend, due credit shall be given.

Yours, truly,

JOHN SCOTT.

Winding Ridge, O., July 13, 1840.

For the Western Recorder.

THE NEW COMMANDMENT.

A new commandment give I unto you; that ye love one another, as I have loved you, that ye also love one another. John, xiii, 34.

Christ loved His disciples—He relieved their wants—He instructed them—He opposed their enemies, and while He lived they were shielded from persecution in a great measure—He died for them, the just for the unjust, to bring them to God. The disciples were attached to Jesus—they loved Him. But He must be parted from them, and as their safety and happiness depend on a close application of their hearts to His instructions and union with Him; so now their safety and happiness depend upon their perfect obedience to His commandment, which by way of distinction He calls a new commandment; which is, that they should love one another as He had loved them. He prays that the love wherewith the father had loved Him might be in them. He says, greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends. He says, I lay down my life for the sheep. From these sayings and many others, they would infer: 1st. That it devolved upon each as a duty, to watch over one another in love, and supply every want as far as it might be practicable. 2d. That they should feel such an interest for the whole body as would lead them to overlook their personal ease and comfort, so far as to bear reproach and shame, affliction, and death itself, for the good of the whole. Each was to love his brother, and the whole church as Christ loved him.

Christianity is the same throughout all ages. The duties of individual members are invariably the same—love will always be the fulfiling of the law. Then we infer, 1st. That it is the bounden duty of every follower of Jesus Christ to watch over every brother within his knowledge and the whole church in love, for good, and to do every thing within the reach of his power to advance the temporal, spiritual and eternal interests of the followers of the Lord Jesus Christ; and 2d. That it is the duty of every christian to have the interests and prosperity of the church so much at heart, as to overlook his personal comforts and gratifications so far as to be willing to bear reproaches, persecutions, affliction, and death itself, if necessary, for the advantage and security of the church.

1st. Do not the scriptures abound with such passages as these: "Let brotherly love continue." "Let love be without dissimulation." "Look not every man on his own, but every man also on the things of others; let this mind be in you which was also in Christ." But we need not search the scriptures any farther in confirmation of this doctrine, the new commandment is to love one another as Christ loved us. How great was that love which led Him down from the skies into this poor sinful world to preach and labor, and bear the frowns of men, and opposition of the world and satan, and death itself, in order that we through His death might live. He rose for our justification, leading captivity captive and purchased gifts for the rebellious and has became the intercessor for transgressors. All power is in His hands, and He rules Lord of lords and King of kings. Christian, how kind has Christ been to you? how often did He warn you? how frequent did His spirit move upon your hearts? how often by friends, mercies and judgments had He strove to bring you to the enjoyments of religion? How often since you embraced the religion of Jesus Christ has He brought back, in mercy, thy erring heart? how often when dull has He quickened you? how often when discouraged has He raised your head and cheered your heart? how often has He made your cup with blessings to overflow and your heart to dance for joy? In a word, has not the love of Christ been infinite? Is it strange, that when his heart was overflowing with love to Christ, Paul should say, if any man love not our Lord Jesus Christ let him be anathema maranatha. Have you ever told half, or do you ever expect to tell half the love of Christ to your soul? You love Christ because He first loved you. Jesus says, if ye love me, keep my commandments. And this is my commandment, that ye love one another as I have loved you.—Christian, if you love the followers of Jesus you love Him; and the more you love them the more you love Christ. Do not separate Christ and his people in your affections; they are one with him and the father. Never let hardness or coldness exist between yourself and any who are the followers of Jesus. Love Christ and love His people, as He loved them. Take your Master's example; show your love, by being awake to their interest, in every point of view. Do every thing you can for their individual and social comfort; leave nothing undone that might tend to better their condition. If you love your brethren watch over them for good; not to mark their misgivings and to reproach them with the same. Like your Master let kindness and pity move you to help them. Never think you have done or felt too much for Zion's prosperity. Look at Jesus in the days of His humiliation. Pray and labor, and love till you feel His spirit working powerfully in you. Let your heart be emptied of earthly love, and the love of God will fill the mighty void; you will have all the mind of Christ; then your bowels will yearn over His people, and your heart bleed with sympathy for poor sinners.

2d. If you are filled with the spirit of Christ, so that your soul is awake and your heart drawn out in longing desires which language cannot express for the people of God, then you will like Christ be willing to bear the frowns, and persecutions, and tribulations, you may meet in the world; yes you will suffer joyfully the loss of all things, even life itself, for His body the church; the members of which are "of His flesh, and of His blood, and of His bones." How delightful is it to travel in the same path our Master trod. Did He bear fatigue, hunger, shame, reproach, persecution, and death for us; walk in the same steps; though we may not bear all our Master did, yet so far as we do we have the joy of our Lord. O blessed privilege to suffer for Jesus.—Witness the tears and prayers, the labors and privations of the poor itinerant as he goes to warn sinners to flee the wrath to come; one might think he had no joys. See him broiling in mid-summer's sun and famishing with thirst—see him light from his horse—a moment's respite from travel and he rises to preach Jesus, to a few; few or none appear to be drawing out their hearts to God for His blessing to attend the word. Some listen to catch something to reproach him or the cause he espouses with,—the services over, weary, fatigued, and cast down he seeks aid at the throne of grace, he unburdens his heart to God, grace distils like heavenly dew upon his soul. He can say "I joy also in tribulation, knowing that tribulations worketh patience and patience experience, and experience hope, and hope maketh not ashamed because the love of God is shed abroad in my heart by the Holy Ghost, given unto me,"—see him toiling through afflictions, persecutions and at length falling a martyr in the cause of Christ. He loves the church which Christ purchased with His own blood. He loves the churches in his measure as Christ loved it, and he likewise gives himself for the church, the interests and concerns of the church are his interests and concerns. He suffers all things joyfully for the church of Christ, and in heavenly delight he bathes his weary soul forever.

What is said of the interest and suffering of an itinerant minister may be, and should be in a proper degree the privilege and exercise of every believer in the Lord Jesus Christ. O then let us love the brethren as Christ has loved us; let us show this love by our care for the church, in watching over, and laboring for her interests, and by suffering every thing we can, even to death, willingly, and joyfully when necessary for her safety or prosperity. The new command must be kept if we obey Christ. If there is one duty more binding than another it is that enjoined in the new commandment. We are not to love our brethren only as we love ourselves; but to love them as Christ loved us; this is the reason why Christ is our example; He hath set us an example of suffering that we should walk in his footsteps.

THEOPHILUS.

RELIGIOUS INTELLIGENCE.

ELDERSVILLE, PA., JULY 15, 1840.

Mr. Editor: In reading the pages of the Recorder, from time to time, I have observed that we can never SEE or HEAR any thing from our ministerial brethren, unless they have some controverted point to discuss, or some peculiar excitement or revival of religion to record. But if this is not the case then all is silent. But is this as it should be, Mr. Editor? I think not. Does not the Discipline make it the duty of ministers, and especially superintendents of circuits and stations, to report quarterly, if practicable? How many circuits and stations are there in this District, from which we have not heard any thing this year? Have we heard from any quarterly, according to the rule? If any have communicated quarterly, to the President, we have not heard or seen any thing of it? I have no doubt but all our brethren, and friends, would be glad to hear from all the circuits and stations quarterly, if possible. Surely, Mr. Editor, this is not as it ought to be, to give general satisfaction. I do, therefore hope, that our brethren will awake to this subject, particularly, those of them who have been lying silent, and let us hear from them before the year closes; and if they cannot give us, any cheering intelligence, they can give us plain facts.

From a conviction of the propriety of this course, Mr. Editor, I am now led to state a few things with regard to Ohio circuit:—1st. We have 9 regular appointments at which Bro. Ross and myself preach regularly, once in the 4 weeks. At these appointments we have, in general, large and respectable congregations; some of them have increased the one half in number; particularly, at Wesley's meeting house, the congregation has increased more than one-half. Three weeks ago, I held a two days' meeting there, and the house was filled to overflowing. The meeting was very orderly and I think very profitable to that place. The prospect is good for an increase in the church at that place. There are also eight or nine classes on this circuit; but I am sorry to have it to say, that they are greatly deficient in their class and prayer meetings, except on the preaching days. It is true, that Bethel and Eldersville try to keep up their class and prayer meetings, but they do not as they should, or as I would wish to see. There are a few causes, I think, that have led to this declension in those means of grace. 1st. This circuit, in general, lies in a Presbyterian section of country, and our people have yielded too much to them and adopted too many of their modes to their loss. Let the Presbyterians do what they please, and adopt what modes they see proper, the Methodists should "know their calling better," said our father, and so say I. 2d. There are some spirits among us that strive for the mastery, and this I have always found, instead of building up a church, rather aids in pulling it down, and particularly in the M. P. Church, where equal rights are contended for; a 3d cause, is in the arranging of the Sabbath appointments. They have several on the same day, so that there is not time to attend class as it should be. From these causes, with several others, this circuit has been suffering loss for some years past. But I hope, that it will yet improve and stand high for attention to these duties.

But I like this circuit well, in all other respects. They are a very kind and friendly people, and many very pious and devout christians, who live and contend hard for holiness of heart and life. We have also two or three very acceptable local preachers, who are very industrious laborers and acceptable with the people. We have, also, peace in all our borders. We have had no church trial, nor any charges preferred against any on this circuit. They are, also, a very spirited people in supporting their ministers. Although this is a very hard year in monetary affairs, they feel determined to meet all demands, if possible. Thus far, you see, we have peace and prosperity,—some few accessions to the church, and are looking for many more, with the blessing of the Lord on our labors. Br. Ross, my colleague, is very attentive to his duties, and visits much from house to house. He is well received and is useful.

We intend to hold our fourth and closing quarterly meeting at Bethel, on the 23d and 24th of August; we also purpose holding a two or three days' meeting in Hollidy's Cove, commencing on Saturday at 11 o'clock, the 6th of September, and continue till Monday the 8th. Conference commences on Tuesday the 9th. We invite all our members, who can, to attend with us. The meeting will be within three miles of Steubenville, and they can go in on Monday evening or Tuesday morning.

I remain, yours, respectfully,

JOHN HERBERT.

PISGAH CIRCUIT, O., JULY 18, 1840.

Br. Springer: The cause of religion, in the Methodist Protestant Church, is advancing on this circuit. Our third quarterly meeting was held at Ebenezer meeting house, commencing the 23d of May, and continued four days, being well attended.

God's professing people, of the different churches around us, laid their meetings aside and came to ours, with a manifest anxiety that God should be gloried in the salvation of souls.

A union meeting thus formed, our prayers, exhortations, preaching and other labors, were greatly blessed of the Lord. The sacramental board was numerously attended and graced with a high state of religious excitement. Br. D. Y. Ostrom, of the M. P., and Father McKneely, of the M. E. Church, assisted us in the labors of the meeting, for which we are thankful. Eight persons gave in their names as probationers, making one hundred and six since conference.

We have three houses of worship now in progress, all of which we shall occupy before the year closes. The last quarterly meeting is to be held in one of them, at Br. Haymaker's, Olive Green, embracing the third Sabbath in August next.

Yours, &c.

C. WOODRUFF.

SPRINGFIELD, O., JULY 14, 1840.

Br. Springer: We closed a protracted meeting in this place on the 6th inst. It was truly a refreshing time to believers. Our "old side" friends here acknowledge us, and commune with us, as brethren, belonging to the same christian family.—We and they have sat together in heavenly place, and have taken sweet counsel together. And we, as Methodists, think that this is the way be ought to live. We can reason together on church government; yea, we can differ on church government and still love to worship together if we are in possession of one spirit.—Father McGuire and Br. Parcel were with us and labored faithfully to good effect.

Yours, &c.

D. H. STEPHENS.

GOD SO LOVED THE WORLD.—There is more of God's bounty expressed in that one verse, "God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son," than there is in the whole volume of the world. It is an incomprehensible so; a so, that all the angels in heaven cannot analyse, and few comment upon or understand the dimension of this so. In creation mere nothing was vanquished to bring us into being; in redemption sullen enmity was conquered to produce our restoration—in creation He subdued a nullity to make us creatures; in redemption His goodness overcomes His omnipotent justice to restore us to felicity. A word inspired the dust of men's bodies with a living soul; but the Blood of His Son must be shed to lay the foundation of his renewed happiness. In the first, heaven did but speak, and the earth was formed; in the second, heaven itself must sink to the earth to rise man to his original state. It was a more expansive goodness than what was laid out in creation—"the redemption of the soul is precious," much more costly than the whole fabric of the world; for to effect this, God parts with His dearest treasure, even His well beloved Son.—Charnock.

ROGUE ELEPHANTS.—Natives believe a rogue elephant to be a turbulent member expelled by the unanimous consent and assistance of a whole herd; also that he is destructive to crops and dangerous to people, and is alike dreaded by his own kindred and by the inhabitants in the neighborhood of his haunts: he seldom ranges beyond ten or fifteen miles, and is generally to be found in the same forest. Some rogue elephants have killed many people, for having once overcome the dread of man and made a successful essay, homicide seems to become to them a favorite amusement; they have been known repeatedly to remain quiet near some jungle path (contrary to their usual habit, which is always to be in motion,) until a victim came within their reach. I afterwards knew an instance of a rogue elephant in mid-day coming into an open field, killing a woman by trampling her to death, and then leisurely returning to the forest; neither irritation in the animal nor any inducement to the act could be perceived by a number of person who were near the unfortunate victim.—Maj. Forbes' XI years in Ceylon.

The registered voters of Ireland are 60,607; the population nearly 8,000,000.

WESTERN RECORDER.

ZANESVILLE:

WEDNESDAY, ... JULY 29, 1840.

THE TRADE OF GREAT BRITAIN WITH THE WORLD.—We have been able within the last few weeks, to submit several important commercial tables to our readers, and all calculated to throw light upon the trade. manufactures and agricultural products of our own and other countries.—Below will be found another valuable paper of this description. It is from a pamphlet recently published in England. The compiler, who is a Manchester manufacturer, deprecates a war between the United States, and says they are bound together in peaceful fetters, by the strongest of all ligatures which can bind two nations, namely, commercial interest. In proof of this, he states that a population of upwards of a million of the inhabitants of England are supported by the various branches of cotton industry, and are dependent for the raw material on the United States. He states further that a capital of £30,000,000 sterling is invested in this business, which would be annihilated in the event of such a catastrophe as a war between the two countries.—The interests of America, he says, would be also vitally and seriously affected by the same circumstances; while he concedes that Great Britain now sees in America a competitor in every respect calculated to compete with advantage for the sceptre of naval and commercial dominion.

"In order," says the editor of the Baltimore Pilot, "that the reader may form some idea of the importance of the trade of the United States, and the commerce of Great Britain, we append a table, showing the exports to other countries, by which it will be seen that of fifty million pound sterling, exported to all the world, seven million five hundred thousand pounds, or one-seventh part, is exported to the United States."—Bicknell.

TABLE OF EXPORTS FROM GREAT BRITAIN TO ALL THE WORLD.

Russia,	£1,663,243
Sweeden,	102,647
Norway,	77,485
Denmark,	181,404
Prussia,	155,223
Germany,	4,998,900
Holland,	3,549,429
Belgium,	1,068,010
France,	2,314,141
Portugal, Proper,	1,165,395
" Azores,	38,385
" Madeira,	34,947
Spain and Balearic Island,	243,839
Canary Islands,	47,693
Gibraltar,	894,096
Italy and Italian Islands,	3,076,231
Malta,	226,040
Ionian Island,	96,100
Morea and Greek Islands,	20,887
Turkey,	1,767,110
Syrea and Palestine,	188,440
Egypt,	242,505
Tripoli, Tunis, Algiers & Morocco,	74,013
Western coast of Africa,	413,354
Cape of Good Hope,	623,323
Eastern coast of Africa,	10,569
African Ports on the Red Sea,	196
Cape de Verd Islands,	1,392
St. Helena,	13,990
Ascension Island,	1,074
Mauritius,	467,342
Arabia,	167
East India Company's Territories and Ceylon,	3,876,196
Sumatra, Java and Islands in the Indian Seas,	505,362
China,	1,204,356
New South Wales, Van Dieman's Land & Australian Settlements,	1,336,662
South Sea Islands,	1,095
British North America,	1,992,467
British West Indies,	3,393,441
Hayti,	290,139
Cuba & Foreign West Indies,	1,025,392
United States of America,	7,585,760
Mexico,	439,776
Columbia,	174,338
Brazil,	2,606,604
Rio de la Plata,	680,345
Chili,	413,647
Peru,	412,195
Guernsey, Jersey, Man, &c.	343,850
Total, ...	£50,060,970

DISCOVERY OF A NEW CONTINENT.

The following amusing and interesting letters from an officer attached to the United States Exploring Expedition, we find in that able and well conducted journal, the Brooklyn Daily News.

ANTARCTIC CIRCLE, Long. 160, E., 20th January, 1840.

Dear Sir: Here we are at last, surrounded by ice bergs as high as the "main truck." To-day we crossed the antarctic circle, having sailed from Sidney on the 26th of December. We have come thus far without any accident of consequence, or meeting with any barrier of ice. There seems, however, no prospect of getting much farther in this longitude. We are all blocked up a-head, and we are now steering west in hopes of falling in with an opening. I hope, for the honor of the concern, we may get farther south; but God knows it is too cold to go much farther. One thing is much in our favor—it is, as the saying is, "all day" with us. The sun set last night at 40 minutes before 11 o'clock, and rose this morning at 10 minutes before 2. Day-light did not of course disappear. At meridian, (noon) the sun appears about as large as a Spanish dollar, and looks much like it in color, and its influence, with respect to heat, is felt as much, and no more, than if there were a lump of ice in its place. I want very much to get far enough south to see the sun the whole 24 hours round. We are now sailing up a kind of channel, both sides or shores of which are ice bergs, some from two to three hundred feet high. The entrance was truly picturesque. On our quarter are ice-bergs, piled up in all imaginable forms, shapes and sizes, from ten feet to ten miles long. Here comes one, bearing down on us, in the shape of a huge, old, isolated castle, with donjons and pillars half fallen down and tottering; here and there an arch broken, or a breach effected by that rude old warrior, Neptune. Here we have one entire, dressed up in all the grand paraphernalia in which the novelists are wont to dress up these interesting old affairs, for the especial edification of the young ladies. Here we see a house, there a church, and in every shape fancy could paint them.

31st January.

This is a proud day for the Exploring Expedition. At 3 P. M. to our unspeakable satisfaction, we heard the cry of "land ho!" from the "crow's nest." At sunset we were near enough to see the rock on the beach, backed by a line of mountains, as high apparently, as the Andes. While we were getting the boats ready for landing, the wind suddenly flew round to the N. and E. and blew a hurricane, and of course we had to "put out," where we beat about among the ice bergs for two days.

On the 2d February, we made the land again, and were a little more fortunate this time, and allowed to run down the coast for some 30 or 40 miles, getting soundings in 18 fathoms water—when, before we found an opportunity to land, we were obliged to put to sea again. On the 10th we made land again, in long. 100 E. and were more fortunate. On the 21st we left for the north, thus settling the long agitated question of a South Continent. The French Exploring Expedition, it is said, (that has since been sent to France) penetrated no farther than 62 S. The English say they (Capt. Weddel Ret,) have been to 74 S. in West longitude (Bah!) The most sanguine wishes to the friends of the Exploring Expedition, will, I am confident, be gratified.—To you it is unnecessary for me to describe what we have suffered in this part of our voyage—cold, hunger, and thirst, and plenty of them all, you know. This discovery will open to our seal fishers an unlimited field for their exertions and laudable industry. There are enough seals here to keep all hands at work until they are tired of it. McQuarries Island was the last strong hold, and its "habitans" have almost deserted it.

Sidney, March 11, 1840.

To-day we arrived at Sidney again, and found the Peacock hove down, repairing the damage done her by running foul of an iceberg, from the effects of which she was as near lost as a ship could be, and not lost. We shall all be refitted in a few days and sail for New Zealand.—Since we are at this infernal hole again, I will give you a better description of it. If we call our country good, this must be bad, for in all things it is its antipode. When the north wind blows it is hot, and vice versa—it is summer here and winter with you. The barometer rises before bad weather and falls before good—the swans are black and the eagles white—the moles lay eggs and have a duck's bill—the kangaroo has claws on its fore paws and talons on its hind legs, like a bird, and yet hops upon its tail—the birds have brooms in their mouths instead of tongues—the codfish are found in the rivers and the perch in the sea—the valleys are cold and barren, and the mountain tops warm and fertile—the nettle is a tall tree and the poplar is a diminutive shrub—the pears are round and the stem on the broad end—the cherry grows with its stem on the outside—the fields are fenced with mahogany—and the poorest peasant's house is made of yellow cedar—the myrtle tree is burnt for fuel—the birds are without song—the men and women both get drunk together, and both as often as possible, and are all rascals.—Such is Terra Australis; and God forbid it should be my destiny to visit it again. The last time I was on shore in this place, which was before we left in December, I overstayed my liberty, which before was unlimited, and now I am paying up for it by being quarantined on board. This, you know, is not very pleasant, but I shall put myself to no trouble about it, so I calculate to stay on board the remainder of the cruize—at any rate I shall be no poorer in pocket by it, I ween. I am not over cautious, you know, about the manner I distribute my small change when on shore. It is the general opinion that we shall be in the U. S. about August, 1841, or perhaps by June or July.

THE DEAF AND DUMB.—In France, with a population of 32,500,000, there are 22,000 deaf and dumb, or one to every 1173. In other parts of the continent one in every 1376. In Russia one to every 1600. In the United States one in every 1560, and in North and South America one in every 1400. In Great Britain one in every 1475.

While Gen. Harrison was on his way to Fort Meigs, he made a speech at Sandusky City. A beautiful girl of 17 kissed him before all the people. The same assault was committed upon General Jackson, before ten thousand people, and the veteran never shed a tear under it.—N. Y. Sun.

POLITICAL EXAGERATIONS.

The Press and the People.—We saw a very clever article in a contemporary journal some time since, in relation to the sad and disingenous manner in which the political conflicts of this country are conducted. A spirit of gross exageration is kept up from first to last, and it is thus impossible for the people to ascertain the true grounds of the controversy—the true merits of the candidates—and the real principles involved in the struggle. This system, we admit, is not confined to this country, but we believe it prevails to a greater extent here in consequence of the many newspapers by which our Union is characterized. To believe half that is said in the partizan journals of the day, the election of either of the distinguished citizens now before the people for the Presidency, would be attended by the speedy overthrow of our institutions, the conversion of our Republic into a Monarchy, and the erection of a sanguinary despotism on the ruins of our present free Government. Fortunately, however, these are all idle and unfounded predictions, intended to gull the credulous, to rouse the torpid, and excite the inactive. That evils do exist in our system cannot be denied. That crimes are committed within our borders, the newspapers inform us every day. In short, we are anything but pure, anything but perfect, even in a republican and national sense. Still we are of those who believe this Union is likely to last, and that the election of either of the candidates for the Presidency, now before the people, would not in any material degree impair that probability. Hence it is, that we pay very little regard to the vague charges of the party press, and the denunciations from time to time uttered by party leaders. If a stranger from a distant country were to appear among us without knowing anything of our mode of conducting political warfare,—what a set of knaves and rogues would he be apt to consider us—taking all that is said in the public journals of the day for gospel! Thus, on the one hand, we find Mr. Van Buren denounced as a Royalist, and anxious to imitate the conduct of the monarchs of the old world. Gen. Harrison on the other hand, is denounced as a coward. Both statements are equally false, and both discreditable in no ordinary degree to their utterers. And yet these are but two of the many statements constantly circulated by the political journals of the day. Honest people are sadly puzzled to discover the truth under the circumstances. The whole system is wrong, and calculated to do immense evil. We have often thought that a public press conducted on a different plan, and devoted to facts, even in political matters, and without regard to party, might become eminently successful in this country. Such a journal would certainly deserve a liberal share of public support, while its statements being true, would be looked to with confidence, and exercise a corresponding degree of influence. One or two of the penny papers are conducted on this plan; but the difficulty with most of them is, that they live by momentary excitement; and hence are too fond of exageration, not in a political, but in a general sense. They are still, when well conducted, and with an eye to morality, valuable auxiliaries in the cause of popular intelligence, and hence entitled to praise.—The spirit of political exageration to which we have adverted, is one calculated to produce infinite mischief. And it is a fact not a little discreditable to Philadelphia, that of all the large daily presses published in this city, there is not one above and beyond the control and influence of party.—Bicknell.

MILK SICKNESS.—There have been many conjectures respecting the cause of this disease. The latest we have seen, and which to us appears as plausible as any, is that the disease has its origin in a principal of lead ore, called galena, which is known to all chemists as a deadly poison. This mineral is found in many places in the West, in more or less abundance. It communicates its poison to the water, which is drank by the animals. A writer in the Green River (Ky.) Gazette, thus describes its effects: "There being a great quantity of lead ore in this vicinity, I thought it probable that it was the cause of the distressing complaint under consideration. I therefore made many experiments with the water that traversed the beds of ore of this metal. One cow drank a collected portion of this water, she sickened and died in 26 hours. Her calf sucked her while under the effects of the poison, it died, and its flesh being eaten by eleven small hogs, killed them also; a train of symptoms and circumstances identically the same of those attacked accidentally. I gave the same to three cats, it killed them in 18 hours from the time of exhibition. The first case I ever treated in the human subject, was contracted by drinking water out of one of those springs, that had lead ore about its head."—Cross and Journal.

The last Ohio Observer contains a notice of a potracted meeting and revival at Franklin Mills, Portage county. About 300 are numbered as the subjects of the work, among whom is every variety of character and age, from the grey head of more than threescore years and ten, down to the youth of 11 and 12. About 160 have united with the different churches in the vicinity.—Cross and Journal.

An English paper gives an account of a farmer in its neighborhood, who has been sleeping for the last 37 weeks.—And says that about 7 years ago the same person slept forty weeks at one time.

SINGULAR FRIENDSHIP.—We were lately visiting in a house where a very pleasing and singular portrait attracted our observation; it was that of a young lady represented with a patridge perched upon her shoulder, and a dog with his fore feet on her arm. We recognized it as a representation of the lady of the house, but were at a loss to account for the odd associations of her companions. She observed our surprise, and at once gave the history of the bird and the spaniel. They were both, some years back, domesticated in her family. The dog was the old parlor favorite, who went by the name of Tom. The patridge was more recently introduced from France, and answered to the equally familiar name of Bill. It was rather a dangerous experiment to place them together, for Tom was a lively and spirited creature, very apt to torment the cats, and to bark at any object which roused his instinct. But the experment was tried, and Bill, being very tame, did not feel much alarm at this natural enemy.—They were of course shy at first, but this shyness gradually wore off; the bird became less timid, and the dog loss bold. The most perfect friendship was at length established between them. When the hour of dinner arrived, the patridge invariably flew on his mistress' shoulder, calling with that shrill note which is so well known to sportsmen; and the spaniel leaped about with equal ardor. One dish of bread and milk was placed on the floor, out of which the spaniel and the bird fed together; and after their social meal the dog would return to a corner to sleep, while the patridge would nestle near him, and never stir till his favorite awoke. Whenever the dog accompanied his mistress out, the bird displayed the utmost disquietude till his return, and once, when the patridge was shut up by accident during the whole day, the dog searched about the house with a mournful cry, which indicated the strength of his affection. The friendship of Tom and Bill was finally terminated. The beautiful little dog was stolen, and the bird from that time refused all food, and died on the seventh day, a victim to his grief.

FOREIGN NEWS.

ARRIVAL OF THE "BRITISH QUEEN."

TWENTY-SIX DAYS LATER.

INTERESTING NEWS.

The King of Prussia is dead.

So also Paganini.

The Britannia steamer was not to leave till the fourth of July.

The Queen had very rough weather, but behaved herself nobly.

The steamship President was nearly ready, and was to make her trial trip on the 12th of July, and would positively sail from Liverpool on the 1st of August for New York. She is the chefdœuvre of naval architecture, and altogether a magnificent vessel.

The persecution of the Jews in Damascus is exciting much attention in England. The fanatical spirit of persecution there will soon meet with a check. The Jews in the Island of Rhodes have already felt its influence, and it is to be feared that the dreadful flame will extend to all other cities where monastic establishments exist.

Lord William Russell's valet made an attempt to self-destruction whilst confined in Newgate.

The health of the Earl of Dunham is improving.

In the House of Commons, June 22d, Lord Palmerston said that he would lay Mudge and Featherstonhaugh's report before the House in ten days.

The city of Waterford has added 24,000 members to the Temperance Society.

The excavation of the Thames Tunnel is so nearly completed, that they have begun to move the houses on the Wapping side.

Curvoisier, the valet of Lord William Russell, had confessed the murder of his master, been tried and sentenced to be hung on the 6th, RISE IN THE PRICE OF PAPER.—At a meeting of paper-makers, held here on Friday, it was determined to advance the price of all kinds of paper from this date, in consequence of the late addition to the duty on that article.—Glasgow paper.

The height of the Scott monument, as designed by Mr. Kemp, was intended to be 190 feet; but the funds collected will not warrant the committee to proceed with it upon a scale of more than 135 feet.

FROM CHINA.

Canton news to March 13th, was brought by the ship Charles Grant, with a cargo of a million and a half pounds of tea. Elliott is blamed for stooping to the Chinese. Lin has ordered all gambling houses to be stopped.

The Chinese have abandoned their intention of purchasing English merchant vessels for ships of war.

The Danish vessel Konge is released and loading. Lin laughs at the rumor of the approach of the British fleet.

NAPOLEON'S REMAINS.—We find the following in the Temps, under the head of "Pilgrimage to St. Helena." "The Governments of France and England have taken measures that no ships, wherever they may have taken their departures from, shall be allowed to touch at St. Helena from the moment notice of this is received by the Governor of the Island until after the ships sent to fetch the remains of Napoleon have left it."

The accounts from Circassia are still of new triumphs achieved by the brave inhabitants in their contest with the gigantic power of Russia. Every fort garrisoned by Russia has been taken, together with many pieces of cannon and vast quantities of ammunition.

Sir Moses Monteflore, one of the richest of the wealthy London Hebrews, and Monsieur Cremieux, a celebrated counsellor of Paris, on the part of the Hebrews in that city, were to set out for Alexandria, about the last of June, to be present at the investigation into the circumstances attending the death of Father Thomas, out of which grew the persecution of the Jews in Damascus.

PARIS, June 29.—The small pox rages in the family of the King of France.

The intelligence from Spain is still favorable to the cause of the Queen, although the thrice-killed Cabrera was still alive, and moving about with considerable activity. Balmaseda, one of the Carlist leaders, had been forced to take refuge in France, with almost the whole of his forces. Other bodies of Carlists had been defeated. The Queen and her mother were making a progress through the provinces, and were received with considerable enthusiasm.

The Agricultural and Commercial Bank of Ireland has also been forced to take measures for winding up. It shows surplus assets to the amount of £200,381, its liabilities being £231,-831, and its assets £482,221.

Intelligence has been received of the death of Mr. Cockerill, the great contractor and manufacturer of Belgium, France, and indeed of almost the whole continent.

One of the Paris papers announces, on the authority of a letter from Constantinople, that the Turkish government is about to establish a representative legislature—a Turkish House of Commons. There was a rumor in London, coming by way of Lisbon, that the British had seized upon Macao.

LONDON, JUNE 12, 1840.

The sole topic of conversation throughout London is an attempt which was made on Wednesday evening, against the lives of the Queen and Prince Albert. It occurred about 7 o'clock, a few moments after the Royal carriage had left the palace on their usual afternoon's ride. The assassin is named Oxford, and had placed himself on the opposite side of the road, on Constitution Hill, leading to Hyde Park. At the moment the Queen was bowing to the crowd, a pistol shot was fired, which happily passed over the phæton, and in an instant another followed from the same hand, which most fortunately also failed in its object. The Queen, as may be expected, was much alarmed, but showed a courage becoming her position in life and creditable to her judgment. The carriage immediately proceeded to the Duchess of Kent's, and afterwards to Hyde Park, being surrounded by thousands of loyal and affectionate followers.—The miscreant is a young man about eighteen years of age, and was immediately seized and placed in the hands of the police. He is no maniac, as might be expected, but has acted with a coolness of demeanor, throughout, revolting to humanity. On searching his lodgings, a black crape cap was discovered, a sword, with powder and ball suited to his pistols, and a list of some thirty fictitious names belonging to a secret society. It would, therefore, appear like a concerted scheme, and every one must feel thankful to a merciful Providence that a life of so much consequence to her country has been spared from the hands of so daring a ruffian. After an examination yesterday at the Home Office, the prisoner was committed to Newgate on the charge of high treason. It was stated last night by Lord John Russell, in Parliament, that the Queen's health had not in any degree been impaired by the shock she had undergone. This announcement must diffuse general satisfaction, when the Queen's present position is taken into consideration.

From the London Correspondence of the New York "Evening Signal," dated

LONDON, JUNE 30, 1840.

The all absorbing topic of the late attempt against the Queen's life has now subsided. Oxford's trial, which was to have taken place on the 22d, at the Old Bailey, has been put off until the 9th of July. It is said that the Queen is determined that he shall not suffer death for the crime, and that the postponement of the trial is to allow the public excitement to cease before adopting some mild expedient to save his life.—The fellow pretends to be insane, and perhaps he is so, but there is certainly method in his madness, and it looks very much like feigning for the occasion. About ten days ago he wrote his counsel to desire the Marquis of Normanby to send him some books, among which he enumerates "Jack, the Giant Killer," and "Jack and the Bean-Stalk,"—and gravely asks, why one of her Majesty's subjects is kept in custody. This letter is rather too much for a beginning, and must have an unfavorable effect against him.—The ostensible motion for postponement was the want of sufficient time being allowed to the prisoner's friends, and that a letter of Daniel O'Connell's and some articles in the papers, had prejudiced the public minds.

Courvoisier, the valet who has been found guilty of the murder of Lord William Russell, will be executed next Monday. His conviction is perhaps as extraordinary a circumstance as ever occurred in a criminal court. During the first two days of the trial there was nothing farther brought against him than had appeared at the public examinations. By many he was considered an innocent man, and the jury must have acquitted him. A woman, however, came forward, who keeps a French Hotel, and produced a parcel of silver plate left at her house a month before by the prisoner. She had been reading a French newspaper, in which was an advertisement of the robbery, and as the parcel had not been called for at the time stated, she, with some friends, opened it.

This fact proved the valet had been robbing his master, and very much altered the hitherto good opinion formed in his favor. The prisoner confessed privately to his counsel that he was guilty, on hearing this new and unexpected evidence, and has since published full particulars of the case. He makes, however, contradictory statements, evidently with a desire to cast blame on the police. Mr. Phillips, who defended him, is found much fault with for the strong appeals on his account and insinuations against others, which were made after knowing their falsehood; and it would have been more creditable to his respectability had he immediately thrown up his brief; as it stands, his conduct is a dishonor to the profession.

As we are now in the midst of the horrible it may be mentioned that Gould, who was tried for the murder of an old man, some month since within a few days has been found guilty of the robbery which accompanied that deed, and will be transported for life. This wretch is, without doubt, as great a villain as ever existed, who endeavored, by a false confession, for a hundred pounds, to bring in jeopardy the lives of two innocent people. The judge on the bench stated his conviction that he was the murderer although the want of legal evidence had allowed him to escape its penalty.

The meetings of the Abolition Societies have now closed. During the month they have commanded much attention. The closing one was held at Exeter Hall on Wednesday, the Duke of Sussex in the chair. Among the principal speakers on these occasions a number of Americans have come forward. They paint a fearful picture of their country, and fairly eclipse Mr. O'Connell, who, until now, has borne the palm in his maledictions against slavery. One gentleman, at the last meeting, to command respect was introduced as a judge, a legislator and a candidate for the Presidency of the United States. Now, without saying a word for or against the opinion of these philanthropists, it not painful to read and hear such denunciations made by a stranger against his own countrymen. Cowper's sentiment should not be forgotten, "with all thy faults I love thee still." The present convention has been the largest ever collected, and it received about five hundred delegates from all parts of the world.

It is announced that Mr. Dickens is editing a new work, whose contents combine the "grave and gay," and which will shortly be published. It will be embellished by Phiz.

STILL LATER.

ARRIVAL OF THE BRITANNIA.

From the London Sun.

HIGHLY IMPORTANT FROM CHINA.

The overland mail from India has arrived bringing Canton papers of the 27th of March, Singapore papers of the 15th of April, and Bombay papers of the 23d of May inclusive. From Canton the news is more interesting than important. The Chinese were making (for them) vigorous preparations for hostilities with England. They were busily constructing numerous fire-rafts for burning British shipping, and as from time immemorial the ingenuity of the Chinese has been directed to the manufacture of fire works, there is more danger to be apprehended from these infernal machines than from any of Admiral Kwan's floating batteries. The American merchants finding that Canton was to be soon too hot for them, and that Great Britain was not to be deterred from seeking reparation for the insult offered to the Representatve of her Sovereign, and the robbery of her subjects, by their protests, have quitted the provincial city, which put a complete stop to all foreign trade.

The Druid, of 44 guns had been ordered to join the squadron destined to make war on China.

News of the death of the Empress of China had reached Canton. Pekin was said to be in a state of dangerous excitement; the stoppage of the foreign trade having occasioned great distress among the tea-growers and rhubarb cultivators.—A considerable loss of revenue was experienced in the Imperial Exchequer, and the Mandarins who indirectly profitted by the trade, were all discontented—and discontent sometimes finds a tongue even under the despotic sway of the Imperial Ruler of "ten thousand kingdoms." The reigning dynasty, being of the Tartar race, is exceedingly unpopular in China, and it is not impossible that the contest with England may lead to a revolution.

PREPARATION FOR WAR.—Gov. Lin has enlisted about 3,000 recruits, who are being drilled daily near Canton, in the military exercises of the bow, the spear, and the double sword. The latter, is a weapon, we believe, peculiar to China. Each soldier is armed with two short and straight swords, which, by being knocked against each other, produce a clamor which, it is thought, will intimidate the enemy.

THE KHIVAN EXPEDITION.

A letter from Jellahabad, of the 23d of April, states that the Russian army had entered Khiva in triumph. The Khan finding resistance impossible, submitted with a good grace—set at liberty all Russian prisoners in his dominions—entered into an alliance, offensive and defensive, with the Emperor Nicholas—and promised to afford the Russians all the assistance in his power towards the extension of their dominions in the East. The writer further states, that on leaving Khiva, the Russian army would march to Bohara. If this news be confirmed, we may prepare ourselves for an encounter with Russia, on the banks of the Indus. It is more than probable that from the battle-fields of Central Asia the voice of England will be first heard evoking the restoration of Polish nationality and independence.

ENGLAND.

A motion of O'Connell's which tended to impede the progress of the Irish Registration Bill in the House of Commons had been defeated by a considerable majority.

In the House of Lords, July 2, Lord Hardwick gave notice that on Tuesday of the succeeding week, upon a motion for a committee upon the Canada Government Bill, he should move that it be committed that day six months.

The Timber Ships Bill was read a second time, and the Church Discipline Bill having passed through committee, with some amendments, Lord Brougham presented a petition signed by 19,000 of the inhabitants of Edinburgh, praying for the separation of Church and State, as the only means of insuring the independence of the former.

FRANCE.

A report prevailed on the Paris Bourse on Wednesday that Mehemet Ali had consented to return the Turkish fleet immediately on learning that Krosew Pach had been dismissed.

A postscript of a Paris letter of Wednesday states that the French Government hourly expected intelligence of the arrival of Cabrera in France.

THE RECORDER.

ZANESVILLE.

DNESDAY, ... JULY 29, 1840.

owell, Mass., was commenced in 1819, and now a population of 20,981.

he publishers of the New York Evening Sig- will please accept of our thanks for the two bers of that paper they have had the good- to forward us, containing the foreign news.

HE WESTERN STAR.—This paper is published Lebanon, Ohio. It entered, on the 17th ant, into the thirty-fourth year of its exist- . It must be among the oldest papers of the e.

he Ashtabula Sentinel of the 18th instant, that while seven men, in that township, eating their luncheon in a haying field r a sycamore, a limb from the tree fell on Cook, an old gentleman, and so bruised him after a few hours of exquisite pain he ex- .

BBATH SCHOOL MONITOR.—We have received irst number of a small weekly sheet, bearing bove title, which N. Southard proposes to sh once a week in New York, at fifty cents nnum, in advance. Mr. S. has considerable and talent for interesting children; if he meet with sufficient encouragement to pro- with his publication, he will no doubt ben- e young.

E OLIVE BRANCH comes to us this week en- d and in a new dress. This paper is pub- il in Boston, Mass., by a minister of the odist Protestant Church. Part of its col- are dedicated to the interests of the church ich the editor is a member, and the bal- to literature and general intelligence. It ars to have a very extensive circulation; its ts, probably, average nearly one hundred fty dollars per week. Its principal support, ould judge, is beyond the pale of the M. P. h.

r kind correspondents will have to bear with the present. We have as much manuscript on hand as we shall want to use for some papers. They shall all be attended to, in if they be patient. We except, however, orthy friend, Ec—— In——, in reply to J. t. He has, to use an old 'Coon hunter's g, "barked up the wrong stump" in this We shall have to file his communication with the reply to the "President's Ad- " until we see him. He will understand eaning, but no one else will, unless he them.

e publishing committee of the S. W. C. cate, at Nashville, Tennessee, in their ss to the patrons of that paper, urging the ns for its continuance, hold the following age:

Here, in this city, the Roman Catholics are ng to build up their church. We are credi- informed that the Bishop is now in Europe nds to erect in Nashville a splendid Cathe- nd Nunnery; when these are accomplished, will extend their efforts to all the surround- owns and villages, and seek to gain an in- ce in this country, heretofore unfelt. The of the old 'mother of harlots' must be ed."

ell, brethren, be it so; but can you blame en for exposing the "errors" of her daugh-

e Rev. C. A. Davis, of New York, who lected by the last General Conference of the odist Episcopal Church, editor of the South ern Christian Advocate, has declined ser- in that capacity. The last we heard from e was sacrificing heretics in his city, on the r of spiritual despotism." Mr. Stringfield, rmer editor, continues for the time being, the Tennessee Conference makes arrang- s to fill the vacancy.

cording to the report of the publishing com- e of the Advocate, the paper has been shed less than four years and is eleven thou- dollars in debt. The General Conference, ltimore, made an appropriation for their , of seven thousand dollars; but still they ur thousand dollars minus, and their paper r "protest in the banks." This state of s was brought about with a subscription f five thousand. It is stated that eighteen sand dollars is yet due from subscribers.

EYOND WHERE THE BEARS LIVE.—We this phrase near a year since, and s several times been quoted by per- acquainted with the circumstances localities alluded to; but, as it seems out meaning to some of our readers call for an explanation. The ex- ation is this: In the latter part of ember or the first of December, 1838, le visiting the Monongahela country, alled on our worthy friend, J. Lorentz, Weston, Lewis county, Virginia. His able lady, from the impulses of her ginia hospitality, takes great pleasure ccommodating her guests. She had ured for our repast an excellent ven- steak. This to an old hunter, was a t treat indeed. While we were par- ng of the delicious fare, we inquired here were any possibility of getting e bear meat in that quarter. A gen- an at the table replied, that there none in that vicinity, but when we t to Braxton,—being on our way to nd a protracted meeting in that county, ch lies on the heads of the two Kan- as,—we would be likely to get some. few days we found ourself surround- by a number of kind friends, in the t Woods of Braxton. After we became some little acquainted with them, we in- quired for our "bear meat," but were told that that race of animals had be- came extinct in that neighborhood for some years past; when you return to Lewis, added they, you can be accommo- dated, as there is plenty there yet.

By making an inference from the above, which our friends of the Flat Woods, per- haps, never intended, we used it at our re- turn to Weston, as a bore upon the good folks of Lewis, as though it indicated, they were in a less civilized state. But the cream of the jest was, the morning we left Weston, there was a gentleman passed, on the Clarksburgh road, about one hour ahead of us, conveying home a bear he had killed the preceding day, some four miles south of Weston. This event gave additional zest to the humor and afforded us considerable amusement with our friends of Lewis, while we had the pleasure to remain with them.

From this narration, it will be seen, that Lewis county is "where the bears live," and Braxton is "beyond where the bears live." So, when we said at the commencement of this volume, that a friend had sent us ten subscribers, "from clear beyond where the bears live," we meant from Braxton county, Virginia.

THE MARKETS.

PHILADELPHIA, JULY 21.—FLOUR—The receipts of Flour continue light, but sufficient for the demand, which is pretty much confined to the home market, with moderate shipments to the West Indies and British Colonies. Sales of 700 bbls. fresh ground Pennsylvania Flour at $5, and stock reduced to a few hundred barrels.—Ohio, in sound condition, 4,62½; sales from that to 4,50 in the early part of the week. Brandywine, fresh ground, 5,25.

PROVISIONS—The demand for Pork and Beef is quite limited, without change in price. Bacon continues in fair request, and sales in casks have been made at 7, 8½ and 9½ a 10 cents per lb.; receipts are slacking off, and but little more expected from the west. Lard scarce and held at 11 a 12 cents per lb.—Bicknell.

BALTIMORE, JULY 18.—FLOUR—All descriptions of Flour have advanced, as we anticited, about 25 cents per bbl. since the time of making up our last report, the price for Howard street, common brands, having been uniform at $5,00, until Thursday, when a lot of 300 bbls. fresh ground sold at 5,12½. The car and wagon price regular at 4,75. The market continues bare of City Mills; but millers talk of 5,25 a 5,50, for fresh ground; and sales of Susquehanna have been made at 5,00, now held at 5,12½, per bbl. The stocks of all descriptions are very light and receipts vary only to a trifling extent from those of last week. It is worthy of remark, that Howard street Flour is at this time selling, or held, at 5,00a5,12½ per bbl. in the four principal cities of the Atlantic States, viz: Boston, New York, Philadelphia and Baltimore—when not a brand of any other Flour, either above or below these rates, approach any thing like the same uniformity. We consider 5,00 the market price here for Howard street.

PROVISIONS—There have been no transactions in barrelled descriptions since our last report.—In Bacon, sales to some extent, although in small lots, without a change in rates, have been made; but prices are much firmer. We continue to quote Mess Beef 15,00; No. 1, 13,00; Mess Pork 16,50; Prime do. 14,00; Bacon, prime Western, assorted, 8½a8¾ cents; Hams, 10a10½; Sides 8¼; and Shoulders, 7¾. We note the sale of 100 kegs prime No. 1 Lard, at 11 cents cash.—Lyford.

PITTSBURGH, JULY 17.—Business is, as usual during harvest, extremely dull, but we find in our walks that our merchants, manufacturers and mechanics cheerful and in good spirits, hoping for an early revival of trade in the fall.

Flour is quick at 2 75 to 2 87½ out of boats and wagons, and 3 to 3 25 from stores.

Wheat 50 cents, Rye 30, Corn 25, Oats 18¾.

BACON.—Sales of ten hhds. choice Hams, 9 cents; 8 hhds. fair do. 8½, and 9 hhds of Sides 5¼ per lb., cash currency; Hog round, dull 6¾ a 7.

SUGAR.—Good New Orleans in hhds. 6 a 6¼, and bbls. 6½ and 7 cents.—Harris.

CLEVELAND.—WHEAT—The quantity offered for sale does not meet the demand, which was steady at 73 cents last week for good qualities northern; to-day one cent advance was obtained for two boat loads. The receipts from the 1st to the 5th inclusive, exceeded 36,000 bushels.

FLOUR—There is less inquiry, and sales are dull at 2 62½ for good brands; receipts from 1st to 5th, 7,500 barrels.

ITEMS.

The steamboat William Paris was recently sunk near Wheeling.

The editor of the Missouri Republican says, there can now be no doubt of the truth of the report, that one of the Directors of the Bank of Missouri has over-drawn about $6,000, and that $23,000 in gold has been abstracted from a keg containing $100,000.

The Cambridge (Md.) Chronicle of the 11th says: "We regret to learn that in consequence of the recent heavy rains, and the long continuation of damp weather, some of our farmers are likely to incur serious loss in their wheat and oat crops."

The crops of Gloucester, N. J., are described as full of promise.

The young Irishman, Paul Grace, who died suddenly in New York, a day or two ago, was, it was believed, poisoned by the girl to whom he was about to be married.

The shark caught in the North River, a day or two since, on being opened was found to contain the leg and arm of a man.

The city of Brooklyn, it is estimated, contains a population of 35,000.

The Charleston papers announce the death of the Hon. James R. Pringle, Collector of the Port of Charleston.

Deaths in New York last week 196.

A GOOD IDEA.—Among the many appropriate banners, says the Reading (Pa.) Gazette, borne by the children attached to the Presbyterian Sabbath School of this borough, was one which struck us as being very happily conceived.

It represented several sheaves of Rye and Barley, and a stalk of Corn, and underneath the following excellent inscription:

"Better to eat it than drink it."

A MISTAKE.—We see it stated in the different papers that the vote of New York, on the final passage of the Sub-Treasury, was twenty in favor, and nineteen opposed to the bill. This is an error. The vote stood, ayes nineteen, noes nineteen—two members absent—viz: Mr. Anson Brown, deceased, and Francis Granger, both of whom were opposed to it.

THE SUB-TREASURY.—The Collector gives notice that on and after Monday next, he will demand a quarter of all payments for duties, IN SPECIE. After the 30th of June, 1841, one half of the revenue must be paid in specie; after the 30th of June, 1842, three-fourths, and after the 30th of June, 1843, THE WHOLE.

THE CANADAS.—His Excellency the Governor General, embarked at Quebec on Friday, the 3d instant, on board Mr. Cunard's steam ship the Unicorn, for Halifax. His visit to Nova Scotia is presumed to have some connexion with the existing serious difficulties in that Province, between the Legislature and the Lt. Governor. It is rumored that before returning to Quebec he will also visit New Brunswick.

Sir Richard Jackson, commander of the forces, administers the government in the absence of Mr. Thompson.

The Governor General has authorized the issue of twenty thousand dollars for the relief of indigent and sick imigrants.

LACONIC.—We cut the following from an old paper:—New World.

Treasury Department,
Washington, January 15, 1822.

Sir: This Department is desirous of knowing how far the Tombigbee river runs up. You will please communicate the information.

Respectfully, W. H. CRAWFORD.

S. Dinsmore, Esq., Collector, Mobile.

—

MOBILE, FEB. 7, 1822.

Sir: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 15th, and of informing you that the Tombigbee does not run up at all. Very respectfully, S. DINSMORE.

Hon. W. H. Crawford, Sec'y. Treasury.

—

Treasury Department,
Washington, March 1, 1822.

Sir: I have the honor to inform you that this Department has no farther service for you as Collector of Mobile. Respectfully,

W. H. CRAWFORD.

S. Dinsmore, Esq., Mobile.

The waters of the Mississippi have fallen ten feet at Natchez, and two at New Orleans. The deposite of earth left on the banks of the river is greater than ever before known, and serious apprehensions are felt that the decomposition by the rays of the sun will produce malaria, and consequent sickness.

The New Orleans Courier gives the names of four persons who were killed by exposure to the sun on the 1st instant, and states that there were three others killed. Beside these there were six who were severely affected, but recovered.

The bridge over the Tennessee river at Florence, Alabama, has been completed, and is now ready for use. This is the first bridge that has been thrown across that river.

Lord Brougham and some of Her Majesty's ministers were burned in effigy at Three Rivers, Lower Canada, a few days since.

Inspection of flour in Baltimore last week amounted to 6,223 barrels. The stock on hand of all descriptions, is about 12,000 barrels. The inspection for 1840, thus far, amounts to 440,384 barrels, and 14,043 half bbls.

On Tuesday last a case for the recovery of a penalty of five dollars for a violation of the post office law, in writing on the margin of a paper, was tried in the United States District Court at Boston. The hand writing could not be proved, a verdict of not guilty was rendered.

TREASURE DISCOVERED.—An Irish laborer at New Haven, on Monday, in digging a foundation, came across a vault which contained a stone jar filled with doubloons and other pieces of gold—all bearing date prior to the year 1768. The dwelling under which it was found, was occupied during the revolution, by a supposed wealthy English gentleman, named Whiting, who died suddenly, and when his affairs were examined into, it was found that he had no funds to pay even his small debts.

SEAMEN.—It is estimated that no less than 2,000,000 of the human family are engaged upon the ocean in conducting the maritime operations between different nations; and of this number no less than 180,000 are seamen connected with American vessels.

Twenty-six years ago, only one small building was to be seen in Buffalo, New York, which now contains more than 20,000 inhabitants.

The largest steamer in the world is now building and almost ready for launching at New York. She is to run between New York, Albany and Troy, and is to be called the "Troy." She is two hundred and ninety-four feet in length and fifty-one feet in width, including guards.

DIVIDENDS.—The Dutchess County Bank has declared a dividend of 3½ per cent., for the last six months. The New York stockholders receive their dividends at the office of the New York Banking Company, No. 14, Wall street.

The Ohio Life Insurance and Trust Company, 3½ per cent., payable on the 23d of July.

The Farmers' Bank of Virginia has declared a dividend of five per cent., on the old stock, and 3¾ on the new.

Nearly 1000 dogs have been caught and killed within the limits of the city since the commencement of the season. The catchers are still engaged in the business, from 11 P. M. to 3 A. M. each night.—Philadelphia paper.

WESTERN TRADE.—The transportation lines between this city and Pittsburgh, via the Baltimore and Susquehanna Rail Road, appear to be bringing large quantities of Western produce to this market. The locomotive, with Pittsburgh train exclusively, arrived from York yesterday with thirty-eight single cars, all loaded with produce from Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, &c., per three forwarding lines.—Balt. Patriot.

FIRES IN NEW YORK.—According to the report of the Fire Commissioners, there occurred in the city of New York, during the period of one year, 192 fires, being an average of more than one for every forty-eight hours!

Of these, 96 originated in brick and fire proof buildings.

The property destroyed by the said fires, amounted in all to	$3,225,409
On which there was an insurance for	2,983,310
The collective amounts paid by the Insurance Companies, was	2,001,991
Leaving a balance of actual loss to the persons insured, of	981,319
The value of property destroyed, on which there was no insurance, amounts to	242,009

From the Methodist Protestant.

Evansville, Ark., May 12, 1840.

PROTESTANT METHODISM IN ARKANSAS.

Mr. Editor: Since I penned the article headed the "two branches of Methodism," which you had the kindness to publish in your excellent Journal, I have left the pales of my mother church, and am now, unworthily a minister of the M. P. Church. In taking this step, I think I can truly say, that I have had nothing else in view, than the good of precious souls, and the advancement of my Master's Kingdom.

Toward the M. E. Church I entertain no unkind feelings, neither do I wish to wound the feelings of any of her tens of thousands of votaries, nor poison any mind against her government or policy. No: if they choose, let them live undisturbed under the government of Episcopacy: under its shield let them rally around the cross of Christ: let them feast upon its pure, soul-saving doctrines: let them come humbly to its consecrated altars, and there kneeling around the eucharistic board, let them receive from its ministry, the emblems of the blessed Saviour's broken body and shed blood.

I was born in the Methodist Episcopal Church. My father was then, has been ever since, and is still, a minister of that church, and my mother, after a voyage of five and twenty summers, in the "good old ship," cast anchor some two years since, in the haven of ceaseless bliss.—The Methodist Episcopal preachers were literally my nurses and instructors, when I was a child; and when I permit memory to hold upon her magic mirror the scenes of youth's flowery spring, the recollections of the family fireside, the family Bible, and the circuit preachers, awakens in my bosom all the tender emotions, and sweet, social and enlivening reflections, of which it is capable.

Eight years have just elasped since I arrived at this place, a boy of eighteen short summers, with a transfer from the Tennessee Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church. I had known but little of the "Reformers," as they were then called; more than I had been taught by the senior preachers to look upon them as a band of expelled members, all stained with dark crimes, bloated with corruption, and fit subjects for all the vituperation and contempt which I might ever have it in my power to bestow on them.

Here I found Rev. Jacob Sexton, Rev. John Cureton, Rev. W. Gray and B. T. Nowlin, and some few others, who had organized a class near Cane Hill, and who bore the then, to me, obnoxious name of "Methodist Reformers." I had much zeal in finding defects in their mode of government, though I had never seen one of their disciplines, and was entirely ignorant of their policy, I was not slow to prophecy that the "Reformers" would die a natural death, and all very soon sleep in the oblivious grave of O'Kelly. They, however, bore with me, nor ever returned evil for evil; but when we met, they evinced a desire to "overcome evil with good." I, sometime after, obtained a discipline, and read it again and again, and compared it with that of the old church. My prejudices gradually subsided, and I have long since learned to defer my judgment in all cases, until I have at least tolerable information, concerning their true character.

The stride of eight years has passed over, and these "Reformers," instead of having died a natural death, have out lived (I thank God,) not my body, but all my prejudices! Their "little flock" has increased to a goodly number, among whom are to be found, some of the principal citizens of our county. And their influence has extended to some of the neighboring counties in Missouri, and several classes, yea, if I mistake not circuits have been formed in that country. All that is now required to aid the rising prospects of the Methodist Protestant Church, in this country (save the aid of the Great Head of the Church) is an efficient ministry, who could go into the work with active hands and loving hearts, and who, in addition to the preaching of our doctrines, and the living up to our doctrines, also disseminate our books and periodicals.

We are here on the western verge of civilized life, where not half a score of years since, the wild wolf and the panther mingled their hoarse intonations, with the melancholy song of the bird of night and where the untutored savage slew the panting red deer on the banks of the beautiful Arkansas. The scene has now changed. The Indian has taken his bow and quiver and gone still farther west. The hunting grounds are chequered off into smiling fields. His smokey wigwam has given place to the lovely farm house and pictured parlor, and his savage scream has been succeeded by the morning hymn, and the sweet and balmy gospel trump.

Brethren of the east, come and help us. Young men, you who are just entering upon that work which once filled a Saviour's heart, come and help us. O here is a capacious field, now white to the harvest.

But my sheet is nearly full, and having all ready taxed too heavily upon your columns, I must close. Some, who have known me in other days, will be surprised, perhaps, when they read in this communication, that I belong to the Methodist Protestant Church. Some have already accused me of changing, and they say, that changing is wrong. Well, it may be so, but I think not, and think as they may, I have changed, and I hope to make another change, and if you desire to know what that change will be, I can tell you; I desire to change my bible for a crown—my shattered voice for a harp of lucid gold, and this toilsome world for a city in the skies. ALLEN M. SCOTT.

THE BOY AND HIS BIBLE.—The circumstance related below occurred in the town of Warrington [Eng.] and was narrated there at a Bible meeting, by a gentleman of respectability and veracity connected with the society.

The circumstance was introduced in the following words:—About three weeks ago, two little boys, decently clothed, the oldest appearing about thirteen and the younger eleven, called at the lodging house for vagrants, in this town, for a night's lodging: the keeper of the house, very preperly, took them to the vagrant's office to be examined: and, if proper objects, to be relieved. The account they gave of themselves was extremely affecting, and no doubt was entertained of its truth. It appears that but a few weeks had elapsed since these poor little wanderers had resided with their parents in London. The typhus fever, however, in one day, carried off both father and mother, leaving the orphans without home and without friends. Immediately after the last tribute had been paid to their parent's memory, having an uncle in Liverpool, poor and destitute as they were, they resolved to go and throw themselves upon his protection. Tired, therefore, and faint, they arrived in this town on their way. Two bundles contained their little all. In the younger boy's pocket was found, neatly covered, and carefully preserved, a Bible. The keeper of the lodging-house, addressing the little boy, said, 'You have neither money nor meat, will you sell me this Bible? I will give you five shillings for it.' 'No,' exclaimed he, (the tears rolling down his cheeks,) I'll starve first.' He then said there are plenty of books to be bought besides this; why do you love this Bible so much?' He replied, 'No book has stood my friend so much as my Bible.' 'Why, what has your Bible done for you?' said he. He answered, 'When I was a little boy, about seven years of age, I became a Sunday School scholar in London; through the kind attention of my teacher, I soon learned to read my Bible; young as I was, this Bible showed me that I was a sinner, and a great one too; it also pointed me to the Saviour, and I thank God that I have found mercy at the hands of Christ; and I am not ashamed to confess him before the world.

To try him still further, six shillings were then offered him for the Bible.—'No,' said he, 'for it has been my support all the way from London. Hungry and weary, often have I sat down by the way side to read my Bible, and have found refreshment from it.' Thus did he experience the consolation of the Psalmist, when he said, 'Thy comforts had refreshed his soul.' He was then asked, 'What will you do when you get to Liverpool, should your uncle refuse to take you in?' The reply may excite a blush in many Christians. 'My Bible tells me,' said he, 'when my father and mother forsake me, then the Lord will take me up.' The man could go no further, for tears choaked his utterance, and they both wept together. They had in their pockets, tickets, as rewards for their good conduct from the school to which they belonged, and thankfulness and humility were visible in all their deportment.

At night these two orphans, bending their knees by the side of their bed, committed themselves to the care of their Heavenly Father—to Him whose ears are open to the prayers of the poor and destitute; and to Him who has said, 'Call upon me in the day of trouble: I will deliver thee and thou shalt glorify me.'—The next morning these refreshed little wanderers rose early, dressed themselves for their journey, and set out for the town of Liverpool; and may He who hears the ravens when they cry, hear and answer their petition, guide them through time, and bless them in eternity.

MATRIMONY.—It has been remarked that, in general, persons choose to unite themselves in matrimony to a partner the most opposite in every point, moral and physical. Generally speaking, indeed, it seems as if every body, upon intimate acquaintance, became heartily sick of his own self, and married a person as unlike the disagreable original as possible.

A CLERGYMAN'S LIFE.—How full of beauty, how desirable and how picturesque is the lot of a clergyman, especially in the country? Religion and poetry dwell with him, like twin sisters; and his thoughts, when they turn aside from heaven, rest on all that is most beautiful on earth.

HYMENEAL.

MARRIED, on the 26th instant, by the editor of this paper, at Mr. U. Headley's "five mile house," on the Pike, Mr. John B. Lawyer, to Miss Mary Ann McLaughlin, both of Gratiot, Ohio.

Business Department.

RECEIVED PAY FOR RECORDER.

From W. Maynard for B. Connel two, and W. Rogers, 1. Moore & J. Trip, one each,	$5 00
" A. H. Creel for D. Ridenour,	1 00
" R. Richardson, through G. Lowther, for J. Shull, 2 50,—50 cents in R's hands,	2 50
" A. C. Barnes, for B. King and F. Preston,	4 00
" T. Foster for John Parks,	3 00
" J. B. Lucas, in advance for 2d vol.	2 00

LETTERS RECEIVED.

W. Maynard, 3 subscribers and cash in advance for six months; D. Crall, 1 sub.; A. H. Creel, "Theophilus," M. Jared, G. Lowther, D. H. Stephens, J. Burlingame, Geo. Hughes, 2 subs.; L. Garrett, J.M.Fulton, G.L.Davis, J. Herbert, D. Sarchet, "Watchman," J. O. Harris, A. C. Barnes, W. Reeves, J. W. Lorentz, B. Dotrow, M. Collier, G. T. Lemmon, T. Foster, D. Evans, J. M. Hutton, "Consistency," A. McGuire, 1 sub.; J.B.Lucas, John Clarke, 1 sub.; 'Timothy,' John Scott, J. Smith and D. Y. Ostrom, 1 sub.

By Divine permission, a camp meeting will be held by Allegheny and Pittsburgh stations, and Pittsburgh circuit, jointly, on the land of James Clarke, one mile north of Sharpsburgh, commencing on Monday afternoon, August 17th. The assistance of ministering brethren is respectfully solicited. JOHN CLARKE.

A quarterly meeting will be held, commencing on the first Tuesday of September next, at Foster's meeting house, 2½ miles from Urick's mills, near the road to Leesburg. As this will suit the preachers on their way to conference, I wish as many as can make it convenient, would attend. R. RICHARDSON.

A quarterly meeting will be held in Jackson town and county, on the 29th of August proximo. We invite all, who can, to attend.

D. Y. OSTROM.

THE FAMILY NEWSPAPER.

THE LARGEST CIRCULATION IN THE WORLD!!

34,000 Subscribers.

THE PHILADELPHIA

SATURDAY COURIER.

THE Courier is on as firm and independent a basis as any paper issued, at home or abroad, and its ample means will be always employed to make it equal, as a FAMILY PAPER, to any journal published.

The unparalleled patronage, from every section of the country, is the best evidence of its approval. It has the largest subscription IN THE WORLD! Its list embraces over 34,000 subscribers, extending from the Lakes to the Ocean, and combining all interests and classes of the republic. It is the largest and cheapest journal ever issued!! Each number of the Courier contains as much matter as would fill a 12mo volume, the cost of which alone would be the price of the paper for a whole year. The general character of the Courier is well known. Its columns contain a great variety of

Tales, Narratives, Biographies, Essays, &c.

Together with articles on

Science, Fine Arts,	Humorous Poetical Articles,
Mechanics,	Health, Commerce,
Agriculture,	Domestic Intelligence,
Manufactures,	Education,
Foreign News,	Self-Educated Men,
Amusements, Facetia,	Literature,
New Publications,	The Drama,
Morality, Medicine,	City Matters,
The Silk Culture,	Amusing Miscellany,
Temperance,	The Markets,
Family Circle,	List of Insolvent Banks
The Musical World,	Discount and Exchange,
Correct Prices Current,	History,
Letters from Europe,	Philosophy.
The Classics,

And all other matters discussed in a Universal Family Journal—furnishing altogether as vast, and, as we believe, as interesting a variety as can be found in any other journal issued in the world!

EMBRACING SUBJECTS FOR

Farmers,	Mechanics,
Tradesmen,	Artisans,
Merchants,	Men of Leisure,
Teachers,	Students,

And every Class of our Country.

The COURIER may always be DEPENDED UPON, as nothing important is permitted to escape a notice in its columns.

Our arrangements enable us to draw from the whole range of the current Literature of Europe, and our Correspondents at home embrace many of the best Writers of the country.

This approved Family Paper is strictly Neutral in Politics and Religion, and the uncompromising opponent of all Quackery.

POPULAR MUSIC.—In the Courier is inserted the music of the most popular Airs, Songs and Ballads, as soon as they are imported: so that country readers may have the most popular music for voice, the piano, the guitar, or other instruments, as soon as published, which if paid for separately would cost more than the price of subscription. This perfected arrangement is to be found in no other journal of the kind.

☞The price of the COURIER is only $2.

☞When individuals wish to subscribe to the Courier, a sure way is to enclose the money in a letter, and direct it to us. The Postmasters will probably politely remit, for we wish them in all cases, if it meet their pleasure, to act as our agents.

☞OUR TERMS.—Clubs of ten will be furnished with ten papers for one year, (provided the money be sent us free of postage and discount,) for $15.

☞Ten Dollars will procure the sixth copy gratis.

☞$5 at one time will be received for three years.

☞Our friends, the Postmasters, will please oblige by remitting arrearages and new subscriptions.

☞Any of our country brethren who insert our advertissement, will receive the Courier regularly. 49.

(By Request.)

SANCTIFICATION AMONG PRESBYTERIANS.

The "Guide to Christian Perfection," No. 8, contains "Views of Sanctification," by Rev. Charles Fitch, pastor of the Free Presbyterian church, Newark, N. J.

Mr. Fitch having made a public confession of God's work in his soul, says in the preface of his "views," "Out of the abundance of my heart my mouth has spoken, and I have given those who attend on my ministry to understand, that it is my belief, that God has created within me a clean heart, and renewed a right spirit within me, that He has made me to know something of the blessedness of the pure in heart."

The presbytery at one of its meetings desired to know what this new doctrine was, and Mr. Fitch gave a brief view of his sentiments, and replied to inquiries. The presbytery then appointed a committee farther to confer with him, and one of the committee addressed a note to him, containing the following interrogatories:

"1. Do you believe that the Bible teaches, men are perfect in holiness in this life?

2. What cases or characters who are without sin in Bible history, except Christ?

3. Of all among the martyrs, whose memories have come down to us, how many do you find perfect?

4. In modern times, have not the best of men evidently been sinful more or less, and have they not thought themselves to be so?

5. In the circle of your acquaintance, have those who claimed perfection, generally turned out as well as those who feared always?

6. Are those around you who claim this, more meek and heavenly than others?

7. Do not perfection people very frequently run into some palpable inconsistencies?

8. Do you avow the belief, that you are generally without sin, in thought, desire, word, deed or defect?

9. And have you made up your mind, publicly to teach, and defend the position, that there are men among us who live without sin?"

Instead of categorical replies to these questions, which were solicited by the committee, Mr. Fitch extends his answer to twenty octavo pages, declaring to the committee, that he considers the subject too important to be disposed of in a way so summary as they suggest.

The reply of Mr. Fitch presents the doctrine of sanctification in a very interesting light, and is rendered the more impressive by constant allusion to himself in a manner so meek and subdued—so free from all that savors of spiritual pride, or of carnal ambition—so full of Jesus and His love and fullness, that it seems to us to bear a certain irresistible conviction to the mind, that he is a sanctified heart, subdued in all its tempers, or in the language of song, a heart

"Where Jesus reigns alone."

After noticing, in proper language, his fallen, condemned, and helpless condition without Christ, and the atonement which opens to him a door of escape, he says:—

"Christ has died for my sins. The government of God is ready to set me free—but who shall save me from 'an evil heart of unbelief in departing from the living God?' With such a heart, influenced by the temptations, of the devil, and the allurements of a sinful world, I am just as sure (left to myself) to sin eternally, as Satan is, and must take up my abode with him forever.

What I need, then, what the exigencies of my fallen nature cry out after, with an exceedingly loud and bitter cry, is a Saviour from sin. It avails me nothing that Christ has atoned for my sins, if I am then cast on my own resources. Holy beings fell before the wiles of that subtle tempter, who, like a roaring lion, seeks to devour me, and my evil heart will surely make me a willing prey. I am eternally damned unless I can find a Saviour from sin.

I am indeed told that I may be saved from sin at death; but that is the hope of the Universalist. I may be told that the Universalist has never been born again, and that he who has been born again will surely be saved from sin when he leaves the world; but I know of nothing, on which I can safely rest the belief, that death is to be regarded as the means or the time of sanctification. I believe that, 'as the tree falleth, so it lieth;' that 'there is neither work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom, in the grave whither we go;' and that if a man leaves the world in his sins, he remains a sinner for ever. I believe that this is my only probation, that I must here be saved from sin, or never see God's face in peace. I believe, therefore, that my everlasting interests are pending on the question, whether God has made provision to save me from sin, before I leave this world. To prevent all misconception, I will here say, that I am very far from believing, that the regenerate man with the remains of sin, is in the same condition with the Universalist who has never been renewed; but that neither has any reason to believe that death will make any change in his character. If there is no salvation from sin before death, I expect to be lost. Here, then, to make the whole subject plain as possible, in the light in which it is apprehended by my own mind, I will make three inquiries."

He then proceeds to show, that God in the economy of His grace has made provision to save His people from their sins—that christians can avail themselves of that provision in this life, and how this may be done.

Under the third proposition he says:

"III. I am to consider how the provisions of the grace of God become available to the christian's sanctification.

Our Saviour's prayer was—'Sanctify them through thy truth; thy word is truth.'

By what truth is the christian sanctified?

1. Not by any precepts of the Bible, through his own unaided efforts to obey them. So long as any man attempts to become sanctified by this means, he will surely find a law in his members, warring against the law of his mind, and bringing him into captivity to the law of sin; and will constantly find occasion to say, 'O, wretched man that I am, who shall deliver me?'

2. The christian may be sanctified through the promises of God's truth.—'Having, therefore, these promises, dearly beloved, let us cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of God, according as His divine power hath given unto us all things that pertain to life and godliness, through the knowledge of Him that hath called us to glory and virtue; whereby are given unto us exceeding great and precious promises, that by these ye might be partakers of the divine nature, having escaped the corruption that is in the world through lust.'

3. Let me be fully understood, then, that no man is ever sanctified, who relies on his own efforts to obey the law. Such an one frustrates the grace of God. He would indeed be holy, if he loved God with all his heart, and his neighbor as himself; but this he will surely never do, by any unaided efforts of his own. It must be done by the grace of God, and he most surely 'frustrates that grace, who does not live the life he now lives in the flesh, by the faith of the Son of God.'

We are, therefore, to cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, by the promises of God. These contain the truth, through which we may be sanctified, according to our Saviour's prayer."

He inquires again, 1st. What has God promised? 2d. How shall we gain the fulfillment of the promises? In reply to the last question, he says:—

"On this point I remark, that there is a passage which has served me as a key to unlock the rich treasures of God's word; and which, for some years, has been opening to me more and more 'the riches of the glory of Christ's inheritance in the saints,' and which has done very much to bring me where I am, 'by the grace of God,' to day. It is found in 2 Corinthians i. 20: 'For all the promises of God, in him (Christ) are yea, and in him amen, unto the glory of God by us.' But this I understand, that while no promise of God is ever fulfilled to us, except for Christ's sake, we may have the fulfillment of every promise, for the fulfillment of which we trust in Christ; and that when we trust in Christ, and receive for His sake the fulfillment of God's promises, God is glorified by us. Take then the promise, 'I, even I, am He that blotteth out thy transgressions for mine own sake, and will not remember thy sins.' To whom is that promise fulfilled? To him, and to him only, who trusts in Christ, to have it fulfilled to him for Christ's sake. Such an one always receives pardon, and none else.

Take now the promises, 'I will sprinkle clean water upon you, and make you clean; from all your filthiness, and from all your idols will I cleanse you, and I will save you from all your uncleanness;' 'The very God of peace, who hath called you, faithful to sanctify you wholly, and to preserve your whole spirit and soul and body, blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Ghrist;' and to whom are those promises fulfilled? Like the promises pledging forgiveness of sin, they are all yea and amen in Christ, to the glory of God by us, so that when we come to Christ, and trust in him, to have these promises fulfilled to us for his sake, God will glorify himself, by 'sprinkling clean water upon us, by cleansing us from all our filthiness and from all our idols, and by sanctifying us wholly, and preserving our whole spirit, and soul, and body, blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ.' Through the promises of God, then, we cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, and perfect holiness in the fear of God, when we believe in the Lord Jesus Christ, that these promises will be fulfilled to us for His sake. Is it now asked, why all God's professing people have not, in time past, been 'sanctified wholly.' I reply, for the self-same reason that all impenitent men have not received the forgiveness of sin, viz., they have not believed in the Lord Jesus Christ, that these promises would be fulfilled to them for His sake."

Mr. Fitch speaks feelingly and impressively of the errors of the Perfectionists, and says he cannot walk with them "a hair's breadth." At the close, he speaks thus feelingly and meekly of God's work in his own soul.

"And now, my brother, as to what I expect to preach, I have only to say, that I expect to uncover my fellow men, just so far and just so long as my God shall enable me, 'this fountain which has been opened for the house of David, and the inhabitants of Jerusalem, for sin and uncleanness.' I expect to do all in my power to make my fellow men acquainted with the 'holy covenant of our God, and the oath which He sware, that He will grant unto us, that we, being delivered out of the hand of our enemies, may serve Him without fear, in holiness and righteousness before Him, all the days of our lives;' and that Christ of our 'horn of salvation to perform this covenant; this oath of a covenant keeping God; that this, and every other promise of God, is yea and amen in Christ unto the glory of God by us. That He who hath called them is faithful, to sanctify them wholly, and to preserve their whole spirit, and soul, and body blameless, unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ. That Christ gave Himself for us, that He might sanctify us with the washing of water by the Word, that He might present us to Himself, a glorious church, not having spot, or wrinkle, or any such thing, but that we should be holy and without blemish;' and that they have only, like Paul, to believe God that it shall be even as it was told them; and, like Abraham, 'to stagger not at the promise of God through unbelief, but to be strong in faith, giving glory to God, being fully persuaded that what God hath promised He is able also to perform; and like Sarah to judge Him faithful that hath promised; and by placing their confidence in their Saviour, they shall so receive the fulfilment of God's exceeding great and precious promises, as to 'become partakers of the divine nature, having escaped the corruption that is in the world through lust;' that having these promises and this faith in Christ for their fulfillment, 'they shall cleanse themselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, and perfect holiness in the fear of God.' This, my brother, I regard as the glory, the crowning excellency of the gospel, the brightest star in the whole firmament of revealed truth; and with my Saviour's permission, I expect to point my fellow men to this day star of hope, until the hand that points them is given to the worms. It is, to my soul, a fountain of living waters, a well spring of life, and I expect to say to my fellow men, 'Ho! every one that thirsteth, come ye to the waters, and he that hath no money, come ye, buy and eat; yea, come, buy wine and milk, without money and without price;' and cease not, until the lips that are allowed the high privilege of uttering such an invitation, can speak no more."

The testimony of this Presbyterian brother is exceedingly precious. This, with the voice from Oberlin, confirms us in the opinion formed years ago, that Perfectionism, vile as it was in itself, was likely to subserve some good as well as some bad ends. We thought it would repel some farther than ever from the true Scriptural doctrine of sanctification, but would provoke investigation from others, who, in opposing an error most painful to the soul and to the church, would light upon the truth, would admire, love, embrace it, and by its power would be made free.

It is as we hoped. The leaven is working, and we pray Almighty God, that it may spread until the whole lump shall be leavened.

AN EDITORIAL GENIUS.—An editor down east, being ambitious "to shine" among the literati of the country, held forth recently as follows:

"I wish I was a geese,
All forlorn, all forlorn,
I wish I was a geese,
All forlorn:
I wish I was a geese,
To eat my grass in peace,
And accumulate much grease,
Eatin' corn."

STRIKING THOUGHTS.—The beauty of the rainbow vanishes in the storm; the meteor's flash is but a moment; the glittering gems of heaven will one day go out, the sun himself will be extinguished; but the star of hope shines beautifully for ever.

Camp-Meeting Notices.

A Camp-Meeting will be held on Eagle creek, Hancock county, Ohio, in the neighborhood of Br. Ramsbottom's, to commence on the 7th of August. S. W. THORNTON, Supt.

There will be a Camp-Meeting held on Lima circuit, Ohio, to include the third Sabbath in August; we request all who can make it convenient to attend. J. GUEST, Sup.

There will be a camp-meeting for Coshocton circuit, held on the farm of John Dean, Esq., two miles from Jacobsport, to commence on the 27th of August; we request the attendance of ministers and members.

M. N. WARREN, Sup't.

A Camp-Meeting will be held at the Diamond, ten miles from Indiana town and county, Pennsylvania, to commence on the thirteenth day of August. It will be twenty-four miles from Blairsville, and 62 from Pittsburgh. Brothers Baldwin, Robinson, Shearer, Francis and Tipton, we hope, will not fail to be with us.

T. J. ADDIS, Sup. Clearfield ct.

A camp-meeting for Zanesville circuit will commence on Thursday preceding the last Sabbath in August, on the land of Barnard Wortman, within half a mile of this office, on the old ground. Ministers and members of other circuits are pressingly invited to attend. The ministers from the western part of the District can go from this meeting in company to conference.

A camp-meeting will be held on the land of George Castle, 4½ miles from Mt. Vernon, Ohio, to commence the 21st of August; we especially invite brethren Springer, I. Thrap, Wilson, Davis, Marshall, Warren, Bamford, Tallentire, Bloomer and Cowl. We hope they can make it convenient to attend, but if any of the brethren cannot be with us, I should be glad if they would let me know soon as possible. M. SCOTT.

There will be a camp meeting held for the Ligonier Mission, near the turnpike leading from Ligonier to Youngstown, and about 2½ miles from the former place, to commence on the 28th of August next. We solicit the aid of brothers G. Brown, J. Robison, J. B. Shearer, T. J. Addis, W. Turner, S. Hazlett, W. L. Baldwin, J. Hopwood, D. Kinney, and J. M. Piper, together with any of our unstationed brethren of the adjacent circuits, who can assist us. W. W. TIPTON.

A Camp-Meeting will be held on the farm of John McKinney, between Sidney and Hardin, Shelby county, Ohio, including the third Sunday in August. Ministerial aid from the surrounding circuits, is strongly solicited.

JOSEPH PARKE.

We expect to hold a Camp-Meeting on Rehoboth circuit, six miles west of Wilmington, Ohio, to commence on the Friday before the third Sabbath in August, and request the aid of Bros. Flood, McGuire, Hunt, Paul, Stephens, Evans, Hughey, Atkinson, Little, the Dalbeys and Hibben. ISAAC EDWARDS, As.

It will be seen by the following prospectus that Br. Stockton has changed the name of his intended paper.

PROSPECTUS

OF THE

CHRISTIAN WORLD.

THE subscriber proposes to establish a periodical publication, to be entitled—"THE CHRISTIAN WORLD."

The main object of this work will be, the advancement of christianity. To this object, whatever personal and social interests it may be desirable and becoming to connect with it, will be regarded not only as subordinate but subservient.

The plan contemplates a series of sketches, illustrative of Bible Christianity, in its essential, peculiar, and incomparable glory;—of organized christianity, as witnessed in all the churches and the benevolent societies auxiliary to them;—and of the connexions of christianity with the institutions of government, literature, science and the arts. In addition to this highly interesting and important succession of subjects, it is intended to furnish, in a Miscellaneous Department, an attractive and useful variety of historical and geographical descriptions; biographical characters and incidents; poetry; reviews; current intelligence, &c.

The means that will be chiefly relied upon for the fulfilment of this plan, are the following:—1. The services of a choice circle of correspondents, qualified, by ample personal accomplishments, by their social connexions and distinctions, to supply all departments of the work, richly, with original communications. 2. An extensive selection of the most valuable, regular and occasional publications, both English and American; especially such as may be consulted as organs of the interests and institutions comprehended in the plan.

TERMS.—One number, of eight pages, in large quarto form, enclosed in a cover, will be published every month. It will be printed in the neatest style of the art; on fine, white paper, with new and handsome type, cast and kept expressly for this purpose. Price:—a single copy, $1.25 per annum; five copies, or more, to one order, $1.00 each per annum. Distant subscribers must pay in advance; city subscribers, on delivery of the first number. Subscriptions will be received, in the city, at the Bookstore of Mr. J. Whetham, Chesnut street above Sixth, and at the office of the Saturday Evening Post, No. 36, Carter's Alley. Communications, post paid, may be addressed to the editor,

THOMAS H. STOCKTON,
No. 10, Sergeant street, Philadelphia.

The first number will be published as soon as efficient arrangements can be secured. If, during the first year of its publication, it shall succeed in exciting the common christian interest that is necessary to sustain it, and make it the medium of general usefulness, it will probably be enlarged, or published more frequently.

Philadelphia, Pa., July 22, 1840. 48

Indiana Conference-Notice.

THE first session of the Indiana Annual Conference of the Methodist Protestant Church, is appointed to be held at LIBERTY MEETING HOUSE, (John Burton's) near Mt. Tabor, Monroe county, Indiana, commencing Thursday, October 1st, 1840. Bro. JOSEPH SIMPSON is requested to preach the introductory sermon, at 10 o'clock, A. M. of said day, and Bro. ELIJAH COLLINS to serve as alternate.

As this is to be our first session, let us with the help of the Lord, endeavor to begin right. In view of this, the committee respectfully make these few suggestions. 1. Let our brethren assemble in the spirit of devout prayer, that the Divine blessing and approbation may attend our enterprize. 2. Let them be in attendance promptly at the commencement of the session. 3. Let each superintendent prepare accurate returns of the numbers in society, with the names of unstationed ministers and preachers, in the various circuits and missions. 4. Should any ministerial member be prevented from attending, let him not fail to address the conference by letter, as required by rule of discipline, and communicate all needful information.

N. B.—It will be recollected that each mission, having three or more societies, embracing not less than thirty members, is entitled to elect and send a delegate to the Annual Conference, provided the missionary is entitled to a seat in said conference. H. P. BENNETT, A. H. BASSETT, T. P. ARMSTONG, } Committee.

July 1, 1840. [Meth. Prot. please copy.]

Glass Manufactory.

THE subscriber having dissolved his connexion with the former company, has taken the GLASS WORKS below town under his own management.

WINDOW GLASS, double and single, all seizes, and of superior quality will be kept constantly on hand for sale on reasonable terms.—The experience of the proprietor, in the manufacture of the article, will insure all made to be of the best quality. Call and see.

S. B. JOHNSON.

Zanesville, Ohio, May 6, 1840. 37

Information Wanted.

DANIEL RIBLET, son of Daniel Riblet, who left Hagerstown in the year 1820 or 21, and has not been heard from by his aged father and sisters, since the year 1825. Any information respecting him, so that we can hear from him, will be thankfully received.

Please direct your letters to John Dillon, Zanesville, Ohio.

☞The Wheeling papers as well as the papers throughout Ohio, will confer a great favor by giving the above at least one insertion.

July 11, 1840. 47

Stray Mare.

STRAYED from the subscriber living in Hopewell township, Muskingum county, O., on the 20th of June last, a light SORREL MARE, about 14 or 15 hands high, with a small blaze in the forehead and one white foot; no shoes on when she left. Any person returning said mare or giving information to the subscriber where she can be found, will be liberally compensated for his trouble.

NAAMAN R. GRANT.

Hopewell tp., Musk., O., July 8, 1840. 46

Dissolution.

THE partnership heretofore existing between the subscribers in the PUTNAM FOUNDRY, under the firm of HARTLEY & ANDERSON, was this day dissolved by mutual consent.

The Putnam Foundry will hereafter be conducted by J. J. Anderson & Co.

LEVI HARTLEY,
JACOB J. ANDERSON.

Putnam, Jan. 1, 1840. (Jan. 29: 23.)

Prospectus

OF THE AMERICAN

WESLEYAN OBSERVER.

THIS paper has now reached its 20th No. It has been before the public long enough to have its true character understood. The time for which it was started, (six months,) has now nearly expired. Only six numbers more remain to be issued. As many of our correspondents in different places have expressed a desire that the Observer should be continued, we would say, that provided a sufficient patronage can be obtained, it shall be continued, at least, for one year longer. The editors, who are both pastors, find it too great a burden to conduct this paper and do justice to their people. If, therefore, the Observer is continued, it will probably be necessary for one of the editors to relinquish his pastoral duties, at least in part, and devote more attention to the paper. This will make it indispensable not only that the present subscription list be kept good, but that it be considerably increased—as it now barely pays the paper maker and the printer; the editors obtaining their whole support from their people.

Should the Observer be continued, it is believed, that with the experience which the editors now have, they can, by giving more attention to the paper, make it a truly interesting sheet. And no pains will be spared on their part to accomplish this object.

The general character of the paper will remain the same as it has been. We shall, however, be able to give our readers a greater variety of valuable matter than we have hitherto done. The General Conference has been the all-absorbing subject for several months past—extended discussions respecting its probable results having commenced several weeks before it assembled. We trust, however, that these discussions, and especially the reports of its doings have not been without interest.

The subject of American Slavery, with the best means for its peaceful abolition, will occupy more space in our columns than any other single topic; yet none of the moral enterprises of the age will be forgotten. To all these, as well as to the cause of general education and sound literature, the Observer will be constantly devoted. While it will be emphatically a FREE DISCUSSION paper, it is intended that it shall be an interesting and useful family newspaper to such as take no other. General, as well as moral and religious intelligence, will find a place in our columns.

With the party politics of the day, we shall have nothing to do, farther than to carry out our principles as friends of universal liberty, by the use of all moral and lawful means, to invest our oppressed countrymen with their alienable rights: believing this to be the most solemn duty of every American citizen, whatever be his profession.

Our columns will be open, to a limited extent, to the discussion, pro and con, of the different systems of church polity, IF any of our correspondents shall wish to write on these subjects. It is but a small portion of our columns that we propose to devote to this discussion. The M. E. Church holds that no form of church goverment is laid down in the scriptures—yet it is a matter of doubt whether there is magnanimity and free inquiry enough in said church, to support a paper, whose columns are open at all, to a discussion of this question. But we shall see. We do not intend that any violent attacks shall be made upon the church or her officers; but mean to confine ourselves principally to a discussion of the abstract question. And we wish it to be distinctly understood, that this and every other subject which may be discussed in our columns, will stand on its own merits. No party is responsible, either for the sentiments of the editors, or their correspondents. We are not an official organ of any party.

The Observer will be printed as heretofore, on fine paper and new type, at one dollar for six months, or two dollars per annum IN ADVANCE. It is, however, the wish of the editors, that all subscriptions now to be made, should be for the term of one year; as it is not their intention to continue the paper after the first of August next, unless they can get sufficient encouragement to continue it, at least, one year from that time. All subscriptions must be accompanied with the cash. We have determined to do none other but a cash business. This is best for all concerned. We shall not, therefore, move one step beyond the first six months, till we can see our way clear. And of our present subscribers, or others, who may wish to remit to us money, can do so through any Post Master, without expense to them or ourselves.

Any person who will send us the pay, free of expense, for five copies, shall be entitled to a sixth copy gratis—and in that proportion for any larger number.

Those who favor the project of continuing the Observer, will have the goodness to send in their subscriptions at once, for one year, commencing with the first of August. We wish to know, with the least possible delay, whether our paper is to be continued or not. All who may send us their subscriptions, shall have the money refunded, without expense to them, if the paper should not be continued.

JOTHAM HORTON,
ORANGE SCOTT.

Lowell, Mass., June 18, 1840.

P S. Address "American Wesleyan Observer, Lowell, Mass" 3w47

The New World--Quarto.

THE publisher of the NEW WORLD has the pleasure of announcing to the public, that in consequence of the immense circulation which this popular and mammoth sheet has obtained throughout the United States, and the numerous requests which have been made for its publication in a form better suited for the preservation of its valuable contents, he has commenced the issue of a QUARTO EDITION of the NEW WORLD, in sixteen large pages, containing nearly every article which appears in the folio, and will in addition be embellished with a piece of popular music. The form is a splendid one for binding, and will make a beautiful volume at the end of the year. Orders must be sent without delay, as only a limited edition will be printed. No. 1 of the QUARTO appeared on the 6th of June.

TERMS.—Four dollars per annum; Two copies for Seven Dollars; Three copies for Ten Dollars; Five copies for Fifteen Dollars. Payable in advance.

The New World--Folio,

IS published every Saturday morning, at No. 30, Ann street, New York, by J. WINCHESTER, and contains all the new works by the most popular authors in both hemispheres, together with a vast amount of other literary matter, Tales, Poetry, &c., and all the current news of the day.

TERMS.—Three Dollars per annum. Two copies for Five Dollars; Five copies for Twelve Dollars; payable invariably in advance, free of postage.

New York, July 8, 1840. 46

Notice.

ALL persons indebted to the late firm of Hartley & Anderson, are earnestly requested to call at the Foundry and make settlement, as the change of owners makes this step absolutely necessary. We ask the attention of all persons concerned, to this notice.

J. J ANDERSON & Co.

Putnam, Jan. 1, 1840. (Jan. 29: 23.)

Dissolution.

THE partnership heretofore existing between S. B. Johnson and J. M. Kirkpatrick, under the firm of S. B. Johnson & Co. was dissolved by mutual consent, on Thursday 19th inst.

S. B. JOHNSON,
J. M. KIRKPATRICK.

Zanesville, March 31, 1840. 32tf

The Brother Jonathan.

EDITED BY N. P. WILLIS AND H. HASTINGS WELD.

The Largest and Cheapest Newspaper in the World,

AND CERTAINLY AMONG THE BEST.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY, BY

WILSON & COMPANY,

At 162, Nassau Street, N. York.

TERMS, $3 PER ANNUM, IN ADVANCE.

UPON entering the second volume of this pioneer in the introduction of papers of its class, the publishers may be excused for congratulating themselves upon the continued prosperity and advancement of their periodical, from the issue of its first number, to the present time. Aware that competition is the life of business, they expected, and have met with rivals; but those rivals have, so far, been essential aids to the publicity and circulation of the Jonathan. New readers have been made, where, comparatively, few existed before, and the taste created for the elegant literature of the two hemispheres, carried into all parts of the country, and made accessible to all, has produced a demand for the Brother Jonathan, which it is gratifying to state is continually on the increase.

With such addition to their resources and emoluments, the publishers have aimed to give a commensurate increase to the value and interest of their sheet. In addition to the labors of the gentlemen whose names are announced as editors, the publishers avail themselves constantly of the aid of such occasional contributors as they can find space for.

For the foreign correspondence of the Jonathan the services of Isaac C. Pray, Jr., have been engaged; and his fine literary taste will also be exercised in the selection of things rare, new and worthy in the European literary mart. Selection is from the cream of the foreign magazines will of course be continued.

MUSIC.—In the progress of improvement, a new feature has been added to the Brother Jonathan—the publication of new and popular music. Every paper will contain something in this way, new and pleasant—reference being had in the selection, rather to such pieces as all can sing and play, than to recherche compositions suited only to the scientific. A new font of music type has been purchased, and a gentleman engaged to superintend this department, of excellent experience and knowledge of music.—This will enable us to give music a publicity which it never enjoyed before: to carry the same themes for carol to the sylvan maid in the farthest back woods, which delight the party in the city drawing-room. A simultaneous popularity will thus be enjoyed all over the country by such compositions as are adapted to the public taste and worthy of the public favor.

Whatever other improvements may suggest themselves, will be adopted; and no pains spared to make the Jonathan a welcome visiter to all sorts of people, whose tastes are worthy of gratification. Other periodicals may be addressed to particular opinions—or to particular classes—the Jonathan will wander free, "from grave to gay, from lively to severe," and strive, with all the aid he has enlisted, to compass the whole circle to give, in a word, a Cyclopedia of whatever may be desirable in a literary magazine, and weekly newspaper. He appeal to the past for voucher of what he can do—and what he can, he will.

TERMS—Three dollars a year, in advance.—For Five Dollars two copes of the paper will be sent one year, or one copy two years. In no case will the paper be sent out of the city unless paid for in advance.

☞All communications and letters should be addressed, postage paid, to

WILSON & COMPANY,
No. 162, Nassau street, New York.

S. C. Haver,

IN the flourishing town of Putnam has on hand 40 or 50 SADDLES ready for sale, of different qualities, comprising nearly all the varieties in fashion in our Buckeye State.

A good assortment of Bridles and Martingales: Riding and driving Whips: between 18 and 200 Carriage and heavy draft Collars, which will compare and wear with any others made here or elsewhere.

Also, fine York, Dearborn, heavy team and common Farming Harness. A lot of first rate Carriage and Buggy Harness, (brass and silver plated.)

Trunks, vallises, saddle-bags, and double covered wagon whips, varying in quality and price to suit purchasers.

The only recommendation he now offers for his work, is the testimony and long experience of his old customers and friends. He is still anxious to please and accommodate those who may call on him, and hopes to share so much of the public patronage as his attention to his business shall merit.

Putnam, April 29, 1840. 28tf

William Green,

CLOCK AND WATCH REPAIRER, SILVERSMITH AND JEWELLER,

CAN be found at his shop on Main street, Putnam, a few doors north of J. C. Guthrie's store, where he will do his best to accommodate customers. He keeps on hand an assortment of spectacles, watch trimmings, pencils, &c.

As far as we have tried Mr. GREEN as a watch repairer he has given us good satisfaction.—Ed.

April 22, 1840. 35tf

O. WHITE, BOOK BINDER, No. 10 Main Street, Zanesville, Ohio.

January 15, 1840. 21tf

THE

WESTERN RECORDER

IS PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY.

☞The office of the Recorder is five and a half miles west of Zanesville.

TERMS.

1. The WESTERN RECORDER will be published weekly, on an imperial sheet, at $2 00 per annum, in advance: $2 50 at the end of three months; $3 00 at the end of the year.

2. No discontinuances will be allowed, except at the discretion of the publisher, until arrearages are paid.

3. To all ministers having regular pastoral charges, who do any thing at all for the paper if they will direct us where, a copy shall be sent gratis; any other who forward to us $10 (for new subscribers, shall have six copies sent any address he may give.

4. All letters designed for the paper, must be directed to "C. Springer, Meadow Farm, Muskingum, Ohio."

5. A failure to notify a discontinuance before the expiration of the subscription year, will be considered a new engagement.

CHARACTER.—The pages of the WESTERN RECORDER will be open to discussion on all moral questions;—it will give articles on Literature, Mechanics, Agriculture,—an abstract of Religious and Political intelligence, and whatever may be interesting and instructive to families in general. A portion of its columns will be open to Advertisements and Prices Current—another portion to sustain the interests of the Methodist Protestant Church in the West.—These two latter objects will not likely occupy more than one page.

The RECORDER will take a firm stand against Clerical Supremacy.

THE WESTERN RECORDER.

SPRINGER, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.
WO DOLLARS PER ANNUM IN ADVANCE.

Volume 1. ZANESVILLE, OHIO, WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 5, 1840. Number 50.

JOHN W. WHITE, PRINTER.
$2.50, IN THREE MONTHS; $3, END OF YEAR.

OMMUNICATIONS.

For the Western Recorder.

SMITH IN REPLY TO DALBEY.

. Editor: When I commenced wri- or your useful paper, I had not the distant idea of exciting the opposi- f so many of the priesthood. I have no less than three of them (Messrs. ey, Clake and Scott,) down on me at and one of them, at least, with no non degree of warmth. My oppo- t are really a chivalrous set of men, three of them, at the same time, pon me. Why is this? are they sat- that their cause is so bad that it ake three clergymen to manage one an? I have often heard the priest- accused of cowardice, which I have ofore considered only a burlesque on , but really this case looks somewhat sustaining the charge.

all pugilistic contests it is consider- at the man who suffers himself to be vn into excited passion is not hard to ie. The same may be said of intel- al combatants; when a man so far ts himself, and the character of the stry, as to indulge in such temper anguage as the Rev. John Clarke has in his strictures on me, he usually an easy victim to calmness and truth.

do not pretend to any extra moral ness, nor to have any other advan- over my opponents, (the correctness y argument excepted,) but in one cular, which is merely circumstan- that is, they all being priests, have so in the habit, from the very na- of their profession, of dictating, that seem disqualified to bear contradic- with any degree of patience, where- he laity are schooled to opposition, can therefore bear it without mani- g such irritability.

my opponents, in their communica- , instead of confining themselves to subject in dispute, usually take the e of the whole twelve signs of the c, and passionately declaim upon ions, entirely irrelevant to the point iscussion, it will be proper here to the matter at issue between us:— n, first, I have admitted that slavery moral offence, or evil, if the phrase better,—that it ought to be abolish- Secondly, I have admitted that the ic have a right to make the abolition avery a political question, if they ause. Thirdly, I have also admitted it was a proper question for the ac- of the church judicatories when dis- mbered with politics, But, whenev- politicians, who are always availing nselves of every exciting topic they lay hold of, to promote their designs, e the abolition of slavery, or any oth- uestion whatever, a political hobby, church, in her public functionaries, is at liberty to meddle with any such stion.

ow, the points at issue between us are e, and none other:—1st. Since the ition of slavery has assumed a polit- attitude, that it is not now proper that church should officially take any part he question. 2dly. Should there even no obstruction in the way of church on, on this subject, that the Methodist testant Church has a paramount duty ttend to, viz: the cause of religious rty, to serve which it becomes her du- o avoid every other exciting topic in conferences and journals, that she y better attend to her main duty.

We repeat again, these are the points issue between us. And when gentle- wander from these points, to declaim n the evils of slavery, and the pro- ity of reducing "God's image to bond- ," they are "fighting phantoms;" these uments are as much mine as theirs, I am equally entitled to their bene- . In all these positions we agree, and y differ about the modus operandi. the usual style of the p———— y are confident their way of it is right, ile I claim the liberty to "shew mine nion also." We all agree that slave- is a "very great evil," but how is the il" to be remedied? The gentlemen m, by their words and actions, to in- ate, that every man must quit every er business, to attend to this matter, l if any cannot go at their bidding, he s either got no sense or is destitute of ral principle, &c. &c. [I allude more ticularly to Mr. C.'s communications.] Now this, in substance, is their way of procuring the abolition of slavery. But in my opinion, instead of securing what they propose, by such a proscriptive course, they injure the cause they advocate. Such reckless denunciations cannot fail to disgust the minds of moderate and reflecting men, and to alienate them, not only from such hot-headed zealots, but from their enterprize also. They attempt to do right in a wrong way and with a wrong spirit. The Apostle would say of them, they have "a zeal but not according to knowledge." It is highly probable that I would do as much to ameliorate the condition of the unfortunate sons of Africa as either of my opponents, were we put to the test, yet because I cannot go the whole hog with them, it is insinuated that I am in league with "robbers," &c. &c. What convincing moral suasion!

After premising these things, in a general way, I come now to consider some of Mr. Dalbey's positions, in his last reply. Before I proceed he will permit me to say, that, in the main, I am much pleased with the spirit he manifests. He, however, occasionally suffers himself to become rather too much perplexed with the matter, and to shew some little signs of irritation; but, on the whole, I consider him a gentlemanly antagonist.

I shall say nothing about the first proposition of his article. for, although I have strained my head until it aches to try to understand it, yet I have not been able to even penetrate its meaning. But perhaps this is my fault not his.

The principal idea which figures thro' his communication is "political action in churches;" a "third political party," &c. On this subject he has made two points; 1st. He accuses me of having abandoned my first position, which was to "rebuke certain ministers for imprudence," and "flying to political action in churches." 2dly. He denies having any connection with "politics," or a "third political party."

In relation to this charge of shifting my position, although it is utterly groundless, I do not wonder at it, for the gentleman has so repeatedly done me this kind of injustice, that I now expect it as matter of course. It does not enter into my heart, however, to charge him with design in the premises. I have became satisfied that this thing is attributable to some peculiar mental organization, which is more his misfortune than his crime, rather than to wilfulness. Change my premises, indeed! Why, the very reason I administered my "reproofs," was, because these "ministers" were introducing "political action," or a subject which had asssumed a political phases into the church. So far from this being a new position, it was the main one with which I set out, and which has made the principal argument in every essay I have written. I ask the reader who may take sufficient interest in the subject, to look at my communications, and then see if he can help being astonished at my opponent's accusation.

By way of denying, on his part, any connexion with politics, he asks, "where have I contended for a third political party, and political action in churches?" I affirm you substantially contend for political action in the church when you wish to make the Western Recorder, which is the organ of an Annual Conference, a vehicle to promote political abolitionism, for I do not see, at this stage of the enterprize, how it can be called any thing else. The resolution passed by the Anti-Slavery Society to question all candidates, at the polls, and to vote, irrespective of parties, for those who return favorable answers, as effectually created a third political party, as did the act which nominated an abolition candidate for the Presidency; for the direct tendency of this act, of the Anti-Slavery Society, is, every where, to put abolitionists into office.—And every essay written, and every item of church influence wielded, is calculated to further the interests of this political party. You may squirm and twist, and throw dust in the air to blind our eyes, but you cannot get out of this predicament. —We have more to say on this subject when we reply to Mr. Clarke.

In a former essay, I offered the opinion that the church would do well to let the gentleman "beat the brush a while," &c.; at this he raised a wonderful note of alarm, which called on me for a definition of my meaning, and which was nothing more than that he should take his turn of the harder appointments.—This he calls "twisting," and says it is so "disingenuous" as to be almost beneath notice; and yet, it is a fact, that what I said in explanation was exactly my meaning. It seems, he is to put definitions upon my words and then cram them down me whether or not. Mr. Buck, says, it is not liberal, or gentlemanly, to force a definition, or conclusion upon a man which he rejects.

After making himself a half dozen, or more, points of difference, between us the gentleman adds, "the only matter at issue now, is, the propriety of discussing the slave question in the Recorder;" and concludes that he is not to blame about the thing, but the Annual Conference, &c. When the Annual Conference determined that the columns of its organ should be open to the discussion of all "moral questions," it certainly never intended to compel any one to write on the subject of abolition merely because it was a "moral subject." The conference very properly left their columns open, because it would be wrong, by any official act, to close them againt temperate discussion on any question of morality, presuming, no doubt, that due prudence would be used. But for any man to argue that because it is his privilege, that, it is therefore his duty, to enter into any particular investigation, is certainly droll logic indeed.

If the Recorder be a free discussion paper, it is certainly bound to admit discussions upon the propriety of any particular investigations, as on the main question itself. And I have simply used this right to endeavor to show you that you have acted prematurely in introducing this vexed question, in a paper dedicated to a different subject, and after five years shall have passed on, if you do not see the correctness of my position, I will then admit my error.

Although you will not allow that I am friendly disposed toward you, yet I shall take the liberty, at the close of this article, to give you a little farther advice. You say, "this pitiful conduct," &c. Now, what I wish to name, is, when you discuss topics with me, omit all such comtemptuous epithets as these. Although it is indicated I am an infidel or a heathen, yet I can understand you without the use of them. Transfer them to Mr. Clarke; they appear to be well adopted to his taste. As you call me "father," you will have to bear with my assumptions, should I occasionally volunteer a litttle counsel.

Yours, &c. J. SMITH.

Sugar Grove, O., July, 1840.

For the Western Recorder.

"WHAT IS LAW IN THE CASE."

Mr. Editor: Your kindness in publishing my communications, emboldens me again to use my quill. In my last "the infallibility of the church," was the subject under consideration, although it turned out to be, more properly, the supremacy of the clergy. The question at the head of this article, is contained in the "bishop's address" or message to the late General Conference of the M. E. C. And it involved another question of great importance, (viz:) who are to decide—the bishop and presiding elder, or the Annual and quarterly conferences? These are grave questions, especially when the administration of law—the qualifications of the judge, and the dearest rights of freemen, are involved or pending. Long ago, it was settled in a General Conference, that "QUARTERLY CONFERENCES are clothed with judiciary power; presiding elders as chairmen, preserve order, and settle questions of order, but NOT of LAW, apart from the court over which he presides." But it is now settled, that the presiding elder is "to decide all questions of law!" And "the application of law shall be with the conference!" In the book of discipline, ch. i. sec. 20, it is said—"the quarterly meeting conference shall have authority" "to try, suspend, expel, or acquit any local preacher, &c." Now, what becomes of the "judiciary power," or the "authority," or power of a quarterly conference, if the presiding elder is "to decide all questions of law?" But Dr. B. spake "a parable illustrative;" "a man is to be flagellated–the executioner asks how many strokes are to be inflicted; the judge replies, forty, save one. There is the law, the executioner applies the whip, and there is the application!!!" So then, the quarterly conference, which once was "clothed with judiciary power" —"authority to try, suspend, expel, or acquit, &c." is now only the "executioner to apply the whip," or if it is the highest degree of punishment, they may be the hangman to apply the rope! Well did one say, "great men are not always wise," although they may be subtile. But it may be asked, why meddle with this subject? or write an analysis on this legislation? I answer, to show the rapid strides toward the infallibility (not of the church but) of the clergy—and the danger to liberty and human rights, when legislative, executive and judicial authority are vested with the same men—for I admit the truth of what was said by a celebrated statesman, that it "may justly be pronounced the very essence and definition of tyranny"—and that "unlimited power is apt to corrupt the minds of those who possess it." In Ezekiel's day, he was deemed an unfaithful watchman, who saw the sword, and gave no warning—and although men, times and circumstances change—principles, and especially the principles of the divine procedure never vary. Claims to infallibility, clerical ambition and ecclesiastical despotism, is indeed a sword, whose devastating effects the world has witnessed—and its portentuous footsteps cannot be watched with too much vigilance, or jealousy, by the friends of religious and civil liberty, and the true interests of the church. When did the church become corrupt—piety dwindle, or pride and persecution prevail, and strengthen the hands of infidels, and afflict mankind—that the clergy were not at the head of it? What a pity! and who can be indifferent.

L. GARRETT.

For the Western Recorder.

"LET WELL ENOUGH ALONE."

This advice has been used and applied by the late General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, as an argument against any inquiries or charges being entertained in reference to the existing state of things in that church, and implies that the church is considered to have prospered and to be now in a state of spiritual prosperity, so as to entitle it to the plaudit "well done" with God and all good men.

That the Methodist Episcopal Church has prospered, as to numbers, no person will deny; but that it has equally prospered in spirituality is not so easily admitted, and as there cannot be any scriptural 'well enough' without spiritual prosperity, it may be useful to call the attention of that church to a reconsideration of the adopted motto, "Let well enough alone," to see whether or not the advice contained therein may be safe to attend to.

The old Methodist standard of prosperity was: If our preachers are men of God themselves, and faithfully preach our doctrines and conscientiously live our rules as laid down in the larger minutes, both as respects their private and public duties, and by this course of preaching and living, have an increase of members, then and in that case they may rejoice in prosperity, and say of a truth, "the best of all is, God is with us;" but, if on the other hand, there be an increase of numbers, and a falling off in faithful preaching and in conscientious living, such increase only proves a decrease in spiritual prosperity, and should lead to the important inquiry, "What shall be done to revive the work of God among us;" and I would here remark, that I was perfectly astonished upon reading the report of the proceedings of the General Conference, to find that there was no reference at all made to the spiritual state of the church, nor any motion or any measure adopted tending to an increase of holiness, or more devotedness to God and his work, and I have painfully reflected, how unlike the conferences which Wesley and his preachers used to hold.

Old Wesleyan Methodism requires that all preachers, before admission, have an experimental knowledge of God, and have His love abiding in them, that they have gifts (as well as grace) with a clear, sound understanding, and a right judgment in the things of God, have a just conception of salvation by faith, a good utterance so as to speak justly, readily and clearly, and that they have fruit by being instrumental in convincing of sin and converting sinners to God by their preaching, and that none are to be admitted into the ministry, even on trial, who have not these marks as sufficient proof that they are moved thereto by the Holy Ghost; but may it not be questioned, if not generally admitted, that even in this first particular, it is not "well enough" in the Methodist Episcopal Church, and will any preacher or member among them presume to say that it is so?

The matter and manner of preaching is another important consideration connected with Methodism. The best general method prescribed is, to convince—to offer Christ—to invite and to build up; and the most effectual way is, to preach Christ in all His offices,—to declare His law as well as His gospel, both to believers and unbelievers, and to strongly and closely insist upon inward and outward holiness in all its branches. But, as Mr. Wesley asked, "have not some of us been led off from practical preaching by what was called preaching Christ?" And may it not now be said with equal truth, as was then admitted, "indeed we have." May it not be said, that, generally speaking, the doctrine of repentance with its accompanying fruits, and of heart holiness with its evidences are but sparingly brought forward in the pulpit discourses of the present day; and that the method and manner of modern Methodist preaching, is more designed to produce immediate effect upon the passions and a temporary excitement than to do good through the medium of the understanding, to convince the mind and lead the sinner from dependence in all means to the Saviour for a present salvation from the guilt and power of sin, by faith in His blood? To get persons affected by religious exercises and brought up to the altar to get religion, has of late years been more attended to, and studied, than the method and manner of preaching prescribed in the discipline, and as by these novel means more members are drawn into the church, it may be considered that on this account all is "well enough;" but will any person be so hardy as to assert, that the inward and outward holiness produced by such preaching is of that character which will be pronounced "well done" at last, or that in this essential particular it is "well enough" in the Methodist Episcopal Church?

The rules laid down in the discipline, for the personal and ministerial duties of Methodist preachers, are also considered essential to their usefulness; as common christians, they are required to live by rule, attending constantly to the important duties of watchfulness, self-denial, taking up the Cross and walking closely with God, and as preachers, to make a conscience of considering and executing every part of their office. Mr. Wesley once said, "I fear there is altogether a fault in this matter and that few of us are clear," and I suppose that in this very important particular also, there are few preachers who would say "Let well enough alone."

"To raise a holy people and spread scriptural holiness over the land," is said to be the peculiar calling of Methodist preachers, and is the best evidence of spiritual prosperity; but may it not be questioned, wherein do the Methodists differ from other denominations in this respect? and may it not still be asked, "Do not Sabbath-breaking, evil-speaking, unprofitable conversation, lightness, expensiveness or gaity of apparel, the love of the world and contracting debts without due care to discharge them, still prevail in many places?" Is it not of public notoriety, that preachers themselves do, in many places, unnecessarily travel to and from conference on the Sabbath day? that preachers and members think it no harm to set out on a journey on that holy day; that members engaged in steamboat navigation and commerce, will start their boats and attend to business connected therewith same as on any other day; that preachers and members, generally, can employ the Sabbath in worldly conversation, in visiting and taking pleasure same as other people do on that day? That in outward behaviour they are light and trifling, in conversation much given to foolish talking and jesting, and that gossipping abounds to an alarming extent, that conformity to the spirit and fashions of the world is under no restraint in the church, and that self-denial, even in "needless self-indulgence" in the use of tobacco, &c., is quite obselete, and that numbers are now preachers and members who have by imprudent speculation, and other causes become bankrupt; and it is now very well known that attendance on the means of grace and attention to private and family duties are not now insisted on as was formerly, as conditions of membership? Can these things be successfully contradicted? Or rather, are they not mourned over by the better portion of the members as too true? In this state of the church, can it be said—"Let well enough alone?" Can it be "that blindness, in part," has happened unto Methodism, and that having kindled a fire of their own making, they "compass themselves about with sparks, (numerical success) walk in the light of their fire and in the sparks they have kindled," so that nothing can be seen or attended to, but the mere scaffolding part of the church? Is this the "well enough" glory of Episcopal Methodism and all its orders? And is it in this way they are to effect the conversion of the world to Christ, by making the church every thing worthy of consideration, to a worldly mind, and the Saviour scarcely thought about in their conference deliberations?

But, says the General Conference report: "the system has worked well, and let well enough alone," i. e., the system of Methodism carried on by Bishops, Presiding Elders, &c., &c., has heretofore worked so well as to prove that it should be continued, undisturbed and unquestioned, as to its utility and efficacy. 'Tis true, it has worked well in increasing the number of members in the church and in keeping the church united, but has not all this happened with churches otherwise corrupt and inefficient in "well doing?" If to raise a holy people and to spread scriptural holiness over the land be the Wesleyan standard of "working well," I leave it to the impartial and discerning among the Episcopal Methodists themselves to say, if the system so much extalled is really "working well" in these essential particulars, and if there is not a world of contrast between the acquirements of the discipline in spirit and practice, and the spirit and conduct of preachers and members generally. —"Actions always speak louder than words."

There has also been another argument used in support of episcopacy, by Dr. Bangs and others at the conference, which deserves a passing notice. It was stated "that Mr. Wesley considered himself a true Apostolic Bishop, and that Wesleyan Methodism in England recognizes the principle of episcopacy to a greater extent than it exists in America." These, I think, are very bold assertions, and will require a wonderful latitude of imagination on Mr. Wesley's sayings and doings to prove correct. Mr. Wesley said, that, "according to Lord King's account of the primitive church, Bishops and Presbyters are the same order, and consequently, have the same right to ordain, and that originally every christian congregation was a church independent on all others," evidently meaning thereby that he considered all Presbyters the same as Bishops, and being one and the same order in the church, that each Presbyter was a Bishop or overseer in the particular congregation where he labored, and equal to and independent of any other Presbyter or Bishop in the church, he, therefore, being a Presbyter, considered himself scripturally qualified to ordain by imposition of hands for the work of the ministry, and did ordain three of his preachers in England to administer ordinances in that country. Mr. Wesley did also claim the care and oversight of all the Methodist societies in Europe and America, not of choice, but of necessity. These societies were all, either directly or indirectly, raised up by himself, and they all naturally looked up to him as their spiritual father and guide, and were desirous and willing to be advised by him in all necessary matters, so that he could not do otherwise than exercise a spiritual oversight over them. In this oversight and care he could have no equal, his preachers and members were all his spiritual children, and as a father, they were bound by interest and honor to give him his place, but in discharging the duties of an overseer and in thinking he had a right to do, he did not thereby assume the name and title of Bishop, as in this particular none of the Presbyters or Bishops in the primitive church were called after their office, but by their own given names, hence we never read of Bishop Peter, Bishop Paul, Bisbop Timothy, Bishop Titus, and hence, we have never read of Bishop Wesley, nay, rather, said he, "men may call me knave, fool, or any thing else, but they never shall, with my consent, call me BISHOP."

But, Mr. Wesley is given as authority for the establishing of Methodist Episcopacy in America, and the discipline states that "he did set apart Thos. Coke for the Episcopal office, &c. Mr. Wesley and Dr. Coke were both Presbyters in the Church of England, which church, before the acknowledgment of Independence, embraced the clergy and members in America, but as this act totally separated the American members from any connection with the English Church, neither Mr. Wesley nor Dr. Coke had any authority by virtue of their episcopal ordination to exercise the office of Presbyter in America; but as the preachers and members in America had been, until that event, members of the Church of England, and depending altogether on that church for christian ordinances, and as that church was then broken up the Methodists were in relation to ordinances as "sheep in the wilderness," and therefore applied to Mr. Wesley for relief in this particular. Mr. Wesley being thus circumstanced, he could not send out Dr. Coke as a Church of England Presbyter to ordain in America, and believing that ordination by imposition of hand was necessary to qualify for administering ordinances according to the form used in the Church of England, he, as a Presbyter and overseer of the whole Methodist societies in Europe and America, did ordain Thomas Coke a superintendent for the societies in America, with instructions to ordain Francis Asbury to the same office, and they two, to ordain the preachers in America to administer ordinances, qualification by ordination to administer ordinances being the principal thing intended by the whole transaction, and not titles or distinctions. Nor were Coke or Asbury then called or known by Bishop Coke or Bishop Asbury, as are the Bishops of the present day; I think, therefore, that any claim for modern episcopacy on Mr. Wesley's authority, or example is overstrained indeed, as his writings sufficiently prove.

As to the assertion, that British Methodism recognizes episcopacy to a greater extent than American Methodism does, I am at a loss to understand. They have superintendents of circuits and leaders of classes, who are invested with the oversight of their respective circuits and classes for the time being, and are entirely independent in office during that time, as are also all the officers in the society; but neither president, chairman of districts, or superintendents of circuits possess any appointing power, or are charged with any oversight beyond the limits of their own circuit or district. The Annual Conference, which is composed of all the travelling preachers in full connection,* who may attend, is the only appointing power in the connexion, in which every preacher has a voice and a vote, and where all are equal. The President himself is only a President, and not a Bishop. The preachers vote on their own appointments. The districts elect their own chairman, and both President and Chairmen are appointed to their circuits same as other preachers. In short, there is no more episcopacy in the Wesleyan system than in the Presbyterian form of church government, so that I do think that Dr. Bangs must know but little of Wesleyan Methodism, and that the Rev. Robert Newton must be equally ignorant of Episcopal Methodism,—both may be good enough, if rightly administered, but they should not be confounded together, as one and the same.

Mr. Wesley said, that in all the pains he had taken for the future government of his societies, he had "labored in order to fix them upon such a foundation as is likely to stand as long as the sun and moon endure; that is, if they continue to walk by faith and to show forth their faith by their works:—otherwise," said he, "I pray God to root out the rememberance of them from the earth." And under a similar feeling, I would affectionately call the attention of the whole Wesleyan family to the above remarks and observations, to examine and try if the present system of Methodism is "working well" for eternity, if they should settle upon their lees, and say "Let well enough alone." "I speak as unto wise men, judge ye what I say."

WATCHMAN.

*By a unanimous vote of the one hundred preachers named in the Deed of Declaration at the Annual Conference in 1791, all preachers admitted into full connection are entitled to all the privileges as members of conference, same as the one hundred mentioned in said Deed.

For the Western Recorder.

Mr. Editor: Will you, or some of your correspondents, please publish in the Recorder, answers to the following questions:

1st. When was the church of Christ established?

2d. Does membership obtain in Christ's church by birthright? If not, what are the terms of admission?

3d. Does God promise salvation to sinners without the precincts of Christ's church?

My design in soliciting a solution of the above queries is to illicit truth.

TIMOTHY.

For the Western Recorder.

Mr. Editor: I have felt, and still fell, great anxiety for a liberal support for just such a periodical, in this region, as the WESTERN RECORDER. Since the hard time in monetary affairs, I have anticipated the disposition of some to discontinue at the close of the current volume; and it appears, from your remarks, that some have already given notice to that effect. Now, can it be possible, that any man who professes to love the church, and to feel an interest in her prosperity, for the sake of saving two dollars per annum, would thus prove recreant to the cause of religious liberty? Suppose he should himself derive no particular advantage from such a paper, let him reflect upon the bearing it has upon the cause in general; let him reflect upon the loss we sustained the two and a half years that we were without a periodical in the West, and then let him ask his conscience if he can withdraw his aid in this peculiar time of need, without doing violence to the sacred monitor? No, we think the consistent and honest man says, before I will do so, I will deny myself of some useless luxury, or I will work a little the harder for the purpose of continuing my patronage to the Recorder.

Again, it should be borne in mind, that the editor has risked, by way of investment, in a printing establishment and office, some twelve hundred dollars, to accommodate the public interest; this has been risked on the faith of the church. What sense of honor or honesty can the man have, who would back out with his patronage, under the pretext of hard times, and leave the editor under these circumstances to contend with his difficulties unaided? I understand from him that he does not expect to make money with the paper; that he would be satisfied if it would clear expenses; but, that, if it does not do this, after a fair experiment, he will abandon the enterprise. Come, now, brethren up to the work! The plea of hard times, in this case, will afford no sufficient apology for your deficiency in duty. Let us all forward, at once, the pay for the 2d volume, in advance, so as to enable the editor to meet his engagements, that he may attend to the interests of the paper without having his mind perplexed with financial difficulties, so that the good cause may not suffer loss through our covetousness or neglect.

July 21, 1840. A. MCGUIRE.

RELIGIOUS INTELLIGENCE.

GREEN COUNTY, PA., JULY 23, 1840.

Dear Sir: At a protracted meeting held at the Glades, commencing the 4th of July and ending on the 7th, we had a good meeting; a considerable number experienced religion and fifteen united with the Methodist Protestant Church on probation. My conference year on this circuit is now nearly ended; on a review of the past, there is cause of thankful emotions to the Great Head of the church for the manifestations of His goodness and mercy displayed in the conversion of sinners from the error of their ways, and the comfort and edification of believers.

Middletown circuit is situated in the pleasant valley of the Monongahela, embracing a number of thriving towns, such as Morgantown, Middletown and Pruntytown, with others of less population. In Morgantown there is an excellent academy, and at Pruntytown a seminary consisting of eighty scholars. A considerable degree of attention is manifested in the country to the education of the rising generation. The owners of the soil are, in general, its cultivators.—A number of well made roads pass through this section of the country, on which stages run daily. The citizens are intelligent, friendly and hospitable. The distance round this circuit is upwards of one hundred miles. This journey, performed in four weeks, would average about four miles a day. Eighteen classes or societies and twenty preaching places. It may be proper here to notice, that at most of the appointments on the circuit, there has been some additions the present year; some new societies have been formed, and in general, harmony prevails among the membership, except on the all absorbing question of who shall be the next President of these United States.

I have one more round to complete before conference and a few protracted meetings to attend. Permit me here to acknowledge the obligations of gratitude which I owe to God for His goodness to me, in thus far preserving my life and health; and to my fellow laborers in the good work, brothers P. T. Laishley and Asby Pool, both of them, together with the exhorters and leaders of the classes who have taken a deep interest in the revivals on this circuit, the present year. I hope, in a few weeks, to retire from my field of labor with sentiments of gratitude to all my kind friends on Middletown circuit. J. FORDYCE.

PENNSVILLE, OHIO, JULY 22, 1830.

Mr. Editor: No department in the Western Recorder excites more interest with the most of its patrons than the news of Zion's success. I, for one, first look for the revival intelligence, and when I find it not, as might be expected, I infer one of the two things: 1. That the ark is standing still, or 2dly., that there is a want of promptness on the part of the ministers or preachers and others, in furnishing the glad tidings. It is but reasonable, that the ministers of the several circuits and stations, should forward notices of the work of God within their respective charges, as they must be, of necessity, better acquainted with its character and extent than any others can be; yet, have not several of our useful itinerants been reprehensibly delinquent in this matter? And some too, who stand prominent in the righteous cause? I am aware, however, that some, in parts of our District, have become so completely surfeited with garbled and extravagant accounts, submitted to the world, by many the different orders of Christendom, of revivals, that they may judge it most prudent to be entirely silent, lest their report should be doubted also. In this, however, I am convinced they may err. Truth should not be covered up under a bushel, because it may be abused, but should be placed upon a candlestick. The adage is a good one, which says: "By the faults of others, wise men correct their own." If others have gloried in proclaiming converts with too much confidence or superficial evidence, this should teach us to observe greater caution and modesty. It is earnestly desired that communications should be more regular in all of our periodicals, in relation to the spiritual condition of our church. Why should the servants of God be silent, because of the incredulity of enemies? Our Jacob shall arise by the hand of the most high God.

I would say to the friends of Zion's welfare, that we have had, recently, on this circuit, three revivals—put up one frame meeting house in Columbia—others under contemplation,—and have received into the M. P. Church, on probation and full membership, the present conference year, ONE HUNDRED AND EIGHTY-EIGHT, and are still looking for more. Your most ob't. serv't.,

D. Y. OSTROM.

EAST BETHLEHEM, PA., JULY 21, 1840.

Mr. Editor: It pleased the Lord in His abundant goodness, in 1832, under the preaching of the Rev. Mr. ——, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, to awaken me to a sense of my lost condition, as a sinner exposed to eternal death. I sought and found the Saviour in the pardon of sin.

"This was wonderous grace indeed, Grace bestowed in time of need."

At that time I knew but little about doctrine, and nothing about the government of the M. E. Church, but I united with said church, and commenced attending to my class and prayer meetings. Frequently did the Lord so animate my soul that my cup was made to run over.

It happened sometime in 1833 that a society of the M. P. Church was organized in the neighborhood in which I lived. Immediately it was said, by some of my old brethren, that the M. P. Church was made up of backsliden Methodists; that they would go to sticks. Indeed, I have heard my old class leader say that God had nothing for the Protestant Methodists to do. They were so near the old church they had nothing in their system, as a change for the better, to offer to the world. It happened, while in company with one of my brethren, that our conversation was directed to the government of the M. E. Church, he told me that the travelling preachers had the power, according to the discipline, to retain or expel accused members as they pleased.—This conversation led me to examine the discipline, and I accordingly found that the good brother was correct. But this is not all, I found that every Protestant church in the United States had a lay representative except the M. E. Church.—This I believe to be wrong. Ought not laymen to have a voice in making rules by which they are to be governed? The Bible and common sense answers in the affirmative.

After I had thus viewed the subject prayerfully, I came to the conclusion that it was my duty to forsake the church to which I belonged, and to unite with the M. P. Church. Accordingly I did so about two weeks since. In the old church are many of my nearest friends, and had it not been for a sense of my duty I should not have left the home of my spiritual nativity, and sought another where the God of wisdom might direct. But, Mr. Editor, I am glad that I have done what I conceive to be my duty. O! that the Lord would abundantly bless the labors of the M. P. Church, and may the cause of religious liberty roll onward and onward until the whole world shall be brought to partake of its blessed effects.

Yours, &c. B. DOTROM.

WESTERN RECORDER.

ZANESVILLE:

WEDNESDAY, ... AUGUST 5, 1840.

The north eastern disputed Territory is said to contain seven millions of acres.

We continue to have abundance of rain; the small streams keep quite flush, which commonly at this time of year are dry.

The August number of the Lady's Book is received. Embellishments, the Pilgrim, an original steel engraving,—Colored Fashions.

They had green corn in Charleston, S. C., the last week in May, says the Mercury. Now is about the season the roasting ear commences with us.

TEMPERANCE IN CHARLESTON, SOUTH CAROLINA.—The Temperance Society of Prince William's Parish, are petitioning the Legislature to prohibit by law the sale of ardent spirits.

The appraisers under the new law are passing round in the discharge of their duties. As a general rule, where there are no additional public improvements since the last valuation, they add 33⅓ per cent. to the old appraisement.

The amount of flour inspected in Baltimore, the past year, ending with June, says Lyford, was 756,277 bbls., which is the largest amount ever before inspected in that city in one year.—Its estimated value is over $3,700,000.

We give an article in this paper from the Philadelphia Ledger, to which we particular call the reader's attention. It not only involves a subject of much interest, but is very instructive also; it shows how often domestic happiness is sacrificed at the shrine of wealth and pleasure.

Mr. Garrison's women were rejected, by a formal vote, from a seat in the "World's Convention." It is said, after this rejection, he would take no part in the business of the convention, but sulked about the city of London until it was over.

There was a tremendous storm of rain and hail, fell in the vicinity of Gratiot and Mt. Sterling, on last Saturday. It is said to have done much damage by the hail destroying vegetation, and the torrents washing away fences and flooding meadows, destroying grass not yet secured.

A bale of new cotton was received in New Orleans on the 11th ultimo, and shipped for Liverpool on the 13th. The first new bale which came to hand last year was on the 5th, and the year before on the 25th of August. This shows this season to be forward at New Orleans as well as in this region.

ALLEGHENY CITY.—This place having received a city charter by the Legislature of Pa., Jas. Robinson, Jr., was elected Mayor on the 4th ult. His excellency, in his inaugural address, states that Allegheny city is the third, in point of population, in the State. Philadelphia 1st., Pittsburgh 2d, Allegheny 3d and Lancaster 4th.

Harris' (Pittsburgh) Intelligencer has entered on its fifth volume. This is a first rate business sheet, and should be in the hands of every farmer and merchant in the West. It is published every Saturday morning by Isaac Harris, No. 120, Liberty street, at two dollars per annum, in advance.

DREADFUL.—A letter to the editor of the Charleston (S. C.) Mercury, dated, Woodstock, Combahee, July 20th, describes a dreadful thunder storm which passed over that country on the 17th of that instant, in which it is stated, that out of twenty colored people, who were crowded into a house, to take refuge from the storm, nine were instantly killed by a flash of lightning, and five so badly stunned that they did not recover their senses for hours.

LOUISIANA ELECTIONS.—These have resulted in the election of two Whigs and one Van Buren member for Congress. The majority of Whigs in the State, 2317. The Legislature will have, on a joint ballot, two of a Whig majority, which is of importance to them as there is a Senator to be elected the coming session. There were, however, three parishes in the 3d District to hear from; these in the account for the Legislature are given to the administration.

A letter from Washington city to the Baltimore Sun, describes a tremendous freshet at that place, on Thursday, the 30th ultimo. The Tiber, a small brook which runs through the city, swelled to a river of 100 yards in breadth, carrying fences, lumber and every thing in its way before it. Damage is said to have been done, in the city, to the amount of $40,000. The wall on the south side of the President's house is said to have been injured, part of it being carried away by the flood.

ITEMS.

Several western merchants have just arrived in town, and the prospect of a fair fall business is highly encouraging.—Bicknell.

Mrs. Sigourney is about to sail to Europe.

GOLD.—A lump of virgin gold was picked up on the surface of the ground, near Galena, Iowa, a short time since. A Galena paper expresses confidence that if proper search be made, it will be found in large quantities in that vicinity.

The corn crops of Missouri are described as highly promising.

A small farm of 25 acres, on the Windsor Road, two miles from Baltimore, was sold a day or two ago, for $3,620.

A report had reached Savannah that a party of Dragoons had been fired on by the Indians near Pilatka, and two killed.

The steamboat "American" was burnt while wooding in the Ouchita river on the 10th ult.—Boat and cargo a total loss.

Much sickness is said to prevail all along the Tennessee river. Many farmers had deserted their farms and gone to the mountains, and the crops in the river bottoms were "drowned out."

London contains a population of nearly 2,000,000.

It is estimated that New Orleans has a population of more than 100,000.

The stock of the Girard Bank fell on Thursday two per cent. in consequence, as the Philadelphia papers say, of the intimation expressed by the Stonington Rail Road Company of contesting the legality of the loan from the Bank to the Road, on the ground of usury.

Commodore Elliott and his sentence can't be let alone by the newspapers. It is now stated on the authority of a Washington letter writer, that the President has affirmed the sentence of the Court Martial upon Commodore Elliott, except to that part of it depriving him of his pay and emoluments for two years. The Commodore will therefore be suspended from command for four years, but continue to receive his salary, &c.

The day of large gains—for making rapid fortunes—has gone by for the present, and it will not do to despise the day of small things. Men must now consent to make an effort to get even a decent living.

ANOTHER SWARTWOUTER.—C. L. Cole, late a resident in Cincinnati, has belied the census returns by making himself scarce. He was a broker, and had a partner named Danforth, by whose assistance he is said to have plundered various institutions and individuals to the tune of from $200,000 to $250,000. It would appear from a biography of the gentleman, published by the Cincinnati News, that he was formerly of Binghampton, in this State, where he was cashier and subsequently president of the Binghampton Bank; and that more recently he was a broker in this city, manager of the Jewett City Bank, &c.—N. Y. paper.

Mr. E. C. Delavan, who recently succeeded against the Albany brewers in a suit for libel, charged them with making beer from vile, filthy water, taken from stagnant pools, gutters and ditches, in which were dead animals, and in which the water was often green on the surface, and of the thickness of cream. He proved the fact, and gained the suit. Who would drink Albany beer after this?

The father of Daniel and Ezekiel Webster mortgaged his humble premises in Salisbury, to get the boys through college, and never recovered possession till filial gratitude supplied the means.

The most magnificent trees in the world are probably those which grow on the coast of the Pacific. Some of them are 300 feet in height, with 200 feet from the ground to the lowest limb, and 50 feet in circumference.

George McDuffie, of South Carolina, who has lately made an attack upon General Harrison, is a brother-in-law of Abraham Van Buren, the eldest son of the President—both these gentlemen having married sisters.

The Rev. Robert Newton, the distinguished Methodist divine, who lately visited this country, arrived at Liverpool in the ship George Washington on the morning of July 1.

MINERAL RICHES OF VIRGINIA.—Bitumious coal occurs at intervals over a tract of 35 miles from South Anna river near its mouth to the Appomatox. In some places the coal seam is found 40 feet thick. It is found in abundance within 15 miles of Richmond, in Henrico, in Chesterfield, in Goochland, in Powhattan—on James' river and on the Tuckahoe. At Mid Lothian pit, in Chesterfield county, a shaft has been sunk 720 feet below the surface, and a seam of fine coal has been penetrated 11 feet.

Iron is found in abundance in various parts of the State. There are seven mines of it in Spotsylvania, near the junction of the Rappahannock and the Rapian rivers.

Of gold mines, generally less valuable than iron, there are 12 in Goochland—15 in Orange—11 in Culpepper—25 in Spotsylvania—10 in Stafford, and 6 in Fauquier. Total gold mines, 80!!

There are also five copper mines in Fauquier county. The mineral resources in Virginia are truly most extensive and valuable.

BRITISH STEAM MAIL.—We learn that hereafter the North American mails are to be made up in London on the 2d and 18th of each month for the steamers of Mr. Cunard's line, and that they will leave Liverpool on the 4th and 20th.

The passengers in the Cristoval Colon, on the morning of the 5th ult. had a view of the chase of two outward bound slavers, belonging to Havana, by the British armed schooner Pickle.—One was the brig Urraca, the other a schooner, name unknown. The Pickle chased them toward the coast of Cuba, firing upon them occasionally, but it was believed that they made their escape into Jaruco, or some other small port upon the coast.

THE ARAB SHIP SULTANEE.—This vessel, after being thoroughly overhauled at the Navy Yard, at Government expense, is now taking in a cargo and will sail for Maderia and then to Muscat, about the 1st of August.—N. Y. paper.

Wm. Evans who killed John C. Ritter at Sandusky city, a few weeks since, has been tried and found guilty of murder in the first degree.

THE PROGRESS OF CRIME.—A fellow in Natchez was taken up the other day for robbing a fellow boarder. He was a dancing master, and acknowledged that his first step in crime was cheating a printer. Let this be a warning.

Some of the correspondents of the Western Recorder, complain that political excitement acts as a great hindrance to revivals in that section. Not a doubt of it. Present indications in our own State (Maryland) favor such an opinion.—Methodist Protestant.

Mr. Lynch, postmaster at Pittsburgh, Pa., is said to be a defaulter to the amount of seven thousand dollars.

A universalist correspondent of the Religious Telegraph writes: "Twenty years since we had but one preacher in Ohio, now we have forty-eight. Then we had no church or society, now we have between 60 and 70 societies, and 32 houses of public worship belonging to us entire or in part."—Cross and Journal.

The Western Christian Advocate states that at a love-feast held at Wesleyan Chapel, in Cincinnati, on the 12th instant, nearly 500 persons whose probation had expired, were "received into full connection."—ib.

A DROUGHT.—The New Hampshire Courier says: "Never since the settlement of Concord, has there been so pinching a drought as is now felt in this place and in this part of the State. Every thing feels it and droops beneath its power. Rye, wheat and oats are well nigh ruined, while grass is burning in the fields almost to a crisp. Corn, too, suffers greatly. Indeed, every thing suffers for the want of rain."

The country in the vicinity of Boston has suffered much for the want of rain for some weeks. The springs have been nearly dried up, the rivers and streams have been exceedingly low, to the great annoyance of our manufacturers.

The Britannia arrived at Boston on Saturday evening, and the fact was known in Baltimore on Monday evening.

The mainmast of the line battle ship Queen, of 120 guns, is 127 feet 7 inches high, and her mainyard 111 feet 4 inches long. They are considered to be the largest mast and yard ever made.

SPECIE.—$100,000 in specie arrived in this city a day or two since, for the United States Bank—also $100,000 in New York, for the Bank of America.—Bicknell.

The Collectors of New York and Boston are now acting under the new sub-treasury law, and all payments are required to be made one-fourth in specie.

THE MONEY MARKET.—We are now in the midst of the summer, and it is probable that there are more Philadelphians absent from the city at this moment, than at any other period of the year. Of course, the natural consequence is, inactivity of business. Still, we have symptoms of the commencement of the fall trade, and occasionally, we hear a fact calculated to shew, that the commercial energies of the country are not utterly prostrate, but only temporarily so. Thus it is computed that in Philadelphia city & county, there are now in progress, upwards of 500 new buildings. Rents have improved in Lowell, & in some instances in Boston, while we are told in Baltimore there is not a house carpenter out of work. Woollen goods have advanced from 15 to 20 per cent in New York within the last six months. The Bank of Charleston have determined to resume specie payments, and one day last week $170,000 in specie were received in this city for the U. S. Bank, and $100,000 in New York, for the Bank of America.—These, in connexion with an abundant harvest, the demand for flour in England, the activity of cotton, the probable pacific adjustment of the Boundary Question, and the general peace of Europe, may be pointed to as favorable signs of the times in a business and monetary sense. We therefore affirm the opinion heretofore expressed in our columns—that the prospect is brightening, that we have experienced the worst, that the recuperative energies of the country are beginning to manifest themselves.—Bicknell.

STOP THE MURDERER!—Messrs. James and Robert Mickelbury, of Terre Haute, Indiana, offer $200 reward for the apprehension of Noah Beauchamp, who, on the 17th of July, entered the house of George Mickelbury, one of his neighbors, and without any provocation killed him, in the presence of his family, by plunging a large knife into his bosom. Beauchamp is described as a man six feet high, inclined to corpulency, sallow complexion, heavy eye-brows, blue eyes with considerable white, down look when spoken to, and 62 years of age—hair and whiskers gray. He had on a white hat, blue jean pantaloons, and dove-colored striped cotton roundabout. One hundred dollars is offered for securing him in any jail in the United States, and two hundred for his delivery to the Sheriff of Vigo county, Indiana.

The World's Convention, so called though composed only of delegates from the United States, Great Britain & France with one or two from the West Indies commenced its session in London, June 12th, and adjourned the 23d. The venerable Thomas Clarkson presided. The number of delegates in attendance was about 400. The object of the convention was the promotion of the Anti-Slavery cause. An attempt was made by one of the American delegates to procure the recognition of female delegates, but it was ineffectual. In consequence of this Messrs. Garrison, Rogers and Remond delegates from the American Anti-Slavery Society, declined taking seats in the convention. Instead of prayers, the meeting was opened and closed with "devotional silence."—Cross and Jour.

We regret to have to say that the grain and grass crops in the Lake country will be rather short. The fly has done considerable damage to the wheat fields in different sections, and the meadows will not yield more than half their usual returns of hay. Grasshoppers have been destructive on some farms. Spring wheat and oats generally light. Corn fields look promising.—Cleveland Herald.

Treasury Notes outstanding on the 1st instant, $2,129,717 37.

HE RECORDER.

ZANESVILLE.

WNESDAY, ... AUGUST 5, 1840.

Ohio Conference will commence its next a session in Cincinnati, on the last Tues- this instant.

Pittsburgh Conference will commence in Steubenville, Ohio, on the second Tuesday, or 8th September. The members on arriving will call on Br. M. M. Laughlin, Main street, one door east of the Farmers and Mechanics' Bank, who will see them conducted to their lodgings. We believe the resolution of the last conference provides that the members must pay the expense of their own horses.

Friendly Post Master, to the west, who for- us six dollars for two subscribers, and no- us of their intention to discontinue at the of the time for which that amount pays, am sorry to have to notify you to discon- so many papers, as I believe them valuable. only reason I can give is, that politics have me more interesting than theology."

e publishers of the American Wesleyan ever, decline continuing that work any r, after the six months are up, for which it rst proposed to issue it. It is probable have found that the Methodist Episcopal ch has made such proficiency in good works, t is not willing to sustain a publication goes for the rights of the white man.

e noticed some time since the recent establ- ent of the "Seventh Day Baptist Register, eRuyter, New York." It proves to be an tent religious and miscellaneous paper; and like the piety and liberality of spirit it ses, we wish it great success. If there should y of that persuasion among our readers, might wish this paper, and will hand or re- us the cash, we will forward it for them.— paper is about the size of our own, issued ly at two dollars in advance.

ys the Wesleyan Observer of the 23d ulti- "The last number of the Christian Advo- and Journal contains a long editorial in fication of the late General Conference on Temperance question, and in favor of the of wine." The Dr. can't get along, it seems, out a little stimuli.

e Committee in charge of that subject, have d a convention, of the abolition members of Methodist Episcopal Church, to meet on the of October next, in the city of New York, termine the course they ought to pursue r existing circumstances.

e forgot to say, in our last, that Mr. Sun- und, the editor of Zion's Watchman, has had eventh trial before the authorities of the M. Church. Although he has heretofore escaped, as, on this occasion, found guilty of the 15th ification. Slandering Bishop Soule. We ve a majority of the New England Confer- e, who finally decided on the case, were abo- nists, in common with himself. Now, whether decision was correct or incorret, we do not tend to say, but one thing we do say, he has guilty of slandering the Methodist Protest- Church, by misrepresenting her Discipline, when his attention was called to the fact, as omitted or refused to correct his error.— really wish the brother no harm, but we have ng convictions that he is not the man he ht to be.

he following preamble and resolutions have n copied from the acts of the conference:

Whereas, it clearly appears by the facts refer- to in the trial of Rev. L. R. Sunderland, ch has just closed, that he has pursued a rse inconsistent with his character as a mem- of this conference, and especially as a son in Gospel, therefore,

Resolved, 1st, That he be required to make milar acknowledgement to that made this fore- on by Rev. J. D. Bridge, Adopted, 61 in the rmative, 25 in the negative.

Resolved, 2d, That on condition of his com- ing with the above, his character pass. Adopt- —no count.

Also, Resolved, That this conference require t Rev. La Roy Sunderland publish in Zion's atchman, without note or comment, the 15th ecification in his trial, and the decision upon t specification.

The resolution was adopted, 49 in the affirma- ve, 21 in the negative.

For the Western Recorder.

"EXPLANATION IS ALWAYS IN ORDER."

Mr. Editor: In some editorial remarks, con- ined in the last and preceding number of the ecorder, I am placed in an attitude in relation J. Smith, of Sugar Grove, which it never was y intention to occupy.

I think you might with equal, or greater pro- iety have said, "Clarke against" the editor, "against" T. P. Armstrong, than "Clarke gainst Smith." My article in the 46th number as penned without any reference to that gen- eman, or his productions, farther than the ed- or seemed to have endorsed his "essays" in behalf of the patrons of the Recorder. The rticle was designed for general effect in behalf f what seemed to the writer, the plain and spe- al duty of the church, her ministers and peri- dicals, in relation to the subject of slavery. As r J. Smith, I had seen nothing over that sig- ature to which I felt it my duty to reply. When writer professing to have no connection with e church, comes out in her periodicals, with ictatorial instructions to the ministers of Christ, t variance with plain duty and a good con- cience, and enforced only by approbrious epi- hets and slanderous insinuations, silent rebuke the only judicious reply that such a case seems admit of. Besides, the suspicion has rested oo strong on my mind, that "J. Smith" is an ncog, to admit the hope of producing effect up- n him by any thing which might be written in eply.

With how much justice or propriety, there- ore, you have brought me under your restrictive egulations, published on the third page of the 6th number, I leave with a candid community o decide. Against these regulations, however, feel less disposition to complain, than against he attempt to place me in antagonistical rela- ion and individual encounter with J. Smith.

Yours, &c., JNO. CLARKE.

Allegheny, July 15, 1840.

At this explanation we are no little surprised; it seems the writer mainly intended us, &c., and not J. Smith. Really, if we had laid down and tried to dream who he alluded to, it certainly never would have entered into our vison that he meant us as one of the principals. It is true, that our brother, in his former article, did allude to us in connection with our "correspondents," and especially the man at "Sugar Grove," and indicated what he has here positively expressed, viz: that we "have endorsed Mr. Smith's essays on the behalf of the patrons of the Recorder."— But we knew at the time the insinuation was totally incorrect, but still not wishing to make a fuss about every such blunder, we agreed to let it pass. But he has now placed himself in such an attitude that we are compelled to correct him, in justice to ourself. We do not object so much to the charge he has preferred against as to his manner of doing it. "Endorsed," says he, "in behalf of the patrons of the Recorder."— What are we to understand by this but an insinuation that the editor wishes to dictate for his readers? We think our brother will see, when he looks this matter all over, that this style is not as decorous as it might be.

As for our "endorsing" the opinions of Mr. J. Smith, we unequivocally deny it. Whatever may be our views of the sentiments of this correspondent, it has not yet became our duty to pronounce upon them. We have certainly learned prudence enough by this time of the day, to keep aloof from party opinions, occupying the position we do, where no duty is calling on us to avow ourself. It is true, that in reply to our brother Boyd, who had charged a portion of the M. P. Church with being recreant to their principles of free discussion, in defence of the church, we stated that some of our folks were opposed to "mingling church and political matters," and referred to an article of Mr. J. Smith, stating, "we believed his former essays were generally approved by our readers," cautioning the reader at the same time that we were not giving our own opinion but those of "our correspondents generally." Our Br. Clarke refers, in his previous communication. to the Recorder of June 3d, to which, if the reader will advert, he will see whether we are correct or no. Stating that Smith's essays were generally received was neither stating that they were orthodox or that we subscribed to them. It was a mere matter of opinion, in regard to this reception, in which we may or may not be correct.

Now, my brother, you have reproved us for placing your name in connexion with Smith. You say you did not "refer" to him, &c., at the same time you named his residence, quoted his sayings, animadverted upon his opinions, while we had "endorsed" or expressed no opinion for you to stricture.

We do not accuse our brother of intentionally misrepreseuting us; it was probably done through that kind of inattention against which we should try to guard.—We shall have to ask it as a favor of our friends, and correspondents, to spare us as much as possible from such attacks as this; for we certainly have toil and perplexity enough, without being compelled to answer such childish allegations as the above.

As it respects the restrictions alluded to; we have made none upon Br. Clarke which we have not upon others, and we have heard no complaint yet but his.

NEW ENGLAND METHODIST CONFERENCE.—In a sermon preached before this body, recently in session at Lowell, by the venerable and excellent "Father Pickering," the preacher remarked that he had been in the Methodist connection as a preacher, fifty years. He said that when he joined the connection there were but five conferences in the United States, 227 travelling preachers, 46,000 white and 11,000 colored members, and out of that number, not more than six ministers are now living, and not one continues as a regular travelling preacher—while, at the present time, in the New England States alone, there are 60,000 members of the Methodist Church, attended by 500 regular itinerant ministers.

The London Times of July 1, in an article on the money market and foreign securities, takes the opportunity of good faith exhibited by the United States towards their foreign creditors in times past, and particularly at present, by the procedure of the Legislature of the State of Pennsylvania in passing a tax bill, for the purpose of providing for the public engagements. The Times speaks in terms of commendation of the sentiments contained in Biddle's speech, in favor of maintaining "the plighted faith of the States," which he delivered at the opening of the Tide Water Canal.

The Buffalo Journal says:—"We have a rumor of a heavy embezzlement and flight of an officer attached to the Bank of Circleville, Ohio, with funds belonging to that and other Ohio Banks, and some $200.000 in Indiana scrip. The bills of the Circlevile Bank, and another in the north-western part of the State, have for several days been looked upon with distrust by our brokers. The rumor needs confirmation." False we think.

MORE COUNTERFEITERS.—A nest of counterfeiters, consisting of sheriffs, magistrates, lawyers, doctors, colonels, majors, landlords, and other dignitaries, who have been carrying on their depredations over a large portion of Michigan, are likely to be broken up, in consequence of some disclosures made by the wife of one of them.—Bicknell.

The crops in this vicinity generally indicate an abundant harvest. The wheat crop promises fair, some fields of which will probably be harvested this week, and corn looks better than it has for several years. Both of these crops are at least two weeks earlier than they were last year.—Fayetteville (N. Y.) Luminary.

He that studieth revenge, keepeth his own wounds green.—Bacon.

THE BANK OF MANHATTAN, N.Y.—The Cleveland Herald states that the bills of this Bank are now received by the Banks of that place, and publishes the following extract of a letter from the President of the Manhattan Bank, dated July 16:

"The Bank is able to pay every dollar it owes, redeem all its circulation, and still have a capital left."

The President also states in the letter, that although Cole drew two drafts on the Bank, one of $18,000, and another of $25,000, neither of the drafts was paid by the institution.

NATCHEZ.—The citizens of this place have become toward tornadoes like the inhabitants of tropical climes toward earthquakes. The following paragraph is from the Free Trader:

On Tuesday last, the heat was oppressive, the thermometer ranging from 90 to 95 in the shade. At about 5 o'clock P. M., the sky represented every indication of a storm, and soon the threatening clouds hovered over our devoted city and the high winds filled the air with clouds of dust. The stores and dwellings were instantly closed, carriages were seen to fly in either direction, and citizens left their homes to seek shelter in some neighboring ravine, in anticipation of another tornado. It became like one lurid night, with now and then vivid flashes of lightning and the roar of Heaven's dread artillery; but all passed away without the fall of sufficient rain to lay the dust or the occurrence of an incident. True, the interval of suspense was filled up with the fears and pains naturally indulged by those who witnessed the late tornado.

From the Baltimore American of Wednesday.

FINAL ADJOURNMENT OF CONGRESS.—Congress adjourned yesterday sine die, at two o'clock, P. M. A large number of the members reached this city yesterday evening by the rail road trains. We learn verbally that a rencontre took place on Tuesday evening in the rotunda of the Capitol, between two of the members. Our correspondent's letter thus briefly notices the sitting of yesterday:

WASHINGTON, July 21, 1840.

The Fortification, Army, Naval, Indian and West Point Appropriation Bills have passed both Houses.

The Army and Fortification bills, empowering the President to suspend the Appropriations to such an extent as he may deem proper, in case there shall be a deficit in the Treasury arising from the U. S. Bank and Deposite Banks to pay their debts at the appointed time.

In the House this morning, Mr. Adams succeeded in getting passed a joint resolution of the Senate, for the relief of the workmen on the public buildings during a suspension of the appropriations.

Mr. Cushing gave notice that at the commencement of next sesssion he would call up at an early period the bill in relation to French Spoilations.

The House then passed a few Territorial bills of an unimportant character, when the hour of 2 P. M. having arrived, it adjourned sine die.

From the Philadelphia Ledger of Saturday last.

NOVEL AND IMPORTANT CASE.

There has been a good deal of smothered feeling in this city, for some days past, in relation to a case understood to be pending before the Judges of the Court of General Sessions. It is a hearing on a writ of habeas corpus, directed by a husband to his wife, demanding the surrender of the custody of a son, the fruit of their coverture, to the former. The case has thus far been heard privately, at the chamber of one or other of the Judges, and the mystery thus thrown around it has naturally tended to excite the public curiosity in relation to its details. The counsel engaged in it are of the highest respectability, viz: Messrs. Binney, Meredith, J. R. Ingersoll, Scott, Reed, Cadwallader, and one or two eminent gentlemen of the New York and Baltimore bars. The little that has been disclosed in relation to the facts of this case has been greatly distorted and exaggerated, and the wildest fictions have been circulated and believed. We have been at more than ordinary pains to ascertain the real character of the proceedings, and, after considerable exertion, find ourselves in possession of most of the circumstances which have, up to the present moment, transpired. The case turns out to be one not merely of intense interest, from the character of the parties and the romantic nature of the incidents and feelings involved in it, but of deep and pervading importance, in reference to the principles on which it must be decided. Were it simply a matter of news or gossip, it would find a place in another department of this journal; but involving, as it does, principles of universal application, every parent has an interest in it, and we feel it to be our duty to treat it with earnestness and deliberation. With these views, we proceed to give a succinct view of the case, premising that, as we were not present at the hearing, and have gathered our details from different sources, we may possibly err in some unimportant particulars, though in the leading facts, we are confident of our accuracy.

In giving this information to our readers, we violate no obligation to the court or the public. Originally, the relator, the husband, applied for a hearing at the Judges' chamber. Since that time, it is understood he has asked for a public hearing, and though his wife shrinks with proper delicacy from the exposure, she does not oppose it. Sooner or later, therefore, it will be made public, and we will not be censured for being the first to furnish the narrative. We may remark, however, in passing, that while—as the matter is to be bruited abroad, we are gratified at having it in our power to give the history to our readers in advance of other publications, we cannot contemplate with respect the conduct of a husband, who, dead to all the better sensibilities of our nature, makes the sacred secrets of his household a ribald jest in the mouths of the vulgar, and unbinds his wounds, like a highway mendicant, that the nauseous exhibiton may excite the disgusted compassion of the passer-by.

The history of the proceeding is briefly as follows: A writ of habeas corpus was taken by Count D'Hautville, as he is generally termed, though we believe the title has lapsed, directed to David Sears, Miriam Sears and Ellen D'Hautville. The petition states that the above named persons have in custody the son of M. D'Hautville, aged twenty montns, and prays that he may be restored to his father. It alleges that M. D'Hautville married Ellen Sears in the Canton de Vaud, in Switzerland, and that the said Ellen separated herself from her husband, and remained with her father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Sears, refusing to return to D'Hautville, or surrender to him his child. It moreover alleges that this separation is without just cause, and expresses the wish of the petitioner to be restored to his wife as well as his child.

The return made to this writ, by Mr. and Mrs. Sears, is that they have not the body of the child in their possession.—Madame D'Hautville admits that she has the child, but claims the custody of it during its infancy, and avers that her separation from her husband has been the necessary result of his want of sympathy and affection for her.

To this return the husband has filed an elaborate reply, termed a suggestion, which, with the return, comprehends a history of this ill-matched and ill-starred people. The return and suggestion are said to be drawn up not merely with professional skill, but with touching eloquence, and each of them embodies letters and narratives of the most romantic and passionate interest. We will not venture to follow them in their details, in which, not deriving information from the documents themselves, we might fall into error, but will content ourselves with an outline of the facts of the case, and a brief notice of the parties concerned.

Madame D'Hautville, the wife, is now nineteen years of age. She is the daughter of Mr. David Sears, of Boston, a gentleman who inherited a fortune of nearly a million of dollars, which has been greatly increased by a well-directed and diligent enterprise. In personal attractions she is almost unequalled, being considered the loveliest of her sex. Her manners are lively and agreeable, and her mind is said to be vigorous and accomplish. Such of her letters as were read are characterized, by those who heard them, as admirable in sentiment and style. We are informed, also, that she is fond of society, gay, fashionable, and accustomed to the best circles of Parisan life, to which she is greatly attached. The husband, M. D'Hautville, is under the ordinary size, and has nothing in person or manner to distinguish him from the throng. His eyes and face are dull, and his manner heavy and phlegmatic.—He is about twenty-seven years old. At each of the different hearings, husband, wife and child met without emotion. Not a nerve or muscle betrayed the presence of the sensibility. M. D'Hautville appears to be of a melancholy temperament: he is a high-toned Geneva Calvinist, and his letters to his wife, though affectionate, manifest more of religion than love. The child is a fat, chubby, lubberly infant, that seems to regard the whole affair with signal contempt, and laughs or squalls without the least respect for court or parties, even in the most pathetic passages of the trial.

The circumstances preceding and attending the marriage of these parties appear to be these: Mr. and Mrs. Sears, and their young and lovely daughter, encountered, on their tour over the continent, M. D'Hautville, whose family occupied a place in the foremost social rank in Switzerland. He was pleased with Miss Sears, and the parents thought it a most eligible match for their daughter. Their partiality for each other was accordingly encouraged, and a negotiation for the marriage of the "young people" was commenced in due form. In the course of the negotiation, however, Mr. Sears discovered that M. D'Hautville, the father of the gallant, was not rich as had been supposed, and the affair was suddenly broken off. Young D'Hautville and his betrothed both manifested considerable distress at this untoward result of their courtship; and Mr. Sears, moved by the affliction of his daughter, renewed the suspended arrangements, and the lovers were married. Mr. Sears alleges, in one of his letters, that the marriage, on the part of his daughter, was a sacrifice to duty. If this were so, it was, perhaps, a generous fault in the girl, but does it not also prove that the father hazarded the happiness of his child for the gratification of his pride! It is also asserted that there were two distinct stipulations, which, though not included in the marriage articles, were of equal obligation: the first of which was, that the bride was to spend all her winters in Paris; the second, that she should spend as much of her time as she desired in America. These stipulations were the rocks on which their domestic happiness was wrecked. After the marriage, Mr. Sears returned to America, leaving his wife with their daughter. The lady pursued a course too common with inconsiderate mothers-in-law. She soon excited heart-burnings and unhappiness in the before happy family of the D'Hautvilles, and succeeded in persuading her daughter that her husband, though exemplary and affectionate, was not so attentive and indulgent as he should be. The poison soon began to work. The bride, passionately devoted to the pleasures of Paris, repaired to that giddy and dissipated capital. The husband, whose tastes and principles were more serene than those of his wife, regarded a residence in Paris as dangerous to their happiness, and required her to return to Geneva. Determined not to comply with his wishes, she fled to the hotel of the American Ministers. Several other incidents occurred which demonstrate that she had resolved, if she must choose between her accustomed gaities and enjoyments and her husband's love, that the former would be her election.—About this time she also insisted upon returning to America, though her husband being in attendance upon a sick parent, was unable to accompany her. The plea on which this separation took place, was por sæ couchment. Though mortified and wretched at the course of his wife, Golsalva, for such is his name, did not constrain her to remain. They parted with every outward token of sensibility and affection. Tears and the most passionate embraces showed the real or pretended anguish of the separation. The same feelings are expressed in a tender letter written by her immediately on her arrival at New York. But scarcely had she placed herself within the influence of her parents, before a change came over her spirit. She wrote a cold, stern letter to her husband concerning her determination to separate from him. His reply was manly and affectionate. He hastened to America. His wife, who was at Nahant at the time, fled on hearing of his arrival, to a sequestered part of New England. The correspondence was renewed, with tenderness on the part of the husband: on her part with every evidence of settled dislike. He entreated she would return to her duty, and insisted upon seeing his child. Even the latter request was for some time denied, and when allowed to see and embrace his son it was only in the presence of witnesses. Mr. Sears meanwhile used ever exertion to procure the passage of a law that would deprive the father of the custody of his child. Our legislature and that of New Jersey rejected the proposition: that of New York, more pliant and obliging, passed an act which Gov. Seward, to his honor, vetoed.

After exhausting every persuasive effort, M. D'Hautville has resorted to the writ of habeas corpus to obtain possession of his child. The question involved is one of great interest and importance. In all civilized countries the father is entitled to the custody of his offspring, unless he forfeits that privilege by his immorality. In this State, the Supreme Court has decided that this universal right is suspended during infancy and when maternal aid and tenderness are necessary for the child. The law, however, is but loosely settled, and this case will probably induce an entire revision of the principles which govern the case. Every parent has an interest in the question, and we trust that it will be settled without sympathy for any individual, but upon universal and enduring principles.

In the present case the wife alleges, in addition to her legal claim to the possession of the child during its infancy, that his true interests demand that he should remain with his maternal relatives. It is asserted that the separation of the parents has been induced by want of sympathy on the part of the husband, as shown by his refusal to permit his wife to spend her winters in Paris, or to remain divorced from her by the broad Atlantic, and that he is, therefore, disqualified for the task of educating his child; and it is insinuated that if the child remains in America, his prospects, as the heir of Mr. Sears, will be better than they can be in Europe, as the inheritor of the patrimonial estate of the D'Hautvilles.

We have extended this article so much beyond our usual limits, that we are compelled to defer some reflections to which the subject naturally gives rise to a more favorable opportunity. In a few days we shall spread all the particulars before our readers, and we shall then offer a few words by way of commentary.

HYMENEAL.

MARRIED, on the 2d day of April last, by the Rev. D. Y. Ostrom, Mr. Wm. Herald to Miss Sarah Blackwood, both of Athens county.

———, on the 30th of April last, by the same, Mr. John Balou to Miss Merrium Worel.

———, on the 12th ultimo, by the same, Mr. Charles Reed to Miss Nancy Shumate, both of Jackson county.

Business Department.

We have now got our wheat, hay, and oats harvest secured, and shall be able to give our time entirely to the paper. During the progress of securing these, we have had to give considerable personal attention and labor, which has somewhat interfered with our paper interests.—We have let some items of news slip without recording them, and in a few instances have not attended to the business of our friends so promptly as we should have liked. But, if they will forgive us, we will try and mend. Our summer crop we put into other hands, so that it has given us little trouble, but the harvest coming over from last year, we have had to close it up; but shall try and make such arrangements in future as will transfer it also to other hands.

The editor of the Methodist Protestant is informed that we noticed his requst to forward the paper containing the obituary notice of JACOB NAGE, but we had it not, without breaking our file. We have now found it among some papers returned to the office, and a few days since forwarded it to him.

We wish the preachers and agents to inform us, before the close of this volume, if any of them should know of a case, where our paper is sent to any office, and not taken out, or the person taking it would not be likely to pay for it. These delinquencies are great bores upon us, and unless protected against them will ruin us.

The Post Master at Allegheny town, informs us that R. Cole refuses to take his paper, and yet he has paid for it. Will Br. Beatty let us know what is the matter?

We are also informed, that John Stevens, of Sharpsburgh, Pa., has "absquatulated over the river," and does not take his paper. Will Br. Clarke see to this?

A quarterly meeting will be held at High-Hill meeting house, three miles from West Chester, Tuscarawas county, Ohio, on the 22d and 23d instant. Ministerial and lay brethren are respectively invited to attend. T. FOSTER.

An Impostor.

A MAN calling himself CYRUS RATHBURN, some time since, visited the south east corner of Seneca county, Ohio, and passing under the garb of a Methodist preacher, paid attention to a young lady of that vicinity, and after repeated visits was engaged to be married to her on the 25th of June. But before this act was consumated, it was accidentally discovered that his proper name was AUGUSTUS STEVENS, and that he has a wife and children in Wellsville, Columbiana county, Ohio, and that he never was a minister of any church.

Information can be had, with regard to the facts of this case, by inquiring of

MARTIN S. WEAVER,
SAMUEL CORSON,
JAMES T. DORLAND, or
R. SMITH, near

Atica, Seneca county, Ohio. [Aug. 5.

THE CASKET,

AND

PHILADELPHIA MONTHLY MAGAZINE.

UNEXAMPLED SUCCESS!

Prospectus of a New Volume.

THE great increase in the subscription list of the Casket, which has been nearly doubled since the commencement of the last volume, warrants the most extensive improvements on the first of July, 1840—at which time a new volume will be commenced with increased vigor.—Nothing need be said of the firm basis on which the Casket stands, it being already the oldest magazine in the country, and has maintained its popularity in the face of all opposition. It is to be found upon the centre table of families, making literary pretentions, from Maine to Georgia.

TYPE—EMBELLISHMENTS.

The Casket is printed with a clear and beautiful type, upon the finest white paper. The illustrations are not surpassed by those of any periodical at home or abroad; and beside the monthly steel engravings, a quarterly plate of colored fashions has lately been added. The style of these embellishments is unequalled, and they are always accompanied with an appropriate sketch. No wood cuts disgrace the work. Whatever appears in the Casket is of the first order of art.

The volume will be opened with the first of a series of splendid Mezzotint engravings, prepared expressly for the work, by the burin of Sartain, who deservedly stands as the best engraver of the kind in the United States.

LITERARY CHARACTER.

The literary character of the Casket is well known. It is wholly original, of the highest order, and sustained by writers of the first rank. Essays, Tales, Sketches, and Travels, compose its prominent prose articles; while, the poetry is equalled by that of no other magazine of like character. The variety for which the Casket is celebrated, shall suffer no diminution; but on the contrary, every exertion shall be made to increase its interest.

SEVERAL ROMANCES OF THE REVOLUTION

have already appeared, and others shall follow in the course of the volume, presenting, when finished a complete picture of the manners, and a historical account of the great battles of that time. Thus, the Casket, instead of being filled with sickly sentimentalities, aims at a true delineation of human nature in every variety of passion.

The series of thrilling Nautical Sketches, entitled "Cruising in the last War," and which are rated by the cotemporary press, equal to the celebrated Sketches from "Tom Cringle's Log," will be continued, and the "Leaves from a Lawyer's Fort-Folio," which have attained a deserved celebrity, will still furnish attraction to the Magazine.

We shall furnish the readers of the Casket with some valuable papers from entirely new contributors. "The Author of Old Iron Sides off a Lee Shore," will give the first of a number of Sketches in the July number. We count upon his prolific and graceful pen to do much in maintaining the great popularity of the Magazine. In addition to the variety already embraced in the pages of the Magazine, our "Syrian Letters," the first of which appeared in the June number as introductory, will interest, and add worth to its pages. They are from no unpractised pen.

FASHIONS.

The fashions are published in the Casket quarterly, or as often as any really new styles arrive from Paris. The engravings are colored, and executed from original designs. No old, worn-out plates are re-touched, and then published as the latest fashions. The truth of our designs may be tested by comparing them with the latest description of dresses from London and Paris.—They are universally admitted to be the finest specimen of engraving and coloring afforded by any Magazine in this country. The expense of getting them up is great, but we shall in no-wise abate the quality. Remember! The readers of the Casket are furnished with these fashion plates as an extra. They do not interfere with the regular, and choice engravings, which always accompany the work.

TIME OF PUBLICATION.

The Casket is published on the first of the month in every quarter of the Union. The most distant subscriber consequently receives it on that day, as well as those who reside in Philadelphia. In all the principal cities agents have been established, by which means subscribers in the vicinity can obtain their copies free of postage.

TERMS—THREE DOLLARS per annum. Or two Copies yearly for FIVE DOLLARS, invariably in advance, post paid. No new subscriber received without the mony, or the name of a responsible agent. Published by

GEORGE R. GRAYHAM,
36 Carter's Alley, Philadelphia.

August 5, 1840. 50.

POETRY.

For the Western Recorder.

SCENES AND SOUNDS ON THE ALLEGHENY.

BY JAMES M. FULTON.

Winding through minor hills and spiral streams,
'Till with many a weary step
We reach the base of that tremendous mount,
The Allegheny or the endless hill,
Where God's almighty and eternal arm,
Has piled the pond'rous and unwieldly rocks
Until their summits seem to reach the sky.
There the bald eagle builds his tow'ring nest,
Impervious to man's invading hand,
And oft is seen from the deep vale below,
Swimming in seas of ether far on high.
What sounds are those now grating on the ear,
As though to grind the rocks into fine sand,
Seme mill had been in operation put?
Peal after peal now moans along the vale,
In wordless language but of pleasing sound.
Hark! 'tis a loaded wagon with wheels locked,
Descending from the everlasting cliffs.
With horrid oaths and many a savage yell,
The teamster warns his horses how to go;
Fire in quick succession like sharp lightning flies
From great broad wheels with massive irons bound,
And every steel bound hoof strikes fire.
While oft amid the other noises made,
The heavy bouncing wheels from rock to rock,
Like rumbling thunders in concussion roar.
Steep after steep we climb e'er reached the top,
And lab'ring still ascend the weary way,
Until exhausted with extreme fatigue
At length we reach the summit and sit down.
Looking beneath we see the deep below,
And shudder at the thought of such a gulf.
But on the hemlock's airy shaggy top,
That waves beneath his weight, the raven sits,
And undulating with each passing gale,
Flaps his broad wings and plumes himself for flight.
While on the opponent hill the tall dead pine
Seems falling as the traveller passes up.
The turkey gobbles and the deer bounds by,
While forty hounds with animating bay,
Leap headlong down the mountain's shelving side,
Voices of huntsmen cheer the mighty pack,
And urge them furious onward to the death.
But from the rock beneath the cool broad shade
The chrystal torrent pours its waters worth,
And man and beast here quench their burning thirst.
The mountain's crest is clad with laurels green,
That stand the frosts and snows of winter long,
Forever pleasing and forever gay.
But most of all when spring has shed her bloom,
And added flowers to the green laurel leaves.
Sweet honey suckles and the mountain rose,
With mint and thyme and every odorous flower,
Bedeck the mountains in the time of spring,
While blushing maples, dogwoods in full bloom,
And countless nameless trees that shade the parks,
Send forth a maiden breath of sweet perfume.
For whom were all these scenes and sounds combined,
But for unthankful and unthinking man?
That he might learn from thence what heaven has done,
To gratify, instruct and teach the way
That leads to worlds where all is youth and bloom.
Whereas on earth both scenes and sounds combine
To fill the soul with most extactic joy.
A little longer and this blooming mount
Shall shed her fragrance and her bloom no more,
And earth with all her pleasing, changing scenes,
Shall wither as the falling autumn leaves;
But he who tries, however frail his hand,
To do these things that heaven has enjoined,
Shall last and shine and evermore endure,
When sun and moon and every twinkling star,
Shall loose their lustre and in darkness die.

MISCELLANEOUS.

WILLIAM PENN'S TREATY.

Penn had received the property of the vast tract of land constituting the present State of Pennsylvania by patent from Charles II., in March 1681; but he did not deem the royal grant to be his sufficient authority for taking possession of the country until he had obtained the consent of those by whom it was actually inhabited. Accordingly, very soon after his patent had been signed, he deputed commissioners to proceed to America, and to enter into a negociation with the Indians for the fair purchase of so much of the territory as they claimed a right to. The desired arrangement was made with little difficulty; and the following year, Penn having himself come over to view his acquisition, it was resolved that the compact which had been made should be solemnly confirmed.

The principles and regulations which Penn had laid down from the first for the treatment of the native inhabitants, and the management of the intercourse between them and the European colonists, were characterized by a spirit of liberality exceedingly remarkable for that age. It was made part of the conditions on which grants of land were made to adventurers, that all mercantile transactions with the Indians should take place in the public market; that any wrong done to an Indian should be punished in the same manner as if a white man had been the person injured; and that all differences between planters and Indians should be settled by the verdict of twelve men, six of the one class and six of the other. And in a letter addressed to the Indians themselves, after mentioning the existence of a great God, or Power, the Creator of the world, who hath commanded us all to love, to help, and to do good to one another, he continued;—"I would have you well observe that I am very sensible of the unkindness and injustice which have been too much exercised towards you by the people of these parts of the world, who have sought themselves to make great advantages by you, rather than to be examples of goodness and patience unto you. This, I hear, hath been a matter of trouble to you, and caused great grudging and animosities, sometimes to the shedding of blood, which hath made the great God angry. But I am not such a man, as is well known in my own country. I have great love and regard towards you, and desire to win and gain your love and friendship by a kind, just, and peaceable life: and the people I send are of the same mind, and shall in all things behave themselves accordingly; and if, in any thing, any shall offend you or your people, you shall have a full and speedy satisfaction for the same, by an equal number of just men on both sides, that by no means you may have just occasion of being offended against them."

By the Europeans who first landed on the new continent, and by almost all who had followed them till then, the unhappy natives had been treated as if they had possessed no more rights of any kind than the lower animals that occupied the wilderness along with them. Penn was the first who really recognized them as belonging to the family of man.

From the commencement of his connexion with them, Penn appears to have applied himself to the study of the character and manners of the Indian tribes. In a 'General Description of the Province of Pennsylvania,' which he published in 1683, (to be found in his collected works, 2 vols. fol. 1726, vol. 2. p. 699,) he tells us that he had even made it his business to understand their language, that he might not want an interpreter on any occasion. The following is a part of the account which he gives of their dispositions and habits in the same publication:

"But in liberality they excel, nothing is too good for a friend; give them a fine gun, coat, or any other thing, it may pass twenty hands before it sticks:—light of heart, strong affections, but soon spent; the most merry creatures that live, feast and dance perpetually; they never have much, nor want much; wealth circulateth like the blood, all parts partake; and though none shall want what another hath, yet exact observers of property.—Some kings have sold, others presented me with several parcels of land; the pay or presents I made them were not hoarded by the particular owners, but the neighboring kings and their clans being present when the goods were brought out, the parties chiefly concerned consulted what and to whom they should give them. To every king there, by the hands of a person for that work appointed, is a proportion sent, so sorted and folded, and with that gravity, that is admirable. Then that king subdivideth it in like manner among his dependents, they hardly leave themselves an equal share with one of their subjects: and be it on such occasions as festivals, or at their common meals, the kings distribute, and to themselves last. They care for little because they want but little, and the reason is a little contents with them: in this they are sufficiently revenged on us: if they are ignorant of our pleasures, they are also free from our pains. They are not disquieted with bills of lading and exchange, nor perplexed with chancery suits and exchequer reckonings. We sweat and toil to live; their pleasure feeds them; I mean, their hunting, fishing, and fowling, and this table is spread every where. They eat twice a-day, morning and evening;—their seats and table are the ground. Since the Europeans came into these parts, they are grown great of strong liquors, rum especially; and for it exchange the richest of their skins and furs. If they are heated with liquors, they are restless till they have enough to sleep; that is their cry, 'Some more and I will go to sleep!' but, when drunk, one of the most wretched spectacles in the world. . . These poor people are under a dark night in things relating to religion, to be sure, (the tradition of it,) yet they believe in a God, and immortality without the help of metaphysics, for they say, There is a great King that made them, who dwells in a glorious country to the southward of them; and that the souls of the good shall go thither, where they shall live again."

It had been agreed that the meeting for the ratification of the compact should take place at Coaquannoe, the name given by the Indians to the spot on which Philadelphia now stands. The parties, however, after assembling, proceeded a little higher up the Delaware, to a place then called Shackamaxem, on which the adjoining village of Kensington has been since built, and where there grew an immense elm, under the spreading branches of which the leaders on both sides took their station. Mr. Clarkson, in his "Life of Penn," (2 vols. 8vo., Lon. 1813,) expresses his regret that in no historian has he been able to find any detailed account of the circumstances of this meeting, though the event itself is so famous. He gives, however, some interesting particulars, principally derived from the traditions preserved in Quaker families, descended from those who were present on the occasion. "William Penn," he says, "appeared in his usual clothes. He had no crown, sceptre, mace, sword, halbert, or any insignia of eminence. He was distinguished only by wearing a sky-blue sash around his waist, which was made of silk net-work, and which was of no larger apparent dimensions than an officer's military sash, and much like it except in color. On his right hand was colonel Markham, his relation and secretary, and on his left his friend Pearson; after whom followed a train of Quakers. Before him were carried various articles of merchandise, which, when they came near the Sachems, (or kings,) were spread upon the ground. He held a roll of parchment, containing the confirmation of the treaty of purchase and amity, in his hand. One of the Sachems, who was the chief of them, then put upon his head a kind of chaplet, in which appeared a small horn. This,as among the primitive eastern nations,and according to Scripture language, was an emblem of kingly power; and whenever the chief, who had a right to wear it, put it on, it was understood that the place was made sacred, and the persons of all present inviolable.—Upon putting on this horn, the Indians threw down their bows and arrows, and seated themselves around their chiefs, in the form of a half moon, upon the ground. The chief Sachem then announced to William Penn, by means of an interpreter, that the nations were ready to hear him."

Penn's speech appears to have embraced nearly the same topics as his letter already quoted. After its delivery he unrolled the parchment, and by means of the interpreter, explained it article by article. The compact was based upon the principle that the land was to be common to the Indians and to the English; and that the natives were to have the same liberty to do what was necessary for the improvement of their grounds, and the providing of sustenance for their families which the settlers had. "He then," says Mr. Clarkson, "paid them for the land, and made them many presents besides, from the merchandize which had been spread before them. Having done this, he laid the roll of parchment on the ground observing again, that the ground should be common to both people. He then added, that he would not do as the Marylanders did, that is, call them children or brothers only; for often parents were apt to whip their children too severely, and brothers sometimes would differ;—neither would he compare the friendship between him and them to a chain, for the rain might sometimes rust it, or a tree might fall and break it;—but he should consider them as the same flesh and blood with the christians, and the same as if one man's body were to be divided into two parts. He then took up the parchment, and presented it to the Sachem, who wore the horn in the chaplet, and desired him and the other Sachems to preserve it carefully for three generations, that their children might know what had passed between them, just as if he had remained himself with them to repeat it." The solemn pledges of the Indians to perform faithfully their part in the contract followed his harangue.

Penn does not mention this treaty in particular in his 'Description of Pennsylvania,' to which we have already referred; but he gives the following general account of the manner in which his Indian friends were wont to conduct themselves on such occasions. "Every king hath his council; and then 'tis admirable to consider how powerful the kings are, and yet how they move by the breath of their people. I have had occasion to be in council with them upon treaties for land, and to adjust the terms for trade; their order is thus: the king sits in the middle of a half moon, and half his council, the old and wise, on each hand; behind them, or at a little distance, sit the younger fry, in the same figure. Having consulted and resolved their business, the king ordered one of them to speak to me; he stood up, came to me, and in the name of his king saluted me, then took me by the hand and told me he was ordered by his king to speak to me, and that now it was not he, but the king that spoke, because what he should say was the king's mind. He first prayed me to excuse them that they had not complied with me the last time; he feared there might be some fault in the interpreter, being neither Indian nor English; besides, it was the Indian custom to deliberate, and take up much time in council, before they resolve; and that if the young people and owners of the land had been as ready as he, I had not met with so much delay. Having thus introduced his matter, he fell to the bounds of the land they had agreed to dispose of, and the price, (which now is little and dear, that which would have bought twenty miles, not buying now two.) During the time that this person spoke, not a man of them was observed to whisper or smile; the old were grave, the young, reverent in their deportment; they do speak little, but fervently and with elegancy; I have never seen more natural sagacity, considering them without the help, I was going to say the spoil, of tradition; and he will deserve the name of wise that outwits them in any treaty about a thing they understand.—When the purchase was agreed, great promises passed between us of kindness and good neighborhood, and that the Indians and English must live in love, as long as the sun gave light. Which done, another made a speech to the Indians, in the name of all the sachamakers or kings, first, to tell them what was done: next, to charge and command them to love the christians, and particularly live in peace with me, and the people under my government; that many governors had been in the river, but that no governor had come himself to live and stay here before; and having now such an one that had treated them well, they should never do him or his any wrong. At every sentence of which they shouted, and said amen in their way."

Every thing connected with this treaty,—the only one, as Voltaire has remarked, ever made with the native inhabitants of America and the christians that was not ratified by an oath, and that was never broken,—was long held in reverential remembrance by both the English and the Indians. The parchment roll was carefully preserved by the latter, and was exhibited by them in various conferences which they had with the English authorities, down nearly to the era of the independence of the colonies. The sash which Penn wore, Mr. Clarkson states, was, when he wrote, in the possession of Thomas Kett, Esq., of Seething Hall, near Norwich. The elm, especially, which had shaded the assembled negociators, became celebrated from that day. With such general veneration and affection was it regarded, that even the British General Simcoe, when he was quartered in the neighborhood during the revolutionary war, placed a sentinel under it to protect it from being injured by his men when they went out to collect firewood. It was at last, however, blown down in 1811, when its trunk and branches were cut into various articles, to be preserved as memorials of the honored tree.

Penn, as he intimates in the passage we have just quoted, concluded several other treaties or bargains with the Indians after this, which may be called the foundation compact between the two parties. All these negociations appear to have been conducted in a spirit of amity and mutual accommodation, which no attempt to obtain undue advantages, or any suspicion of such an attempt, on either side, ever disturbed. The State which Penn founded, although consisting of comparatively a mere handful of people, subsisted for several generations, as has been remarked, "in the midst of six Indian nations without so much as a militia for its defence." Mr. Clarkson affirms, "That as far as the Indians and Quakers (who may be considered as the descendants of William Penn) were concerned, the great treaty was never violated, a good understanding subsisting at this moment between them and the descendants of the original tribes."

PUNCTUALITY IN ENGAGEMENTS.—If a man were to spend his days in perfect seclusion, he would still be a gainer by the habit of regularity, in the distribution of his time and his pursuits, but its importance obviously increases with the extent of its connexions, and the number of his engagements. If regularity be that which a man owes to himself, punctuality is that which he owes to others. "Appointments," observes Mr. Cecil, "become debts; I owe you punctuality, if I have made an appointment with you; and have no right to throw away your time, if I do my own. Punctuality is important, because it subserves the peace and good temper of a family; the want of it not only infringes on necessary duty, but sometimes excludes the duty. Punctuality is important; as it gains time, it is like packing things in a box; a good packer gets in half as much more as a bad one. The calmness of mind which it produces is another advantage of punctuality; a disorderly man is always in a hurry; he has no time to speak with you, because he is going elsewhere; and when he gets there he is too late for his business, or he must hurry away to another before he can finish it. It was a wise maxim of the Duke of Newcastle—'I do one thing at a time,'—Punctuality gives weight to character; 'such a man has made an appointment; then I know he will keep it.' And this generates punctuality in you: for like other virtues, it propagates itself."

If these pointed and judicious remarks are applicable to men of every profession and occupation: if they are important to the man of business, and to the man letters, they are of still greater importance to the christian minister. If he would consult his own tranquility; if he would be an economist of invaluable time; if he would do justice to his sacred engagements; if he would advance in the esteem and confidence of his numerous connexions; let him, although without excessive and over-anxious preciseness, pay due regard to the claims of punctuality.

ELLEN IS DYING.—Sir, Ellen is dying! O, I wish I had never quarreled with her! Think she will forgive me? I would give any thing in the world if I had never quarreled with her!

These feeling words were uttered by a little girl, a few days since, when her sister was dying. Susan had always been considered a kind child; and the depth of her feelings, now that her sister was dying, showed that she was affectionate. But now, as she felt how much she loved her sister, she felt too that she had not always treated her kindly. Ellen had been taken ill a few days before with a disease of the brain, which deprived her of her reason the most of the time. A few moments before she breathed her last, reason returned, and Susan had the invaluable privilege of asking her forgiveness for having been unkind to her.

I shall not soon lose the impression made on my mind by the words of Susan, nor forgetting the deep regret she manifested for her ill treatment of her sister.

May not this simple incident, simple as it is, teach my youthful readers a lesson? You have a brother or sister whom you love. Perhaps sometimes you have been selfish, or unkind to them, or even quarreled with them. If that brother or sister should die, think you would not regret, like Susan, that you had behaved in this manner? Besides, it is a sin against God.—S. S. Messenger.

BROKEN ENGLISH.—A Frenchman having a weakness in his chest, told his physician he felt a bad pain in his portmanteau!

CAN'T FISH THERE.—An United States officer writes from New Brunswick, "That American citizens must give up fishing in the British waters, so long as the present severe law is in force." He says, "The great men of the province think it was never intended by the treaty, that they should be allowed to fish in their bays, &c., however wide they may be, and I believe are determined to drive them off."

A young lady, at an examination in grammar, was asked why the noun bachelor was singular? She replied immediately, and with much naivette—Because it is very singular that he don't get married.

Camp-Meeting Notices.

A Camp-Meeting will be held on Eagle creek, Hancock county, Ohio, in the neighborhood of Br. Ramsbottom's, to commence on the 7th of August. S. W. THORNTON, Supt.

There will be a Camp-Meeting held on Lima circuit, Ohio, to include the third Sabbath in August; we request all who can make it convenient to attend. J. GUEST, Sup.

There will be a camp-meeting for Coshocton circuit, held on the farm of John Dean, Esq., two miles from Jacobsport, to commence on the 27th of August; we request the attendance of ministers and members.

M. N. WARREN, Sup't.

A Camp-Meeting will be held on the farm of John McKinney, between Sidney and Hardin, Shelby county, Ohio, including the third Sunday in August. Ministerial aid from the surrounding circuits, is strongly solicited.

JOSEPH PARKE.

We expect to hold a Camp-Meeting on Rehoboth circuit, six miles west of Wilmington, Ohio, to commence on the Friday before the third Sabbath in August, and request the aid of Bros. Flood, McGuire, Hunt, Paul, Stephens, Evans, Hughey, Atkinson, Little, the Dalbeys and Hibben. ISAAC EDWARDS, As.

By Divine permission, a camp meeting will be held by Allegheny and Pittsburgh stations, and Pittsburgh circuit, jointly, on the land of James Clarke, one mile north of Sharpsburgh, commencing on Monday afternoon, August 17th. The assistance of ministering brethren is respectfully solicited. JOHN CLARKE.

A Camp-Meeting will be held at the Diamond, ten miles from Indiana town and county, Pennsylvania, to commence on the thirteenth day of August. It will be twenty-four miles from Blairsville, and 62 from Pittsburgh. Brothers Baldwin, Robinson, Shearer, Francis and Tipton, we hope, will not fail to be with us.

T. J. ADDIS, Sup. Clearfield ct.

A camp-meeting for Zanesville circuit will commence on Thursday preceding the last Sabbath in August, on the land of Barnard Wortman, within half a mile of this office, on the old ground. Ministers and members of other circuits are pressingly invited to attend. The ministers from the western part of the District can go from this meeting in company to conference.

A camp-meeting will be held on the land of George Castle, 4½ miles from Mt. Vernon, Ohio, to commence the 21st of August; we especially invite brethren Springer, I. Thrap, Wilson, Davis, Marshall, Warren, Bamford, Tallentire, Bloomer and Cowl. We hope they can make it convenient to attend, but if any of the brethren cannot be with us, I should be glad if they would let me know soon as possible. M. SCOTT.

There will be a camp meeting held for the Ligonier Mission, near the turnpike leading from Ligonier to Youngstown, and about 2½ miles from the former place, to commence on the 28th of August next. We solicit the aid of brothers G. Brown, J. Robison, J. B. Shearer, T. J. Addis, W. Turner, S. Hazlett, W. L. Baldwin, J. Hopwood, D. Kinney, and J. M. Piper, together with any of our unstationed brethren of the adjacent circuits, who can assist us. W. W. TIPTON.

S. C. Haver,

IN the flourishing town of Putnam has on hand 40 or 50 SADDLES ready for sale, of different qualities, comprising nearly all the varieties in fashion in our Buckeye State.

A good assortment of Bridles and Martingales: Riding and driving Whips: between 180 and 200 Carriage and heavy draft Collars, which will compare and wear with any others made here or elsewhere.

Also, fine York, Dearborn, heavy team and common Farming Harness. A lot of first rate Carriage and Buggy Harness, (brass and silver plated.)

Trunks, vallises, saddle-bags, and double covered wagon whips, varying in quality and price to suit purchasers.

The only recommendation he now offers for his work, is the testimony and long experience of his old customers and friends. He is still anxious to please and accommodate those who may call on him, and hopes to share so much of the public patronage as his attention to his business shall merit.

Putnam, April 29, 1840. 28tf

William Green,

CLOCK AND WATCH REPAIRER, SILVERSMITH, AND JEWELLER,

CAN be found at his shop on Main street Putnam, a few doors north of J. C. Guthrie's store, where he will do his best to accommodate customers. He keeps on hand an assortment of spectacles, watch trimmings, pencils, &c.

As far as we have tried Mr. GREEN as a watch repairer he has given us good satisfaction.—ED. April 22, 1840. 35tf.

Stray Mare.

STRAYED from the subscriber living in Hopewell township, Muskingum county, O., on the 20th of June last, a light SORREL MARE, about 14 or 15 hands high, with a small blaze in the forehead and one white foot; no shoes on when she left. Any person returning said mare or giving information to the subscriber where she can be found, will be liberally compensated for his trouble.

NAAMAN R. GRANT.

Hopewell tp., Musk., O., July 8, 1840. 46

Dissolution.

THE partnership heretojore existing between the subscribers in the PUTNAM FOUNDRY, under the firm of HARTLEY & ANDERSON, was this day dissolved by mutual consent.

The Putnam Foundry will hereafter be conducted by J. J. Anderson & Co.

LEVI HARTLEY,
JACOB J. ANDERSON.

Putnam, Jan. 1, 1840. (Jan. 29: 23.)

O. WHITE, BOOK BINDER, No. 104 Main Street, Zanesville, Ohio.

January 15, 1840. 21tf

THE FAMILY NEWSPAPER.

THE LARGEST CIRCULATION IN THE WORLD!!

34,000 Subscribers.

THE PHILADELPHIA

SATURDAY COURIER.

THE Courier is on as firm and independent a basis as any paper issued, at home or abroad, and its ample means will be always employed to make it equal, as a FAMILY PAPER, to any journal published.

The unparalleled patronage, from every section of the country, is the best evidence of its approval. It has the largest subscription IN THE WORLD! Its list embraces over 34,000 subscribers, extending from the Lakes to the Ocean, and combining all interests and classes of the republic. It is the largest and cheapest journal ever issued!! Each number of the Courier contains as much matter as would fill a 12mo volume, the cost of which alone would be the price of the paper for a whole year. The general character of the Courier is well known. Its columns contain a great variety of

Tales, Narratives, Biographies, Essays, &c.

Together with articles on

Science, Fine Arts,	Humorous Poetical Articles,
Mechanics,	Health, Commerce,
Agriculture,	Domestic Intelligence,
Manufactures,	Education,
Foreign News,	Self-Educated Men,
Amusements, Facetia,	Literature,
New Publications,	The Drama,
Morality, Medicine,	City Matters,
The Silk Culture,	Amusing Miscellany,
Temperance,	The Markets,
Family Circle,	List of Insolvent Banks
The Musical World,	Discount and Exchange,
Correct Prices Current,	History,
Letters from Europe,	Philosophy.
The Classics,

And all other matters discussed in a Universal Family Journal—furnishing altogether as vast, and, as we believe, as interesting a variety as can be found in any other journal issued in the world!

EMBRACING SUBJECTS FOR

Farmers,	Mechanics,
Tradesmen,	Artisans,
Merchants,	Men of Leisure,
Teachers,	Students,

And every Class of our Country.

The COURIER may always be DEPENDED UPON, as nothing important is permitted to escape a notice in its columns.

Our arrangements enable us to draw from the whole range of the current Literature of Europe, and our Correspondents at home embrace many of the best Writers of the country.

This approved Family Paper is strictly Neutral in Politics and Religion, and the uncompromising opponent of all Quackery.

POPULAR MUSIC.—In the Courier is inserted the music of the most popular Airs, Songs and Ballads, as soon as they are imported: so that country readers may have the most popular music for voice, the piano, the guitar, or other instruments, as soon as published, which if paid for separately would cost more than the price of subscription. This perfected arrangement is to be found in no other journal of the kind.

☞The price of the COURIER is only $2.

☞When individuals wish to subscribe to the Courier, a sure way is to enclose the money in a letter, and direct it to us. The Postmasters will probably politely remit, for we wish them in all cases, if it meet their pleasure, to act as our agents.

☞OUR TERMS.—Clubs of ten will be furnished with ten papers for one year, (provided the money be sent us free of postage and discount,) for $15.

☞Ten Dollars will procure the sixth copy gratis.

☞$5 at one time will be received for three years.

☞Our friends, the Postmasters, will please oblige by remitting arrearages and new subscriptions.

☞Any of our country brethren who insert our advertisement, will receive the Courier regularly. 49.

Glass Manufactory.

THE subscriber having dissolved his connexion with the former company, has taken the GLASS WORKS below town under his own management.

WINDOW GLASS, double and single, all seizes, and of superior quality will be kept constantly on hand for sale on reasonable terms.—The experience of the proprietor, in the manufacture of the article, will insure all made to be of the best quality. Call and see.

S. B. JOHNSON.

Zanesville, Ohio, May 6, 1840. 37

Notice.

ALL persons indebted to the late firm of Hartley & Anderson, are earnestly requested to call at the Foundry and make settlement, as the change of owners makes this step absolutely necessary. We ask the attention of all persons concerned, to this notice.

J. J ANDERSON & Co.

Putnam, Jan. 1, 1840. (Jan. 29: 23.)

Dissolution.

THE partnership heretofore existing between S. B. Johnson and J. M. Kirkpatrick, under the firm of S. B. Johnson & Co. was dissolved by mutual consent, on Thursday 19th inst.

S. B. JOHNSON,
J. M. KIRKPATRICK.

Zanesville, March 31, 1840. 32tf

THE

WESTERN RECORDER

IS PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY.

☞The office of the Recorder is five and a half miles west of Zanesville.

TERMS.

1. The WESTERN RECORDER will be published weekly, on an imperial sheet, at $2 00 per annum, in advance: $2 50 at the end of three months; $3 00 at the end of the year.

2. No discontinuances will be allowed, except at the discretion of the publisher, until all arrearages are paid.

3. To all ministers having regular pastoral charges, who do any thing at all for the paper, if they will direct us where, a copy shall be sent gratis; any other who forward to us $10 00 for new subscribers, shall have six copies sent to any address he may give.

4. All letters designed for the paper, must be directed to "C. Springer, Meadow Farm, Muskingum, Ohio."

5. A failure to notify a discontinuance before the expiration of the subscription year, will be considered a new engagement.

CHARACTER.—The pages of the WESTERN RECORDER will be open to discussion on all moral questions;—it will give articles on Literature, Mechanics, Agriculture,—an abstract of Religious and Political intelligence, and whatever may be interesting and instructive to families in general. A portion of its columns will be open to Advertisements and Prices Current,—another portion to sustain the interests of the Methodist Protestant Church in the West.—These two latter objects will not likely occupy more than one page.

The RECORDER will take a firm stand against Clerical Supremacy.

THE WESTERN RECORDER.

S SPRINGER, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER. | Volume 1. | ZANESVILLE, OHIO, WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 12, 1840. | Number 51. | JOHN W. WHITE, PRINTER.

WO DOLLARS PER ANNUM IN ADVANCE. | $2 50. IN THREE MONTHS; $3, END OF YEAR.

COMMUNICATIONS.

For the Western Recorder.

HE PAST AND THE PRESENT.

. Editor: The simplicity which character- the "conversations" of Wesley with h s reachers, resembled, somewhat, the confer- of the Sav our with His d sc ples. As in works, or miracles of Moses, and of Jesus t, there was no ostentatious show—no vain e—no display—no pompous titles. There s simplicity and similarity in design—it was ppagate a religion that "speaks to the heart" inculcate a charity that "vaunteth not it- is not puffed up." To plant a piety that th best in the valley, and a church that he palm tree, grows most, in spirituality, most weighed or in the vale of poverty.

ere was also a simplicity and resemblance, e means to accomplish the end. Wesley med his lay preachers as special messengers, Reverend" clergy, made in the ordinary —thrust out from ordinary avocations—es- ed, by the worldly wise, "unlearned and rant men." The weak things of this world, the foolish things, were used to confound the ty and the wise—that the excellency of the r might be of God, and not of vain men, ed D. D.'s, collegiate polish, or pedantic ring. "The plain story (says Dr. Hawies) he illiterate man, telling of the sufferings hrist, and the glory that followed, has done in converting men to real christianity, all the great polemics put together."

t what are the appearances and omens of present? Is there nothing that resembles state of things in the fourth century?— n honors and riches were heaped upon the y—when "the bishops began to aspire after r degrees of dignity and power"—when -sounding titles were admired—"the rights e inferior clergy trampled on," and "the le excluded from all part in the administra- of ecclesiastical affairs?" Is there no spir- sembling that which would have crushed re- rers in the days of Luther? and that doomed nominy, ecclesiastical anathamas and relent- cruelty, for an honest difference of opinion? here no undercurrent of intolerance, not pe- ar to papists, resembling that which subjected sley and his simple hearted and useful lay chers, to mobs, imprisonment, and suffer- ? "Try the spirits, whether they are of ." Monopoly, proscription, mammoth insti- ons—the multiplication of literary facilities, lth, power, &c., &c., may swell the number nominal christians, almost as easily as the rd made converts to christianity, in, and af- the days of Constantine the Great, but ther the world is bettered, or the cause of d Godliness promoted, by such success, and sperity demands a doubt. But facts, melan- ly facts, have too often demonstrated, that lth, money and power, have a corrupting in- nce on the clergy and the church.

Nasville, Tenn. L. GARRETT.

For the Western Recorder.

A LETTER TO THE EDITOR.

Br. Springer: I am very much obliged to you the assistance which I have received by fre- ent notices in your paper, in regard to my book siness. Such friendly assistance I duly appre- te; and the more so, as a disposition is begin- ng to appear, on the part of others, to pro- ibe my late publication as a fatal heresy, in der to prevent its circulation.

You give notice, from Br. Stephens, "that near e hundred copies of my book were subscribed in and near Springfield, Ohio, and that the bscribers are wondering why they hear nothing m them." I wish to inform them, through ur periodical, that this is the first that I have eard of the matter. A brother of the M. E. hurch proposed to me, last fall, to obtain sub- ribers in that quarter; but I have heard noth- g from him since; and whether he has become timidated by hearing the key note of heresy unded, I have not been informed. I believe I ve four or five dozen of the books in Pittsburgh at are not yet disposed of, and I intend, as on as convenient, to forward them to William teele, care of P. Murray, Springfield, Ohio, ac- ording to the direction given in your paper.

A Calvinist editor in this neighborhood, of the ld school, and of the high school, has lately joined n with some of his Arminian brethren, to pro- cribe my book, in order to aid them in "prevent- ng its circulation." In an editorial notice of he work, he says, "It has long been our settled persuasion that Arminianism in any and all its numerous forms and shapes,

If shape that may be called which shape has none,"

Is an easy stepping stone to universal salvation. That it has lead Mr. Shinn to the very verge of the fatal precipice, cannot admit of a rational doubt."

The editor does not charge me with embracing universal salvation, but only with coming to the very verge of it. He ought to consider that the most solid and important truth is often found close by the side of error, without there being any danger of an amalgamation. That Arminian- ism leads to the doctrines advanced in my book, I have not the shadow of a doubt; for the more I reflect upon the subject, the more is the convic- tion settled in my judgment, that the favorite doctrine of infinite punishment, and that of eternal reprobation, are inseparably united, and must stand or fall together. Hence I am not at all surprized to see an old school Calvinist as- sume the attitude of decided hostility to my late publication. To be found near the verge of uni- versal salvation he thinks immensely dangerous; but unless he will deny his own system, he must admit, that a full adoption of this heresy by an elect soul, cannot forfeit his election; and that the firmest and most orthodox faith in the oppo- site system, can never save the soul of a repro- bate. Where then is the danger, even if all the elect should be brought to believe in the doctrine of universal salvation? Their own salvation is unconditionally secure. And as to reprobates, they may believe what they please; for orthodoxy cannot save them, and heresy cannot make their perdition any more inevitable than it already is, and has been from everlasting.

But why is it that Arminian Methodists are beginning to resort to unfair and unmanly mea- sures, to prevent the circulation of my book? It is because the doctrine of boundless wrath, in its most horrifying forms, has long been held as a fa- vorite and uncommonly holy article of the ortho- dox faith. I should not be surprized to see some Arminians go entirely over to the system of un- conditional reprobation, rather than give up this long cherished opinion. And, indeed, one or the other they will have to do: for it is exactly as easy to prove that the Almighty originated moral evil, by a past decree, as it is to prove that He will perpetuate moral evil, by a future decree.

But my present object, Mr. Editor, is to expos- tulate a little with those editors and correspon- dents of several public journals, who are attempt- ing to raise a prejudice against my book, and to prevent its circulation, on purpose that the peo- ple may not have an opportunity to read and judge for themselves, and that I may be condemned a a heretic, without a hearing. I trust in the Lord my God, that their efforts to put me to silence will be unavailing; and that outcries of heresy and heterodoxy will only cause intelligent chris- tians to look back with a smile at the ingenious stratagems and authoritative dictum of the tenth century.

Are those editors who have commenced their parental warnings against my book, willing to open their columns to my pen, and to say, with the candor of king Agrippa, Thou art permitted to speak for thyself? Very far otherwise. Their purpose is to caricature my doctrines, and then to prevent all reply, that their numerous readers may take their ipse dixit in the place of argu- ment. This partiality and ungodly policy ap- pears to be likely to become the order of the day, throughout sectarian christendom; and if some of our doctors of divinity would candidly read Dr. Wylie's late publication, in proof that 'Sec- tarianism is Heresy,' it might peradventure have a salutary influence upon their spirits.

My only resource, it seems, will be to avail myself of those public journals, whose editors will have candor enough to allow an injured and proscribed author the privilege of speaking in his own defence. I do not intend to be tamely branded as a heretic; and if my book is to be put out of sight by clerical authority and secta- rian management, it is my purpose, if the Lord will, that the community shall hear from me through the medium of the public papers.

I trust the Western Recorder will be one of the public journals which will stem the torrent of unchristian partiality; and that its editor, to- gether with some other liberal and independent editors, will see that justice be done to truth, and to those who may be disposed to enter fairly and candidly into its investigation.

Yours, in the bonds of our common salvation,

A. SHINN.

Allegheny, Pa., August 1, 1840.

For the Western Recorder.

Brother Springer: You will permit one who has suffered much on account of his Anti-Slavery principles, such as was exhibited in hand-bill form, in Springfield, Ohio, bearing my own sig- nature in conjunction with others, which are readily called Abolition principles in Kentucky, where I then resided; these are now filed away there by Episcopal Methodists as an everlasting stigma on me, (at least, in their estimation.) I say, suffer me to suggest a few thoughts rela- tive to Slavery. It is not in the power of breth- ren who are foreign from where Slavery exists, and who have had no opportunity of becoming personally acquainted with the holders of them, &c., &c., to pass a fair decision on the cases of many of our slaveholding brethren; therefore, they should be very careful not to use such harsh and unchristianising language in their resolutions; soft words, brethren, and hard argu- ments will be most successful. Remember, some of us have fathers and mothers in the slave States, holding slaves too, who take as good care of them as they did of myself, when I was with them, treating them humanely and kindly. Yes, when on a visit last March, I saw my old, gray headed mother, dandling a sick colored woman's child on her knee, at one time, and at another, I saw her stirring about among the little colored children, charging them not to hurt each other, &c. Now, brethren, though I am opposed to Slavery, I am not prepared to give a vote destroying all chris- tian fellowship between myself and those who are near and dear to me in those slave States. Again, we have said Slavery, as it exists in the United States of America, is a violation, as we believe, of the scriptures. But where, my breth- ren, is it made plain enough therein, to author- ize us to vote down the union of the church?— Again, do not, by your official votes, license those warm headed Abolitionists to bring this exciting subject in the pulpit. Lastly, breth- ren, don't, in your resolutions, at religious meet ings, such as quarterly conferences, which are to transact the business of the church, on the principles of the gospel, pass resolutions impli- cating the laws of the land. Remember the States have rights. Don't encroach on them.— Let our plan be to calmly reason with the slave- holder, and God will bless the effort.

J. J. AMOS.

Rush county, Indiana, July 4, 1840.

For the Western Recorder.

Mr. Editor: I saw in your paper for June 24th, 1840, an account given of a debate between Mr. Williams and Mr. Mullis, in which Mr. Wil- liams stated there were several arguments he had offered in favor of sprinkling and pouring, that were unanswered by Mr. Mullis. I have not time to take up his communication, piece by piece, but there are three things in it, I wish to notice. 1st. His assertion, "John the Jewish priest." But the inquiry arises, was John a "Jewish priest?" The language of inspiration is perfectly silent about it. We hear the book of inspiration saying, "The law and the Proph- ets were until John," since then, the kingdom of God is preached. But not a word of his being a Jewish priest under that law. But he is the voice of one crying in the wilderness, and I think the Jewish priest's voice was never heard there. John's practice and preaching, both, are entirely different from theirs. It was a perfectly new institution. He was the messenger before the Lord: Luke 7th, 27th. Again, if he had been a Jewish priest, when Christ asked the priests, and scribes, and elders of the baptism of John, whence it was, they would have answered, it is from heaven. See Mark, 11th, 27th to 32d. From this divine testimony, we are compelled to say, that John was not a Jewish priest, nor his baptism a Jewish ceremony, but a new institu- tion, preparatory to the christian.

2d. The baptism of Christ, Mr. W. says, "was by pour ng out, beyond all doubt," which took place at the time when the blood and water pouring out of His side by following the point of the soldier's spear on the cross, and literally bap- tised the body of Jesus. Let us examine this a little. Christ says, "I have a baptism to be baptised with, and how am I straitened till it be accomplished." According to Luke, this took place in His being straitened or pained, and not afterwards at His being pierced, and the blood and water baptising His body. But, says Br. W., the blood and water, or, if you please, His suffer- ings, all were the constituents of His body.— Says the Psalmist, "fearfulness and trembling are come upon me, and horror hath overwhelmed me." Here, fearfulness, and trembling, and horror are as much the constituents of the body of the Psalmist, as the sufferings of Christ were the constituents of His body. Yet, the Psalm- ist said, horror overwhelmed him, and just so the sorrows and sufferings of Christ overwhelmed Him. Or, if you please, immersed Him, which actually took place in His lifetime, while He was straitened, and not after His death.

3d. The baptism of the Israelits by the pour- ing of water out of the cloud. The Apostle Paul gives an account of this scene, in the 10th chapter of first Corinthians and 2d verse, where he says: "And were all baptised unto Moses in the cloud and in the sea." The Apostle does not say they were baptised by the pouring of water out of the cloud, nor by the spray of the sea. Neither does he say, by the sea nor by the cloud, but in the cloud and in the sea. It took both the cloud and sea to baptise them: the water on both sides and the cloud over them, constituted their overwhelming, covering or im- mersion, if you please, and this was Paul's un- derstanding, which we will try to prove from his own language.

I would here remark, that if we suffer our fancy to rove abroad into the wild maze of con- jecture, we strike a fatal blow at truth. We must confine ourselves to the word of the Lord. That can be interpreted and certainly under- stood, and certainly obeyed. The "one law" must be to all, and if that law says to "one," be "buried with Christ in baptism," it says so to all the same; consequently, no circumstances, superstition, prejudice, or feelings of human conscience is any excuse for altering the law of the King Eternal. Then, "to the law and to the testimony."

Paul says, Romans 6th, 3d, "know ye not, that so many of us as were baptised into Jesus Christ, were baptised into his death. 4. There- fore, "we are buried with Him by baptism into death, that like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we, also, should walk in newness of life." In the 5th verse, he adds, for if we have been planted to- gether in the likeness of His death, we shall be raised also in the likeness of His resurrection.— Two things are bro't to view here; first, the burial and resurrection of Christ; second, our being buried emblematic of His death and burial, and being emblematic of His resurrection. For a further proof of this, see 1 Corinthians, 15th ch, where the Apostle is reasoning on the resurrec- tion, he appeals to the brethren and says, if the dead rise not, then is Christ not risen, and if Christ be not risen, your faith is vain and ye are yet in your sins. For a demonstration of the resurrection, he brings a prominent article of their faith, to illustrate his subject; he says to them, verse 29th, else what shall they do who are baptised for the dead, if the dead rise not at all? Why are they then baptised for the dead? We will give you another text of the Apostle to prove that he always understood baptism to be an overwhelming, or immersion in water, so far as the ordinance stood connected with the office of the Apostle, as emblematic of a burial and resurrection. See Colossians, 2d, 12th. Buried with Him in baptism, wherein also ye are risen with Him through the faith of the operation of God, who hath raised Him from the dead. In connection with this plain, pointed and positive fact, I will give another which stands as proof of what is true christian baptism. The New Tes- tament was written in Greek, and from the first introduction of the gospel of Christ to the Greeks, who understood their own language best, have always baptised by immersion to the pres- ent time. From this, and the uniform language of the Apostles, we hesitate not to say, that they always understood baptism to be an over- whelming, a burying, an immersion in water.— Again, we have two positive facts given in di- vine revelation, as two hinges on which christi- anity turns. Without those two facts the world sinks into everlasting oblivion. They are the sufferings and resurrection of Christ. Saith the inspired writer, "thus it behooved Christ to suffer and rise from the dead." Here we have the emblem of His sufferings in the church—the bread and wine. Is it necessary that these be perpetuated? It is, saith every christian.— Now, the inquiry arises, where is the emblem of His resurrection? I repeat it again, where is the emblem of His resurrection? We can not find it, save in immersion. As a crucified Saviour without a risen Saviour would be unmeaning, just so with the emblem of a crucified Saviour without the emblem of a risen Saviour. Those two facts, the sufferings and resurrection of Christ, are the links that unite the Old and the New Testament together. The two emblems, the bread, the wine and immersion, exhibit, in figure, the strongest springs of life bursting into the tomb, with its darting ray and the animated prisoner in real ecstacies of joy, leaps and shouts in prospect of immortality and eternal life.

Yours, in hopes of eternal life,

JESSE O. HARRIS.

Eaton, Ohio, July 17, 1840.

What do these solemn words portend?
A ray of hope when life shall end.
Thou and thy sons, though slain, shall be
To-morrow, in repose with me;
Not in a state of hellish pain,
If soul with Samuel do remain.—
Not in a state of damn'd despair,
If loving Jonathan be there.

SELECTIONS.

LUTHER'S MARRIAGE.

At this period Luther had more leisure for social intercourse than he had for many years. He was a daily vistor at Melancthon's, and often, said Catharine. But her reserve towards him seemed un- conquerable. She answered his slightest questions in a low, timid voice, and never joined in the conversation. Melancthon was struck with her manner when Luther was present, and said to his wife, "It is a pity poor Catharine has conceived such a terrible idea of good Doctor Martin; we must try to convince her, that he has a kind heart, and is only formidable as an antagonist."

"My dear Philip," replied his wife, in a playful tone, "they say Melancthon is a great scholar, well versed in Greek and Latin; but, when it comes to the knowl- edge of the heart, it is another thing; let his wife alone for that."

Sometimes Luther addressed himself to Catharine, and once congratulated her on having recovered her freedom. "Not," he said, "because she had escaped from a prison or thrown off the dress of a nun; but freedom of mind, the right of think- ing for herself. Tell me," continued he, "what are the grounds of your belief."

"It is what I feel," she answered, "but cannot explain."

"Catharine's belief," said Margaret, smiling, "is like John's, 'if God so loved us, we ought to love one another.'"

When Catharine left the room, which she immedia ely did, after this short con- versation, Luther said, "I pity this poor child; he mind seems still oppressed.— It is surprising how she ever got courage to throw off the popish yoke."

"She feels great restraint in your pre- sence," replied Margaret, "but it is not so when she is alone with us."

Some time after, Luther came to Mel- ancthon's house and requested to see Cath- arine alone. Margaret hastened to her, and gave her the message. She entreated her friend to return with her. "That would not do," replied Margaret; "he said expressly alone; he undoubtedly has something very particular to say. Now Catharine, take courage and open your heart." Poor Catharine went with tremb- ling steps to the presence of Luther. "I have sent for you my child," said he, "to converse on the subject of matrimony; I hope you are convinced it is a holy state." "Yes, sir," said Catharine. "Are you prepared to embrace it?" "No, sir," she replied. "Perhaps you have scruples on the score of monastic vows; if so, I will mark some passages I have written on that subject, that may set your mind at rest." Catharine was silent. "I per- ceive that I do not make much progress in my purpose. I am little used to these matters, and I had better be direct. Do you mean to abide by your monastic vows, or will you marry like a rational woman?" This direct appeal seemed to rouse her courage, "Even Doctor Martin Luther has no right," said she, "to ask that question without explaining his mo- tive." "Well, said Kate," replied he, laughing; "I must tell you. Then there is a person who would gladly take you 'for better and for worse.'" Catharine's colour rose, and her eyes sparkled with additional brightness. "Now say, has he any chance?"

"You have not told me who he is," said she resolutely.

"And you have not told me whether you have any scruples of conscience on the subject; if you have, God forbid that I should urge you."

"When I left the convent," said she, in a low voice, "it was because it would have been hypocrisy in me to have remained. I took the vows ignorantly, and almost by compulsion; I embraced the reformed religion with an inquiring and willing faith. God forgive me, that I soon offer- ed Him the worship of my lips, while my heart was far from Him."

"And now?" said Luther, after waiting for her to finish her sentence.

"Now," she replied, "I need not ask His forgiveness for worshipping Him in spirit and in truth. I am no longer a nun."

"Well," said Luther. "I suppose this as direct an answer as I must expect. So to my purpose." But even Luther stopped short, surprised at Catharine's emotion. "Perhaps, my dear," said he kindly, "I do wrong in speaking to you myself; I had better commission Margaret. I suppose women converse on these matters better together, and yet, as I have begun, I will finish. The other day Bodenstein, the nephew of Carolstadt, came to me to so- licit my influence with you. He wishes you to marry him. I told him, I could have no particular influence with you, unless you had scruples of conscience about marrying. He is a clever young man, and I see no objection. He is very unlike his fanatic uncle." He might have talked an hour without receiving a reply. Catharine's manner had changed; there was no longer the emotion or the blush. "What shall I tell him?"

"Any thing you please," said she, "so that I never see him again."

"Why, this is strange," said Luther; "you did not seem to have scruples of conscience just now. My dear Catharine, you must not forget that you have no na- tural relations here, and this young man can be a protector to you."

'Is there any one else that you like better?" said Luther. She made no re- ply. "Nay, speak; I have every dispo- sition to serve you; has any other per- son made the same proposals to you?"

"Yes," said Catharine, with a little womanly pride; "Counsellor Baumgart- ner has made the same proposals."

"Do you prefer him?"

"Yes," she replied, rising; "but I am as happy as I ever expect to be. My friends assure me that I am no burden, but a help to them; and so I wish you good morning."

Poor Catharine hastened to her room. Her dream was over. Luther, the aus- tere, the insensible Reformer, had awa- kened her from it. Margaret entered while her eyes were yet red with weep- ing. She tenderly approached, and em- braced her; but neither exchanged a word. In the meantime Luther's friends began to urge him to marry, particularly Me- lancthon. "You preach," said he, "what you do not practice." He protested how- ever that he would not be caught in the snare; that his time was now fully occu- pied. When Catharine received the let- ter from her former lover, she was filled with astonishment and requested Marga- ret to speak to Luther on the subject.— He said he had done what he thought was right and would be agreeable to all par- ties; but he found there was one scene he did not understand—the heart of a woman." "That is true," said Margaret, "or you would long since have perceived that Catharine's was yours, and now the mystery is out." It required all her elo- quence to convince Luther of the truth of this assertion; he was forty, and Ca- harine but little more than half that number of years; that she could prefer him to her young suitors seemed to him incredi- ble. Margaret, however, had said it, and a new life opened to Luther, in the affections of a young and beautiful wo- man. When he spoke to Catharine again on the subject of matrimony, he was more successful than before. He learned the history of her long attachment, which had become too much the reverie of her silent hours. The betrothment took place, and very soon the marriage fol- lowed.—Luther and his Times.

THE BIBLE.—It is a book of Laws to show the right and wrong.

It is a book of Wisdom, that condemns all folly and makes the foolish wise.

It is a book of Truth, that detects all errors.

It is a book of Life, that shows the way from everlasting death.

It is the most compendious book in all the world.

It is the most authentic and entertain- ing History that ever was published.

It contains the most ancient antiquities, remarkable events and wonderful occur- rences.

It points out the most heroic deeds and unparalleled wars.

It describes the Celestial, Terrestial, and lower worlds.

It explains the origin of the Angelic Myriads, of human tribes and devilish le- gions.

It will instruct the most accomplished Mechanic, and the profoundest Artist.

It will teach the best Rhetorician, and exercise every power of the most skilful Arithmetician.

It will puzzle the wisest Anatomist, and the nicest Critic.

It corrects the vain Philosopher, and confutes the wisest Astronomer.

It exposes the subtle Sophist, and drives Diviners mad.

It is a complete code of Laws, a perfect body of Divinity, an unequalled Narra- tive.

It is a book of Lives.

It is a book of Travels.

It is a book of Voyages.

It is the best Covenant that ever was a- greed to; the best Deed that ever was sealed.

It is the best Evidence that ever was produced; the best Will that ever was made.

It is the best Testament that ever was signed.

It is Wisdom to understand it: to be ignorant of it, is to be awfully destitute!!!

It is the King's best Copy, and the Mag- istrate's best Rule.

It is the housewife's best Guide, and the servant's best Instructor.

It is the young man's best Companion.

It is the school boy's Spelling book.

It is the learned man's Masterpiece.

It contains a choice Grammar for a no- vice, and a profound Mystery for a sage.

It is the ignorant man's Dictionary, and the wise man's Directory.

It affords Knowledge of all witty inven- tions, and it is its own interpreter.

It encourages the Wise, the Warrior, and the overcomer.

It promises an eternal reward to the Excellent, the Conqueror, the Warrior, the Prevalent;

And that which crowns all is, that the AUTHOR,

Without Partiality, and without Hypo- crisy,

"With whom is no invariableness, nei- ther shadow of turning," is GOD!

A FINE SPECIMEN OF WELL WROUGHT DE- SCRIPTION.

Earth and Heaven.—Conceive a man to be standing on the margin of this green world; and that, when he looked toward it, he saw abundance smiling upon every field, and all the blessings which earth can afford scattered in profusion through- out every family, and the light of the sun sweetly resting upon all the pleasant hab- itations, and the joys of human compan- ionship brightening many a happy circle of society—conceive this to be the gener- al character of the scene upon one side of his contemplation; and that on the other, beyond the verge of the goodly planet on which he was situated, he could descry nothing but a dark and fathomless unknown. Think you that he would bid a voluntary adieu to all the brightness and all the beauty that were before him upon earth, and commit himself to the frightful solitude away from it? Would he leave its peopled dwelling-places, and become a solitary wanderer through the fields of nonenity? If space offered him nothing but a wilderness, would he for it abandon the home-bred scenes of life and of cheerfulness that lay so near, and ex- erted such a power of urgency to detain him? Would not he cling to the regions of sense, and of life, and of society? and shrink away from the desolation that was beyond it: would not he be glad to keep his firm footing on the territory of this world, and to take shelter under the silver canopy that was stretched over it?

But, if during the time of his contem- plation, some happy island of the blest had floated by; and there had burst upon his senses the light of its surpassing glo- ries, and its sounds of sweeter melody; and he clearly saw, that there a purer beauty rested upon every field, and a more heartfelt joy spread itself among all the families; and he could discern there a peace, and a piety, and a benevolence, which put a moral gladness into every bosom, and united the whole society in one rejoicing sympathy with each other, and with the beneficent father of them all. Could he further see that pain and mor- tality were there unknown; and above all, that signals of welcome were hung out, and an avenue of communication was made for him; perceive you not, that what was before the wilderness, would become the land of invitation; and that now the world would be the wilderness? What unpeopled space could not do, can be done by space teeming with beatific scenes and beatific society. And let the existing tendencies of the heart be what they may to the scene that is near and visible around us, still if another stood revealed to the prospect of man, either through the channel of his senses—then, without violence done to the constitution of his moral nature, may he die unto the present world, and live to the lovelier world that stands in the distance away from it.—Chalmers.

EARLY DISADVANTAGES.—"I learned grammer," says William Cobbett, "when I was a private soldier on the pay of six- pence a day. The edge of my berth, or that of my guard bed was my book case, and a bit of board lying in my lap was a writing-table. I had no money to pur- chase candles or oil; in winter time it was rarely that I could get any light but that of the fire, and only my turn of that. To buy a pen or a sheet of paper, I was com- pelled to forego some portion of my food, though in a state of starvation. I had no moment to call my own; and I had to read and write amidst the talking, laugh- ing, singing, whistling and bawling of at least half a score of the most thoughtless of men; and that too in the hours of their freedom from all control. And I say, if I, under circumstances like these, could encounter and overcome the task, is there, can there be, in the whole world a youth who can find an excuse for the non-per- formance!"

If a proud man makes me keep my distance, the comfort is he keeps his at the same time.—Dr. Swift.

WESTERN RECORDER.

ZANESVILLE:

WEDNESDAY, ... AUGUST 12, 1840.

The Charleston (S. C.) papers state that the Sea Island cotton crops will be very short, being injured by the excessive rains.

The new and improved double sylinder press, from the factory of R. Hoe & Co., New York, on which the New World is printed, strikes off between 3,500 and 4,000 sheets per hour.

Joshua Mathiot, Esq., of Newark, was nominated by the Whig convention, at Nashport, on Saturday last, as their candidate for Congress for the 19th District, composed of Muskingum and Licking.

Reduction of Salaries.—A writer in the Charleston Mercury recommends that the sixty thousand dollars paid in that city to public officers, be reduced to thirty or forty thousand dollars, and gives a plan for the reduction. We think the people should call for a general reduction of fees and salaries throughout the country, while these hard times in money matters continue. Such is the fall in the prices of the articles of subsistance and clothing, that a man does not need for his support more than half what it required two years since. Certainly all should bear their part of the pressure.

Serious Calamity.—About 10 o'clock, on the night of the 26th ultimo, the Gov. Dudley ran into the steamboat North Carolina, about 25 or 30 miles from Georgetown, (S. C.) and she went down in about 10 minutes in 11 fathoms of water. Though there were some 30 or 40 persons on board, no lives were lost, all being taken on board of the Dudley, though they lost all their baggage, estimated at from fifteen to twenty thousand dollars. A number of them did not save one suit of clothes, the occurrence happening when they were in their berths. There were on board a number of members of Congress returning home, and Mr. Chinn, of La., and Mr. Dawson, of Geo., are both much injured. The accident is attributed to the negligence of the mates, who had command of the boats at the time, in not observing the regulation of the company for their government under such circumstances, which is, that boats shold each keep to the right; but the Dudley keeping to the left caused the collision.

Disgraceful Riot in Kensington, Philadelphia.—Some time since there were riotous movements of the people of Kensington, because of the Trenton Rail Road Company commencing to lay down rails on Front street, as permitted by an act of the Pennsylvania Legislature; but these riotous acts were stayed for the time being, by referring the case to the Supreme Court. This Court having recently determined the right of said Company to establish a Rail Road on the said street, the workmen again commenced laying down the rails, and the mob again commenced their operations.

The following article upon the subject, is from the Saturday Courier. It is perhaps due to the Kensington people to state, the ground of their opposition, is, that they say the law authorizing the putting down of the rails, was obtained thro' bribery and corruption, and that the road will be greatly injurious to their property:

On Monday morning the riots broke out afresh. The Sheriff of the county, Daniel Fitler, Esq., ordered out a posse of 118 men to prevent further riots.—This was the signal for new scenes of violence. The head quarters of the police were at Emery's tavern, in Front street, above Master.

About 10 o'clock in the morning, the workmen resumed their labors to re-lay the rails, which were pulled up by the mobs of Saturday. An immense gang of women immediately went out and ordered the workmen to "quit." Like obedient individuals, ordered by the ladies, (for who would refuse to obey their mandate,) the workmen laid down their tools. About one o'clock they resumed their work at the suggestion of the police, who were on the ground, then numbering between one and two hundred, at which time a serious affray took place, in which the police were completely routed, and many of them seriously injured.

The row commenced in this way. Mr. Deputy Sheriff, Eleazar Hand, in company with the high constables, marched their men, in double file, to the scene of action, and ordered the workmen to proceed. Shortly afterwards, Mr. Thomas Jackson, a grocer, residing in Front street above Phœnix, stepped up and made some remarks calculated to fan the flame, which did not exactly suit the occasion; he was accordingly arrested by the officers, and, from an attempt at rescue, was so severely injured that his life was at first despaired of. Mrs. Frailey, who on a former occasion rendered herself rather conspicuous, was carried off. Numerous other arrests were also made by the police. When the mob saw that the police were resolved in attempting to sustain the law, they resorted to paving stones, which they distinguished by the name of "ground apples," and attacked the police force, which by this means was entirely put to flight; a number of the officers were very severely hurt—among whom were Messrs. Thornton, Hazlett, Wallington and Walters of the police; Thomas Jackson, John Roy, and a man by the name of Beck, among the citizens. An attack was made upon Mr. Paynter, one of the commissioners of the District, but he was not hurt. Several persons were arrested, and one of the police was bound over for assault and battery.

At dark the rioters were completely masters of the field, and surrounded in great force the hotel in which was the head quarters of the police.

Soon after dark, they made an attack upon the hotel (kept by Mr. Emery as above named, but owned by Mr. Nagle, president of the Trenton Rail Road Company.) The house stands upon the line of Kensington and the Northern Liberties, and the road from it upwards had been torn up. A number of boys, from about fifteen to eighteen, stood opposite the house, and with stones taken from the street, battered in the doors and windows. Both sides of the street were lined with men (as we learn from the excellent reporter of the Ledger, who was on the spot,) who approved of the proceedings by occasional shouts. Having broken in the doors and windows, they entered, and the building soon gave evidence that the place was on fire. The alarm was immediately given, and a number of companies hastened to the spot. Attempts were made to impede their progress, but four or five of the engines forced their way up to the building. The water was put on, and the companies commenced playing. At this moment they were assaulted with a shower of stones from the mob on the Kensigton side, and several of the firemen were injured.

They were compelled to cease their efforts, or continue them to the preservation of the houses on the opposite side of the street. The doomed building, which fortunately stood alone, was left to itself. It was a large three story building, with brick front and frame sides, and was soon wrapped in flames. Thousands of persons were drawn to the spot, and stood gazing upon the scene. We observed interspersed among them several of the sheriff's officers, one of whom informed us that at the assault on the house, there were a number of the police in the back part of the building, who were compelled to leave it, as the assault grew more furious; not, however, until they had arrested and secured two of those engaged in burning the building. A number of other arrests were made, and the busiest among them marked. A person named John Patrick, who was in the building, had his head badly cut. 11½ P. M., the building was burned to the ground, and the firemen returned to their homes.

The Rioters before the Court of General Sessions—Two of them sent over to the State Penitentiary at Cherry Hill, one for seven and the other for ten years.

On Tuesday morning, Judges Barton and Conrad on the bench, the prisoners, who had been arrested at the Kensington rows, were brought in. The charges were severally read, when the bail was laid thus:

Thomas Harvey	$2500	Jas. M'Michael	$1500
Westley Flavill	2500	James Sloan	1500
Joseph Jennings	2500	Calvin Higgins	1500
David Oatman	2500	Thomas Jackson	1500
Sarah Frailey	1500	Alex'r. Jackson	1000

Attorney General Brooke immediately sent the result of the preliminary examination to the grand Jury, who found true bills, and the trials went on at once.

Indictment of Joseph Jennings, an Irishman.—The reporter of the United States Gazette states the evidence that Jennings was one of the men who atacked the public house called "Head Quarters." Mr. Donegan, one of the Deputy Sheriffs, was in the house at the time of the attack, and went out by the back way; went round the back way and entered the house again by the front door; defendant was in the bar room, with a paving stone in his hand, knocking off the lid of the desk, and taking the contents therefrom; he ceased this, and struck at a young man, one of the Sheriff's possee; Mr. Donegan then arrested him; defendant made at him; but he knocked him down, and took him out the back way; secured him, and had him taken to prison.

The case was referred to the jury, who, without leaving the box, found the prisoner guilty.

He was sentenced to seven years imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary.

The next case brought up, was that of the Commonwealth vs. David Dartman a German, indicted for conspiracy, riot and arson, on the night before in the proceedings in Kensington, of which he was said to be one of the ringleaders.

According to the testimony, Dartman was one of those who fired the house, having previously pelted stones at it; was pointed out at the fire to witnesses as the "man who set fire to the house;" when Emery, the landlord of the house burnt, and another man, had attempted to quench the flames, this man with others had been busy in throwing stones at them, to such a degree that they were compelled to desist, and leave the fire to its fury; he had also pelted the firemen, who had attempted to work the engines; Mr. Albright, one of the constables of the Northern Liberties, secured him with the assistance of some of the firemen, who identified him as one of those who had been engaged in preventing them from conducting water by cutting their hose.

The jury in this case, also, did not leave the box; but immediately after the close of the argument, found the defendant guilty.

He was then sentenced to ten years imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary.

The two Jacksons are the only prisoners who have found bail; the remainder, except those two tried, are in Moyamensing Prison.

Among the presents provided by the President of the United States for the Imaum of Muscat, in return for his many civilities, is an elegant row-boat, lined and cushioned with rich damask silk, and furnished with silver-plated furniture, boat-hooks, &c. Also a pair of splendid mirrors, 10½ by 8½. Also a new armament for the Sultance, a set of Colt's patent rifles, and sundry other articles

Visit to Moyamensing Prison—Eldridge.—The Grand Jury of the Court of General Session, on Friday last, visited Moyamensing prison, during which, says the Daily Chonicle, several of the convicts whose offences were of the highest grade, and untried prisoners charged with crimes of a similar grade, were rigidly inspected and conversed with—among the former Michael McGarvey, who, it will be recollected, was convicted twelve or thirteen years since, of the murder of his own wife, by tying her to the bedpost by the hair of the head and beating her to death, and sentenced to eighteen years imprisonment—and among the latter John Rox, who perpetrated the late murder in Kensington; Perry Beck, the colored man, who about two months ago, murdered another man of his color, by beating his brains out with an iron pot; and Eldridge, the great counterfeiter, swindler, imposter, &c.

McGarvey looked pale, with a mixture of sallowness, and was somewhat bloated. He stated that he had enjoyed good health, acknowledged the justness of his sentence, and expressed a willingness to comply with it. He was engaged in winding bobbins.

Rox did not appear altered in the least, was calm, rational and unmoved, and all anxiety for his trial. He was employed in weaving.

Eldridge was quite pale and dejected, was lying in a recumbent posture, with his head tightly bound round with a handkerchief, and in answer to certain queries put to him, said that he was sick. So it is now positively ascertained that he has spoken since his incarceration, current reports and the statements in one of the morning prpers, to the contrary notwithstanding. It is said though, that nearly the only expression he has ever made use of is, "I am sick." It is also said that his appetite is fine. A female residing in the neighborhood of the prison, who is regularly paid to supply him with the best of fare, states that he devours every thing in the shape of eatables and drinkables she carries to him.—There is no doubt too, of his having in all his actions, "doings and sayings," a good deal of method and cunning. He is yet the amiable, accomplished and big rascal.

Beck was chained to the floor of his cell, a raving maniac.

Girard College.—It is now eight years since Mr. Girard died, and the College for the instruction of Orphans, which, by his will, he directed should be established in Philadelphia, is not yet ready for the reception of scholars. Mr. Girard directed that the building should be a plain and substantial one, better calculated for use than show; and doubtless such a building as would have met with the approbation of the donor, might have been erected years ago.—But different counsels prevailed, and much time has been sacrificed in the erection of one of the most costly and magnificent structures that has appeared on this side of the Atlantic—such as would have been admired in Imperial Rome, during the reign of the Cæsars. This splendid structure, so different from the plain republican edifice contemplated by Mr. Girard, is not yet completed—although a President, Mr. Bache, a worthy man and well qualified for the office, has been appointed, and received a salary for several years—a part of which time he has passed in Europe, on business connected with the Institution.

This was a noble donation, and the wishes of the donor should have been carried into effect with the least possible delay. There can be no excuse for such procrastination. Every year which passes by, ere the wishes of the generous donor are carried into operation, is an insult to his memory, and an injury to mankind; for it prevents that expansion of the human intellect by education, which was contemplated by the giver.—Mercantile Journal.

All over our country there is but one sentiment in relation to the delay in opening the school for orphans, which the benevolent will of Stephen Girard is to establish. We copy the above paragraph as a specimen of what they think and say in the Literary Emporium of New England, in regard to the wicked procrastination in opening the school. As orphans over 10 years of age are not to be admitted to the institution, many born since the death of Mr. Girard will be entirely excluded. Is this right? We will say nothing now of the extent of the buildings; it would be useless. But we insist upon it that the public should promptly require a portion of the funds to be diverted, so that the school can go at once into operation.—Courier.

The North-Eastern Boundary.—Among the great number of matters which Congress left untouched, during its tedious session, we are glad the North-Eastern Boundary Question cannot be numbered. They very properly passed "an act to provide for the expenses of making an exploration and survey of that part of the North-Eastern Boundary line of the United States, which separates the States of Maine and New Hampshire from the British Provinces."

This course was rendered necessary by the late survey of the territory by the British Commissioners; and we hope the duty will be entrusted to able surveyors, who will note every landmark of consequence, for the Government to have a map of. At no time for thirty years, to our judgment, has there been so great an assurance that the North-Eastern Boundary difficulties are to be speedily adjusted, as there is at the present moment.—Saturday Courier.

The Sea Serpent Caught.—On Sunday evening, about 6 o'clock, as the schr. Wasp, Capt. Williams, and the schr. Independent Eagle, Captain Owens, were coming up the bay, they descried, about three miles below North Point, a strange looking fish or serpent to the leeward. A boat from each schooner was manned, and a chase for the prize took place. A harpoon was driven into the creature, and away it flew dragging the boat for nearly eight miles like a ship down a cataract. It was found necessary at length to stop the speed of this marine locomotive, and a couple of balls being shot into it the death flurry came on and it soon floated a lifeless carcass. It was borne in triumph to the foot of South-street wharf, where it was visited by most of the old cruisers about town, who had been to every part of the globe and knew every thing that partook of the nature of the fish, flesh, or fowl, like a book. They all declared that they had never seen such a nondescript. It measures twelve feet in length, and nine feet from fin to fin; it has a head like a seal with teeth, and its back is covered with a hard shell. It has four fins or flippers, and in its general appearance bears some resemblance to a turtle, or rather a monstrosity of that species of fish, which nature in one of her freaks had created. How it came into the Chesapeake Bay is a mystery. It can be seen at South-street wharf.

The Baltimore American says—

"The creature would be a curiosity, we should suppose, any where, from its enormous size, but it is certainly a rarity in our waters. Its weight is supposed to be about 1,000 pounds."

The Post Office—An Odious Law Revived.—The Post Master General has recently undertaken to enforce that portion of the Post-office law, so long a dead letter, which prohibits steamboats, stages, &c. running on mail lines, from carrying letters and papers. This restriction has always been regarded by the people as a most arbitrary and odious one, and it has been evaded hitherto as a matter of course. The attempt to enforce it must result in its expurgation from the statute book. It is difficult to conceive why a bundle of newspapers conveying food for the mind should not be as free from the obstacles of conveyance as a barrel of pork or hard cider. If a citizen can insure greater speed to an important letter by transmitting it by private conveyance, why, in the name of all that it is sensible, should he not be privileged to avail himself of the opportunity. Of course we do not blame the Postmaster General in his Quixotic attempt to enforce this exploded law, but we believe every friend of freedom will call for its speedy repeal.

Travelling Post Office.—A contract has been made by the Post Master General for a steamboat and rail road line from New York to Boston, via New London, Norwich and Worcester, with a car on the Norwich and Worcester rail road, arranged as a travelling post office for a clerk of the department, for receiving and assorting the mails.

It is stated in the Express that when the arrangement contemplated by the contract shall have been perfected, at least two hundred post offices will receive their mails from New York from twelve to twenty-four hours earlier than they now receive them. The mails leave New York daily, Sunday excepted, at five P. M., in the steamboats Charter Oak and Norwich, and from Norwich are carried by rail road to Worcester and Boston.—The mails through Great Britain, on the rail ways, are carried in the way above described, and the bags are left and received at the several post offices, by the operation of machinery, without the cars stopping a single moment.

Benjamin Smith, who lately disappeared from the Pennsylvania Bank, under rather mysterious circumstances, turns out to be a great rogue. For the last seven years he has been in the habit of abstracting money from the teller's drawer. The amount thus taken is estimated at about one hundred and sixty thousand dollars. He was a stock speculator.—Pottsville Journal.

Yes, in that last sentence we have a world of evil. "Stock speculation." That is the cause of more prostration of integrity, of more entire destruction of economical and industrious business habits, than almost all other things combined. "Though to-day they may be fortunate, to-morrow they are ruined gamesters." Honest men, think, think, think! and shun stock-gambling as you would the faro-bank.—Saturday Courier.

Counterfeits.—The Cincinnati Gazette gives notice of 20 dollar counterfeit bills on the Commercial Bank of that city being in circulation. Date, Jan. 1, 1840—Signatures and general execution good, payable to A. Baldwin, letter A., with an eagle vignette on the top of the bill.—The words of Cincinnati, are so crowded in a line as to strike the eye at once—purporting to be engraved by Rawdon, Wright & Co. The Bank has no issue of the date of Jan. 1, 1840—nor any 20 dollar notes with an impression of an eagle. Counterfeit certificates of Deposite on the Bank of Hamilton, have also made their appearance. The signature of the Cashier, C. K. Smith, is said to be a good imitation.

Drowned.—Captain Barr, of the ship United States, of Philadelphia, was washed overboard on the twenty-first inst., and all attempts to afford him aid proved vain; he was lost.

Silk Culture Hereabouts.—The Germantown Telegraph says that there are about two millions of worms now feeding at Mr. Physic's, Highfield Cocoonery, in that borough, and that should the foliage warrant it, he expects to feed three millions more.

Mr. Pierce's operations at Mount Airy. are very large. Mr. Repkas' establishment, on the Delaware, is feeding three millions. Col. K. Smith has, at this place, two millions five hundred thousand. Mr. Ostler's Cocoonery is feeding great numbers. Besides these, there are numerous smaller establishments of from fifty to one hundred and fifty thousand each, which, in the aggregate, form a large quantity. This is the only kind of silk operations that ever should have existed. Every pound of raw silk will at once command cash.—Philadelphia paper.

Dr. Duncan, of Ohio, a member of the House of Representatives, has been complained of at Washington for paying out a bank note for less than five dollars, contrary to the form and effect of an act passed by Congress in July, 1838, for which he himself voted. It appears that on the complaint being made, the justice issued a warrant for the arrest of the Dr. which however was not served, and on the next day the justice recalled it and refuses to issue another on the ground that members of Congress are subject to arrest only for treason, felony or breach of the peace. The doctrine of the justice is said to be sustained by eminent counsel at Washington. Odd, that law-makers should alone be exempt from the operations of law which they themselves enact. —Times.

The N. O. Bulletin of the 18th ult. says: Two notes, one for $151,75, signed by Amos Kendall, the other for $1012 11, signed by the present Post Master General Niles, both drawn at sight, on Mr. McQueen, Post Master in this city, were protested yesterday, by Mr. Hermann, Notary Public. Those notes having been duly presented to Mr. McQueen, he answered in the following terms:—"That they could not be paid now, but that they would be as soon as he would have funds." After this answer the bearer applied to the Custom house Collector to know if he had any wish to honor the signatures of Messrs. Amos Kendall and Niles. He answered that he did not think himself authorized to pay the notes. It was only after those repeated refusals that the bearer caused the notes to be protested.

A Sam Patch Dive.—On Friday last while Mr. Patterson, a painter, was at work upon the ware-house now erecting on the Black Rock pier at Buffalo, the staging gave way and precipitated him a distance of seventy-five feet into the torrent of the Niagara. In his descent, Mr. P. passed several projecting timbers, either of which had he struck, would have probably changed his course and dashed him on the rocks below, in which case destruction would have been inevitable. Fortunately, however, he passed them all, fell into the water, and was immediately rescued by some of the other workmen.

Fire at Hagerstown.—A destructive fire occurred on Sunday, in Hagerstown, in Washington county, Maryland. The offices of the three Whig papers were burned,—the "Torch Light," "Herald of Freedom," and "Our Flag." The principal part of the materials were saved, but of course in great disorder. Among the other buildings and goods burned, were Stewart's Bookstore and bindery; Kealhofers' saddlers shop, and materials on hand, (a total loss;) Ainsworth's hatter's shop, with many of its contents; barber shop, &c.

The Vast Swindling Scheme in Paris and London.—It is now said that the grand scheme, in which the chief actors were the Marquis de Bourbel, the Baron Louis d'Argeson, Pipe or Colson, an Englishman, Cunningham Graham, a Scotchman, his son and son-in-law, Frippa, an Italian, Perry, an engraver of London, two females, attached to Pipe and d'Argeson, has been discovered to embrace already over £5,000,000. It was to have gone on by false drafts. It was exploded by Perry's undertaking to raise £500 on one of the false drafts.

State Loan.—The New York correspondent of the National Intelligencer says, a sale of $400,000 Ohio six per cents. was made on the 27th ult. to Baring, Brothers & Co. at about 95. The market price of the stock in New York, for small sums, is 97½.

This is the first instance on record, we believe, of Ohio stocks passing from the hands of our Stage Agents at less than par value—frequently bringing 112 and 113.

The Bank of Manhattan, Ohio.—The Cleveland Herald of Saturday last contains the following information:—"We are informed, on respectable authority, that an injunction against the Bank of Manhattan has been applied for under the quo warranto law by the Bank Commissioners, and granted by Judge Potter."

From the recent accounts we had been induced to hope that the Bank would escape wreck. We yet trust the bill holders will not suffer loss.

The laborers on the Western Rail Road, Massachusetts, struck a few days since for higher wages. They attempted to obstruct others from working, when the leaders were arrested and committed to prison.

Mourning Apparel.—A religious association in Vermont called "The Windham and Bennington Associations." have recently passed the following resolution:

"Resolved—That it be, and is hereby earnestly recommended to our brethren to discourage, by their example, the practice of wearing mourning apparel on the death of relatives or friends."

To our view the practice of dressing in black on the death of relatives and friends is a custom, wholly unfounded in reason or propriety. The inward sorrow of the soul is but mocked by such outward manifestations. We hope, therefore, to see them wholly discarded. People of sense and standing have but to set the example recommended above, and the habit would go entirely out of vogue.

One good argument for its abolition is that it subjects the poor to expense of clothing which they cannot afford—and another is that, in warm weather, nothing can be more uncomfortable to the wearer and disagreeable to spectators than these sad-hued garments.

American Women.—De Tocqueville, in the second part of his great work, Democracy in America, pays a warm and bold tribute to the worth of our country women. He thus concludes his remarks:—"As for myself, I do not hesitate to avow that, although the women of the United States are confined within the narrow circle of domestic life, and their situation is, in some respects, one of extreme dependence; I have no where seen women occupying a loftier position; (that is, of moral influence,) and if I were asked, now that I am drawing to the close of this work, in which I have spoken of so many important things done by the Americans, to what the singular and growing strength of that people ought mainly to be attributed, I should reply—to the superiority of their women."

Heavy Damages.—A few days ago an important case was tried at the United States District Court, held at Columbus, Ohio, Judges M'Lean and Leavitt, presiding. The parties were McKenney vs. Neil, Moore & Co., stage coach proprietors. It was shown satisfactorily to the court and jury, that Messrs. Neil, Moore & Co. were very extensively concerned as stage coach proprietors, and generally gave entire satisfaction to the public. Yet, in this instance, it was evident that the great injury sustained to the plaintiff was caused by the upsetting of the coach while in the charge of a driver who was incapable of taking charge of the horses. The jury returned a verdict of damages for the plaintiff, $5,323.

An Old Tree.—One of the old magnificent trees, standing in front of the Buttonwood Hotel, in Germantown, having for the last two years shown signs of decay, it was determined on, as the only means to save a part of it, to have the main boughs severed from the trunk about forty feet above the ground. The Telegraph states that this dangerous undertaking was skilfully executed on Monday last. This tree, and its larger mate yet thrifty in appearance, were planted by the father of the late Captain Ashmead, a noted sea officer of Philadelphia, about one hundred and twenty-five years ago, when they were mere switches.

The Isthmus of Panama.—The New York Evening Signal remarks, that there is at length a speedy prosecution of the plan for connecting the Atlantic and Pacific oceans by a ship canal across the Isthmus of Panama. An enterprising company in Paris, after taking the necessary preliminary steps, has sent out a ship freighted with engineers, laborers, tools, etc. and it has probably arrived at the mouth of the Chagres, ready to commence active operations. It is astonishing that the execution of this project has been so long delayed.

The Folly of Tiger.—Tiger was a resolute dog—but wanted sense. The rail-road train passing over his master's premises, he undertook to oppose it, and was cut to pieces He did not consider the might of the coming engine, nor realize the power of the steam. He is a perfect illustration of the course of infidels and blasphemers, against the religion of Christ. It will grind them to powder, if they do not get out of the way—by repentance.

Mrs. Sigourney is going to England, to stay for some time. It is understood that she has engagements with some of the magazines over the water. There is not in the Old World, so popular a lady writer, and while it is a compliment to Mrs. Sigourney to be so engaged, it is equally a compliment to the good taste of those who manage the trans-atlantic periodicals. Mrs. Sigourney will be a good representative of the talents of her countrywomen.

There are two lines of stages running between Zanesville and Marietta, through this place. Between them, we learn, there is considerable racing, and that yesterday one wilfully run into the other, and threw it over the bank, seriously injuring several, and perhaps, mortally wounded one.—M'Connelsville Standard, 6th inst.

Prosperity is not a just scale; adversity is the only balance to weigh friends. Religion is the best armor, but the worst cloak. Liberality is, not giving largely, but giving wisely. He who makes an idol of his interest will make a martyr of his own integrity.

RECORDER.

ANESVILLE.

Y, ... AUGUST 12, 1849.

OUR AFFAIRS.

awson wishes to inform the Presi- wn, that he has formed a class re- cton, [illegible] of eighteen members.

has been released by the Presi- oungstown circuit, and sent on a mr to Michigan, at the call of some s of that State.

respectful invitation, from our . Evans, to attend the Cincinnati it would afford us much pleasure, could be released from our editoersy, exciting some interest, has some time past, in this town, on baptism, between the Rev. Parr, tist Church, and the Rev. Lawder, bdist Episcopal Church. The fol- ion was made during the debate scriber wishes us to publish. From before us, it looks mighty much ng to pass for Dr. Clarke's opinion his opinion, which would certainly very much like forgery. However, Church, generally, should not be h the matter, but the publishers of t edition only. We have no preju- our Baptist friends, but are willing a hearing on any subject. There ication in this paper, from one of pting to prove immersion to be the of baptism:

For the Western Recorder.

r: It is, I presume, known to your a controversy has, for some time in this place, on the subject of During the discussion, Dr. Adam uoted as authority, in favor of im- g the only mode of baptism. The is made from a work, professing to be 's Concordance, as revised by Dr. A. was as follows: "Baptism is an the New Testament, instituted by whereby the person is, in the name r, and of the Son, and of the Holy rsed in and covered with water." ther copy of the same work, to be e place, reads as follows: "Baptism ance of the New Testament, insti- sus Christ, whereby the person is, in the Father, and of the Son, and of ost immersed in, or sprinkled with ence, a question was raised, as to he true, and which was the spurious contending for the genuiness of his arguments of both were heard and bity left to form their own conclusion. ng that the smallest degree of uncer- ld be entertained by any, a letter ed to the publishers of the work, the ich, is as follows:

"Boston, July 11, 1840.

ir: In answer to your inquiry, we that the English edition of Charles h's Concordance, from which our edi- ereotyped, has it or sprinkled,—it was n this, and an edition printed for the o and covered,—they stating that such iews of the original author, Butter-

With respect, truly yours,

"Crocker & Brewster."

said thus much, I now leave it with to decide who is correct.

Respectfully, W. H. Lawder.

ark, with regard to Br. Shinn's com- n, on the first page, that we have not ok. We subscribed for a half dozen assist in their publication, but a friend em, we gave him an order to O. White nd they are sold. Nor do we know shall have time to read it. It may nge to him to say so, but such is the ave not read a book regularly through han ten years. We have been so pres- aged in the active duties of life that ot had time. We frequently refer to ne books, but, it is generally with refer- me particular investigation.

ld say to our brother that he has issued o the world, and thereby made it pub- ty, and the public now have a right to their opinions upon it. And he will ear a little with our democratic habits. pinion, however, that what is said about her increase the desire to read it than . The itching curiosity of human na- ok into secrecies, prophecies, mysteries odoxies, is at present, far stronger than l of priestly authority. Though some eterred from examining, far more will ed to seek out the heresy, to see what oles. If we had a copy by us, at this should be strongly tempted, to steal a e from our pressing duties to look after ming heresy.

lthough the public have a right to give inion of an author's production, they right to treat him with any injustice or ess. The following editorial article, from stern Christian Advocate, of the 10th which some friend had the goodness to to us, is a specimen of as gross unfair- any man could be capable of:

. A. Shinn.—A New Book.—Many of lers have learned that Rev. Asa Shinn engaged for some time in writing a We had subscribed for the work, and from erest we felt in its amiable author, were had it met our expectations, to recom- to the public. The work has come to nd we have consulted it sufficiently to at it contains certain most unexpected- and what seems to us, unscriptural— say, at present, anti-scriptural—specula- which will greatly diminish the usefulness Shinn's labor. We shall be glad to find second examination that it is not, as we fear, a book of serious and destructive worse, if possible, than 'Annanism' it- ough conceived, we presume, in no such of prepensive fraud and malice. We say luctantly, so far as Mr. Shinn is personally ned. We say it not to deter our readers uying and reading the book, but as a warn- guard them against its dangerous insinu- . We will not say that Mr. Shinn is him- 'Restorationist,' but doubtless his book nserve the diffusion of that dangerous and will lead the incautious reader to the plain scriptural statements concern- future, eternal retribution."

v, such a wholesale way as this, of proscribing and condemning a man is certainly inconsistent with the character of a respectable editor. You may commend a person by the wholesale as much as you please, but when you charge him with heresy or crime, always give the specifications of his offence, so that he may have an opportunity of defending himself. The editor of the Advocate had a right to make any objection to Mr. Shinn's book, he thought proper, provided he had extracted into his paper the objectionable matter, or at least a portion of it. Then every one would have been able to judge for himself, of the correctness of the editorial remark. But, as it is, the author is condemned entirely upon the editorial ipse dixit; and in a way too, that there is no chance to defend himself, because there is nothing tangible.

Without intending to express any opinion for or against the orthodoxy of his book, we will cheerfully tender Br. Shinn a portion of our columns in which to defend himself. Meantime, if we should see any thing we deem wrong, in his opinions, we shall take the liberty to point it out.

COMMUNICATION.

Steubenville, O., August 6, 1840.

Mr. Editor: On my return home last week from the toils of the District, weary, worn and unwell, I found my family in mourning. Our youngest child, little Benjamin Hodgson Brown, aged 11 months and 2 days, lay dead in the house. They had kept him two days, to give me time to reach home, to be at the funeral. Three of the children God hath given us, out of six, are now in heaven. Since I left home in May, my eldest brother, Arthur Brown, aged somewhere above 60 years, a worthy citizen and a pious christian, was called from the bosom of the M. E. Church, to take his station among the redeemed on Mt. Zion. My ties in heaven are increasing—my own health is much shaken, by the labors of the past year.—This earthly house of my Tabernacle will soon be taken down. Then shall I too, have a building of God, a house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens. In full view of this glory, I desire to live and labor, to the end of my pilgrimage.

From Zanesville circuit, where I last wrote you, I proceeded to Zanesville station. The meeting there was pleasant and refreshing to the members, but nothing special of the revival kind occurred. They have an excellent young minister stationed among them, and I have been much in hopes, that amid the out-pourings of the spirit of God, nearly all around them, the time to favor Zion in that place would soon come.

My next appointment was on the Pleasant Hill circuit. Br. Foster has already reported the good news from that circuit, which I take to be in a healthy growing state. Of course, nothing more need be added by me.

From thence I proceeded by home, (where I rested two days) to Farmington on the Western Reserve. This was an extra appointment.—Here I met with a number of those itinerant brethren, who had withdrawn from the Erie Conference of the M. E. Church, and saw several of the others afterwards as I past on. General Conference not being over, they had not yet decided on their future course. They appear to be valuable men, true to Methodism, love our principles, generally, and as matters now stand, I feel it my duty to give them an invitation to unite, they and their people, with the M. P. Church. In East Farmington I found Br. Piper, our conference missionary, in a fair way, as I supposed, to get up a circuit. He had organized one good society, and as I understood, had a prospect of forming others in that vicinity soon.

Grand River circuit came next. Prospects there are brightening. Our good Br. Earle appears to have been successful to some extent.—We had a good meeting there. The M. E. minister recalled his meetings to be at ours, he and his people. His friendship and liberality are hereby affectionately acknowledged. The Presbyterians, whose house we used, and Congregationalists communed with us, as well as the Episcopal Methodists. God bless all these kind christian brethren.

The next circuit in course was Cleveland.—The meeting was held in the M. P. Academy in Brighton. It was a valuable meeting. On this circuit many have been added during the past year, under Br. Cochran's administration. But on some points of discipline, differences of opinion, leading on to troubles in society, have arisen in one or two places. I done all I could to get matters adjusted, but fear I spent my strength for naught, or nearly so. However, when the hour of calm reflection shall come on, I trust they will see, that next to the sacred scriptures, our constitution and book of discipline is to us a bond of union, and will act accordingly—"Endeavoring to keep the unity of the spirit in the bond of peace."

From Cleveland circuit I turned south to Granger circuit. This little circuit, not getting its preacher appointed by conference, was served until the close of the third quarter by Br. Bamford in connection with Wayne circuit. Here I found a kind hearted people, getting along very well,—had a good quarterly meeting in Brother Swan's barn,—preached in two other places as I past on. Br. Bamford has been useful here, and is greatly beloved by the people, in and out of the church. I rejoice in the usefulness of my brethren.

On Wayne circuit the meeting was at the house of our venerable Br. Armstrong, now superanuated. But he still feels the spirit of an itinerant. On Sunday we went to the woods—congregation very large. All things considered we had a good meeting, but Wayne circuit is in a discouraged condition. Br. Armstrong agreed to labor on it the last quarter, who, with the aid of the unstationed preachers, will doubtless keep up the appointments, and Br. Bamford is devoting his whole time to Granger, the work there having enlarged considerably. In one part of Wayne circuit there was quite a revival last winter, a goodly number were added to the church. But prayer and class meetings not being kept up, as was necessary to the meeting, and training young christians, discouragement has followed. Brethren, think of this.

I proceeded next to Sandusky circuit. The meeting was held in Tiffin. Br. Cowl, the superintendant, has suffered much in health—he had the fever and ague when I was there—he is now assisted by Br. Alfred W. Russell. The meeting was pleasant, and I trust to some extent profitable—no special revival,—my own health was much worsted while there. I learned from Br. M. Scott, who was in attendance, that a good society was formed, on the Sandusky circuit, at a two days' meeting about 20 miles north east of Tiffin the Sunday after I was there. So you see these young brethren have some prosperity, and their way appears to be opening in other directions.

My next appointment was on the Bucyrus circuit—a camp-meeting—some souls were brought to Christ, how many I cannot say, and our brethren in that region were considerably encouraged. Br. Bloomer having enlarged the work considerably, Br. Nelson Burgess was appointed to assist him until conference.

On Sunday by arrangement, at the above camp meeting, I was to preach the first sermon, Br. Hughes was to follow. Soon after I commenced certain disorderly persons, on the border of the congregation to the right, annoyed me very much. Having done all I could to get order, I then asked if there were any magistrates on the ground, and prayed them to protect the meeting against outrage—there were five present, setting in the congregation,—all hung down their heads, and refused to see, but they heard, and were therefore bound by oath, as I suppose, to protect the meeting, especially as they were called on, still they did nothing. I then went on in the best manner I could, under such untoward circumstances. Near the close of my discourse these abandoned creatures took another plan. Two young men, and I think four women, got into a wagon, some distance to the left, drove briskly along, close in front of the congregation, which lay exposed, there being no tents in front, they then turned the wagon to the right, and drove straight thro' the congregation close to the seats, and thus cut my congregation right in two, about one fourth of whom, as is usually the case, on Sabbath days, were above the regular seating. These wretched creatures then drove off, I suppose, to their homes, and the magistrates let all pass. Still the great mass were orderly; Br. Hughes followed with a sermon, but was considerably annoyed. The best laws upon earth would fail to protect our meetings, where the magistrates are corrupt and worthless.

I then proceeded to Mt. Vernon circuit.—Here Br. M. Scott has been alone, and has done, no doubt, all he could, for the general good, but still, for the want of another preacher, the work is thought to have suffered. I preached in two other places, but the principal meeting was in the town of Mt. Vernon. Harvest had come on, of course the meeting could not be continued, yet, among the noble spirits of Mt. Vernon, my soul was refreshed, in the use of the means of grace, and I have reason to believe that our meeting was not in vain in the Lord. Such a circuit should always have two preachers. Our brethren in the ministry, who can, must not fail to help Br. Scott at his camp-meeting.

The Newark circuit came next. Here, too, we were in the midst of harvest. Only had meeting on Saturday afternoon, and twice on the Sabbath. There was nothing special occurred. On this circuit, there are many excellent members. Br. J. Wilson has served them, I believe, to general acceptance since some time last January. This circuit covers a tract of country, that contains an excellent population, and it would be gratifying indeed to hear of a glorious revival of religion among them.

On Adamsville circuit, which was the next in order, we were still in the midst of harvest.—Here we had a pleasant meeting—it closed on Sabbath afternoon. Here we have a good membership and a good minister, but he has suffered so much from the ague and fever, that the cause, of course had to suffer with him, as he could not keep up his appointments. They had a camp-meeting on this circuit, sometime in June, that did good, and now I learn that they have concluded to have another, to commence the 13th instant. Will our brethren in the ministry, consider the condition of Adamsville circuit and give it the necessary assistance. Always help the needy.

My last appointment was on Coshocton circuit. Harvest was pretty well over. The brethren turned out well—all through, the meeting was exceedingly good. There was a good work, a number joined, and I have seen no meeting this year, that looked more like eventuating in a glorious revival, than did the Coshocton meeting, could it have continued a while longer.—Bros. Warren and Stevens have been quite successful, and are much esteemed for their works' sake.

I have been called on for help by brethren in Michigan, and have written them that they are in the bounds of the Ohio Conference, &c. But after advising them how to proceed from now until Conference, I informed them that if Ohio Conference did not assist them, and they applied to us, at our conference, we should, if possible. On receiving another letter from them at Tiffin, I wrote to Br. J. B. Roberts at Lower Sandusky, to pay them a visit, collect information and make report to our conference. It may be the set time has come to do something in that new State.

There appears to be a call for help on the northern border of Coshocton circuit; a circuit will probably grow up in that region before long. The Coshocton preachers have already made some excursions through that region, and have organized some societies.

On looking back over the past year, I feel sorry that I could do no more for the honor of my blessed Lord and the good of mankind. I had the will to do more, but my health and other qualifications were insufficient. Upon the whole, I have done the best I could, my labor is with the Lord, and my record is on high. It is very probable that I shall never travel through the Pittsburgh District again. I may be allowed, therefore, to say to the brethren in the ministry and the membership, that I love you all, and have enjoyed a great amount of religious happiness among you, in the midst of my toils, and my prayer to the God of my life is, that in the midst of present political excitements, we may all remember our high calling as christians and act accordingly. To be sure, you all have your part to act in this world and in relation to this world's affairs, but O! let us all keep in view the world to come. Mr. Editor, I must close; my communication is already too long. In hope of seeing you and the brethren at conference, where preparations are already being made to accommodate you all, I subscribe myself your brother in the kingdom and patience of Jesus Christ.

Geo. Brown.

ITEMS.

Free Colored Persons in Missouri.—The Mayor of St. Louis is proceeding against all the free colored people who have taken up their residences there, in violation of the laws. Fifteen, who were found to have violated the law, were ordered to leave the State in three days.

A Grand Turk.—A colored man named Banks, with several aliases, was arrested last week, for the burglary committed at the house of Dr. Patterson, Director of the Mint, upon the night of the 29th of March last. On examination it appeared in evidence that he has five regularly married wives, now living in various parts of this city.—Phil. paper.

Dr. Eldridge.—Attorney General Brooke mentioned to the Bench on Thursday, during the sitting of the General Sessions, that he was busy in preparing the bills of indictment against Dr. Eldridge, and stated that there would probably be forty or fifty.

A Mutiny.—The crew of the ship Archer are in prison at Newcastle, Del., for a combined and mutinous attack upon the officers of the ship.—They entertained a settled hate towards one of the officers whom the others attempted to force upon them, after they were promised he should not sail with them.

Dr. Dyott.—Exertions are being made for the pardon of this individual. Some of his creditors encourage the project, and it is generally believed that his debts will be paid off, provided he is set at liberty.

Caution.—The Merchants' and Mechanics' Bank of Wheeling, Va., has issued a batch of notes payable twelve months after date, (July, 1840.) Our brokers charge 10 per cent. discount. Those payable on demand are 2 per cent. Look out for them.—Phil. Courier.

District of Columbia Banks.—The effort made to obtain a partial re-charter of the banks from Congress, failed, so that those institutions have no alternative but to wind up their affairs as speedily as possible.

Steamboat Penalty.—The steamboat Carroll, of Carrollton, belonging to Baltimore, was on Monday last decreed by the Supreme Court, to have violated the act of 7th July, 1838, in not having her hull examined within the twelve months. A penalty of five hundred dollars was pronounced.

Steam on Common Roads.—It is stated in an English paper that a steam carriage went from Brighton to Doptford, 65 miles, in three hours and a half, over the stage road.

Singular Death.—The Buffalo Commercial says, that one day last week, as Capt. Warren (one of the gang who committed the outrage upon the Caroline,) was describing the manner in which he despatched an American who was on board, with a movement suitable to the words, he looked upward, fell back and expired!

Mr. C. L. Cole, who stands charged by the Cincinnati News, with having absconded from this State with funds belonging to some institutions here, has published a card in the New York papers denying the truth of the statement, attributing it to a foul machination against him, and asks a suspension of public opinion for a few days in relation to the matter, when he promises to explain matters to the public's satisfaction.

Post Offices in our Country.—There were in 1839, in the United States, 12,789 Post offices. Receipts for postage $4,476,638; expenditures, $4,624,117—extent of post roads 133,999 miles. Annual transportation of the mails 34,496,878 miles.

Mrs. Harrison, wife of the General, is still suffering from illness. Her life is considered in imminent danger.

The two Arabian horses presented by the Imaum of Muscat to the President of the United States, are advertised to be sold by auction at Washington, on the 4th instant.

The Erie Extension of the Pennsylvania Canal has been completed to Greenville, Mercer county, Pa., and the opening of it was celebrated at that place, on the 23d ultimo.

It is computed that the number of Germans who have arrived at St. Louis via New Orleans, during the past year, does not fall short of 4000. Many of them bring specie, and all of them industry and economy.

A correspondent of the National Intelligencer estimates the extent of the Russian Empire, at 7,500,000 miles; and its population at seventy million.

Water-Proof Blankets.—The Globe speaks of blankets made by the Mechanic Manufacturing Company at Rochester, N. Y., that had undergone a process which makes them perfectly water-proof. They are warranted to be impervious to both water and damp air, and might serve for a cloak by day, a tent by night, and a very comfortable bed cover at all times for the soldiers on the frontier.

Seventy-seven years ago, it took a week to carry the mail from Hartford to Boston, which now goes in less than half a day. About that time, too, Dr. Franklin confidently predicted the time would come when Philadelphia would have a fast line to take the mail through from Philadelphia to New York in two days. It now goes in four or five hours.

The Chinese have made several attempts to burn the British ships. What a spectacle it is to witness a great nation like Great Britain going to war upon another nation, because they refuse to buy and smoke the opium, out of which British subjects realize millions on millions annually, producing poverty, squallidness and misery among the poor Chinese.

A crazy woman went into the Baltimore market and seized one of the fat butchers, declaring he was her husband. The provision-dealer found himself in close quarters for half an hour, for she said she never would give up her "der hus."

It is believed that seventy thousand have reformed from intemperance in Great Britain by the renewed efforts that have been making. Let so many soldiers enlist in that cause, that the whole globe shall become one scene of rejoicing. We fight under that flag.

Several of the political newspapers come to us dressed in mourning. Some of them lie so fast, they may be thus robed with much appositeness.—Saturday Courier.

New Orleans, Charleston and the other large cities of the South, have been uncommonly healthy this season.

London occupies 32 square miles.

Large Rivers.—The Thames, although not to be compared to the Mississippi or the Ohio, is nevertheless an important river, perhaps the most so of any river in Europe. Capital to the amount of £5,000,000 is employed in steam navigation—and 150 steam vessels, of all descriptions, are constantly employed on the river.

British Marine.—Great Britian possesses 2,800,000 tons of shipping, and numbers 1,600,000 seamen in her commercial navy, while a fleet of 700 steamboats, being more than is possessed by all the rest of Europe, sail upon her waters.

True Philosophy.—Hume said, "I would rather possess a cheerful disposition, inclining always to look on the bright side, than, with a gloomy mind, be master of 10,000 a year." David was a philosopher in so saying.

"Appearing Before the Queen."—A man was thus cited in law to appear, when he travelled to London, and they refused to admit him to see Her Majesty.

Road to Fortune.—Mind your own business with diligence and perseverance.

Baltimore is now the shin-plaster city. She has holden an anti-meeting. The only safety is in driving them all out.

One of the most striking things ever said of Washington was "that he changed mankind's ideas of political greatness."

Russia is jealous of the movements of England in India. She is not likely to look tamely on.

Baron Rothschild lately paid 14,000 dollars for a painting of "The Good Shepherd." He is a good Baron for the painters.

The Temperance pledge was taken by over 100 in St. Peters' church, Baltimore, last week. May the number soon be 10,000.

Of 169 convicts in Connecticut prison, one hundred and four were never married. Comment is unnecessary.

Massachusetts has over 10,000,000 of dollars in woollen manufactures.

France has forty thousand Roman Catholic priests.

Music is the poetry of air.—Ledger.

Whirlwinds, perhaps you call the grand solos.—Courier.

Touching.—A little boy named James Maxwell, who had been missing from his parents in Delaware, was found under a large quantity of hay, where it is supposed he had laid himself down and was smothered.

Damage by Hail.—Considerable damage was done by hail at the mouth of the Genessee river during the storm on Tuesday afternoon, July 28.

Fire by Lightning.—On Saturday morning, 25th ult., the barn of Mr. Abraham Stover, of Nockamixon township, on the Delaware river, was struck by lightning and consumed, with all the crops of the season.

The steamboat Ellen Douglass was nearly consumed by fire at New Albany, on Wednesday the 8th ult. The hull and part of the upper works were saved.

The Boston Atlas says that fifty berths have been taken for the steam ship Britannia; she sails to-day, August 1.

Melancholy.—Mr. Nathaniel Melcher, of Brunswick, Maine, was killed by his son Levi Melcher, (who was insane) on Monday, 27th ult.

Barn Burnt by Lightning.—The barn of Walter White, of Gates, N. Y., was on Tuesday afternoon, 28th ult., struck by lightning, and in a few minutes burnt to the ground.

"There are fewer merchant vessels," says the Boston Daily Advertiser, "in this port at the present time, than for a number of years; only six ships, two of which will probably sail this morning, three barks, and a small number of brigs.—The high rates of southern frieghts, and the very long passages from Europe have had a tendency to produce this scarcity."

A Man Seized by a Shark.—One of the hands of a pilot boat, in the harbor of Charleston, fell overboard on Monday, the 20th ult., and was immediately seized by a shark and carried down.

A serious affray took place at the Alhambra, Mobile, on Monday night, July 27, between two individuals named Titus and Pegrim, in which the former was severely wounded by the latter with a knife. Titus was stabbed in several places, and now lies in a dangerous state. The affray grew out of a political discussion.

Upper Canada.—Rev. James Clarke was killed at St. Catharine, on Sunday, 19th ult., while going to church to officiate as pastor.

A female, named Fleury, has just died at Munliswyl, near Solure, in Switzerland, aged 100 years. She has had 12 children and 77 grandchildren. She was never seriously ill, and possessed all her intellectual faculties to the last. Her father died at the age of 103.

The large steam Flour Mill of Mr. Christopher Gardner, in the vicinity of Pleasant Unity, Westmoreland county, Pa., was destroyed by fire on the night of 17th ult. There were from 3000 to 4000 bushels of wheat in the mill, which were also destroyed.

Furs.—We learn from the St. Louis Bulletin that twelve Mackinaw boats, belonging to the American Fur Company, arrived at that city on the 17th ult. from the Far West, loaded with robes and skins to the value of about $76,000.

Accounts from the interior of Florida represent the prospects of a corn crop as very flattering. The cotton crop will probably not equal that of last year.

"The Sugar Cane also bids fair to reward the planter. So that times would be brisk enough among us next winter, could all hands get clear of their debts."

No cashier has yet been appointed for the Bank of Virginia. Mr. Brent, to whom the office was tendered, declines its acceptance.

The Charleston papers state that the Hon. Henry L. Pinckney, Mayor of that city, has received the appointment of Collector of the Port.

Sign of Weakness.—A person pointed out a man who had a profusion of rings on his fingers to a cooper. "Ah, master," said the artisan, "it is a sure sign of weakness when you see so many hoops are used."

Dr. Eldridge.—This individual, who stands charged with forgery, is perfectly sane, notwithstanding reports to the contrary. He has engaged counsel, with whom he communicates freely and without reserve.

The steamer Great Western, from New York for Bristol, was seen on the 7th ult., it lat. 42, 6, lon. 47, 0, by the ship Thomas P. Cope, of Philadelphia.

There are forty clergymen in Massachusetts, without any pastoral charge.

A gentleman said that he was out in a storm at sea once, that frightened him so, that his hair all turned gray in one night. Another gentleman present, said yes, he had been in a gale of wind at sea that alarmed him so, that it turned his wig gray in one night. "Sir," said the first gentleman, "do you mean to doubt my word?" "No," said the other, "do you mean to doubt mine?"

OBITUARY.

[by request.]

Br. Springer: We deem sister RACHEL LEONARD, who departed this life 25th of July, 1840, worthy of the following notice in your paper:

Sister Leonard was formerly from the city of Pittsburgh, where she, for many years, lived an acceptable member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. When the public mind was agitated with our principles, she, after giving them a calm examination, concluded that those were the principles on which the Christian Church ought to be established, and she, among the first, who came off from the old church and joined the Methodist Protestant Church. At that time she had a handsome property, but by some adverse wind, she lost it all. But she confidently looked to the Lord for protection, and realized it through the charity of the church and the kindness of her little grandson.

This little orphan boy lost his parents when a babe. He was raised by his grandmother. He is now 12 or 13 years of age; what is remarkable, instead of spending his money, as other boys of his age, he brought it to his grandmother to assist her in her old age. To see him taking the last look of her whom he regarded as his only mother, and his last friend and support in youth, and for whom he had such kind affection, as is exemplified in his conduct, was enough to move the hardest heart. Oh! that some kind friend who is able, would give him a home and protection from the ten thousand snares in the world, that that noble spirit may not be lost to the world, but may be protected by the providence of God, and be safely housed in some branch of the christian church.

Sister Leonard remained a worthy member of the Methodist Protestant Church from its first existance till her death. Her upright walk had obtained for her many friends that paid every attention to her in her last illness. She was remarkably patient in all her sufferings, and felt that the rod and staff of the Almighty did comfort her through the dark shadow and the valley of death. She has left a brilliant testimony behind that she rests from her labours.

A. C. Barnes.

Cincinnati, August 5, 1840.

Business Department.

RECEIVED PAY FOR RECORDER.

From T. Calhoun,	$2 00
" J. A. Mills for H. H. Long,	3 00
" Geo. Hughes for Wm. Williams, H. McKinnie, W. Armstrong and J. Diselms in advance for 2d vol.	8 00
" W. Durbin,	2 00
" N. R. Ferguson for A. Jester,	2 00
" J. Walker,	2 50
" W. Adams, of Zanesville, for E. Arnold, of Lewis, Va.	2 00
" D. Inskeep,	2 00
" Jacob Hardin, of Indiana,	2 00
" R. George, for 2d vol.	2 00
" James Kitchen, for 2d vol.	2 00

LETTERS RECEIVED.

C. Thorp, R. R. Mitchell, J. Milstead, J. A. Mills, Martin S. Weaver and others, S. Bloomer, 1 sub.; G. Ayres, J. Fordyce, Geo. Hughes, 1 sub.; B. Ross, H. Hendrickson, J. Hardin, 1 sub., pay in advance; A. Shinn, C. Clancey, N. R. Ferguson, Wm. Durbin, all right; L. Lull, I. Thrap, N. Snethen, W. Kinley, D. McCarty, J. McMurry, D. Inskeep, all right; W. B. Evans, A. C. Barnes, 2; M. Jared, J. F. Headley, J. Smith, T. Briant, Geo. Brown, J. R. Fleming, J. D. Madairis and Eliz. Howard.

The committee appointed to name the place for holding the ensuing Ohio Annual Conference, in case of a division, &c., agree that it shall be held in Cincinnati the last Tuesday of this instant. W. B. Evans.

A camp-meeting will commence on the 20th of this instant, on the old camp-ground, near Sharon, Ohio, on the farm of sister Hargreave. Brs. Dobbins, D. H. Stephens, Evans, McGuire and Hannah, of In., are invited. A. C. Barnes.

MISCELLANEOUS.

From the London Gazette.

THE LAST HOURS OF THE KING OF PRUSSIA.

THE GOOD DIE HAPPY.

The King, having ordered his bed to be removed into a room the widows of which looked into the court of the palace, heard the murmuring noise of the populace assembled to gain intelligence of his health. The King inquired what it meant. On being informed that it arose from the people, anxious to obtain the news of his health, his Majesty replied, "I am glad they think of me, for I have loved them as my children, and have devoted all my endeavors, all my energies, to promote their welfare." Talking of the laying of the first stone of the monument of Frederick II., the King said, "It is my desire that this work should go on with rapidity and skill. Therefore we charge M. de Rochow with its execution." M. de Rochow is entirely indebted to the King for his eminent position, and is also highly esteemed by the Prince Royal, who has been attached to him from his earliest youth. It might be said that his Majesty contemplated, in M. de Rochow, who is a statesman of the first order, the future prime minister of his son. The King directed that his body shall be deposited in the vault at Charlottemberg, by the side of the remains of his Queen Louisa.

The funeral of Frederick William has taken place with great pomp; the Emperor of Russia, the Hereditary Grand Duke of Mecklenburg, Prince Frederick of the Netherlands, and more than 20 Princes and Princesses, followed the body to the grave. The following details will give an idea of the effect produced on the Prussian capital by the death of the King. Yesterday morning, the 7th, a courier was sent from Berlin by the Empress of Russia with a pressing letter to her husband, informing him that all hope was at end, and that death was near at hand.—When the interview between the King and his eldest daughter took place, he could only embrace her. The Empress fell on her knees before the little camp bed, which the King would not quit during his illness. At the head of the bed was the portrait of Queen Louisa: the King pointed to this with a gesture to his daughter, indicating his hope of speedily joining his deceased wife in Heaven. The last sacrament was administered by Dr. Eylert, the Protestant Bishop. The King was at this time so weak that he could scarcely speak. The Princesses were in the adjoining room, and very few persons were allowed to be present at this solemn ceremony. The Prince de Witgenstein, the oldest friend and servant of the King, was in profound grief. The immediate symptoms of approaching death commenced on the morning of the 7th. An immense crowd at this time surrounded the palace. It will be easily conceived, that in an absolute monarchy, governed from the year 1797 by the same King, who, through good and evil fortune, had maintained his popularity, a change of government was a circumstance calculated to produce a profound sensation. At about half-past twelve, the Emperor of Russia arrived at full gallop in his little travelling carriage by the Rue Royale, in front of the small palace. The Emperor immediately jumped out in his travelling dress, followed by one of his aides de camp. The people took him for a simple military courier. In the saloons of the first floor he embraced his wife and relations, and immediately proceeded to the bedside of the dying King, who was become speechless, but recognized his son-in-law. The Emperor knelt down, and kissed the hand of his father-in-law. The King died without suffering. At three o'clock in the afternoon there was no longer any sign of breathing, and a small looking glass which was held before the mouth remained without a mark. The Prince Royal then closed the eyes of his father, and the Emperor of Russia was the first to salute him as William IV.—The King having died on Whit Sunday, when all the population were moving about, the news of the death spread rapidly. The mourning is general, and within a few hours even the poorest workmen were seen with crapes on their arms. The new King proceeded at three o'clock in the afternoon to the palace, and appeared upon the balcony. The act of administering the oaths to the Ministers took place almost immediately. The troops took the oaths over their colors in the barracks. The Emperor of Russia will leave immediately after the funeral; the Empress will repose from her fatigues at the Palace of Sans Souci, near Potsdam, and then go to the baths of Elms. The Queen will go shortly to Charlottenhof, where the King will pass part of the summer. The changes in the Ministry will not be published immediately, as propriety requires that nothing of this kind should be made public during the period of the mourning. The Council of State will take the oaths to-day, and a proclamation will also appear. Do not place any faith in what you may hear as to the words of the Emperor Nicholas and which are said to have been pronounced shortly after the death of the King. His grief at the moment was too great for him to make any political allusions, and the words in question were not heard by the most intimate servants of the King. On leaving the palace, the Prince Royal, now become King, was so affected, that the public were forcibly struck with his appearance. The new King said to his consort, sister of Louis of Baravia, "Support me, Elizabeth, for I am now more in want of assistance than ever."

From the Lowell Souvenir.

THE CLAIMS OF THE INDIANS.

Mr. Editor:—The following extract from an original address on the Claims of the Indians, though written some time since, may not be unacceptable to your readers. A. B.

I am aware that I have to combat not only the prejudices of education, but that deep rooted antipathy which steels the hearts of almost every one against this injured and long abused people. I am aware that with the name of Indian is associated all that is barbarous and inhuman,—that it is taught to children as another name for cruelty and revenge.—But so long as reason holds her empire in the breast—so long as philanthropy influences the mind, and religion kindles a glow of love in the heart, we may venture to plead the cause of the most wretched, we may remove the strongest prejudices and the most deep rooted antipathy. We may ever raise our voice in behalf of the despised Indians, than whom, no people have stronger claims to commiseration.

We may question the justice by which the epithet savage has been applied to them, not indeed by examining the characters of the miserable remnant whom we behold wandering about, displaying in a striking manner the condition of a people groaning under the iron scourge of the conqueror, but by examining their primitive habits, their character before they were degenerated by the vices of Europeans. In the writings of those who first visited them, we find nothing to justify the injuries they have received, nor to cause the hatred entertained towards them. But on the contrary in the language of Columbus himself, "there was not a better people in the world than these, more affectionate, affable and kind." All writers agree in ascribing to them a nobleness of nature, which would do honor to any people. Their hospitality was unbounded, and they would share their last morsel even with a stranger. They were strong in their attachments especially towards their children. The warrior who could face death on the field of battle undaunted and undismayed, might be seen weeping over the lifeless remains of a child, and refusing to be comforted.

They were true in their engagements, and long retained a grateful sense of the favors shown them.—Although they were ignorant of that worship which is acceptable to God, yet few of them were idolators. They believed in a Supreme Being and of a future state of rewards and punishments. They for the most had stated periods of worship, and were strict in observing them. The language of a noble chief may have been adopted by many. "When the sun goes down Complaint opens his heart to the Great Spirit, and earlier than the sun appears again upon the hills, he gives thanks for his preservation during the night: for he feels it is God only that can support."

The war between the Indians and Europeans was a war of extermination. On the part of the natives, goaded, as they were to desperation, what could we expect but that cruelty should be exercised towards their enemies, when they chanced to fall into their power, what else, even from civilized man could we expect?—When the Europeans first landed, the natives believed them to be messengers from the Great Spirit, commanding the thunder and the lightning. They carried to them their best offerings,—they carried to the strangers their children, requesting that they would lay their hands upon and bless them. When they were asked for corn they gave it, when they were asked for land they gave it. But when they saw these supposed "angels of mercy" turn into demons, when with "one voice of thunder" scores of their friends were slain, when their wives and children were decoyed on board of vessels and sold for slaves,—their villages burnt,—their crops destroyed,—their natures could bear no more, they sounded the war cry and began the fight. They fought for their homes—their defenceless children—their all. But the slender arrow was a powerless weapon against the muskets and artillery of their enemies. When they were conquered they fled to the woods, thence often they were decoyed by the song of peace; and while in their villages, resting securely on the promises of their invaders, more than once were they surrounded and butchered—men, women, and children, in cold blood!

Thus, tribe after tribe have passed away; the forest has been levelled, cities built, and the name of Indian scarcely is heard. Here and there we behold a miserable few lingering around the graves of their fathers; but to some, even of these, the mournful privilege of laying their bodies to moulder with the dust of their friends is denied them, and they are driven away to humor the caprice of their conquerors. Soon, very soon, unless some Angel commissioned from on high shall kindly interpose in their behalf, will their names perish. The Pole, struggling for liberty, is cheered by the voice of encouragement, echoing from the farthest corner of the earth. The Greek, too, is heard, and for him assembled nations form a shield of their own breasts, to defend him from the bursting fury of the Turk. But for the Indians, though they struggle long and hard, though they bare their breasts and stand before their homes till their blood flows in rills at their feet, where is the tear of sympathy,—where is the hand extended to their relief,—where is the voice proclaiming their wrongs and defending their rights?—Fainter and fainter is the light of their council fires, and soon it will be extinguished forever. Our temples and our dwellings stand upon that soil which has been watered by their tears and their blood, and who can walk over their graves and pick the time worn relics of their genius from the sand, and feel no sympathy, no wish to preserve the remaining few from the fate of their progenitors? The voice of sympathy,—the voice of humanity calls upon us to interpose. It speaks from the graves of those self-devoted chiefs, who left their homes in the far-off forest, in search of the "way of life" at the rising sun. The breeze wafts it from mountain to mountain—echo carries it from vale to vale, until it is heard in every part of the land. And who will respond?

LOST CHILD RESTORED.—An event which occurred near Briancon, will give some notion of the incidents which emblazon the mountain life and field sports in the regions of the Alps.

A peasant with his wife and three children, had taken up his summer quarters in a chatlet, and was pasturing his flocks on one of the rich Alps which overhang the Durance. The oldest boy was an idiot about eight years of age, the second was five years old, and dumb, and the youngest was an infant. It so happened that the infant was left one morning in charge of his brothers; and the three had rambled to some distance from the chatlet before they were missed.—When the mother went in search of the little wanderers, she found the two elder, but could discover no traces of the baby. The idiot boy seemed to be in a transport of joy, while the dumb child displayed every symptom of alarm and terror. In vain did the terrified parent endeavor to collect what had become of the lost infant. The antics of the one and the fright of the other explained nothing.—The dumb boy was almost bereft of his senses, while the idiot appeared to have acquired an unusual degree of mirth and expression. He danced about, laughed, and made gesticulations, as if he were imitating the action of one who had caught up something of which he was fond and hugged to his heart. This, however, was of some slight comfort to the poor woman, for she imagined that some acquaintance had fallen in with the children, and had taken away the infant. But the day and night wore away and no tidings of the lost child. On the morrow when the parents were pursuing their search an eagle flew over their heads, at the sight of which the idiot renewed his antics and the dumb boy clung to his father, with shrieks of anguish and affright. The horrible truth then burst upon their minds, that the miserable infant had been carried off in the talons of a bird of prey; and the half-witted elder brother was glad at his riddance of an object of whom he was jealous.

On the morning on which the accident happened, an Alpine yager,

"Whose joy was in the wilderness—to breathe
The difficult air of the iced mountain's top," had been watching near an eagle's seat, under the hope of shooting the bird upon her return to her nest. The yager waiting in all the anxious perseverance of a true sportsman, beheld the monster slowly winging her way towards the rock behind which he was concealed. Imagine his horror, when, upon her nearer approach, he heard the cries, and distinguished the figure of an infant in her fatal grasp. In an instant his resolution was formed—to fire at the bird, at all hazards, the moment she should alight upon her nest, and rather to kill the child, than leave it to be torn to pieces by the horrid devourer. With a silent prayer and a steady aim, the mountaineer poised his rifle. The ball went directly through the head or heart of the eagle, and in a minute afterward, this gallant hunter of the Alps had the unutterable delight of snatching the child from the nest, and bearing it away in triumph. It was dreadfully wounded in one of its arms and sides, but not mortally, and within twenty-four hours after it was first missed, he had the satisfaction of restoring it to its mother's arms.—Gilley's Waldensian Researches.

THE BURNING MOUNTAIN.—This coal mine, which we have frequently noticed, and which took fire about eighteen months since, continues burning with renewed force. There are now three distinct craters, varying in diameter from thirty to seventy-five feet, and each at a depth of from fifteen to twenty-five feet below the surface. The heat emanating from which issue immense volumes of smoke, and the smell of sulpher is any thing but agreeable. The rumbling noise would make a visiter think of earthquakes and his examinations would consequently be made with a very careful step. The vegetation for a great distance round has been completely destroyed; and its seared appearance gives a desolate, and adds to the terrific character of the work of destruction. We cannot conjecture when the fire will stop, or how it may be quenched by the management of the proprietors; but it is an extraordinary phenomenon, and as such is well worth a visit from the scientific and curious.—Pottsville, (Penn.) Emporium.

A merchant in Liverpool, in a letter to his correspondent in Philadelphia, says:

"If the Pennsylvania tax is instituted, and other States evince a determination to pay their interest punctually; and if the Boundary Question is put in a satisfactory train of settlement, I have not a doubt but American securities would soon assume a more favorable position in Europe."

The sweets of life are nothing without the bitters, as the man said ven he called for his morning dram.

A SHOCKING PICTURE OF DISTRESS.

OUR COUNTRY AND OUR DUTY.—Despite the general prosperity of Great Britain and Ireland, and in their main features, those countries are as prosperous now as they have been for years—certain sections are afflicted with scenes of distress and suffering, calculated to make the heart bleed. Thus, in Birmingham, it is stated that 10,000 applications have been made by working men and women within the last two months for free passages to Australia. Thousands of small houses are unoccupied, and the walls of the town are literally covered with auction bills. The broker's shops are crammed with goods purchased at half the cost price. The pawnbrokers are completely stocked, refuse any except what are termed best pledges. Thousands of mechanics are living on half wages, and numbers of creatures are sustained by means known only to the Almighty himself. Upwards of 300 applications were made to the Gloucester Railway Company for situations as guards, etc., within the last month. The poor rate is doubled, and numbers are leaving their houses to escape paying. All is gloomy, and no one can see a prospect of improvement. The greatest distress is also said to prevail in Ireland, and especially among the operatives of Dublin. The streets, it is added, are filled with famishing wretches. This is lamentable indeed, and calculated not only to make us prize more dearly our own happy land, but to induce us to pursue the course, best calculated to preserve the blessings so amply enjoyed by the great mass of our people. Provisions were never lower in price, or more abundant than at the present time in this country. Labor too, is in tolerable demand, while the general health is all that could be desired at this season of the year. True, we have been afflicted with much monetary distress and commercial embarrassment; but Providence has smiled upon us in an eminent degree—our harvest has been extraordinary—and the members of our wide spread Union are still bound together in the bonds of amity and national confederation. Truly then, we have reason to be thankful to an overruling Deity. Let us endeavor to uphold the laws, encourage virtue and morality—and to give stability—by every means in our power, not only to our national institutions, but to those legal enactments, under which contracts are made between man and man. American credit has received a dreadful shock within the last year or two, and it behooves us to do every thing in our power to repair the error, and to prove to the world at large that we are an honest and high-minded people. Some of the foreign journalists, both in England and France, still speak of us with distrust and suspicion. No wonder—when we review in the spirit of truth and justice, the conduct of some of our State Legislatures and moneyed Institutions. But it is in vain to complain of the past. We all know and admit that we have erred. Let us avoid such conduct for the future—and by honesty, fair dealing and promptness in all our intercourse with other nations, prove that republicans can be patriots, and that every contract made by them will be fulfilled to the letter, and at any and every sacrifice. Then we shall not only win the approval of our own consciences, but merit the blessings of Heaven.—Bicknell.

Camp-Meeting Notices.

There will be a Camp-Meeting held on Lima circuit, Ohio, to include the third Sabbath in August; we request all who can make it convenient to attend. J. GUEST, Sup.

There will be a camp-meeting for Coshocton circuit, held on the farm of John Dean, Esq., two miles from Jacobsport, to commence on the 27th of August; we request the attendance of ministers and members.

M. N. WARREN, Sup't.

A Camp-Meeting will be held on the farm of John McKinney, between Sidney and Hardin, Shelby county, Ohio, including the third Sunday in August. Ministerial aid from the surrounding circuits, is strongly solicited.

JOSEPH PARKE.

We expect to hold a Camp-Meeting on Rehoboth circuit, six miles west of Wilmington, Ohio, to commence on the Friday before the third Sabbath in August, and request the aid of Bros. Flood, McGuire, Hunt, Paul, Stephens, Evans, Hughey, Atkinson, Little, the Dalbeys and Hibben. ISAAC EDWARDS, As.

By Divine permission, a camp meeting will be held by Allegheny and Pittsburgh stations, and Pittsburgh circuit, jointly, on the land of James Clarke, one mile north of Sharpsburgh, commencing on Monday afternoon, August 17th. The assistance of ministering brethren is respectfully solicited. JOHN CLARKE.

A camp-meeting for Zanesville circuit will commence on Thursday preceding the last Sabbath in August, on the land of Barnard Wortman, within half a mile of this office, on the old ground. Ministers and members of other circuits are pressingly invited to attend. The ministers from the western part of the District can go from this meeting in company to conference.

A camp-meeting will be held on the land of George Castle, 4½ miles from Mt. Vernon, Ohio, to commence the 21st of August; we especially invite brethren Springer, I. Thrap, Wilson, Davis, Marshall, Warren, Bamford, Tallentire, Bloomer and Cowl. We hope they can make it convenient to attend, but if any of the brethren cannot be with us, I should be glad if they would let me know soon as possible. M. SCOTT.

There will be a camp meeting held for the Ligonier Mission, near the turnpike leading from Ligonier to Youngstown, and about 2½ miles from the former place, to commence on the 28th of August next. We solicit the aid of brothers G. Brown, J. Robison, J. B. Shearer, T. J. Addis, W. Turner, S. Hazlett, W. L. Baldwin, J. Hopwood, D. Kinney, and J. M. Piper, together with any of our unstationed brethren of the adjacent circuits, who can assist us. W. W. TIPTON.

THE CASKET,

AND

PHILADELPHIA MONTHLY MAGAZINE.

UNEXAMPLED SUCCESS!

Prospectus of a New Volume.

THE great increase in the subscription list of the Casket, which has been nearly doubled since the commencement of the last volume, warrants the most extensive improvements on the first of July, 1840—at which time a new volume will be commenced with increased vigor.—Nothing need be said of the firm basis on which the Casket stands, it being already the oldest magazine in the country, and has maintained its popularity in the face of all opposition. It is to be found upon the centre table of families, making literary pretentions, from Maine to Georgia.

TYPE—EMBELLISHMENTS.

The Casket is printed with a clear and beautiful type, upon the finest white paper. The illustrations are not surpassed by those of any periodical at home or abroad; and beside the monthly steel engravings, a quarterly plate of colored fashions has lately been added. The style of these embellishments is unequalled, and they are always accompanied with an appropriate sketch. No wood cuts disgrace the work. Whatever appears in the Casket is of the first order of art.

The volume will be opened with the first of a series of splendid Mezzotint engravings, prepared expressly for the work, by the burin of Sartain, who deservedly stands as the best engraver of the kind in the United States.

LITERARY CHARACTER.

The literary character of the Casket is well known. It is wholly original, of the highest order, and sustained by writers of the first rank. Essays, Tales, Sketches, and Travels, compose its prominent prose articles; while, the poetry is equalled by that of no other magazine of like character. The variety for which the Casket is celebrated, shall suffer no diminution; but on the contrary, every exertion shall be made to increase its interest.

SEVERAL ROMANCES OF THE REVOLUTION

have already appeared, and others shall follow in the course of the volume, presenting, when finished a complete picture of the manners, and a historical account of the great battles of that time. Thus, the Casket, instead of being filled with sickly sentimentalities, aims at a true delineation of human nature in every variety of passion.

The series of thrilling Nautical Sketches, entitled "Cruising in the last War," and which are rated by the cotemporary press, equal to the celebrated Sketches from "Tom Cringle's Log," will be continued, and the "Leaves from a Lawyer's Fort-Folio," which have attained a deserved celebrity, will still furnish attraction to the Magazine.

We shall furnish the readers of the Casket with some valuable papers from entirely new contributors. "The Author of Old Iron Sides off a Lee Shore," will give the first of a number of Sketches in the July number. We count upon his prolific and graceful pen to do much in maintaining the great popularity of the Magazine. In addition to the variety already embraced in the pages of the Magazine, our "Syrian Letters," the first of which appeared in the June number as introductory, will interest, and add worth to its pages. They are from no unpractised pen.

FASHIONS.

The fashions are published in the Casket quarterly, or as often as any really new styles arrive from Paris. The engravings are colored, and executed from original designs. No old, worn-out plates are re-touched, and then published as the latest fashions. The truth of our designs may be tested by comparing them with the latest description of dresses from London and Paris.—They are universally admitted to be the finest specimen of engraving and coloring afforded by any Magazine in this country. The expense of getting them up is great, but we shall in no-wise abate the quality. Remember! The readers of the Casket are furnished with these fashion plates as an extra. They do not interfere with the regular, and choice engravings, which always accompany the work.

TIME OF PUBLICATION.

The Casket is published on the first of the month in every quarter of the Union. The most distant subscriber consequently receives it on that day, as well as those who reside in Philadelphia. In all the principal cities agents have been established, by which means subscribers in the vicinity can obtain their copies free of postage.

TERMS—THREE DOLLARS per annum. Or two Copies yearly for FIVE DOLLARS, invariably in advance, post paid. No new subscriber received without the money, or the name of a responsible agent. Published by

GEORGE R. GRAHAM,
36 Carter's Alley, Philadelphia.

August 5, 1840. 50.

S. C. Haver,

IN the flourishing town of Putnam has on hand 40 or 50 SADDLES ready for sale, of different qualities, comprising nearly all the varieties in fashion in our Buckeye State.

A good assortment of Bridles and Martingales: Riding and driving Whips: between 180 and 200 Carriage and heavy draft Collars, which will compare and wear with any others made here or elsewhere.

Also, fine York, Dearborn, heavy team and common Farming Harness. A lot of first rate Carriage and Buggy Harness, (brass and silver plated.)

Trunks, vallises, saddle-bags, and double covered wagon whips, varying in quality and price to suit purchasers.

The only recommendation he now offers for his work, is the testimony and long experience of his old customers and friends. He is still anxious to please and accommodate those who may call on him, and hopes to share so much of the public patronage as his attention to his business shall merit.

Putnam, April 29, 1840. 28tf

William Green,

CLOCK AND WATCH REPAIRER, SILVERSMITH, AND JEWELLER,

CAN be found at his shop on Main street Putnam, a few doors north of J. G. Guthrie's store, where he will do his best to accommodate customers. He keeps on hand an assortment of spectacles, watch trimmings, pencils, &c.

As far as we have tried Mr. GREEN as a watch repairer he has given us good satisfaction.—ED. April 22, 1840. 351f.

Stray Mare.

STRAYED from the subscriber living in Hopewell township, Muskingum county, O., on the 20th of June last, a light SORREL MARE, about 14 or 15 hands high, with a small blaze in the forehead and one white foot; no shoes on when she left. Any person returning said mare or giving information to the subscriber where she can be found, will be liberally compensated for his trouble.

NAAMAN R. GRANT.

Hopewell tp., Musk., O., July 8, 1840. 46

Dissolution.

THE partnership heretofore existing between the subscribers in the PUTNAM FOUNDRY, under the firm of HARTLEY & ANDERSON, was this day dissolved by mutual consent.

The Putnam Foundry will hereafter be conducted by J. J. Anderson & Co.

LEVI HARTLEY,
JACOB J. ANDERSON.

Putnam, Jan. 1, 1840. (Jan. 29: 23.)

THE FAMILY NEWSPAPER.

THE LARGEST CIRCULATION IN THE WORLD!!

34,000 Subscribers.

THE PHILADELPHIA

SATURDAY COURIER.

THE Courier is on as firm and independent a basis as any paper issued, at home or abroad, and its ample means will be always employed to make it equal, as a FAMILY PAPER, to any journal published.

The unparalleled patronage, from every section of the country, is the best evidence of its approval. It has the largest subscription IN THE WORLD! Its list embraces over 34,000 subscribers, extending from the Lakes to the Ocean, and combining all interests and classes of the republic. It is the largest and cheapest journal ever issued!! Each number of the Courier contains as much matter as would fill a 12mo volume, the cost of which alone would be the price of the paper for a whole year. The general character of the Courier is well known. Its columns contain a great variety of

Tales, Narratives, Biographies, Essays, &c.

Together with articles on

Science, Fine Arts,	Humorous Poetical Articles,
Mechanics,	Health, Commerce,
Agriculture,	Domestic Intelligence,
Manufactures,	Education,
Foreign News,	Self-Educated Men,
Amusements, Facetia,	Literature,
New Publications,	The Drama,
Morality, Medicine,	City Matters,
The Silk Culture,	Amusing Miscellany,
Temperance,	The Markets,
Family Circle,	List of Insolvent Banks,
The Musical World,	Discount and Exchange,
Correct Prices Current,	History,
Letters from Europe,	Philosophy.
The Classics,

And all other matters discussed in a Universal Family Journal—furnishing altogether as vast, and, as we believe, as interesting a variety as can be found in any other journal issued in the world!

EMBRACING SUBJECTS FOR

Farmers,	Mechanics,
Tradesmen,	Artisans,
Merchants,	Men of Leisure,
Teachers,	Students,

And every Class of our Country.

The COURIER may always be DEPENDED UPON, as nothing important is permitted to escape a notice in its columns.

Our arrangements enable us to draw from the whole range of the current Literature of Europe and our Correspondents at home embrace many of the best Writers of the country.

This approved Family Paper is strictly Neutral in Politics and Religion, and the uncompromising opponent of all Quackery.

POPULAR MUSIC.—In the Courier is inserted the music of the most popular Airs, Songs and Ballads, as soon as they are imported: so that country readers may have the most popular music for voice, the piano, the guitar, or other instruments, as soon as published, which if paid for separately would cost more than the price of subscription. This perfected arrangement is to be found in no other journal of the kind.

☞ The price of the COURIER is only $2.

☞ When individuals wish to subscribe to the Courier, a sure way is to enclose the money in a letter, and direct it to us. The Postmaster will probably politely remit, for we wish them in all cases, if it meet their pleasure, to act as our agents.

☞ OUR TERMS.—Clubs of ten will be furnished with ten papers for one year, (provided the money be sent us free of postage and discount,) for $15.

☞ Ten Dollars will procure the sixth copy gratis.

☞ $5 at one time will be received for three years.

☞ Our friends, the Postmasters, will please oblige by remitting arrearages and new subscriptions.

☞ Any of our country brethren who insert our advertisement, will receive the Courier regularly. 49.

Glass Manufactory.

THE subscriber having dissolved his connexion with the former company, has taken the GLASS WORKS below town under his own management.

WINDOW GLASS, double and single, assizes, and of superior quality will be kept constantly on hand for sale on reasonable terms. The experience of the proprietor, in the manufacture of the article, will insure all made to be of the best quality. Call and see.

S. B. JOHNSON.

Zanesville, Ohio, May 6, 1840. 37

Notice.

ALL persons indebted to the late firm of Hartley & Anderson, are earnestly requested to call at the Foundry and make settlement as the change of owners makes this step absolutely necessary. We ask the attention of all persons concerned, to this notice.

J. J ANDERSON & Co.

Putnam, Jan. 1, 1840. (Jan. 29: 23.)

Dissolution.

THE partnership heretofore existing between S. B. Johnson and J. M. Kirkpatrick, under the firm of S. B. Johnson & Co. was dissolved by mutual consent, on Thursday 19th inst.

S. B. JOHNSON,
J. M. KIRKPATRICK

Zanesville, March 31, 1840. 321f

THE

WESTERN RECORDER

IS PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY.

☞ The office of the Recorder is five and a half miles west of Zanesville.

TERMS.

1. The WESTERN RECORDER will be published weekly, on an imperial sheet, at $2 00 per annum, in advance: $2 50 at the end of three months; $3 00 at the end of the year.

2. No discontinuances will be allowed, except at the discretion of the publisher, until arrearages are paid.

3. To all ministers having regular pastoral charges, who do any thing at all for the paper, if they will direct us where, a copy shall be sent gratis; any other who forward to us $10 for new subscribers, shall have six copies sent to any address he may give.

4. All letters designed for the paper, must be directed to "C. Springer, Meadow Farm, Muskingum, Ohio."

5. A failure to notify a discontinuance before the expiration of the subscription year, will be considered a new engagement.

CHARACTER.—The pages of the WESTERN RECORDER will be open to discussion on all moral questions,—it will give articles on Literature, Mechanics, Agriculture,—an abstract of Religious and Political intelligence, and whatever may be interesting and instructive to families in general. A portion of its columns will be open to Advertisements and Prices Current,—another portion to sustain the interests of the Methodist Protestant Church in the West. These two latter objects will not likely occupy more than one page.

The RECORDER will take a firm stand against Clerical Supremacy.

THE WESTERN RECORDER.

J.C. SPRINGER, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER. | Volume 1. | ZANESVILLE, OHIO, WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 19, 1840. | Number 52. | JOHN W. WHITE, PRINTER.

TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM IN ADVANCE. | $2.50, IN THREE MONTHS; $3, END OF YEAR.

COMMUNICATIONS.

For the Western Recorder.

ON UNITING CHURCH AND STATE.

Mr. Editor: The Rev. John Clarke, in your mber for July the 8th, in reply to my doctrine keeping separate church and political action, ns to indicate that I cannot "really be in senses." To this I would reply in the lan- ge of scripture: "I am not beside myself it NOBLE Festus, but do speak forth the words truth and soberness."

My position is this; when any political party formed who are attempting to lay hold of the ER OF THE GOVERNMENT to promote their ob-, no difference what that may be, the church in OFFICIAL ORGANS is not at liberty to act with h party, though each particular member re- ns the right to act politically in any way he y think duty requires. To this position the ntleman objects and pours upon it volleys of ective. He thinks it the duty of the church join with politicians in procuring the aboli- n of slavery, and that it is the duty of the igious press, &c., to put forth its best efforts this desirable object.

Here we are fairly at issue. But, although he sents from me in opinion, I hope to retain lf-respect enough, at least while I write over own proper signature, to refrain from insinu- ng that the gentleman has not good sense, or t he is destitute of moral principle, merely ause he sees proper to differ from me. I will mit that he may be honest in his opinions. t while I accord to him integrity of purpose, laim the same for myself. Nor will I dogmat- lly assert that I am right and that he is wrong; I do not claim infallibility. But should I be the wrong, a little more courteousness of style d manner would be quite as likely to convince of my error, as that evinced by my opponent. But to the question of mingling ecclesiasti- and political affairs. This is a subject of mense magnitude. One to which I feel my ter incompetency to do justice, especially in hort essay, when it would require a volume to scuss it fully. To reconnoitre it in all its lati- des and longitudes, in order to ascertain to fullest extent the influences and bearings of urch and State upon each other, we would ve to examine the history of the world, ever ce the introduction of the christian era. This vestigation would shew us these two tremend- s elements occasionally conflicting together e two immense fields of ice upon a Northern ean, grinding to atoms whatever came under eir power, and then again uniting their ener- es, like a mighty torrent to sweep away every stige of human liberty.

The despots of Europe, at present, well under- nd the policy of wielding the influence of igion to rivet the chains of tyranny upon eir subjects. They each have an established igion, and one too, of course, whose arbitrary inciples of polity is suited to their own iron spotisms. By holding the church livings in eir hands, they exert a control over the clergy hich enables them to command the influence of e Church in favor of the State, no difference w arbitrary in its government.

When the heroes of the revolution were about establish a government, for this republic, which is to be controlled by public opinion, and not the dictations of a despot, they provided in e charter of our liberties, that the Church and tate should be kept separate,—that each should st upon its own proper base; and that the one ould not interfere with the province of the her. And they seem to consider no principle more importance to the final success of our litical enterprize, than this of sundering the clesiastical and civil departments, the union which, as in the governments of the old world, s thought to be entirely incompatible with the erties of man. And ever since, there has en a jealous eye, throughout this nation, upon ery movement which tended toward union Church and State.

Read the following from a Report adopted by e 21st Congress:

"With the exception of the United States, e whole human race, consisting, it is supposed, eight hundred millions of rational beings, is religious bondage; and, in reviewing the nes of persecution which history every where esents, unless the committee could believe at the cries of the burning victim and the mes by which he is consumed, bear to Heaven grateful incense, the conclusion is inevitable, at ☞the line cannot be too strongly drawn tween Church and State. If a solemn act of gislation shall, in one point, define the law of d, or point out to the citizen one religious ty, it may, with equal propriety, proceed to fine every part of divine revelation; and en- ce every religious obligation, even to the forms d ceremonies of worship; the endowment of e church, and the support of the clergy."

If ever our fair tree of LIBERTY is felled it ll be by a union of the civil and ecclesiastical wers. This union will not be effected by any nventional act. Public opinion would not rmit this. It will be brought about on some eat emergencies which will form a pretext for parting from the ordinary rules of prudence. me political party advocating a subject which dresses itself to the moral feelings of the reli- ous community, will call on the church for her d. For illustration, we will give the present olition enterprise, which proposes the emanci- ation of 3,000,000 of human beings from abject ondage. What subject could more interest our rmpathies? The third political party asks the urch to co-operate with them in securing so esirable an object; the church lends her aid and e party is ultimately successful. As no par- icular public inconvenience grows out of the ccomplishment of this purpose, little is said bout this combined effort. Another occurrence alls upon the church to co-operate with poli- icians,—and still another, 'till at last, the pub- c becomes familiar with the subject of these nited efforts. In this apathy of the public ind, some daring aspirant, taking advantage of olitical commotions, will invoke to his aid one f the dominant religious sects of the country, romising emoluments to its clergy, then, ere the ation is aware, chains are fastened upon her.

I do not presume that all this can be accom- lished very shortly. A great revolution must be ffected in public sentiment, before such a state f things can come to pass. What I wish, is to lace a guard at the very threshold, for it is far asier to keep an enemy out of your habitation han to dispossess him after he has once gained dmission. We will do well to look to the ques- ion, whether in seeking the emancipation of a ortion of our nation, we do not establish prin- iples which may lead to the ultimate enslave- ent of the whole.

All this, I have little doubt, my opponent will onsider idle speculation; as fit for nothing but is derision and contempt. For, although he discovers considerable strength of intellect, yet, t may easily be seen, from his effusions, that e has matured but few subjects. I should judge im to be a man moved by impulse more than y reflection; of course, he has not habituated is mind to look at consequences, and would not, therefore, be likely to care much about them.

But why should he wish to dog the church with this subject, when she has not the disposal of it? It is a question that cannot be decided, but by the civil authorities. My doctrine denies to him the right of church action only, but accords to him the privilege of acting as a citizen in any way he may think proper. Why should he be so exceedingly tenacious of acting as a cleric, where his right is doubted, in preference to that of a citizen, where there would be no question about the propriety of his course?—Does he suppose there would be more importance in a black coat and the sanctity of his profession than there would be in the plain garb and appearance of the citizen? If a political party were not already operating against the evil of slavery, it would be the duty of the church to cry aloud and spare not. But as the civil community is now excited upon the subject, who alone have the right to dispose of it, and as the friends of emancipation have their candidates for office in the field, let the church in her official organs, be still, and let her members act with the civil citizens as they may each think proper. This question of the union of political and church action, is one, that considerate men will be slow to adopt. And attempts to force it upon them, especially in the abusive and Lynching style of my opponent, cannot fail to disgust them; and the cause which it is attempting to promote, will thereby be retarded instead of advanced. Men, in this county, will not be dragooned into compliance. Any efforts to control their wills in this way cannot fail to produce the directly opposite effect.

But what am I saying? the gentleman denies being "identified with a 'third' or any other political party, further than it identifies itself with the plain principles of the glorious gospel," and he considers "the organization of a distinct political party, by a comparatively few abolitionists in the East, as beneath the dignity of their holy enterprize, and highly inexpedient."

"Highly ☞inexpedient!" And is this one of the men who make such a clamor against the doctrine of "EXPEDIENCY?" The argument of "expediency" it seems, is all wrong when used against them, but when it becomes necessary, they can, as in the present case, resort to the principles of expediency, even at the expense of consistency. He approves of the resolution which questions candidates at the polls, but rejects the "third political party" for two reasons: 1st. Because it is "beneath" their "dignity." 2dly. Because it is "inexpedient." Now, how it can be "beneath the dignity" of any set of men, to organize a distinct political party, who approve of the resolution to question candidates, &c., is what I am not capable of understanding. I here repeat what I have before stated: "the resolution passed by the Anti-Slavery Society to question all candidates at the polls, and to vote irrespective of parties, for those who returned favorable answers, as effectually created a third political party, as did the act which nominated an abolition candidate for the Presidency." The direct tendency of this anti-slavery resolution, is, every where, to put abolitionists into office, and thereby to lay hold on the power of the government. The convention which determined in favor of a distinct political organization, and put their candidate in nomination for the highest office in the gift of the people, so far from acting in an "undignified" manner, have, in my opinion, acted quite honestly and consistently. They have, like honorable men, assumed the consequences of their principles, fearlessly and above board. But these mules—these half-bloods—these Church and State men, who seem to desire all the benefits of political action, but shrink from taking the responsibility upon them; these men who will go to the polls and inquire for abolitionists, and vote for none other, declaring at the same time their utter disapprobation of a third political party; these, Sir, are the men, as I conceive, who act undignifiedly, and "unworthy of their holy enterprize." They are sacrificing consistency upon the old rotten shrine of "expediency." Again, does Mr. JAMES G. BIRNEY, who is one of the most calm, dispassionate and talented abolitionists in America, and who has done what few men would do, if they even had it in their power, emancipated a large estate in slaves, and thereby given practical demonstration of his honesty in the cause; does Mr. B. consider that this convention, who determined in favor of a separate political party, acted so far beneath their holy enterprize?—Read his address to the public when he accepted the nomination for the Presidency, and be shamed of your uncharitable dogmatism!

But the gentleman says, this third political party is also "highly inexpedient." And wherefore? I am of opinion if there were any probability of success, he would then pronounce it a very proper measure,—"highly ex-pedient!" But, he is aware, that this course, though, as I think, very consistent and honorable on the part of those who have adopted it, will nevertheless expose their weakness. It will shew the public their paucity of numbers, and place the abolitionists in their true position. Their true (worldly) policy was to remain as they were.—Then, because of the two great political parties of the country, being so nearly balanced, they could make much out of a system of log-rolling, and their importance to be felt by the use of a catalogue of teazing and perplexing questions to candidates at elections. These considerations hint at the real ground of this inexpediency. But no well informed and candid man will censure this third political party for the want of consistency when they have placed their question upon its proper merits. And if they will now rely for success upon a purely political machinery, and cease to vilify and abuse the church for not officially co-operating with them in their political enterprize, they shall have my sympathy and aid. But I shall have to reflect much more upon the subject before I can give my consent to assist any political party which seeks to league itself with the church, to lay hold of the power of the government, no difference for what purpose.

It seems difficult for abolitionists to have any clear and definite ideas of the land marks between ecclesiastical and civil jurisdiction,—between the provinces of Church and State. It is not only my Pittsburgh antagonists who labor under this difficulty, but others, elsewhere, evince the same want of clearness upon this subject. Whether it is because any particular infatuation affects their minds on this question, or whether their interest requires that they should seek to confound these land marks I cannot say. The Rev. Moses Scott, of Mt. Vernon, Ohio, when he proposed his queries in relation to this matter, was evidently bewildered. Says he, in substance, "is murder, adultery, Sabbath-breaking, theft and covetousness entirely political evils, and have ministers nothing to do with them?"

We answer, these are all subjects proper for both ecclesiastical and political action; and both church and state, by all laudable methods, should endeavor to suppress every one of these vices.—And under certain circumstances may even operate together, without violating any maxim of American jurisprudence. For illustration we will give you "Sabbath-breaking;" because this vice has been made a subject of church and political action. It is known, no doubt, to my Mt. Vernon friend, that in most of our large cities, steamboats arrive and depart on the Sabbath day; and that the United States mail is dashing, in every direction through this nation, by the regulations of the general government, on this sacred DAY, to the great annoyance of the piously disposed citizens of this commonwealth. He is no doubt further aware, that the church, (to her credit be it spoken,) put forth a powerful effort to procure an alteration of those regulation, on the part of the government, which thus violated the Sabbath of the Lord. She formed Sabbath associations, delivered sermons and lectures upon the crime of Sabbath-breaking,—sent her arguments and petitions to the national council, praying that the United States mail stages might not be permitted to disgrace the general government by running on the Sabbath. While these efforts were making on the part of the church there were a number of enlightened politicians co-operating with her to procure for that DAY the national respect. But they all failed. The petitions were received,—referred,—reported against, and there the matter ended.

Now it was not wrong for these politicians, under the circumstances, to operate individually with the church, for this object, nor for the church to operate with them. But mark; After their failure, if those politicians, who found themselves in the minority, had organized themselves into a distinct political pary, with a view to lay hold on the power of the government, so that they might modify these Sabbath regulations to suit themselves, and then called on the church to aid in the enterprize, she could not do so without without passing her jurisdiction. "Her kingdom," or government, "is not of this world." "Her members may all act as citizens with this new organization, but in her official capacities she must be still. It is right for the Sabbath to be respected, but she has no right to lay hold of the civil government to coerce obedience on that subject nor any other.

This case is precisely paralleled with the abolition question. So long as nothing was resorted to but moral reasoning, both ministers and politicians might consistently unite in the enterprize, but the moment a distinct political organization is formed, either directly or virtually, with a view to lay hold on the power of the government, so as to effect thereby the abolition of slavery, no difference how desirable the object, the church cannot officially connect herself therewith, without violating one of the most essential and fundamental principles of American jurisprudence, viz: that which proposes to keep asunder the civil and ecclesiastical jurisdictions. For if they unite on this subject they may unite on any other, and there will be no prohibiting the combined efforts of the Church and State until the government be ultimately overthrown.

As I have now, probably, exceeded my limits, I shall close for the present. I design the foregoing as a brief answer to the interrogatories of M. Scott and the dogmatism of J. Clarke in relation to Church and State action. In my next I shall attend to the fine specimens of logical gentility in the communication of the Rev. Clarke.

J. SMITH.

Sugar Grove, Ohio, July 30, 1840.

For the Western Recorder.

"When thou was little in thine own Sight."

The faithful Samuel, the honest Daniel and the bluat Nathan, were not sycophants—they did not shrink from honest truth and merited rebuke, even before kings. The principles of the divine government have often been illustrated in the exemplification of that solemn declaration, "God resisteth the proud, but giveth grace to the humble." The case of Saul affords a striking example. The history of the Jewish church portrays this truth in strong colors. When little in her own sight, (i. e.) modest, humble, she was a pleasant and fruitful vine—her motto was holiness to the Lord—she shared the divine approbation, protection and the bounties of a good Providence. But "Jushuran waxed fat and kicked"—as the result of pride and itching ears; her "priest spake smooth things and her prophets prophesied deceit"—and it was "like people, like priests," till Ichabod was written. The christian church was little in her own sight, of one heart and one mind, and that the mind of Christ—of her extraordinary messengers it was said, "all ye are brethren"—poor and esteemed "illiterate and ignorant men," having "neither silver nor gold," "purse nor scrip,"—fine parsonages, splendid churches, fine talents or pompous titles,—were neither styled Reverend, Right Reverend, or Bishops. Had no power to "exercise dominion," for their teachers said, "it shall not be so among you" But withering and ruinous were the effects of riches, and honors, and titles, and power,—God resisteth the proud, the haughty, the self-sufficient, whether it be individuals, nations or churches. "God is judge himself; He putteth down one and setteth up another,"—not of mere caprice or partiality, but in accordance with the immutable principles of His nature and government—He is a jealous God—His glory He will not give to another, or His praise to golden images—to human wisdom or human means. "The people that are with thee are too many"—("The Lord said to Gideon") "lest Israel vaunt themselves against me," saying, "mine own hand hath saved me." Three hundred men—the empty pitchers—the lamps and the trumpets are sufficient—guided and energized by infinite wisdom and almighty power. How important for individuals, nations and churches to be little, modest and humble, and to feel their dependence and know where their strength lies.

L. GARRETT.

Nashville, Tennesse, 1840.

For the Western Recorder.

AN ADDRESS TO MOTHERS.

BY THE REV. N. SNETHEN.

This address is written after the manner of an extempore address to the mothers in the Methodist Protestant Church in Sixth street, Cincinnati, Ohio, at the conclusion of a discourse, on Proverbs xxii. 6: "Train up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it;" which discourse had been preceded by several on Ephesians vi. 1, 2, 3: "Children obey your parents in the Lord, for this is right; Honor thy father and thy mother, which is the first command with (a) promise; that it may be well with thee, and thou mayest live long on the earth."

Mothers—in listening, as most of you have, to the discourses in continuation upon the subject of filial obedience, you have, we trust, admitted that we were not wanting in endeavor to maintain your rights as mothers, to be honored and obeyed by your children, in common with their fathers. And also your equality of right to co-operate with them, your husbands, in training up your children in the way they should go, we will now recapitulate our plan: 1st. The nature of the work of training up, &c. 2d. The way children should go. 3d. Who have the right to train up children. In a sub-division we stated, that the ways of church government might be resolved into two, viz: 1st. The way of divided and dividable power; and 2d. The way of undivided and undividable power. The first of these, the way of divided and dividable power or governing authority, we endeavored to prove, is the right way, the way that children should go; we also gave you our reasons for adding the words dividable and undividable. Dividable power is not limited to one manner or form of division only. And absolute power is commonly called one and indivisable, it being one or a unit. To limit undivided power it must be divided. In civil States republican forms of governments may differ among themselves, and yet all differ from a monarchy. The idea is preserved in the mind, by the term dividable, that the dividing of governing power and government itself, differ from each other as do means and ends. The former may vary, if so be the latter is accomplished.—Churches, therefore, may be guided in part by experience, in dividing power. In agreeing in opinion with those who hold that no precise form of church government is laid down in the New Testament, we restrict the opinion to means. Now, if all governing power over your children, is, and must of right be in your husbands, it is undividable, and of course, your claims to any portion of it are excluded; and your services would be reduced to the character of that of intruments, directed by voluntary agents. But we have argued, have we not demonstrated, that, as mothers, you have a right to exercise governing mind and will over your children; and that this right is derived from your creation and redemption,—we showed you also, how the trainer up of a child should know all the elementary principles which may be known of the way he should go; because all children are necessarily ignorant of them, and when they first formed them they are also ignorant whether they are true or not. But here we could not evade the question.—What do women know about church government? How can mothers train up their children in a way they do not themselves understand? And we met the question with the fact, that mothers in these United States, for more than half a century, have trained up their children in the way of divided and dividable power; and that in this greatest of all republics in the world, there are not now any mothers who do not know the difference, politically, between divided and undivided power, or between a republic with free suffrage, and an absolute monarchy. The uneducated mothers who leave the monarchies of Europe, come to this country with this knowledge, and with the hopes of obtaining the rights of suffrage for their sons. All the children in our republic are trained up in this republican way by their mothers, as well as their fathers. It is the way all American parents intend that their children shall go. Emigrants from all other countries flock to this with the same intentions.

We believe, indeed, that mothers do not in general know what is the best possible mode of dividing power, under all the circumstances in which churches may be placed; nor do we believe that this is known by the wisest and best of men. This is a subject, as we conceive, which it is not proper to reveal, respecting free agents. The safest and best practical knowledge of it is to be approximated to by observation, experience and reflection. When a power is imparted to things, by the Creator, to govern things, neither of them have any will. And when power is imparted to men to govern things, the things have no will.—These cases may admit of human foreknowledge, or of Divine revelation. But when a power is imparted to men, to govern men, both having wills equally free, a revelation or foreknowledge of the manner how to govern in all cases, must be accompanied with the revelation of the resistance the wills of the governed may make. This cannot be foreknown or anticipated, by the human mind, because it is a variable and not a constant quantity, and to reveal it to the governors would be to make them more than prophets, or in effect searchers of hearts. The human mind, therefore, as we said, can only approximate to this knowledge. We do not wish you, mothers, to train up your children in the opinion or belief, that any division of governing power is perfect, or will infallably prove always to be the best in all cases, nor to train them up to make changes in government, for their own sakes, as though modes of governing were the end and not the means. All that we profess to know with any degree of certainty, is that to divide power is the best, if not the only means to prevent, or to correct its abuses. And this we hold is enough for you to know in order to enable you to begin to train up your children; for thus much you can not only teach, but your children can understand. And your children having learned this from you, among their first lessons, it will be the last they will forget. But we must not omit to notice the fact, that your are mothers of a recently organized church, upon a basis of reformed principles, and therefore your relative condition differs from that of mothers in other churches in this city. When a church by voluntary separation, or by expulsion, or by any other means, becomes distinct from another, and is regarded by it as a rival or a competitor, it rarely, if ever, succeeds, in merely attempting to imitate or to excel the older church. For the older body cannot bear to be thus equalled, as this is regarded as equivalent to a defeat. Every feeling dictates to put down the new rival on the score of the motherly virtues in the old church. We have always taken it for granted, that the greater number of mothers, their age and experience, and superior means of all kinds, would for a long time, or until we should grow old, enable them to excel you. Or that, if in this or any case, we might equal or excel them, they would leave no means unessayed to emulate us We have not been able to discover any exception to this general law of rivalry between old and new churches. The history of the Protestant Reformers and the Catholics, of the Dissenters and loyal establishments, and of all rival denominations agree with it. We will give an illustration. This house, if we are rightly informed, in the common opinion, was superior to the old stone house in fifth street. But how does it now compare with the Wesley Chapel? Would that spacious structure have attained to its present dimensions, if this house had not been built before it? You see here the effects of the spirit of emulation. What can you now do in kind, in which the old church cannot excel you?—Where this spirit predominates, no covering for the faults of rivals is employed, thicker than gause, or more opake than glass. Behold! the mantles of charity, which are used in time of reform. Is it not, then, in vain to hope to excel in inimitable cases? Mothers, to maintain your church against so great odds, you must not be imitators, but do something that emulation itself cannot imitate or excel; you must not run in a parallel course, but in an opposite one, in which the distance will make the difference more and more manifest. You must train up your children in the way of divided and dividable church governing power. This the holiest and best of mothers in the old church cannot do, without a change of principle. We petitioned, as every body knows, for a division of church power. In return we were required to give up the principle. Expulsion followed. The holy mothers, (we never spake a word in dispraise of their motherly virtues, and never shall,) were among our most zealous opposers. Here, then, ye mothers in the Methodist Protestant Church, is the point of departure between you and the mothers in the Methodist Episcopal Church.—From this point you are not their imitators nor followers, and you cannot be followed or excelled by them. Not a child among all the thousands in the old church can be trained up in the way of divided church power. The way in which you are to train up your children, the way that free and equal churchmen go, who are the constituents of their church law makers. You are the mothers of a race of the Lord's free men, who call no man legislative master. But you and all of us are told, that with all this boasted or pretended freedom, we shall come to nothing. But if so, must it not be either because we do not train up our children, or that, when they grow old they will depart from the way in which we have trained them to go? In these United States there are a great many men, whose mothers aided in training them up in the way of divided power, and who, as they grow older, become more attached to this way. And in the records of the churches we find, almost daily, notices of those who have finished their course with joy in this way. Mothers, the difference between the old side and the new side is not between power and no power. You know that we have never taught you to train up your children in anarchy. When we advised the deferring of the formation of a constitution, it was because we wished for more time to gain experience, and from the apprehension of the difficulty of gaining two-thirds instead of a majority, if a change should be found necessary. But we believed then, as we believe now, that society cannot move at all but in some way of government, either expressed or understood, just as a body, if moved at all, must pass in some direction from the place in which it was stationary.

Had the principles, assumed in this discourse, been recognized in our constitution, and had all our mothers acted up to them from the beginning, in ten years more what a hopeful company of recruits might we have had for the church. In our previous discourses you may remember how much pains we took to point out to you the scriptural command and promise. The danger in written rules does not merely consist, as certain persons contend, in their opposing scripture, but in taking a part for the whole. Honor thy father and thy mother, we reminded you, was deemed of so much importance as to be made to occupy the fifth place in the decalogue, or the first after our duty to our God. And St. Paul has given it a no less conspicuous relation. Mothers, if the constitution of our church, or our ministry have not said and done all they should, the law and the gospel have been true to your nature, and to your all important duties. You are not sent forth in this warfare at your own charges; not merely commanded, but animated and encouraged with the promise of a high reward; the honor and fidelity of your dear children. God hath promised that it shall be well with your obedient children, and that they shall perpetuate the church upon the earth. Your children who have imbibed the sentiments of church liberty from your minds, so early that they seem to have been born with them, and their understandings to have grown from this milk of instruction, as their bodies have from the nourishment they have derived from your breasts. Surely, the predictions so often uttered, of our dissolution, could not have been based upon such a system of maternal training, but upon the assumption of its neglect. When commands fail those who obey them, and promises fail those who trust in them, what can the righteous do? Have not the great body of the native free churchmen and statesmen of our country been trained up to liberty upon the knees of their mothers? We have had, indeed, to mourn over the inconstancy of too many of our preachers and members, but they were not trained up in this way. The same kind of inconstancy, from the same cause, existed in the primitive church. Among all those, who, as St. Paul said, had turned away from him, in a certain district, not one had been trained up from a child in the way the apostle would have them go. It is from your well trained children, mothers, that we must look for the stability of our principles. Some among you, no doubt, have felt your minds confused from the indistinct manner in which our principles of divided and divisable power are sometimes stated. But the mothers in the old church can find no difficulty in understanding the plan of power, all on one side. There is, at this time, a struggle betwixt power and no power. But in these heat producing controversies, should they come among us, we wish you to take no part.—They are as strong meat, if not as meat tainted by passion, which should have no place among the sweet and sincere milk of the nursery. That the way of divided power bears no affinity to the no power opinion, and that it is not a matter of indifference, you must perceive, if you reflect upon the fact, that it is among the last and rip- pest fruits of the wisdom and experience of nations. We have now, in North America, twenty-seven governments, in which the legislative, the judicial, and the executive powers are divided from each other. And in your own families, among your own dear children, you have daily proof of the necessity of your own executive power. What would be the condition of your children if you should leave them to execute their own wills in all cases, or in the absence of their fathers, you should have to wait their return?—The effects of well divided power answers, to those of law controlling will. Your motherly affections supply the place of divided power, as the security of your children against your natural despotism. You cannot divide your power any more than your duty, with two other women. If your hearts are true to nature, all your executive acts among your children, will bear the image and superscription of motherly affection. But when the social relation involves two or more families, no executive power can be safely confided to one, without limitation; for the natural affections cannot embrace more than one family. The common or universal social law, "do as you would be done by," must in complex practice take on the modes of artificial law. Cases will occur in society which will have to be legislated upon, and they must be judged of before they are executed. These elementary principles are as applicable to churches as to civil States; they may be easily taught and as easily learned in the nursery. The usual odium of nursery tales cannot be fixed upon them any more than upon the teaching of the alphabet in the nursery. Executive power over your children, as we have seen, is, and must be, divided between your husbands and yourselves; but they too have natural parental affection. And tho' they may call themselves lords of the creation, while they continue in the relation of husband of one wife, or reject polygamy, as we shewed you, they have not undivided and undividable power over your offspring. Mothers, in this church you are free, you are at liberty to train up your children in the way of divided power. But your disadvantages and discouragements for some time yet to come, must be great. The course you have entered upon is still new, and your responsibilities are peculiar. The common prejudices against real or supposed novelty, or innovation, have yielded little, if at all, to time.—Many of the active agents in the formation of our church were excluded from "the great Wesleyan family." Mr. Wesley, as you know, divided power with no man. And his successors, in Europe and America, regard their inheritance as undividable. Agreement, in doctrine, is not considered by them to be a bond of union. This of itself should convince you of the importance of government, as a way, even in their estimation, and of course that our opinion is not singular. We have given you the scriptural words of command and promise, but it is for you to hold fast this form of sound words, or if you will, to reject them, through unbelief. We cannot believe or obey for you, nor have dominion over your faith, and have cautioned you against claiming for your preachers and rule makers infallibility. They may have divided too little, or too much power to the church, or to the preachers.—And if we are correct in theory, we may err for the want of practice. No uncommon case. Still, however, in a system of dividable power, we have, as it were, an alphabet of power. If the brethren closed the door behind them when they finished their constitutional labors, they did not bar and bolt it. We can go back to first principles. Men who are found to have erred, and to have left the means behind them, by which their errors may be corrected, are scarcely less estimable than those who have not erred. We believe most sincerely that the theory and practice of divided power, are in the New Testament; but the book belongs to you, and to your children.—They, in due time, can examine for themselves. The way of divided power is the safest way to the correction of its own errors, as well as the errors of others. In regard to the cause of liberty, you have no option, but must do one of two things, either to give to your children's mind a bias for it or against it. Can you hesitate in your choice? We trust not; while the only wish of your hearts remains, that your children may live and die American citizens. When your children shall have grown gray, what would you wish them, then, to say of your training them up? What else, save, this is my mother's way; she taught me that in every government there must be an executive power, otherwise every man would do what seemed to be right in his own eyes; but that to make executive power safe it must be limited, and that the only way to limit it is to divide it from legislative and judicial power, in church governments and in State governments.

It is indeed true, mothers, that in all cases in which moral free-agency is concerned, or involved, there must be exceptions to general rules, in regard to effects. Where suffrage is free and universal, votes may be bought and sold, may be yielded to flattery or sacrificed to error and delusion. But nevertheless, your surest hold upon the wills of your children, is in the training them up in the way they should go. You foreknow that way, well enough to give all the first lessons of it; for you know the difference between one and many. If your sons shall be induced to yield their wills to fear or interest, and submit to the wills of other men; they cannot escape the consequences, in this world. It shall not be socially well with them, and they shall not live long upon the earth, without feeling the iron grasp of an undivided "I will, and you shall." But let the portents of danger to the liberties of your church, or of its dissolution be as they may, you may die with the consolation of having trained up your children, in the good old way of all free churchmen from the beginning of the world.

Mothers, we trust in God, that it is not reserved for you and your children to realize for the first time, in the history of parental training, a falsification of this ancient proverb; and that your gray hairs are not to be brought down with sorrow to the grave by degenerate and irreclaimable sons. No. Though there may be found prodigals among them, and though too many of them, may be late in returning to their father's house; yet when they do return, their first recollections will be of their mother's religion, and their mother's training in the way of religious liberty. Such is the general course of experience. Ideas which were first transmitted to the mind, and lie deepest, are the last to be effaced by disobedience. The oldest and most hardened sinners, in a state of despair of ability to reform, still remember their training, and bless their mothers, in the midst of their self-reproaches. Thus far in our history, we must say, we have seen nothing to weaken our confidence in the maxims of the text. The success of the maternal efforts among us have been quite equal to the efforts themselves. Why have not the efforts been general and constant? Have our preachers all understood their calling to be to make the instruction of the mothers in our new church, the special subject of their great reform mission?—Has not our zeal for the liberties of all the world, save our own children, eaten us up? Not indeed, that any among us are ignorant that it is the duty of Simon, son of Jonas, to feed the lambs of Jesus. Have we then, duly reflected upon the manner how preachers can feed them? Can preachers feed them directly or indirectly, by teaching their mothers how to feed them? Perhaps these interrogations may be charged to our ignorance of the ministry of our brethren, and of the general habits of mothers. Believe us, dearest mothers, we should rejoice to know that we alone have been in fault; and that you have had numbers of better discourses and more able addresses upon the way of training up your children; and we shall rejoice too, in the greater excellence of the labors of your future ministers. Permit us again, before we conclude, to repeat that there can be no rivalship betwixt the mothers in the old church and yourselves, there is no ground for imitation or competition. Your courses are not parallel, but as we have said, opposite. Divided and dividable governing power does not destroy itself like a divided kingdom against itself. It is infinitely expansive—all its destructive agency being confined to ambition. Divided power must increase, and undivided power must decrease. The latter generates the seeds of its own final dissolution, the principle of ambition being inherent in it. As the mothers of a race of free christians, who received their first lessons of instruction from your lips, your fame can never die.

WESTERN RECORDER.

ZANESVILLE:

WEDNESDAY, ... AUGUST 19, 1840.

We continue to have, occasionally, very heavy flooding showers of rain. The roads have been sadly washed into gutters and injured this summer.

The season at present is fine for the corn; though it did not grow well, from some cause or other, in the fore part of the summer, yet, under present circumstances it must ear well.

The Whigs at their convention in this place on Saturday last, selected the following persons to be supported at the ensuing October election, for the respective offices attached to their names:

For Representatives—A. Pollock, John Watkins.
For Auditor—John W. Spry.
For Recorder—W. T. M'Kibben.
For Commissioner—Robert Boggs.

We have a time of general health in this neighborhood, though there has been a few deaths recently. Mrs. Elenor Jones was buried last Friday; she died principally of old age. Mr. Bomgarner buried two of his children last week from scarlet fever. This disease has been hovering around this vicinity for more than a year past, occasionally giving considerable affliction in families.

We call the attention of the reader to the communication of the Rev. Wm. Herr, from the Ohio State Journal, which will be found on our last page. It gives a history of the causes which lead to the failure of the bill, of the last session of the Legislature, for the protection of religious meetings. We suspected at the time there was something "rotten in Denmark," and this history tends to confirm us in our suspicions. We have no objection to the Legislature keeping a vigilant eye upon clerical assumptions; but then we detest the practice of withholding reasonable protection from the religious community under the pretext of guarding against religious intolerance. We hope the friends of the proposed law, for the protection of religious worship, will put forth additional efforts to procure its passage at the ensuing session of the Legislature.

Mr. Herr says in relation to Dr. Glover's Report, (upon which we animadverted in our 36th number,) "after a tirade against religion and religious intolerance, which is made up of scraps from certain authors," &c.; we inform Mr. H. that the Report of the Dr. is mainly from Mr. Johnson's Sunday Mail Report, and considerable of it taken without any acknowledgement whatever,—not even using the inverted comma.

An order, says Bicknell, has been received at New York for a lot of Western wheat, at from $1 09 to $1 12½, to go over to England by the Great Western.

We acknowledge the receipt of two numbers of the Philadelphia "Saturday Courier," in exchange for our paper. This we esteem among our most valuable exchanges. Its prospectus will be found on our last page.

ELECTIONS.

Indiana.—An Extra Indianian before us, an Administration paper, states the majority of Mr. Bigger, the Whig candidate for Governor, at 6815. The Lebanon (O.) Star, Whig paper, states the majority to be 9651; both state the reports are not official.

Kentucky.—The Administration paper above remarks: "The elections in this State have resulted in favor of the Whig party, as was anticipated. Letcher is elected Governor over French by a large majority."

The Star says: "From Kentucky, we have complete returns from fifty-five counties, which give Mr. Letcher, the Whig candidate for Governor, a majority of 15,960 votes over Judge French. Twenty-nine counties remain to be heard from fully, which will probably reduce the majority of Mr. Letcher, though not materially."

Missouri and Illinois are but imperfectly heard from; though it seems to be conceded by all parties that the latter will go for the administration.

We have received the Casket for August, 1840. The following table exhibits its contents:

Delhi. From "Unpublished Travels by an American in the East." Illustrated by a superb engraving on steel.
The Corsican. By J. E. Dow.
Is he not Thine? By John S. DuSolle.
The Syrian Letters. Letter II.
The Falling Stars. From the French of Beranger.
Bunker Hill. A Romance of the American Revolution. By H. J. Vernon.
The World's Lever. The Progress of Mind in the last Four Centuries.
Historical Lyrics. The Burning of Joan of Arc. By Henry B. Hirst.
The Two Lovers.
The Maid of Ronda. By J. L. Fortescue.
Far Away. By Catharine H. Waterman.
Lines. By Thomas Dunn English, M. D.
Roy M'Gregor.
We Met.
Cruizing in the War. No. XIII. The Attack.
The Dying Napoleon.
The Hunter's Song. A Tale. By Mrs. Lydia Jane Pierson.
Our Country's Flag. By Henry B. Hirst.
Hope is Still an Evergreen. A Ballad. Arranged for the Piano Forte. The words by Charles Jefferys. The Music by Charles Hodgson.
Review of New Books.

☞Will the publisher please forward us the July number?

The following case is equal to our Zanesville horse trial, a few months past, wherein each of the contending parties proved, most positively, by a number of disinterested and respectable witnesses that the animal was his.

Personal Identity.—The uncertainty of human evidence of the most positive character, in reference to the personal identity of individuals, is strongly illustrated in the following remarkable case, which is said to have occurred in New York, in 1804:

It was an indictment for bigamy against one Thomas Hoag, alias Joseph Parker. The question was whether the prisoner was the person who, under the name of Thomas Hoag, had married one Catharine Secor, four years before, having another wife, then living. He denied that he was the man, or that Thomas Hoag was his name—and insisted that he was in name and fact Joseph Parker—and that he was never married to Catharine Secor. Numerous respectable witnesses, wholly disinterested, testified that the prisoner had lived and worked with them—that they knew him well—and that he was Thomas Hoag.—Among the circumstances by which they knew him was a scar on his forehead, which the prisoner had. Benjamin Coe, one of the judges of the county court, testified that Hoag had lived and worked with him and that he had married him to Catharine Secor, and he was as much satisfied that he was Thomas Hoag, as that he (the witness) was Benjamin Coe.—Other witnesses swore to his identity with equal positiveness. But, what is more strange, Catharine Secor, the woman who was said to be his second wife, swore that she became acquainted with him in September, 1800—that he married her on December 25th, of the same year; and lived with her till the latter end of March, 1801, when he left her. She said, "I am as well convinced as I can be of anything in the world, that the defendant now here, is the person who married me, by the name of Thomas Hoag." On the other side, witnesses equally respectable, swore with equal certainty, that the person was Joseph Parker—and they traced their knowledge of him living in the city of New York, from time to time in the years 1799. 1800, 1801, with circumstances that made it impossible that he could have been in the county of Rockland, where the marriage with Catharine Secor was solemnized, at the period of that marriage. So the question stood, and was thus finally decided, two of the witnesses for the prosecution, testified that Thomas Hoag had a scar under his foot, occasioned by his treading on a drawing knife, that the scar was easy to be seen. His feet were exposed to the court and jury, and no scar was there—and there was an end of the question. The prisoner was really Joseph Parker, and was not Thomas Hoag.

England and China.—The editor of the New York Commercial Advertiser states that he is indebted to a mercantile house in New York, for the annexed copy of a letter from the United States minister at London, disclosing in part the intentions of the British government as to the conduct of the Chinese expedition.—"A blockade of Canton, it seems, is to be one of the first measures resorted to: and there is great reason to apprehend that the blockade will be of long continuance, for we have not the remotest idea that it alone will have any effect upon the Chinese. If the English Admiral confines himself to a blockade, he has got his two or three years' work before him."

London, June 26th, 1840.

Gentlemen—I received last night from Lord Palmerston an answer to my note on the subject of the China trade, the substance of which I hasten to communicate for your information. As I had supposed, the order in council was intended to be confined to the subjects and property of the Chinese. It appers that the admiral commanding the expedition on the China seas has been instructed to confine himself (unless extreme measures should become necessary) to the detention alone of Chinese vessels and property, and is not to seize or detain vessels arriving from Europe and America, although such vessels and their cargoes may be consigned to mercantile establishments within the Chinese dominions. His lordship, however, has deemed it proper to apprise me, for the information of those concerned, that one of the first acts of hostility that may be resorted to by the admiral, will probably be the establishment of a blockade of the Canton river, and of some other points on the Chinese coast.

I am, &c.
(Signed) A. Stevenson.

To the Editor.—I received a letter from Florida this morning, dated July 22, 1840, United States Arsenal, Chattahoochie, which contains the following information· "The Indians are again among us. On Sunday evening, the 12th instant, they made an attack on the farm of Mr. Hawkins, residing about three miles from this, killed and carried off three of his calves, met his negro man about one and a half miles from home at a deserted plantation where he had gone to gather peaches, shot him and cut his head off, burnt the deserted house and cut down the peach trees round it; and, after killing a lot of hogs and jerking the meat, cleared out to make another attack in some other point of the country. Men who went out in pursuit, report that they traced them to a swamp on the banks of the river, not more than two miles from the arsenal. I have been through the same swamp several times when out hunting, and it is so thick in some places that I had to creep through on my hands and knees, though it was in the winter, when vegetation was not so forward as it is now; if they are there it would take two or three hundred men to drive them out. Much alarm exists in the neighborhood, as you may conceive. Several planters have moved their families, and nearly all express a determination to leave as soon as their crops are gathered in."—New World.

The Slave Schooner Butterfly.—Isaac H. Morris has been found guilty, in the U. S. District Court now in session, on an indictment for serving on board a vessel engaged in the slave trade, in violation of the statute, which makes it criminal for any citizens of the United States to be so engaged. The previous trial was arrested, there being a difference of opinion among the Judges, whether the indictment could be sustained, inasmuch as there was no proof that the vessel either at the time she was captured or at any previous time, had actually been engaged in transporting slaves. This question was argued before the Supreme Court, who decided that the offence would be complete, if the vessel were actually fitted out with the intention of carrying slaves. There being no doubt of this fact, or that the defendant, who was acting as captain, had knowledge of it, the Jury rendered a verdict of guilty. He is liable for this offence to a fine of $2000 and imprisonment for 2 years.

The Busy World.—People who live amid the hurry and bustle of large cities, are seldom able to study the various shades of human character, like those who, having fewer objects to divert their attention, have also more time to observe. In great cities people come and go—you do not meet the same face perhaps more than once a-year—and then, except that time may have underlined the stronger features—the face is dressed exactly in the same manner—the same smile, the same expression, whether it be born of pain or pleasure—and, it may be, the same phrase is repeated, either in the way of question or reply; for those greetings are all generally alike. In the busy world your sympathies have no time to take root—the wheel revolves—the kaleidoscope is shaken—you forget and are forgotten—the more wide your field of observation, the less leisure you have of a moral certainty that every creature you meet has a distinct and positive character of his or her own, they dwell in your memory only as a black, brown, or fair.

The Ohio continues navigable for second class steamboats, which arrive and depart daily with passengers and light freight. Heavy freight is mostly forwarded by keel-boats, as, at the present low stage of water, they carry it at lower prices.

The Imprisoned Americans and British in California.—We have already given a brief account of the imprisonment and mal-treatment of a number of American citizens and British subjects in California, and now proceed to lay before our readers all the particulars that have transpired on the subject, as furnished by the latest arrival at New York.—Bicknell.

It appears that on the 7th of April, the English and American residents on the coast of California, near Santa Barbara, were, without any previous notice, seized and thrown into prison, no one could tell for what causes. After undergoing an examination, of which nothing public was made known, the Governor chartered a vessel called the Guipuzcoa, which finally left Santa Barbara on the 7th of May, for San Blas, with 46 prisoners on board, half of which number were English, the remaining half citizens of the United States.

The miserable sufferers, loaded with irons, worn down by the cruelty they had received, and expecting, many of them, to sink under the weight of their accumulated miseries, were crowded like condemned felons into the hold of the vessel, where, to add to their sufferings, they were inhumanly deprived both of light and air.

The Guispuzcoa was eleven days on her passage to San Blas, during which time the prisoners endured every cruelty and suffered every abuse which the brutal feeling of their persecutors could invent. Arrived at San Blas, they were with as little delay as possible, landed, and forced to commence their march to Tepic, a distance of sixty miles, which they performed in two days, over a mountainous road, with the thermometer at 90, having no place whereon to rest their weary bodies but the hard stones, and no food to supply exhausted nature, save a scanty morsel, provided by the hand of charity.

During the march which was laborious enough to exhaust the stoutest frame, the prisoners were urged onwards by lashes inflicted upon their naked bodies, and one, who sank under fatigue, was barbarously beaten with the butt end of a musket, to renovate his strength and arouse his drooping spirits.

Arrived at Tepic, the situation of the prisoners was soon meliorated, by the energetic and humane exertions of the British and American consuls at that place, for it was found upon investigation, that the officers who had come from California in charge of the prisoners, had no documents of any nature to show the cause of the violent proceedings of the Governor, or any proof of charges against the prisoners; consequently, by orders of the military commander the irons were taken from their limbs, and by direction of the consuls comfortable quarters and wholesome food were provided for them without delay.

The military gentlemen, whose brutality had excited the indignation even of the authorities of Tepic, to their utter consternation were compelled to march to the quartel, where they found themselves placed under charge of a strong guard, with the privilege of occasionally peeping through the grates.

A circumstantial account of the history of the outrage and the sufferings of the prisoners had been forwarded by the consuls to the British and American ministers resident in Mexico, both of whom had warmly entered into the cause, and had demanded a full explanation from the supreme government, and satisfaction for the injuries which their countrymen had been compelled to suffer.

Official accounts of this infamous transaction have been forwarded to the British and American governments, by their respective ministers at the city of Mexico, and it is confidently hoped, that prompt and energetic measures will be pursued by those powers to obtain ample justice and remuneration for the prisoners, and satisfaction for the national insult.

☞Sentence of Com. Elliott.—The Philadelphia Pennsylvanian publishes the following as the points on which Com. Elliott was convicted or cleared. They are somewhat different from the statement contained in the Globe, but are doubtless correct, as the Pennsylvanian says it has ascertained them with precision. Without embracing the statement by adhering to the mere formalities of the legal documents, it is believed that the real character and extent of the finding of the Court will be best understood generally, by a reference to the persons or subject matter which particularly marked each charge.

The Court have found Com. Elliott

NOT GUILTY.

1. Of the alleged improper treatment of Lieutenant Charles G. Hunter.
2. Of the alleged improper treatment of Chaplain Thomas R. Lambert.
3. Of the alleged abandonment of Passed Midshipman Charles C. Barton, after he was wounded at Smyrna.
4. Of witnessing a mutiny by not doing his utmost to suppress it.
5. Of wasting public stores.

GUILTY.

1. Of ordering Passed Midshipman Barton, when wounded, to be taken from the Constitution to the Shark.
2. Of the various allegations found on his having imported 23 animals on board the Constitution.
3. Of inflicting 24 instead of 12 lashes upon 3 of his crew.
4. Of expending the public stores for his private purposes.

Who shall Decide.—We did not feel in the mood to go and hear Mr. Prentiss, of Mississippi, on Monday evening, but were given to understand, that notwithstanding the storm, a large audience was gathered. Feeling very naturally some curiosity to ascertain how he entertained his auditory, who had encountered such weather to hear his address, we referred to the evening papers of the next day.—

The first in order was the Star, and as we read the paragraph, from which the annexed extract was made, most sincerely did we regret the loss we had endured by one sin of omission:

"The room was crowded, and Mr. Prentiss was in fine voice and vein, and won laurels by the animated and graphic style with which he mastered his subject: the state of the currency, credit, laboring classes, &c. We could not venture to give even a faint sketch of the close chain of argumentation, enlivened by picquante and novel illustrations, with which he handled this hackneyed theme that comes home fortunately for the redemption of the country to the bosoms and business of our people. After he had passed to the violations of the constitution, of the merits and demerits of Martin Van Buren and Gen. Harrison, his mind brightened at times as vividly as the electric chain lightning which flashed into the windows and which seemed to lend him inspiration. His imagery so rich and luxurious, and his metaphors and allegories carried out with such perfect keeping and tact, evidenced a dramatic cast of mind and high order, too plain to be misunderstood to all who look upon his manly, noble front and features. His appeals and delineations were frequently sublime, as they were recherche and filled with historic and mythologic, as well as more familiar allusions so happily introduced. Nor was his satire less marked by its withering caustic bitterness. But we forbear. Three hours he enchanted his hearers, and was yet unexhausted for the great fight, in which he merits the name of a most gallant and efficient knight."

Such a treat as we had lost! The Post, we presumed, would come out on half a sheet, after such a withering of the party; but no. It is as large as ever—as solemn as ever—as bitter as ever, and a leetle more so. Ex gr.

"Mr. Prentiss made a speech as long as a Welsh genealogy, lasting through more than three weary hours, and comprehending every variety of topic, from the color of the President's whiskers to the construction of the constitution. His manner in some respects is agreeable; he has a voice full and flexible, and when not suffering under hoarseness, as it was evident it did last night, not unmusical in its cadences. He possesses great volubility, great energy of action, great self-confidence, some felicity of narrative, an affluence of illustration; ready sarcasm, and a sprinkling of wit. But his figure is unpleasing, his language common place, and his sentences long transposed and tedious.

"As to the matter of the speech, it was as miserable a hoch poch as one ever heard. It was a gallimaufry, compounded of all sorts of unsavory meats and rejected condiments. The speaker seemed to have drawn a drag-net through the sewers of political slang, to collect all the garbage and refuse which partizan editors have thrown by in the course of a heated campaign. All that was stale, threadbare, or rotten from long use, was brought together, to be hashed up anew for the especial gratification of his auditory. With true Whig veneration for antiquity, he eagerly seized upon whatever seemed to be old. Thus we had old arguments, old figures, old anecdotes, old phrases, old jokes, old falsehoods, and old scraps, shreds, odd ends, and what not. Not an original thought occurred to us in the whole course of the harangue. It was vamping, for second use, the cast off stuff of the newspapers and Congress—a reiteration of charges long since exploded—a resuscitation of charges dug from the kennel. Like a chiffonier of Paris, he went about picking up worn out rags, and decked himself with the tattered patches with as much apparent innocence as though they had been so much finery."

Between two such stacks of hay, what is an innocent unsophisticated individual to do? It appears morally certain that Mr. Prentiss could not have deserved both these laudatory paragraphs. He could not have poured out such sweet water and bitter from the same mouth. One or other of the highly respectable papers above quoted, has exceeded the worst ever alleged against the penny Press. It is as clear as a pikestaff, that one or both treat a certain personification known as Truth, very coolly, to say the least. Had the writers of the two paragraphs read each others notes, to be sure and occupy antipodal positions, they could not have done it better. It is unqualifiedly the most ridiculous party newspaper exhibition that we ever happened to witness.

And yet, the party newspapers are the sources from which the people are expected to get their information upon political subjects. Warm partisans affect to hold the independent Press in contempt; and their organs offer such matter as we have quoted for the people to read and believe. The recklessness of the course which many of our newspapers pursue, is only equalled by its absurdity. To do the Star justice, its expletives are oftener misapplied on the commendatory side of the house than on the other; and to do the Post justice, we must say that we never saw anything so extremely illiberal in its columns before. It must have found its way there, as editorial, by mistake.

The editor of the St. Louis Pennant defines a neutral editor, one who has opinions of his own, and is not afraid to express them. Such is a brief, a very fair description. Tied to no party car, he can tell the whole truth, if he can find it out; and if not, give what in his opinion approaches nearest to the truth. He will be exposed to occasional accusations of party leaning from partisans on both sides. The political creed to which a man may give his hearty and unconditional assent; and the political conduct which may meet an independent and honest man's entire approval, are yet among things unrecorded, in this world. Blindly to approve, or complacently to be silent, is the only course a successful political editor can follow. Long may we be free from the traces—but if we should happen to get into them, we shall probably go the death, as strong as any body. Bread and butter are forcible arguments. A gnawing at the epigastrium nibbles the edge off conscience; which must, therefore, be situate somewhere in the stomach. But for all that, we can't see how Hon. S. Prentiss could have been the fool and the sage, the orator and the puppet, the fresco painter and the chiffonier, all in the same evening, by particular desire. Can you?—Brother Jonathan.

The Novel Marriage Case.—The d'Hauteville case has been brought to a close, for the present at least; the court having postponed the further consideration of the matter until Monday, the 17th of August. The statements read by the counsel, were very voluminous. Mr. Cadwallader read a paper on behalf of Ellen Seers, the wife of M. d'Hauteville, in which she notices in detail the objections urged by her husband, against allowing the child to continue in her charge during its present infancy. She says he had been christened Frederic and baptized in an Episcopal church before the letter of instructions from her husband was received; but that she is now willing to have him baptized in the father's faith and church—the Presbyterian. Also, that she will deliver the child to the father in Switzerland, at a proper age, and when his interest and welfare so require. She alleges systematic ill treatment and neglect on the part of her husband, as the cause of the separation, and enters into much detail as to the preliminary measures connected with the marriage. The engagements were twice broken off, and when the bridal had been finally agreed upon, she found herself melancholy and miserable. D'Hauteville released her from the engagement, under the circumstances—and she at last consented as a matter of filial duty. Her father returned to the United States a week after the ceremony, and then her husband exercised over her so rigid a control, that her health became impaired and her spirits low. The husband, who could not leave, in consequence of the sickness of his father, wrote to her in Paris, forbidding her to leave for the United States. He followed his letter immediately, and she, apprehensive that he desired to carry her back to Switzerland, sought the protection of the American minister. She then came to the United States, and refused to return to her husband. The suit was instituted by d'Hauteville, with the object of obtaining the child, and thus also the wife—as he has been informed that the laws of the Union will not compel her to return.—The child was born in this country. The case was postponed, in order that the husband might have an opportunity of collecting rebutting testimony.

Since the above was prepared, we have obtained the following additional particulars:

The statement or "further answer," read on Tuesday last by John Cadwallader, Esq., one of the counsels for the respondent, Madame d'Hauteville, was a very able and eloquent production, and opened to view the entire particulars of the marriage and subsequent disagreement. It contained copies of nearly all the letters that have passed between the parties and their parents, as well as minute statements of all the facts. Whatever opinion may be entertained of the fervor of the lady's affections there can be no doubt of the strength of her intellect. Some of her letters are very finished and elegant specimens of composition, and many of the passages are masterly in their eloquence and beauty. Her letter to her father, on the eve of his departure for America, about a week after her marriage, is equal to any production we have ever met with—and so endearingly affecting and affectionate in its nature, that, although probably perused by him a hundred times, it still drew tears from his eyes when read in court.

Mrs. d'Hauteville is now only 21 years of age, and in the very prime of her exceeding beauty. The real cause of separation, to our view, is the utter want of congeniality of sentiment and feeling. This want no doubt at times induced the husband to consider the wife capricious, and the lady to think her husband cold, exacting and domineering. Instead of yielding to each others dissimilarity of opinion and character, they appear from the commencement to have battled for supremacy. The result must be obvious to any one.

It is deeply to be regretted that such exhibitions of family difficulties and privacies, should be spread open for public gaze. Pity it is that the penetralia of the domestic altar should thus be invaded by the eye of vulgar curiosity, and all its sacred mystery developed.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

H RECORDER.

ANESVILLE:

DAY, ... AUGUST 19, 1840.

is nber closes our first volume. We re- nks to those agents and patrons who gi is their aid, and solicit a continu- ir favors.

occurred in our last, in consequence ng the proof by copy, which we regret. cle signed W. H. Lawder, it should C's Butterworth's, instead of Charles 's.

rs' Aid Society of the Pittsburgh of the Methodist Protestant Church, to meet on the last Saturday of this the camp-ground, in the neighborhood e. C. Springer, Secretary.

leyan Observer is now connected with tchman. The editor of the former the future course of this united paper, have no doubt it will hereafter be as e rights of the white as the colored e hope so, but we are slow to believe.

as a meeting of some three or four chools, last Sabbath, on the new camp- the land of Mr. Thomas Wilber. Be- e and four hundred children were pre- large number of spectators. Suitable ere delivered on the occasion, by Mes- Moore and Gillespie. There is an in- terest in this neighborhood on the sub- bath Schools. The one at the Spring- thodist Protestant) Church has been in g condition for two years.

v. George Storrs, of the North, has episcopacy, and withdrawn from the Episcopal Church, and has pronounced Congregationalism. He has a long ilation in the last Wesleyan Observer is position, which we have carefully though he has taken some correct and ws of Methodist episcopacy, yet we of his course. A man should never ip containing a valuable cargo, be- has some leaky or rotten places. Let nue with her and try to repair the de- rts. When he is thrown overboard it ough to forsake her and make for land.

llowing correspondent, after alluding to of Br. John Herbert, of the 15th ult., plains that the superintendents of cir- not make regular reports of the condi- eir respective charges to the Recorder; ing an excuse for the delinquent preach- want of time, &c., shewing that some of twenty-nine appointments to Br. H.'s ., &c., and having before regularly given of the spiritual condition of his circuit, letown circuit lies between the 39 and 40 north latitude. The 3d degree of west from Washington passes nearly thro' its It includes a part of the counties of lia, Harrison and Weston, Virginia.— el Hill passes through the bounds of it in a direction from N. E. toward S. e principal rivers are the Monongahela t; these with their tributaries intersect try in every direction. Face of the agreeably diversified with pleasant val- sloping hills, which produce abundance and fruit. Here we have every kind of creed common to this climate.

e churchman—fond of power, Quaker sly, the Presbyterian sour;"

mon ready to inform you of the new rev- ade to Joe Smith, and to discuss the va- the golden plates. Here is the Univer- ho has, or thinks he has, his hell in this d here is he who informs you that you through the fire of perdition in the in- world, to heaven. Here we have Bible us, sometimes called New Lights, some llites, some Disciples, the various shades les of Baptists, from the Iron Jacket An- n down to the Free-Willer. Here also have an interview with the Episcopal ist, who, unlike the General, shuts his door ws in the latch-string; and last, but not ere are from six to seven hundred Pro- Methodists, divided into eighteen class- g on an extent of country comprising 80 square miles.

hay harvest is finished, and our last quar- eeting is past, I will give further particu- Br. Herbert is not satisfied with this com- tion. John Fordyce, Sup't.
Middletown circuit.

ngalia county, Va., Aug. 7, 1840.

ITEMS.

ystematic attempt appears to have made in Cincinnati, to injure the eter of Mr. C. L. Cole, formerly a nt of that city; now in business here. promptly met by him in New York, e slanders rendered innocuous.— otice also that the Cincinnati paper originated the charges has with- them.—N. Y. paper.

Governor Runnels of Mississippi, een whipping Gov. McNutt, in the s of Jackson. Runnels began the . McNutt observed he had no whereupon Runnels threw down his and to it they went after the most ved fashion of modern pugilists.— course of the set to, if I am rightly ned, Runnels got rather roughly ed, and therefore resumed his cane auxiliary, and belabored McNutt severely.

s. Tappan, wife of the Hon. Benja- Tappan, Senator in Congress from died in Steubenville, on the 4th inst.

The Charleston Patriot says that a serious inconvenience has resulted to the banks from the resumption of specie payments.

Father Matthew, the great apostle of Temperance, numbers 150,000 Irish who have adopted the pledge of Tee-totalism. In one year from this date a similar triumphant success, it will be found, has crowned the labor of the Catholic priesthood in this country. Irishmen will thus get more influence than by political association, and better influence too.

Murder.—A Mrs. Marian Wilson, who resided in a house at the Northeast corner of Seventh and South streets, Philadelphia, beat her landlady, Mrs. Filbert, so severely on Tuesday, that she is since dead. The provocation was, that Mrs. F. had sued for the rent. The coroner's jury returned a verdict, that deceased died in consequence of wounds inflicted by Marian Wilson.

S. J. Titus, arraigned before Recorder Baldwin, of New Orleans, for a breach of the peace, on Friday the 24th ult., was instantly seized with mania a potu, and in a few minutes was a corpse.

Livingston Palmer, a "patriot," sentenced to death for treason, in Upper Canada, has had his punishment commuted to transportation for life. The other, Hiram Mann, sentenced at the same time, is not mentioned, but has probably received the same grace.

Libel Suit.—It is stated in the Times that Senator Tallmadge has commenced suits against the Editor of the Washington Globe for a libel, and against the New York Evening Post for its republication, laying his damages at $20,000.

Stephen Girard's will is again in litigation; certain heirs of the deceased being about to contest the right of the city of Philadelphia, to the real estate devised to it.

Three Spanish lads residing at West Point to learn the English language, were on Tuesday drowned in the Hudson, by the upsetting of a boat.

Lucifer matches set a crate of baggage on fire on the Eastern Railroad, near Boston, the other evening. Damage, about $300.

A new trial has been moved for, by the convicted rioters in Philadelphia, and reasons have been filed by counsel. It is possible that the haste with which the prisoners were disposed of, may leave them room for defence, unattempted on the trial.

The accounts from the south of France represent the vines and the crops in general as in a very satisfactory state. A large quantity of silk is expected to be made this year.

We are rejoiced to hear that Washington Irving is on a new work; the subject, the incidents connected with the visits of Columbus to this continent, a favorite and interesting theme. The historian of Alhambra lingers still with pleasure in chivalrous, romantic Spain.

The Delaware Sentinel, devoted to the cause of Harrison, has just set out at Wilmington, Delaware, under the auspices of Mr. William M. Mandain.

Another Steamboat Collision.—The Buffalo Republican says: "The steamboat Erie, on her passage up the lake on Sunday night, when within about six miles of Dunkirk, ran into the schooner Iowa, and cut her completely in two, when she sank immediately. The persons on board were all saved by the exertions of the officers and crew of the Erie. The Iowa had no cargo. Nothing was saved from the schooner, but the lives of the crew.

Murder Will Out.—We learn from one of the citizens, who returned from Juliet yesterday, that the body of a man by the name of McLaughlin, who has been missing since March last, has just been found in a mill pond, two or three miles from Juliet. It appears to have been disinterred or removed from its original place of deposite for fear of exposure, and to bear the marks of a murder.—Chicago American.

The total number of deaths in the city of New York, for the week ending August 1st, were two hundred and two, viz: thirty-nine men, twenty women, eighty-six boys and fifty-seven girls.

Cold Water.—A new set of candidates for medical popularity have sprung up in Germany, who, under the guidance of Vincent Priesnitz, a farmer of Graefenburg, in Austrian Silesia, profess to cure all diseases by the internal and external application of pure and Cold Water.

On the last day of the session of Congress, Mr. Duncan gave notice that he should, at the next session, bring in a bill to present to the Imaum of Muscat, a United States sloop of war!

The citizens of Georgetown, (D. C.,) have held a public meeting in relation to their late treatment by Congress, and urging a retrocession of their part to the State of Maryland.

Gov. McNutt, of Mississippi, has issued his proclamation declaring that the Union Bank, the Bank of Vicksburgh, and the Grand Gulf Railroad and Banking Company, have forfeited their charters by failing to pay their ten dollar notes. The President of the first named institution has made a publication stating that the bank feels it its duty to disregard the provisions of the act under which the Governor proceeded, on the ground that the same is unconstitutional.

Virginia Loan.—The Treasurer of the State of Virginia has given notice, that proposals for a 6 per cent. loan, amounting to $62,825, or any part thereof, irredeemable for twenty years, interest semi-annually, in specie, will be received until the 24th instant.

There are 400,000 Jews in Poland, many of them are very rich. The Jewesses wear jewels frequently worth five to ten thousand dollars.

It is asserted in a letter from Naples, that the notorious brigand Gaspareno, who, with his own hand, killed no fewer than forty-three persons, but is now confined in the prison of Civita-Vecchia, has sold the knife which he has carried with him throughout his predatory life, to an English gentleman, for eighty-five Napoleons, and his hat, for fifty Napoleons, to a French tourist.

The Chinese Collection.—Major Noah pays the following just tribute to our unrivalled Chinese Collection:

"Mr. Dunn's magnificent Chinese Museum, at Philadelphia, is the theme of universal praise. No one can possibly go to that city without visiting the collections in its superb saloons, acquiring new interest at this moment from the prospects of the world being soon embargoed from all intercourse with the Celestial Empire.

The Norfolk Beacon has the following paragraph: "We learn that a letter has been received in town from Washington, which states that Mr. Poinsett took charge of the Navy Department on Wednesday, and that Col. Benton would enter immediately on the duties of the War Department vacated by Mr. Poinsett.

The Frederick (Md.) Herald, says—Farmers generally who calculated on a large crop of wheat this season have been disappointed, every person almost, after having got it out, so far as we have heard, being disappointed in the amount raised. The crop nevertheless has been a tolerable one, but nothing to compare with that of last year. The corn crop in this neighborhood has been suffering severely from the drought, and will probably prove almost an entire failure.

The Franklin (Louisiana) Republican states that both the cane and cotton crops are very fine, notwithstanding the late drought. The corn crops will not fall short, as was generally supposed, and the late corn is coming on fairly, and is daily improving from the effects of the frequent showers that are falling.

Mr. John Miller, of Williamson, Wayne Co., N. Y., was killed a few days since by his own bull. He was milking a cow, when the bull ran at him and tossed him up in the air with his horns. Then he trampled upon him, run him through and through, literally impaling him, until his body was horribly mutilated and his bowels torn out. The blood of the poor sufferer running upon the face and neck of the animal, seemed to enrage him more and the furious beast wreakened his vengeance upon his lifeless remains, long after all resistance had ceased. All this took place in the presence of his wife and children, who could render no assistance until it was unavailing.

Attempted Duel.—On Saturday afternoon officers Young and Murphy apprehended two young bloods, on board of one of our river steamers, who were about to proceed for New Jersey, for the purpose of fighting a duel. The belligerents are young men, and said to be respectably connected. The difficulties which gave rise to this attempt at cool and deliberate murder, originated at one of the principal hotels, but of the subject matter of the dispute we are not acquainted. They were taken before Alderman Binns, and bound over for a further hearin the sum of one thousand five hundred dollars.—Phil. Gazette.

An Indian Marriage.—An order of the Court of Sessions was some what disturbed yesterday by the appearance of four Indians, two male and two female, nor was it lessened, when an interesting couple, the youth about 19, and the girl 20, advanced to the bench, and expressed their wish to be united in the holy bands of matrimony. The party, accompanied by Alderman Smith, and Mr. Shaler counsellor-at-law, retired to a private room, where the interesting ceremony took place. They gave their names as Peter Pierre and Susan Aneas, of the Penobscot tribe of Indians, in the State of Maine.—N. Y. Express.

A Melancholy Coincidence.—The Baltimore Sun says:—"We have no recollection of such a coincidence of death, as that which we find in the ordinary record of mortality, in one of our exchange papers. On the 19th ultimo, Mr. Solon Nash, formerly of Boston, died at Louisville, Kentucky; and on the same day, his wife, Mrs. Mary B. Nash, aged 28 years, formerly of Newburyport, deceased in this city. There may be mere than fancy in the idea, that the departed spirits, whose bodies were separated at the hour of dissolution, met and re-united, on their return to God who gave them."

Robbery.—Mr. James Wheat, of Little Falls, New Jersey, was on Wednesday last robbed by his servant, a colored woman, named Catharine Johnson, of two hundred and eighty dollars in gold, and bank notes to the amount of fifty or sixty dollars. The suspected thief hired a horse and wagon and fled towards this city. She was pursued by Mr. Wheat, who yesterday discovered the delinquent in a house in Anthony street, where she was arrested and taken to the police. She denied all knowledge of the stolen money, and was committed.—N. York paper.

Wisconsin returns a population under the progressing census, of 31,000, and Iowa of 50,000 souls.

Two lions have arrived at Philadelphia in the ship Russell, being presents from the Emperor of Morocco to the President of the United States.

Gov. Seward has issued his proclamation offering five hundred dollars reward for the apprehension of Orange Cole, accused of the murder of Barber Stevens, of Ontario, in July last.

Preservation of Timber.—It has been ascertained that timber soaked for some days in lime water, will resist dry rot much longer than timber not similarly treated. After it is taken out of the lime water, it should be allowed to dry and season.

More Fires from Lightning.—The Westminster Carrolltonian says,—"During the storm of Tuesday afternoon last, one of the barns on the farm belonging to the heirs of Jacob Burns, deceased occupied by Mr. John Geiman, one and a half miles west of Manchester, was struck by lightning and destroyed. The fire communicated to another barn, on the same place, about thirty yards distant from the first, and destroyed it also, including his crop of grain, hay, &c."—Bick.

The Hydrophobia Case in Holmesburg.—Dr. Wilson writes that a case of hydrophobia occured on the Philadelphia and Bristol turnpike, about three-fourths of a mile south-west of Holmesburg, in the person of Charles Baker—aged 20—small, but robust, and of active habits.

He came home to his friends on Sunday, May 24th, and amused himself by teasing a little dog, pinching his tail, &c., to make him show his agility by jumping, snapping, &c., till the little enraged creature caught him by the thumb. The sport ceased, the wound was tied up and soon healed, he went away to his business, and nothing more was thought of the circumstance, till June 17th, two days after hydrophobic symptoms had occurred.

Saturday morning, June 21, at 3 o'clock, he died—four weeks after being bitten, and six days after experiencing the first symptoms.

The Decline of Life.—There is an eventide in human life—a season when the eye becomes dim, and the strength decays, and when the winter of age begins to shed upon the human head its prophetic snows. It is the season of life to which the autumn is most analogous, and which it becomes, and much would it profit you, my elder readers, to mark the instruction which it brings. The spring and summer days are gone, and with them not only the joys they knew, but many friends who gave them. You have entered upon the autumn of your being, and whatever may have been the profusion of your spring, or the warm temperament of your summer, there is yet a season of stillness and solitude which the beneficence of heaven affords you, in which you may meditate upon the past and prepare yourself for the mighty change which you may soon undergo.

It is now you may understand the magnificent language of Heaven—it mingles its voice with that of Revelation; it summons you in the hours when the leaves of the winter are gathering to the evening study which the mercy of Heaven has provided in the book of salvation.—And while the shadowy valley opens, which leads to the abode of death, it speaks of that love which conducts to those green pastures, and those still waters where there is an eternal Spring to the children of God.—Allison.

A Man who was Determined to be Married.—In Scotland, some time ago, a man in the west of the town had the bands of marriage between him and a young woman regularly proclaimed in the Abbey Church. The wedding night was appointed, and marriage supper provided. The hour arrived, the company assembled, but they looked in vain for the "bonnie bride." After waiting in anxious suspense for more than an hour, the bridegroom stated that they were not to be baulked of their supper in consequence of the absence of the bride. The supper was discussed, a few bowls of toddy were drank, and some jokes were made at the bride's absence, which the bridegroom took in good part. There were a few unmarried females present, one of whom gave the favorite song, "I'm ower young to marry yet." When it was approaching at midnight, it was proposed that the company should break up. To this the bridegroom replied, "There's nae hurry, for I'm determined to be married before we part." This announcement created no small surprise—and the unmarried females simpered and laughed. The bridegroom, however, declared it was no joke, and that he would marry any one of them that would accept his offer. To this one of them replied, "the offer has been fairly made and will be as fairly accepted. I have known you for a number of years as a well-behaved, industrious young man, and I begin to think that 'I'm not ower young to marry yet.'" If the company were rather dull before, they now broke into uproarous mirth, and after drinking the health of the new made bride in a flowing bumper, the marriage was consummated "a la Gretna Green," and the stocking was thrown amid loud cheers and laughter.—Southern Christian Advocate.

Singular.—The name "Lord" is found 6962 times in the Old Testament. The name of "God" is found 2775 times.—The name of "Jesus" occurs 925 times in the New Testament. The name "Christ" 555 times. The word "Selah" is met with 74 times in the Bible. The word "Eternity" but once. The double asseveration "verily, verily," is to be seen 25 times in John's Gospel, and no where else. There are 314 interrogations (?) in Job. The phrase, "and God said," occurs 10 times in the first chapter of Genesis. The name "Jesus" and "Christ" are neither of them in the 3d Epistle of John. The word "Foreordained" is mentioned but once in the whole Bible, 1 Peter, 120. The word "Perseverance" is mentioned but once in the Bible—Eph. 6, 18. The word "Atonement" is mentioned but once in the New Testament. The word "Election" but six times in the Scriptures. There is no mention made in the Scriptures of "Adam's Fall," "Original Sin," nor "The Covenant of Grace." The words "Eternal Life" are mentioned but once in the Old Testament, Daniel xii. 2. The word "Predestination" is not once mentioned in the Bible. The word "Predestinate" is mentioned twice, and twice the word "Predestinated" is mentioned.—Boston Palladium.

FOREIGN NEWS.

From the N. Y. Evening Signal—Extra.

BY THE GREAT WESTERN.

TWENTY-ONE DAYS LATER!

The Great Western arrived at her moorings in the East river this morning, (Sunday, August 9th,) at about ten o'clock, having left Bristol on the 25th of July, about noon.

We have received by this arrival an ample supply of English papers, but they are unusually barren of important intelligence.

Among the passengers we see the name of Prince Jerome Bonaparte, son of Count de Montford.

Miss Sedgwick, the popular American authoress, is among the passengers, as are also Harry Placide, the favorite comedian of the Park, and J. B. Buckstone, the comic author and actor.

In the case of Oxford, the youth who made the attempt upon the Queen's life, the jury have returned a verdict of insanity, and he will probably be confined in a mad house the rest of his life.

It is stated that Lucien Bonaparte, Prince of Canino, died at Viterbe, in Italy, on the 29th of June. He was 66 years of age, and is said to have died of the same complaint, to which Napoleon fell a victim—cancer of the stomach.

No later news from China has been received.

Letters from Rome, which come down to the 7th of July, states that the health of the Pope, which had been in a dangerous state for a considerable period, had, though still suffering, been sufficiently improved to enable him to be removed to Castle Gandalo.

Preparations for the autumnal campaign of the French against Abd-el-Kader were going on. Several new regiments were to be sent to Africa.

History is about to be supplied with fresh documents respecting the campaign of Waterloo. Marshals Grouchy and Bourmont, both accused of treason on the field, have come forward to prove their innocence—the one against Gen. Berthegene, the other by a prosecution against the National.

The Spanish Carlist refugees Cabrera and Balmaseda, had arrived in France.

The Jews of Damascus were still the victims of oppression. A letter from Beyruth, in Syria, states, that "although the tortures of the persecuted Jews is Damascus have ceased, the poor prisoners are still separately confined in dark holes, and no one is allowed to approach them. Mr. S. Briggs, of Alexandria, with the Prussian and American consuls, had repaired to Damascus, and had a long conference with Sherif Pacha, in order to induce him to treat his prisoners with humanity. This interference had for a brief time a good result, but no sooner had these gentlemen left the place than the same rigorous treatment was recommenced."

ENGLAND.

The Cork Reporter gives the following account of the scene that ensued on the arrival of the President in that city:

This magnificent steamer, said to be the largest afloat, arrived at Passage at nine on Thursday evening, after an experimental, and to those on board, delightful trip, of six or eight and twenty hours, against a powerful head wind, from Liverpool. Her approach to Cove and up to Passage was hailed with the firing of cannon, the discharge of fireworks, and the acclamations of thousands assembled from the neighboring districts to witness and welcome this moving wonder in naval architecture. The salutes were answered by the President in prompt style, and having come to anchor opposite the St. George Steam Company's Pier at Passage, the vast concourse of people with which the beach was crowded, gave three hearty cheers, while rockets and other fire-works were discharged in abundance. The President is in every point of view well suited for the important trade for which she is destined, and altogether presents a specimen of British enterprise worthy the commercial greatness of England. The scene at Passage yesterday was beyond description animated. The city and surrounding districts for many miles poured out their population. Many thousands of tickets had been issued by Mr. Beale, of the St. George office here, and from eight in the morning until four in the afternoon the arrivals of fashionables on board were unceasing. Mr. Bainbridge, the chairman of the directors, and several others of the mercantile body of Liverpool, came in her. All the river steamers were filled to excess, and continued to arrive hourly during the day, whilst about five hundred vehicles—public and private—were to be seen, at one and the same time, on the Passage-road. She sails this evening at five for Kingstown.

Her Majesty and Prince Albert.—We understand great preparations are making at Wentworth House for the reception of Queen Victoria and Prince Albert, who are expected on a visit to Earl Fitzwilliam early next month.

The Sun of July 24th, says: "a whole batch of Bills were, by the magic of the Royal assent, converted into act or laws last night in the House of Lords, and among them the Canada Government Bill."

FRANCE.

The Paris papers of Wednesday, July 22d, furnishes nothing deserving of comment. In regard to local matters, their contents are a complete blank, and the few extracts we give respecting foreign affairs do not possess any particular interest.

The Commerce says, it is finally settled that Prince Augustus of Saxe Coburg, brother of the Duchess de Nemours, is to marry the Princess Clementine. The lady is one year older than the intended bridegroom.

M. Thiers.—It was believed that M. Thiers intended to take a short trip to England during the parliamentary recess; but if he ever had such an intention he has abandoned it. He has taken a house at Auteuil, near Paris, for which he pays the enormous rent of 6,000f a month.—This is a large hole in his salary as prime minister; but ministers here, even the most honest, have other means of making money than their salaries; and, besides, it is understood that M. Thiers' father-in-law is very liberal to him. The literary labors of M. Thiers have also for some time past averaged a return of upwards of seventy thousand francs a year. Notwithstanding his great occupation as a minister, he contrives to devote two or three hours a day still to literature.—Letter of our Paris correspondent.

RUSSIA AND KHIVA.

In reference to the Russian expedition against Khiva, which has been a source of so much anxiety among timorous people, it may be remarked that there was apparently a good reason for it. Thirty thousand Russian subjects were in the hands of the Khan and his followers, and treated as slaves. If any were detected in an attempt to escape from their bondage, their noses and ears are cut off, and in this state of mutilation they were compelled to spend their days in the most odious slavery. The Usbeks and the Toorkmans in the Khanate of Khiva are a kind of fine gentlemen, who disdain any sort of labor or occupation. The Sarts or Bokharians carry on the trade, and the Karakalpacks cultivate the soil, but to supply themselves with menials for domestic drudgery, these fine gentlemen are obliged to turn kidnappers, and to steal the Russians, Persians and Kurds that fall in their way. We need not, therefore, be sorry that these fellows are in the way of getting a severe chastisement, and that their propensity for men-stealing will receive a wholesale check.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Discovery of an Inhabited Island.—Capt. Wood, of the ship "L. C. Richmond," lately arrived here, discovered while on his passage out, an Island in latitude 15 deg. 37 m. south, longitude 175 deg. 25 m. west. It was a large Island, well wooded and apparently thickly inhabited, judging by the lights seen on shore at night. Capt. Wood not having seen the Island marked in any of the charts, named it "Brinsmade's Island."—South Australian Register and Port Philip Herald.

Amsterdam, July 21.

Yesterday afternoon a trial was made on the iron railing between this city and Haarlem, of the first locomotive manufactured in this country. It was manufactured by Messrs. Verweerd and Company, and we are happy to say that the result of the trial was perfectly satisfactory.

M. Vander Schrieck, of this city, has obtained permission to establish a communication by steamboats, between the capital and Antwerp.

From the Calcutta Journal of April 29.

Melancholy Fate of Dr. Woodford.—We have been permitted to publish the following letter from Capt. Neville, of her Majesty's 63d regiment, addressed to Lieutenant Colonel Logan, commanding that regiment, reporting the particulars of the melancholy fate which befel Dr. Woodford, on the 18th instant. The party consisted of Capt. Neville, Dr. Woodford and Dr. Moretou, H. C. S., attached to her Majesty's 63d regiment, which latter gentleman appears to have had an almost miraculous escape from meeting with a similar fate:

"Right bank of the Attaran river, March 20th, about one hundred and eighty miles from Moulmein, by the course of the stream.

"It is with deep and heartfelt sorrow that I have to announce to you the melancholy death of Dr. Woodford, in consequence of being struck down by a tiger, while shooting in the Teak Forest here."

Liverpool, July 24, 1840.

Flour thirty shillings per barrel in bond.

Business Department.

The last quarterly meeting for Steubenville station will be held the Saturday and Sabbath immediately preceding the conference. We invite all who can make it convenient to attend.

J. Burns.

Br. John Guest sent us, more than one year since, the name of Samuel Little, at Chillicothe, as a subscriber to our paper; when the year was about half out the P. M. informed us he did not take his papers. Br. Carson not long since requested us to send him the paper again, for we had discontinued for a few numbers, which we accordingly did. The P. M. has just returned us a number informing us it is not taken out. How is this Br. Carson?

Br. Burns, of Steubenville, suggests that our naming the resolution in reference to the horse-keeping at conference, might excite the suspicion of some, in the connection it was placed, that it was done at his instance. We correct any such impression by stating, we mentioned it on our own responsibility, with a view to have a fair understanding of the matter. Br. B. authorizes us to say, that no one need be deterred from attending for the want of money; provision will be made for such cases.

From the Ohio State Journal.

MEMORIALS TO THE LAST LEGISLATURE,
Praying the further protection of Religious Meetings.

MR. EDITOR:—Most of your readers, no doubt, are aware that an effort was made, during the last Legislature, to effect the passage of a law granting to the religious community greater security from molestation in the enjoyment of their privileges, when assembled for public worship. To evince to the Legislature the propriety of the passage of such a law, memorials, signed by some 7 or 8000 citizens of this State, were forwarded to that body at its last session. I propose in this paper to give a brief history of that matter. My reason for doing so is, that I had some agency in getting up those memorials; and recently the inquiry has been made to me, both personally and per mail, "What did the last Legislature do in regard to the passage of a law granting further protection to religious meetings?" I would not presume to occupy a place in your columns, if I was not acquainted with the fact that many signed those memorials who were not members of any religious body, and whose principal source of information is your periodical.

The leading object aimed at in the prayer of the memorialists, was the enactment of a law which would the more effectually protect the religious community when assembled to hold what is ordinarily termed a camp-meeting. Accordingly, in order to facilitate the attainment of that object, the draft of a bill, which had been prepared by several gentlemen of Cincinnati, one of whom stands high in his profession at the bar, was placed in the hands of the chairman of the committee to whom the memorials were referred. In due time, the committee reported by bill. The leading features of the bill were, first, an extension of the distance prohibiting dealers in cakes, beer, cider, whiskey, &c., coming nearer than two miles; secondly, a forfeiture of the goods offered for sale, and fine; thirdly, the appropriation of the money arising from the execution of the law against offenders, to the school fund, or such other purposes as might best subserve the public good.

It is proper here to remark, that these provisions perfectly accorded with the prayer of the memorialists, and fully embraced the object intended to be accomplished. After some delay and opposition by the dominant party in the House, among whom stood most prominent Mr. Flood, of Licking, and Mr. Jenkins, of Columbiana, the bill was passed by a large majority. Thence it went to the Senate, and was there referred to the Judiciary Committee, of which Mr. Tod, of Trumbull, was Chairman. The Chairman of that committee reported that the bill was unconstitutional, especially that provision which contemplated a forfeiture of goods. It is not my province, neither is it my design, to question the correctness of the opinion of the committee, touching the constitutionality of that provision of the bill; but it may be remarked, in justice to the petitioners, that they deemed such a law perfectly just and constitutional, especially as such a law exists in the jurisprudence of other States, particularly Pennsylvania and Maryland.

The bill being thus in part destroyed, the chairman of the committee, Senator Tod, assumed the care of what was left, and accordingly went to work and framed and reported an entirely new bill, differing in its essential features from that which came from the House. The bill, as it came from his hands, provided, that the offenders should be proceeded against before a magistrate, and, if sufficient cause was found, be bound over to the next Court of Common Pleas for trial. In the mean time, if my memory serves me, the prosecutor, or complainant, was to be held responsible for costs, etc. Besides all this, it was provided that, in case of conviction, the party convicted should be cast into the dungeon of the jail of the county in which the offence might be committed, and there be confined for a certain length of time, being fed on bread and water, and also subjected to a fine of from one to twenty dollars, with costs of suit.

To these provisions of the bill objections were made, and urged in a private interview I had with Senator Tod; and endeavors were made to show the fallacy of such a law, both on account of the tediousness of the process, and its severity. For these considerations, it was supposed that, so far as its execution was concerned, it would prove a perfect nullity, inasmuch as not one man in a hundred could be induced to proceed against an offender.—During the pendency of the bill, there was no little discussion, and, I am sorry to say it, gross slander uttered against the church by some of the men belonging to the party then in power, among whom were Mr. Utter, of Clermont, Dr. Glover, of Scioto, and, as I was informed, Mr. Spangler, of Fairfield. At this stage of the business, I had a conversation with Dr. Glover, and expressed to him my surprise that he or any other person should object to the passage of a reasonable law for the protection of Christian assemblies. He then attempted to justify himself and those who acted with him, by asking, if it was not more honorable for a man to act out his opinions? and added, that I must not be surprised or offended, by his informing me that a majority of the members of the Senate were decided infidels, pointing particularly to Mr. Utter and others. He also informed me that, so far from Senator Tod being a friend of the measure, as he professed to be in my presence, he was decidedly hostile; and, from what he said, as well as for other reasons, the opinion may be indulged that the honorable Senator intended, by drafting the bill as he did, either to defeat the passage of a suitable law, or if his bill passed, to throw the odium of that measure on the church; and thus contravene the wishes of the memorialists, and bring a reproach on the cause of religion. It is natural to suppose that this information was painful to me, especially in regard to Senator T's hostility to the prayer of the memorialists, inasmuch as I had always viewed him in the light of an honorable man. I cannot vouch for the correctness of the information, but so I received it from Dr. Glover.

Discovering that nothing satisfactory could be obtained, at this crisis I addressed a letter to Senator T., (which will appear in the following extract from Dr. Glover's Report on the Portsmouth memorial,) in order to arrest the further action of the Legislature.

Permit me, before I make the extract, to remark that, about the same time, namely, the 10th of March, I also wrote to the Rev. Mr. Simmons, of Portsmouth station, requesting him to forward a memorial on this subject. He did so. That memorial was, as an act of courtesy, put into the hands of Dr. Glover, the Senator from Scioto, and on its presentation he moved that it be referred to a committee of one; he constituting that committee.—This was on Monday morning. The Doctor informed me that he would be prepared to report next day, and wished me present. Accordingly I was there on Tuesday, Wednesday, and also Thursday, but no report yet. Having other engagements, I was detained from the Senate until it closed, which was the following Monday. The report, however, came out on Saturday. Why it was detained so long, I cannot tell, unless it was to prevent any thing being done to counteract its influence. The Doctor, after a tirade, in his report, against religion, and religious intolerance, which was made up chiefly of scraps from certain authors, closes as follows:

"There are other reasons which have their due weight with your committee, in opposing the passage of this bill. The Rev. Wm. Herr, a respectable minister of that church, most interested in the passage of this bill, has conversed freely with your committee, on the merits and demerits of the above named bill, and has expressed a desire that it should not become a law. It was inexpedient at this time, and he desired that your committee would oppose it. In furtherance of this object, Mr. Herr wrote the following letter:

"Honorable Senator Tod:

"DEAR SIR:—Since my interview with you, I have had some time to reflect on the provisions of the bill for the protection of religious meetings, and also conversed with an aged friend on the subject, and we both concur in the opinion, that, on the whole, it would be best for the Legislature, at present, to take no further action in the premises. Some of the provisions of the act are exceedingly objectionable, not only to myself, but also, if I know the feelings of the church, must be to the great body of our people. I refer now to the penalty of imprisonment.

"We wish not revenge, nor do we seek to impose degradation on any of our fellow-citizens; and unless we can be, as a religious body, protected in some other way, we had rather that a law, embodying such provisions, would not pass.—Again, the process by which the offender is to be reached seems rather tedious, and, so far as its execution is concerned, will prove a perfect nullity. Did time and circumstances permit, I might enter into detail, but let me close by saying, that, as the bill is now on the table, it is preferred that it should remain there. I thank you, sir, for the interest you manifest in behalf of the church of which I am an unworthy member.

In haste, respectfully yours,
WM. HERR.

WEDNESDAY, March 11, 1840."

"Your committee are satisfied that the opinions expressed in the above letter spring from a good heart, and that the feeling and humane author, in all probability, had his attention especially drawn to that part of the bill which proposes to take from the unsuspecting farmer or tradesman his wagon and horses for selling a glass of cider or water-melon.—Nothing short of a love for humanity, and respect for the constitution of our country, could have dictated the above sentiments. Your committee is satisfied that had his constituents examined the bill in detail, as did the Rev. Mr. Herr, they would have arrived at the same conclusion, being possessed, as he is, of a sound heart, and an innate love for the republican institutions of our country.

"That the memorial is the offspring of a letter written by the Rev. Mr. Herr, of Columbus, to the Rev. Mr. Simmons, of Portsmouth, is not a matter for the investigation of this committee; nor is it our duty to analyze the nice difference of feeling that governed the reverend gentleman, when writing these several communications. It is enough to know, that when conversing with your committee, he spoke against the passage of the law—when writing to the Senator from Trumbull, he justly repudiated the provisions of the bill; that when instructions were necessary from Scioto, he must have spoken in favor of it."

It will be perceived from the above extract that the author says I expressed a desire that the "committee would oppose it," that is, the passage of a law for the protection of religious meetings. In this the Doctor is mistaken. But I did express the opinion that, if the Legislature could not give a law more in accordance with the clearly expressed wishes of the memorialists, they had better stop where they were. I did not, nor could not, give my sanction, so far as I was concerned, as an humble member of the church, to the passage of a law which would have been contrary to the prayer of the memorialists, and thus assume the responsibility of that which was exclusively the offspring of Senator Tod.

Again, the Doctor is mistaken when he speaks of "the unsuspecting farmer or tradesman forfeiting his wagon and horses for selling a glass of cider or watermelon." The memorialists never asked for such a forfeiture; neither was it contemplated in the bill as it originally passed the House. In the close of the report the author intimates an apparent contradiction in the letters addressed to Senator Tod, and that to the Rev. Mr. Simmons, which originated the memorial from Portsmouth. Let it be remarked, that the object of that letter was not so much to secure the passage of a suitable bill, as to accomplish another object, which will more fully appear from the face of the letter itself, of which I have a certified copy. Owing to the fact that the Legislature was near its close, little or no hope was indulged that the passage of a suitable law could be effected. After a preliminary remark, I wrote as follows:

"The bill passed the lower House after some opposition; but in the Senate it has met with the most determined hostility. Among others opposed to the bill, is the Senator from your place, Dr. Glover; and in a speech he made last Friday or Saturday, he uttered some of the most base, unfounded, and loathsome slanders about the church. His remarks are partially reported in the State Journal, to which you can refer; and, among some things said, he declared that his constituents would rejoice in the abolishment or extinction of our society; and also that the Doctor with whom he studied always made enlarged preparation for business nine months after camp-meetings. In a private interview I had with Dr. Glover, he gave me for his authority the name of Dr. Andrews,* of your place, for the latter assertion. I regret that no memorial on this subject has been sent up from your place to the Legislature, and, if it were expedient, I would be glad if this could be done yet, in order, in part, to refute that slandering Senator. Would it not be well to see to this without delay, and also for you to call on Dr. Andrews, to inquire whether he authorized Glover to make the declaration? Your attention to this business, and an immediate answer, will confer a favor on me, and I trust greatly subserve the interests of the church. In haste, yours &c,

REV. W. SIMMONS. WM. HERR.

From the above letter it will be readily perceived what was the design in soliciting a memorial from Portsmouth. The object to be gained was partly to vindicate the reputation of the citizens of that place, who, by the Doctor's speech, were represented as hostile to the institutions of the church; but chiefly for the purpose of refuting his slanders, and furnishing an antidote to his remarks, which, judging from his peculiar opinions, were levelled more at religion itself, than against the bill then pending before the Senate.—It is due to Dr. G. to remark, that, in regard to the purport of a part of his speech, I was misinformed. I was not present when it was delivered, but receivd it from Capt. Brady, a member of the Senate, who, to the best of his recollection, tho't that the Doctor said what is contained in my letter to Rev. Mr. Simmons. During a second conversation, Capt. B. informed me that he was mistaken; that Dr. G. said that his constituents would rejoice, not in the extinction of the Methodist Society, but of camp-meetings. Taking the latter as the correct version of his speech, it is falsified by the memorial which was in a few hours signed by upwards of one hundred of the most respectable citizens of Portsmouth, who, in the language of Rev. Mr. Simmons, were men of different views in politics and religion. The final result of the whole matter was that, on motion, the further consideration of the bill, providing for the protection of religious assemblies, be postponed to next December.

Before I close, permit me to make a remark or two. It may he inquired, why was the above narrative of facts deferred unto the present period? I answer, because of my absence from the city, and other circumstances over which I could exercise no control: And my only motive in giving it now, is to inform those interested in this matter, of the doings of the Legislature on this subject. The season for holding meetings in the grove has arrived, and it is important that those interested should know what are their rights and privileges.

It now remains for the people to determine what shall be done. It seems to have come to this, that they must either be more effectually protected from the annoyance of the abandoned and profligate huckster, or give up those forms of worship which are esteemed important to the advancement of religion. It may be supposed that the latter will not be done without some further effort; and, therefore, the hope is indulged, that there will be such a demonstration of opinion on the part of the people as shall evince to the ensuing Legislature the absolute necessity of a law granting further protection to religious meetings. WM. HERR.

Columbus, O., 20th July, 1840.

P. S. Editors in the State, favorable to good order, will please copy the above.
W. H.

*Dr. Andrews, here alluded to, was a signer of the memorial from Portsmouth.

ANECDOTE OF THE LATE WAR.—A short time previous to the capture of the Gurriere by the Constitution, the Gurriere had fallen in with, and taken a French prize. Among the passengers transferred to the deck of the Gurriere, was a French gentleman charged with despatches to the American government; who, on presenting himself to the British commander, was dispossessed of his books and papers, and peremptorily ordered to "go below."

Overwhelmed with this sudden and unexpected termination of his mission, the gentleman passed several days in great distress and agony of mind—which was not a little heightened by the haughty bearing and insolence of his victor. Once or twice, addressing him with his blandest manner and the best English, he said:

"Captain Dacre, I tank you, sare, for my government despatch and my law books."

"Go below! you frog-eating, sallow-faced wretch!" was the only reply of the proud Briton.

Ere long, however, a sail was descried on the edge of the distant horizon. Her gradually increasing size gave token that she approached—and, as she neared to view, the tapering spars and graceful trim of the Yankee were seen.

Captain Dacre, who with glass in hand, had observed her from a mere speck, as soon as he was satisfied that she was an American, gave vent to the wildest expressions of joy. He paced the deck with exulting step—swore he would "take that ship in fifteen minutes;" and to crown his anticipated triumph, directed that a hogshead of molasses be hoisted upon deck, to "treat the Yankees."

Our Frenchman, who was, mean-while, a silent, though not an uninterested observer of what was passing before him, again put on his most winning smile, and remarked:

"Captain Dacre, sare, wid your permission, I stay upon deck and see de fight."

"Go to the deuce!" responded the vain and self-conceited boaster, now busied in preparations for a bold and brilliant achievment.

Our hero was soon snugly enconsed among the rigging, and the two vessels continued gradually and silently to approach each other. The Constitution having got within reach of the enemy's long guns, the scene that followed is thus described by the lively little Frenchman.

"Captain Dacre, he sail dis way, and den he sail dat way, and den he go—boom!

"De Yankee man, he say nothing—but he still keep comin.

"Again, Captain Dacre sail dis way, and den he sail dat way, and den he go—boom!

"Enfin, de Yankee man go pop, pop, pop—pop, pop, pop!

"I say to Captain Dacre—Sare, wid your permission I go below, 'tis too hot here!"

He went below; and the action continued, resulting as is generally known.

When the firing had ceased, our little Frenchman, peeping out the hatch-way, espied "one officer-like man, and Captain Dacre handing his sword." The truth flasked upon him in an instant. He rushed upon deck, and finding himself again at liberty, he capered about like one "possessed." Finally, advancing to the now mute and fallen Dacre, with an air which defies our humble pen,

"You tell me, Sare, you take dis ship in fifteen minutes—by gar, HE TAKE YOU!"

"Now, Sare," he added, with a low bow and bitter emphasis, "I tank you for my government despatch and my law books!"

IMPORTANCE OF SABBATH SCHOOLS.—The following item is extracted from a communication in the Episcopal Recorder:

"He that would promote virtue and good order in the community let him patronize Sunday schools. Of all the pupils of Robert Raikes, not one was ever convicted of crime. The Recorder of London stated that of the criminals brought before him not more than one in a thousand had been taught in the Sabbath school. Of eleven thousand criminals in this State.(New York) but sixty-six have been Sunday school scholars."

No man can fulfil his duty, and enjoy all the happiness intended for him, without a family. The pleasures and affections; even the responsibilities, restraints and cares which they produce, all tend to develope and balance his character, to enlarge his mind, and to keep his heart in a medium point of enjoyment most favorable to health, content and honor. An old bachelor is almost sure to have some inaccurate notion or loose principle, which the reflection consequent on a family, protects a husband and father from.

An Impostor.

A MAN calling himself CYRUS RATHBURN, some time since, visited the south east corner of Seneca county, Ohio, and passing under the garb of a Methodist preacher, paid attention to a young lady of that vicinity, and after repeated visits was engaged to be married to her on the 25th of June. But before this act was consumated, it was accidentally discovered that his proper name was AUGUSTUS STEVENS, and that he has a wife and children in Wellsville, Columbiana county, Ohio, and that he never was a minister of any church.

Information can be had, with regard to the facts of this case, by inquiring of
MARTIN S. WEAVER,
SAMUEL CORSON,
JAMES T. DORLAND, or
R. SMITH, near
Atica, Seneca county, Ohio. [Aug. 5.

THE CASKET,
AND PHILADELPHIA MONTHLY MAGAZINE.
UNEXAMPLED SUCCESS!

Prospectus of a New Volume.

THE great increase in the subscription list of the Casket, which has been nearly doubled since the commencement of the last volume, warrants the most extensive improvements on the first of July, 1840—at which time a new volume will be commenced with increased vigor.—Nothing need be said of the firm basis on which the Casket stands, it being already the oldest magazine in the country, and has maintained its popularity in the face of all opposition. It is to be found upon the centre table of families, making literary pretentions, from Maine to Georgia.

TYPE—EMBELLISHMENTS.

The Casket is printed with a clear and beautiful type, upon the finest white paper. The illustrations are not surpassed by those of any periodical at home or abroad; and beside the monthly steel engravings, a quarterly plate of colored fashions has lately been added. The style of these embellishments is unequalled, and they are always accompanied with an appropriate sketch. No wood cuts disgrace the work. Whatever appears in the Casket is of the first order of art.

The volume will be opened with the first of a series of splendid Mezzotint engravings, prepared expressly for the work, by the burin of Sartain, who deservedly stands as the best engraver of the kind in the United States.

LITERARY CHARACTER.

The literary character of the Casket is well known. It is wholly original, of the highest order, and sustained by writers of the first rank. Essays, Tales, Sketches, and Travels, compose its prominent prose articles; while, the poetry is equalled by that of no other magazine of like character. The variety for which the Casket is celebrated, shall suffer no diminution; but on the contrary, every exertion shall be made to increase its interest.

SEVERAL ROMANCES OF THE REVOLUTION

have already appeared, and others shall follow in the course of the volume, presenting, when finished a complete picture of the manners, and a historical account of the great battles of that time. Thus, the Casket, instead of being filled with sickly sentimentalities, aims at a true delineation of human nature in every variety of passion.

The series of thrilling Nautical Sketches, entitled "Cruizing in the last War," and which are rated by the cotemporary press, equal to the celebrated Sketches from "Tom Cringle's Log," will be continued, and the "Leaves from a Lawyer's Fort-Folio," which have attained a deserved celebrity, will still furnish attraction to the Magazine.

We shall furnish the readers of the Casket with some valuable papers from entirely new contributors. "The Author of Old Iron Sides off a Lee Shore," will give the first of a number of Sketches in the July number. We count upon his prolific and graceful pen to do much in maintaining the great popularity of the Magazine. In addition to the variety already embraced in the pages of the Magazine, our "Syrian Letters," the first of which appeared in the June number as introductory, will interest, and add worth to its pages. They are from no unpractised pen.

FASHIONS.

The fashions are published in the Casket quarterly, or as often as any really new styles arrive from Paris. The engravings are colored, and executed from original designs. No old, worn-out plates are re-touched, and then published as the latest fashions. The truth of our designs may be tested by comparing them with the latest description of dresses from London and Paris.—They are universally admitted to be the finest specimen of engraving and coloring afforded by any Magazine in this country. The expense of getting them up is great, but we shall in no-wise abate the quality. Remember! The readers of the Casket are furnished with these fashion plates as an extra. They do not interfere with the regular, and choice engravings, which always accompany the work.

TIME OF PUBLICATION.

The Casket is published on the first of the month in every quarter of the Union. The most distant subscriber consequently receives it on that day, as well as those who reside in Philadelphia. In all the principal cities agents have been established, by which means subscribers in the vicinity can obtain their copies free of postage.

TERMS—THREE DOLLARS per annum. Or two Copies yearly for FIVE DOLLARS, invariably in advance, post paid. No new subscriber received without the money, or the name of a responsible agent. Published by
GEORGE R. GRAHAM,
36 Carter's Alley, Philadelphia.
August 5, 1840. 50.

S. C. Haver,

IN the flourishing town of Putnam has on hand 40 or 50 SADDLES ready for sale, of different qualities, comprising nearly all the varieties in fashion in our Buckeye State.

A good assortment of Bridles and Martingales: Riding and driving Whips: between 180 and 200 Carriage and heavy draft Collars, which will compare and wear with any others made here or elsewhere.

Also, fine York, Dearborn, heavy team and common Farming Harness. A lot of first rate Carriage and Buggy Harness, (brass and silver plated.)

Trunks, vallises, saddle-bags, and double covered wagon whips, varying in quality and price to suit purchasers.

The only recommendation he now offers for his work, is the testimony and long experience of his old customers and friends. He is still anxious to please and accommodate those who may call on him, and hopes to share so much of the public patronage as his attention to his business shall merit.

Putnam, April 29, 1840. 28tf

William Green,

CLOCK AND WATCH REPAIRER, SILVERSMITH, AND JEWELLER,

CAN be found at his shop on Main street Putnam, a few doors north of J. C. Guthrie's store, where he will do his best to accommodate customers. He keeps on hand an assortment of spectacles, watch trimmings, pencils, &c.

As far as we have tried Mr. GREEN as a watch repairer he has given us good satisfaction.—ED.
April 22, 1840. 35tf.

Stray Mare.

STRAYED from the subscriber living in Hopewell township, Muskingum county, O., on the 20th of June last, a light SORREL MARE, about 14 or 15 hands high, with a small blaze in the forehead and one white foot; no shoes on when she left. Any person returning said mare or giving information to the subscriber where she can be found, will be liberally compensated for his trouble.

NAAMAN R. GRANT.
Hopewell tp., Musk., O., July 8, 1840. 46

Dissolution.

THE partnership heretofore existing between the subscribers in the PUTNAM FOUNDRY, under the firm of HARTLEY & ANDERSON, was this day dissolved by mutual consent.

The Putnam Foundry will hereafter be conducted by J. J. Anderson & Co.
LEVI HARTLEY,
JACOB J. ANDERSON.
Putnam, Jan. 1, 1840. (Jan. 29: 23.)

THE FAMILY NEWSPAPER.

THE LARGEST CIRCULATION IN THE WORLD!
34,000 Subscribers.

THE PHILADELPHIA
SATURDAY COURIER.

THE Courier is on as firm and independe a basis as any paper issued, at home abroad, and its ample means will be always e ployed to make it equal, as a FAMILY PAPE to any journal published.

The unparalleled patronage, from every secti of the country, is the best evidence of its proval. It has the largest subscription IN T WORLD! Its list embraces over 34,000 scribers, extending from the Lakes to the Oce and combining all interests and classes of republic. It is the largest and cheapest jour ever issued!! Each number of the Courier co tains as much matter as would fill a 12mo volu the cost of which alone would be the price of paper for a whole year. The general characte the Courier is well known. Its columns con a great variety of

Tales, Narratives, Biographies, Essays,

Together with articles on

Science, Fine Arts,	Humorous Poetical A
Mechanics,	ticles,
Agriculture,	Health, Commerce,
Manufactures,	Domestic Intelligence
Foreign News,	Education,
Amusements, Facetia,	Self-Educated Men,
New Publications,	Literature,
Morality, Medicine,	The Drama,
The Silk Culture,	City Matters,
Temperance,	Amusing Miscellany,
Family Circle,	The Markets,
The Musical World,	List of Insolvent Ba
Correct Prices Current,	Discount and Exchan
Letters from Europe,	History,
The Classics,	Philosophy.

And all other matters discussed in a Univer Family Journal—furnishing altogether as va and, as we believe, as interesting a variety can be found in any other journal issued in world!

EMBRACING SUBJECTS FOR

Farmers,	Mechanics,
Tradesmen,	Artisans,
Merchants,	Men of Leisure,
Teachers,	Students,

And every Class of our Country.

The COURIER may always be DEPEND UPON, as nothing important is permitted escape a notice in its columns.

Our arrangements enable us to draw from t whole range of the current Literature of Euro and our Correspondents at home embrace ma of the best Writers of the country.

This approved Family Paper is strictly Neut in Politics and Religion, and the uncompro sing opponent of all Quackery.

POPULAR MUSIC.—In the Courier is i serted the music of the most popular Airs, So and Ballads, as soon as they are imported; that country readers may have the most popu music for voice, the piano, the guitar, or other instruments, as soon as published, which if paid separately would cost more than the price of s scription. This perfected arrangement is to found in no other journal of the kind.

☞The price of the COURIER is only $2

☞When individuals wish to subscribe to t Courier, a sure way is to enclose the money i letter, and direct it to us. The Postmast will probably politely remit, for we wish them all cases, if it meet their pleasure, to act as agents.

☞OUR TERMS.—Clubs of ten will be fi nished with ten papers for one year, (provid the money be sent us free of postage and c count,) for $15.

☞Ten Dollars will procure the sixth co gratis.

☞$5 at one time will be received for thr years.

☞Our friends, the Postmasters, will plea oblige by remitting arrearages and new subscri tions.

☞Any of our country brethren who ins our advertisement, will receive the Courier reg larly. 49.

Glass Manufactory.

THE subscriber having dissolved his conne ion with the former company, has taken t GLASS WORKS below town under his o management.

WINDOW GLASS, double and single, seizes, and of superior quality will be kept co stantly on hand for sale on reasonable terms The experience of the proprietor, in the man facture of the article, will insure all made to of the best quality. Call and see.

S. B. JOHNSON.
Zanesville, Ohio, May 6, 1840. 37

Notice.

ALL persons indebted to the late firm Hartley & Anderson, are earnestly requ ed to call at the Foundry and make settlemen as the change of owners makes this step ab lutely necessary. We ask the attention of persons concerned, to this notice.

J. J ANDERSON & Co.
Putnam, Jan. 1, 1840. (Jan. 29: 23.)

Dissolution.

THE partnership heretofore existing betwe S. B. Johnson and J. M. Kirkpatrick, u der the firm of S. B. Johnson & Co. was disso ed by mutual consent, on Thursday 19th inst.

S. B. JOHNSON,
J. M. KIRKPATRICK
Zanesville, March 31, 1840. 32tf

THE
WESTERN RECORDER
IS PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY.

☞The office of the Recorder is five an a half miles west of Zanesville.

TERMS.

1. The WESTERN RECORDER will be publis ed weekly, on an imperial sheet, at $2 00 p annum, in advance: $2 50 at the end of thr months; $3 00 at the end of the year.

2. No discontinuances will be allowed, e cept at the discretion of the publisher, until arrearages are paid.

3. To all ministers having regular pasto charges, who do any thing at all for the pap if they will direct us where, a copy shall be se gratis; any other who forward to us $10 for new subscribers, shall have six copies sent any address he may give.

4. All letters designed for the paper, must directed to "C. Springer, Meadow Farm, Mus ingum, Ohio."

5. A failure to notify a discontinuance b fore the expiration of the subscription year, w be considered a new engagement.

CHARACTER.—The pages of the WESTE RECORDER will be open to discussion on all m ral questions;—it will give articles on Lite ture, Mechanics, Agriculture,—an abstract Religious and Political intelligence, and wha ever may be interesting and instructive to fa ilies in general. A portion of its columns w be open to Advertisements and Prices Curre —another portion to sustain the interests of t Methodist Protestant Church in the West. These two latter objects will not likely occu more than one page.

The RECORDER will take a firm stand again Clerical Supremacy.

THE WESTERN RECORDER.

SPRINGER, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER. TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM IN ADVANCE.

Vol. 2. No. 1. ZANESVILLE, OHIO, WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 26, 1840. Whole No. 53.

JOHN W. WHITE, PRINTER. $2.50, IN THREE MONTHS; $3, END OF YEAR.

COMMUNICATIONS.

For the Western Recorder.

SALVATION.

reating salvation through Jesus Christ. ndition of man by nature—his condition tice—and his condition by regeneration; so the agency and means through which delivered from his lapsed state, and bro't vor and fellowship with God, all properly review.

he natural condition of mankind.—Man Morally debilitated—he is not able to is own responsibilities without divine aid out Christ he can do nothing. He is, 2d. my to God. "The carnal mind is enmity God; for it is not subject to the law of either indeed can be. So then, they that the flesh cannot please God. Rom. viii,

Those in the flesh are by the Apostle cted with those in the spirit. The mind s not spiritual, is necessarily at war with t is not subject to Him, neither can it be.

we have to contemplate man as an active and here we shall find that, 3d. "Man stray from his youth." Like lost sheep, d have wandered far from God: They gone out of the way: There is none eth good, no not one. Mankind (unregen are enemies to God by wicked works: trespasses and sins. The wrath of God led from heaven against all unrighteousmen. Such then is the moral condition ace, apart from grace. But God so loved ld that He gave His only begotten Son osoever believeth on Him might not perhave everlasting life. When there was to pity, nor arm to save, the Lord had pon us, and His own arm brought salvahe condition of man as regenerated.—And, is able through Christ who strengthens do all things. Though mental and moral is felt, yet God requires nothing more can do through His grace; for He says, ace shall be sufficient for thee." 2d. The mind is destroyed: the enmity is slain: y of sin is put off: the old man is put off new man is put on, which is renewed in ghteousness and true holiness. The mind d and heavenly. The affection is placed gs above. The spirit of God which "is wells in him; it strengthens him; it sanctim; it guides him into truth; it makes ssion for him with groanings which cannot ered; the life which the christian lives is in the son of God; he is dead and his id with Christ in God; when Christ, who fe, shall appear, then shall he appear also im in glory. The mental and moral pow- clearer, energized and sweetly drawn to The affections are regulated and strongly d on things above; the soul thirsts and s after righteousness. All its powers act dience to God.

t a contrast between the fallen and re- state of man! In the first, we contem- him in all the degradation of an offcast od; in the second, in all the excellence ory of an heir of God, living in His favor, ect of his special regard, upon whom God His love, of whom He says: he that h you toucheth the apple of mine eye. father pitieth his children, so the Lord them that fear Him.

agency and means by which man is raised s fallen state, now come properly under ration. Through the atoning blood of mankind are delivered, 1st. From that s and imbecile state which all come into orld in. None will be sent to hell because re depraved and fallen beings by nature. has redeemed us from the curse of the law, ace abundantly flows to all, as they arrive s of accountability, by which they may od and serve Him acceptably; on this men are guilty in the sight of God, and s alone. And, 2d. From the guilt of sin. gh the blood of Christ and through it alone, s have grace by which they may turn to d find mercy. Salvation is by grace.

provision being made, what more is requiAnswer, 1st. The spirit of God must its assistance by first convincing of sin. 2d. In regenerating the soul: for, unless be born of the spirit he cannot see the m of God. But the agency of the spirit sufficient without our own; we must be kers with God; we must work out our own on with fear and trembling; for it is God orketh within us both to will and to do of od pleasure. What then have we to do? r, 1st. We must repent of sin. Repents absolutely necessary in order to forgive- f sin; the Apostles testified repentance God, &c., which accord with the words ist to His disciples, "thus it is written hus it behooved Christ to suffer," &c., and epentance and remission of sins should be ed in His name among all nations; and Christ says, except ye repent ye shall all se perish; and more, Jesus came into Gal- preaching the gospel of the kingdom of and saying time is fulfilled and the kingdom d is at hand, repent ye and believe the . Repentance is not barely a resolution ake sin—nor barely the forsaking of sin. ore properly a heart broken for sin, accom- with godly sorrow, and loathing and ab- of sin, which produces an intermission to Repentance is an internal moral revolu- the fruits of repentance are abstaining in and forsaking the ways of disobedience. 2d. Cleaving unto and walking in his com- ments: these are fruits meet for repentance. e scriptures above quoted prove the neces- f repentance; the reasonableness and pro- of repentance will be seen from the fol- g considerations: 1st. The sins for which we must repent have been committed against light and knowledge; as we have wilfully and knowingly broke God's commandments, we ought of our own accord to confess our sins and sue for pardon; propriety and reason require repentand. 2d. Sin is evidence of enmity against God; this wicked disposition must be slain; while it is unsubdued, the sinner cannot with reason and propriety be pardoned. Repentance and remission of sins are closely and inseparably connected.

3d. We must believe in the Lord Jesus Christ. He that believeth not the Son shall not see life—he that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life—without faith it is impossible to please God, for he that cometh to God must believe that He is and that He is a rewarder of them that seek Him,—whatsoever is not of faith is sin.—These scriptures show the absolute necessity of faith, in order to remission of sins. Saving faith or believing with a heart unto righteousness may be defined, a sure confidence and trust in the promises of God through Christ, by which we are enabled to cast our burdens on the Lord, with the assurance that He will sustain us. Though repentance is mentioned first, yet faith must be mixed with all we do, or it will be sin. It is necessary that we repent in order that we may exercise faith, or have assurance in God; for while the heart is at enmity with God, there can be no cordial, delightful trust in Him. From much reflection on this subject, and the notices of sacred writ, we are led to the following conclusion; to wit: That repentance and faith stand inseparably connected, and that it is as impossible to separate them or exercise one without the other, as it is for the body to live after the soul has left it. Faith and works (or repentance) depend as much upon each other in the work of salvation, as life does upon the union of soul and body. When repentance and faith are united in their native character, they unite the soul to Christ; deliverance from sin, and all the blessings of the new and everlasting covenant flow freely to the soul. THEOPHILUS.

For the Western Recorder.

Dear Br. Springer: I was one of the number who left the Methodist Episcopal Church in 1828, in this place. Though our number was small, say between ninety and one hundred, at that time, we have increased to between four and five hundred. We have a fine brick chapel in which to worship, and as a church, we live very happy together. We have been saved from that contentious spirit which is the bane of religious prosperity. Though we attend to the moral character of our people, we have not had more than two church trials since our organization. Our motto is harmony, and our watchword is onward, relying upon the Great Head of the church for success.

Meantime, I have not been an idle spectator of the movements of our leading men, some of whom appear to think that our success depends entirely upon some mighty effort of theirs.—Others appear to be disposed to interrupt our harmony by the introduction of exciting discussions, such as politics, abolition, &c. I have been a regular reader of the Western Recorder from its commencement, and am much pleased with it in the general. Tho' I am of opinion it would be much more acceptable and useful if the exciting topics of the day were left out of its columns. As a church, we are composed of Masons and Anti-Masons, Abolitionists and Anti-Abolitionists. Some of our best men are found on both sides of the great political questions of the day. It would be well for our ministers to be very guarded on these exciting topics. When they come to the polls let them exercise the rights of suffrage, according to their honest convictions, but on other occasions, let them refrain from meddling with subjects over which they can exercise so little control, and which is calculated to make to themselves enemies and injure the cause they would promote.

I have read the essays of J. SMITH, in reply to Messrs. Dalbey and Clarke, and although I approve of the course the former recommends, yet I heartily regret that they are wasting their precious time with such investigations as these. If this time were only spent in visiting from house to house, instilling the great principles of the New Testament, after the example of Mr. Wesley, how much better it would be for the church.

Some of our folks seem to indicate that unless their opinions are swallowed it will be impossible for us to live; and that without their services the Great Founder of truth and justice could not carry on His plans. They ought to recollect that we all have our peculiar TASTES, and that there is no getting along agreeably unless we treat each others opinions with due courtesy. The following anecdote is applicable to the subject: It bears that at a large party there was present a Frenchman and a Yankee. The Frenchman rose at the table and addressing the company, said, "gentlemen and ladies, I am fond of pepper, and I suppose you are all fond of pepper," so he scattered the contents of the pepper box into the soup dish. At which, uncle Jonathan's son rose and remarked, "gentlemen and ladies, I am fond of snuff, and I suppose you are all fond of snuff," at the same time scattering the contents of his snuff box into the same dish. It is easy to conceive that here was a dish which no body liked.

Now, if brethren will only be satisfied that each man shall spice his own dish, and not assume to force upon his neighbor's appetite that which it rejects, our harmonious operations would be greatly promoted. Persons do honestly differ, I have no doubt, on all these exciting questions, and we should pay due deference to each others opinions. Let us attend to the cause which the order of Providence has called us to serve with harmonious effort.

Respectfully, yours,
M. M. LAUGHLIN.

Steubenville, Ohio, August 12, 1840.

For the Western Recorder.

Mr. Editor: An editorial article appeared in the South Western Christian Advocate of Aug. 8th, 1840, headed "ALLEN M. SCOTT," who, the writer (Thomas Stringfield,) says, "writes a long letter to the editor of the Western Recorder, from Evansville, Arkansas, that he has joined the M. P. Church." The ostensible object of this article was to traduce the character of the individual named, but the secret purpose, doubtless, was, a thrust at you and the paper you edit, and to disparage the Methodist Protestant Church. I am not the apologist of A. M. Scott, but from a knowledge of facts, and my connexion with that respectable body, the "M. P. Church," I feel bound to repel the foul aspersion. The editor speaks of "one of his (A. M. Scott's) besetting sins," and adopts the chaste adage, "what's bred in the bone is hard to get out of the flesh."—"They that live in glass houses should not throw stones," is another adage, and what he applies to Mr. Scott comes with an ill grace from him, as those who know his origin and his "besetting sins" could testify. Three of his besetting sins are disclosed in this article. First, recklessness of truth—he says, that Mr. Scott "writes a long letter to the editor of the Western Recorder," &c., whereas the "long letter" is only copied into the Western Recorder from the Baltimore Visitor, and the credit given! Second, a "busy body in other men's matters,"—what call had he to meddle with private character, "business," a "long letter," or the "M. P. Church?" Third, recklessness of character. Who in Tennessee has not recognized this "besetting sin?" and the wholesale scandal contained in this article, is but a repetition of that unfortunate foible. "Apostate Methodist preacher"—"shameful apostacy," &c., are hard sayings, and appear with an ill-grace in a "Christian" Advocate, unsupported by evidence, and resting on the mere epsi dixit of one accustomed to calumniate. In 1837 Allen M. Scott was the editor and proprietor of a political paper, published in Brownsville, West Tennessee. Thomas Stringfield wrote and sent an article, containing libellous matter, against L. Garrett, to be published in that paper, over a ficticious signature—bare-faced falsehoods. I wrote to Mr. Scott demanding the author, and he sent me the original, with "Thomas Stringfield, editor S. W. C. Advocate" signed under the word "private!" Here is the proof.

Mr. Scott may have "one besetting sin," or more, which he "would do well to leave off," for aught I know, and his calumniator might do well to remember the "mote" and the "beam," and take the advice he gives. Mr. Scott may have "old accounts" that "he would do well to settle up," and surely intends to do so, if he has it in his power.—but this is neither my business nor Mr. Stringfield's. If "such men should impose themselves upon the Reformers"—is the M. E. Church exempt from similar impositions? Might not this editor find cases near home? But Mr. Scott joined the M. P. Church—this provoked the editor's ire, disturbed the equanimity of his placid temper, and stirred the choleric spirit of intolerance. But "bitter epistles make their appearance in their periodicals." Truth is sometimes bitter to the lovers of self-complacency,—and are the periodicals of the M. E. Church free from bitter epistles, and more bitter and uncharitable editorials? "Thou that condemnest another condemnest thou not thyself?" A. M. Scott's "long letter," copied into the Western Recorder, (not written to its editor as T. S. asserts,) whatever the writer has been, or may be, no good man would censure. It speaks in the most respectful terms of the M. E. Church, and of her ministry in days gone by, and breathes a spirit as diverse from that of the article in question, as is the spirit of Christ from the spirit of belial. Evil speaking, or circulating detraction, is the unworthy means resorted to by some now in office and power, to destroy a doomed object, or to injure a young branch of the church honestly protesting against arbitrary power, and aiming to do good. This is more like the spirit of the "mother of harlots," "heretofore unfelt,"—than the spirit of Him who said, "forbid him not."

L. GARRETT.

Nashville, Tenn., August 9, 1840.

For the Western Recorder.

TO TIMOTHY.

Question, 1st. When was the church of Christ established?

Answer. The first account we have of the church is in Acts, 1st chapter, 14th and 15th verses. We first find them in an upper room,—male and female, and it is stated that these all continued with one accord in prayer and supplication with the women; and the number was about an hundred and twenty. Here we have the church, the number and its practice, a prayer meeting of both sex, and Peter standing up and preaching to them.

Q. 2d. Does membership obtain in Christ's church by birthright?

A. No. We will call Br. Timothy's attention to Matthew, 12th chapter and 50th verse. For whosoever shall do the will of my Father which is in heaven, the same is brother, and sister, and mother.

Q. 3d. Does God promise salvation to sinners without the precincts of Christ's church?

A. We call the brother's attention again to Acts, 2d chapter and 21st verse. And it shall (positively) come to pass that whosoever (no distinction) shall call on the name of the Lord shall be saved. A DISCIPLE.

Questions.—1st. Is God the moving cause of man's salvation? 2d. Is Christ the procuring cause of man's salvation? 3d. And the spirit of God the efficient cause? 4th. And faith the instrumental cause of man's salvation?

DISCIPLE.

For the Western Recorder.

MY LOG-CABIN.

Respectfully dedicated to Adam Peters, Whig, by James M. Fulton, a States Right Man.

There are associations of ideas that are often affecting in the highest degree, and frequently like seed which is committed to a well prepared soil; we are still more sensibly affected from the state of our minds when those ideas occur. After a lapse of ten years—after a boundless diversity of situations and circumstances, I the other day passed by my old log cabin in the woods. When I went there I was blessed with a wife and three children, the objects of my care and the subjects of my greatest solicitude. But that care and that solicitude were not then so intense as youthful buoyancy of mind and activity of body, with a means of supporting them commensurate with their wants, prevented any thing arising in the mind of a very painful character to interrupt my enjoyments or mar my happiness. A great change of circumstances has since come over me. I had become the parent of eight children. I had been buffetted by adversity. I had tried various experiments to procure an honest living for a large and helpless family, and in conformity with my romantic inclinations, was now in an entirely new occupation, wandering round from place to place.

When I first occupied this cabin it was new, having been lately built of green shell-bark hickory logs, floored with puncheons, daubed with mud, and covered with slabs. But what was my astonishment to find what the lapse of ten years had effected upon my cabin. The puncheons had been taken up and carried away, the slabs which formed the loft had been taken down and piled in one corner of the cabin together, and that part of the chimney which is ordinarily built of small sticks had been entirely thrown down. The large flat stones that leaned against the back wall and the sides of the chimney, and a joist blazed with an axe in a peculiar manner, were the only objects that remained which retained any thing of a familiar appearance. The logs were so decayed as to assume even an ancient aspect, and the whole, to a naturally pensive mind, was impressive of the deepest melancholy. I began to think of my former corner of an evening, and that of my wife and many little amusements of ourselves and our little ones, which then occupied our time after the labors and cares of the day were over. But every thing was still, every thing was silent. There was no human voice heard in the cabin, and not even a breeze of wind that might have agitated the surrounding forest to mitigate the lonesomeness of the scene, or divert in the slightest degree the melancholy of my spirit. A thought amid the silence stole across my mind, which I trust will be of service to me in after life. This cabin, thought I, is a true representation of the decayed vigor and youthful activity of him by whom it was once inhabited. We shall soon, like this old mansion, be gone entirely to waste, our youthful strength and activity be altogether exhausted, and like it all our powers will fall piece-meal into neglect and decay. But still there is a contrast as well as a similitude.—In one respect we are vastly superior to this old mansion. We shall be rebuilt after a divine model and of enduring materials, that shall feel no decay from age, no blight from time, no defacement from winds or storms or rains. And though like it we are now beat upon by the tempest and scathed by the lightnings of heaven, yet then we shall be entirely free from all the ills of this troublesome and toilsome life, grow in strength, and rise in glory in vigor and in immortality.

Zanesville, August, 1840.

THE CATACOMBS OF PARIS.—These immense excavations extend under a considerable part of the capital, and they have no doubt furnished its building materials since the earliest times. They are no longer worked, because the streets and many of the houses having been undermined, the surface of the ground as well as buildings occasionally fell in, and the government felt it necessary to check the farther progress of the evil. Pillars have been constructed in the most exposed situations, and as it is some time since I have heard of any accident, I presume there are no further apprehensions.—The entrance is secured, and admittance is obtained with some difficulty! for in Europe the public authorities are more careful of life than we are, and persons having been separated from the guides have become lost and perished in this vast field of the dead. What end can be more frightful! To wander in this immense charnel-house, surrounded by the most revolting emblemns of mortality, to perish in the midst of departed generations, is terrible indeed. The bones are all arranged with horrible symmetry.—Pillar after pillar, and wall after wall, of arms and legs and ribs, hedge in the visitor, and form a narrow path, along which he follows the guide in impressive silence. And as the torches which are carried, and which alone light up these regions impenetrable to day, shed their feeble and flickering rays upon these sad memorials of humanity, the scene is painful beyond description. And then come the columns of skulls, and you may almost fancy, as the fitful light strikes them, that they are grinning upon you with diabolical malice. The whole cavern resembles the Valley of the Shadow of Death, so powerfully described by the prophet, rendered still more strange by the display of a kind of taste in the arrangement of the materials. I breathed freer when the portal of this great tomb closed behind me.—Hon. Mr. Cass in Democratic Review.

From the Montreal Herald.

ROBERT BURNS' BIBLE.

We had in our possession on Saturday the identical pair of Bibles presented by the immortal Burns to the dearest object of his affections, Highland Mary, on the banks of the winding Ayr, when he spent with her "one day of parting love."—They are in remarkably good preservation, and belong to a descendant of the family of Mary's mother, Mrs. Campbell, whose property they became on the death of her daughter, and subsequently Mrs. Anderson, Mary's only surviving sister, acquired them. The circumstance of the Bible being in two volumes, seemed at one time to threaten its dismemberment. Mrs. Anderson having presented a volume to each of her daughters; but on their approaching marriage, their brother William prevailed on them to dispose of the sacred volumes to him. On the first blank leaf of the first volume is written, in the hand writing of the immortal bard, "And ye shall not swear by my name falsely—I am the Lord. Levit. 19th chap. 12th verse:" and on the corresponding leaf of the second volume, "Thou shalt not forswear thyself, but shalt perform unto the Lord thine oath. Matth. 5th chap. 33d verse." On the second blank leaf of each volume there are the remains of "Robert Burns, Mossgiel," in his handwriting, beneath which is drawn a masonic emblem. At the end of the first volume there is a lock of Highland Mary's hair.

There is a mournful interest attached to these sacred volumes—sacred from their contents, and sacred from having been a pledge of love from the most gifted of Scotland's bards to the artless object of his affections; from whom he was separating, no more to meet on this side the grave. The life of Burns was full of romance, but there is not one circumstance in it so romantic and full of interest as those which attended and followed the gift of these volumes. He was young when he wooed and won the affections of Mary, whom he describes "as a warm-hearted, charming young creature as ever blessed man with generous love."—The attachment was mutual, and forms the subject of many of his earlier lyrics, as well as of the productions of his later years, which shows that it was very deep rooted. Before he was known to fame, steeped in poverty to the very dregs, and meditating an escape to the West Indies from the remorseless fangs of a hard-hearted creditor, he addressed to his "dear girl" the song which begins

"Will ye go to the Indies, my Mary,
And leave auld Scotia's shore,
Will ye go to the Indies, my Mary,
And cross the Atlantic's roar?"

But neither Burns nor his Mary were doomed to "cross the Atlantic's roar," nor to realize those dreams of mutual bliss which passion or enthusiasm had engendered in their youthful imaginations. Burns was called to Edinburgh, there to commence his career of fame which was to terminate in chill poverty, dreary disappointment and dark despair; while Mary's happier lot, after a transient gleam of sunshine of life, was to be removed to a better and happier world. Her death shed a sadness over his whole future life, and a spirit of subdued grief and tenderness was displayed whenever she was the subject of his conversation or writings. Witness, as follows:

"Ye banks an' braes an' streams around
The castle o' Montgomery,
Green be your woods, and fair your flowers,
Your waters never drumlie;
There simmer first unfauld her robes,
An' there they langest tarry,
For there I took the last fareweel
O' my sweet Highland Mary!"

In a note appended to this song, Burns says:—"This was a composition of mine in my early life, before I was known at all to the world. My Highland lassie was a warm-hearted, charming young creature as ever blessed a man with generous love. After a pretty long trial of the most ardent reciprocal affection, we met by appointment on the second Sunday of May, in a sequestered spot on the banks of the Ayr, where we spent a day in taking a farewell before she would embark for the West Highlands, to arrange matters among her friends for our projected change of life. At the close of the autumn following, she crossed the sea to meet me at Greenock, where she was seized with a malignant fever, which hurried my dear girl to her grave in a few days, before I could even hear of her illness."

It was at this romantic and interesting meeting on the banks of the Ayr that the Bibles before us were presented to Mary; and he must have a heart of stone indeed who can gaze on them without his imagination calling up feelings in his bosom too big for utterance. On that spot they exchanged Bibles, and plighted their faith to each other, the stream dividing them, and the sacred book grasped by both over its purling waters. This was the only token of affection each had to give the other, and the wealth of Indies could not have procured a better or more appropriate one.

In Lockhart's life of Burns we are informed that several years after the death of Mary, on the anniversary of the day which brought him the melancholy intelligence, he appeared, as the twilight advanced, (in the language of his widow,) "very sad about something;" and though the evening was a cold and keen one in September, he wandered in the barn yard, from which the entreaties of his wife could not for some time recall him. To these entreaties he always promised obedience, but the promises were but the lip-kindness of affection, no sooner made than forgotten, for his eye was fixed on Heaven, and his unceasing stride indicated that his heart was there. Mrs. Burn's last approach to the barn yard found him stretched on a mass of straw, looking abstractedly on a planet which in a clear starry sky, "shone like another moon," and having prevailed on him to return into the house, he instantly wrote, as they still stand, the following sublime verses, "To Mary in Heaven," which have thrilled through many eyes, and which will live the noblest of the lyrics of Burns, while sublimity and pathos have a responding charm in the hearts of Scotsmen.

TO MARY IN HEAVEN.

Thou lingering star, with less'ning ray,
That lov'st to greet the early morn,
Again thou usher'st in the day,
My Mary from my soul was torn.

O Mary! dear departed shade!
Where is thy place of blissful rest?
See'st thou thy lover lowly laid?
Hear'st thou the groans that rend his breast?

That sacred hour can I forget,
Can I forget the hollowed grove,
Where by the winding Ayre we met,
To live one day of parting love?

Eternity will not efface
Those records dear of transports past;
Thy image at our last embrace,
Ah! little thought we 'twas our last!

Ayr gurgling kiss'd his pebbled shore,
O'erhung with wild woods, thick'ning green;
The fragrant birch, and hawthorn hoar,
Twin'd am'rous round the raptur'd scene.

The flowers sprang wanton to be prest,
The birds sang love on every spray,
Till soon, too soon the glowing West,
Proclaim'd the speed of winged day.

Still o'er these scenes my mem'ry wakes,
And fondly broods with miser care!
Time but the impression deeper makes,
As streams their channels deeper wear.

My Mary, dear departed shade!
Where is thy blissful place of rest?
See'st thou thy lover lowly laid?
Hear'st thou the groans that rend his breast?

The Bible is, as we said before, the property of a descendant of Mrs. Campbell, the mother of Mary, who lives in Upper Canada, who is in such reduced circumstances that she has sent the invaluable heirloom to this city for the purpose of disposing of it. Of its genuineness we have not the slightest doubt, as we have, times without number, seen original letters from Burns, and the writing on the Bible corresponds exactly with that on the letters we have seen. It is to be deplored that stern necessity should decree the separation of such a tribute of the affection of one of the noblest of hearts that ever graced humanity from the family of the early object of that affection, and that the token of an attachment which almost ennobles the family of Mary Campbell, must fall into the hands of a stranger; but since such must be the case, we hope the Natural History Society will not allow such a valuable relic to become private property. We have merely to add that we will be happy to negotiate with any parties who may feel inclined to purchase the Bible.

ERUPTION OF FISHES.—Baron Humboldt gives an account of a wonderful eruption of fishes that sometimes take place from the volcanoes of Quito. These fishes are ejected in the internal of the igneous eruptions in such quantities as to occasion putrid fevers by the miasmata they produce. They sometimes issue from the crater of the volcano, and sometimes from a lateral cliff, but constantly at the elevation of between two and three thousand toises above the level of the sea. Millions are seen to descend from Cotopaxi with great masses of cold and fresh water. As they do not appear to be disfigured or mutilated, they cannot be exposed to the action of great heat. Humboldt thought they were identical with fishes that were found in the rivulets at the foot of the volcanoes, and to which he assigns the name of Eimelodus Cyclopum.

WOMEN'S OPINIONS.—Women are slower to change their opinions than men, exactly because they are adopted on less consideration. Man's opinions are founded on reason, and if you convince his reason, the opinion goes with it; but women's are founded on feeling, and, therefore, part of themselves, and not easy to change. Men derive theirs from without, women from within. With our sex they are but adopted children; with the other, their own.

"Pa," said a little fellow the other day, "wasn't Job an editor?" "Why, Sammy?" "Because the Bible says that he had much trouble, and was a man of sorrow all the days of his life!"

WESTERN RECORDER.

ZANESVILLE:

WEDNESDAY, ... AUGUST 26, 1840.

ELECTIONS.

Alabama.—The Charleston (S. C.) Mercury, of the 15th instant, states that this State, as far as heard from, stood:

Democrats.		Whig.
Senate, ... 20	Senate, ...	13
House, ... 45	House, ...	46

Illinois and Missouri.—There are still contradictory statements in reference to the way these States have gone. The majorities must be lean, let them go for whom they may.

The Lady's Book for September has been received, and presents a choice table of contents for its numerous readers.

CONTENTS—ORIGINAL.

The "Black Knight's Ride," or Clare of Cleaves; a Legend of the Castle of Ehrenbreitstein, by Prof. J. H. Ingraham.
Education.
Tarpeia, by Miss Juliet H. Lewis.
The Fate of the Gifted, by Mrs. E. F. Ellet.
Washington, by Miss Eliza Cook, of London.
Advice-Giving, by Mrs. Volney E. Howard.
My Father, by Mrs. Lydia H. Sigourney.
The Cripple's Dream; a Legend of the Fifth Century, by the author of Mariam, &c.
The Wife's Lament, by T. H. Cushman.
Eoline; or the Wind Spirit, by Chas. Beecher.
The Philosophy of Autumn, by Prof. W. J. Walter.
The Village Bride, by Mrs. Emma C. Embury.
The Sea Eagle's Fall, by Miss Hannah F. Gould.
The Caught, Uncaught, by Henry F. Harrington.
Sketch of Madame Feller, by Mrs. Sarah J. Hale.
Ideas.
Memories, by J. L. McJilton.
The Voices of My Home, by Miss C. H. Waterman.
To R. P*, by Mrs. E. N. Gamble.
Butterflies.
Music—To the Prairie I'll Fly Not. In answer to "Oh! Fly to the Prairie," written and composed for the Lady's Book, by W. G. Brinckle, M. D.
Fairmount, by Miss Catharine L. Brooke.
Editors' Table.
To Correspondents.
Editors' Book Table.
Publisher's Notices.
Embellishments—Fairmount Waterworks—Original Large Sized Steel Engraving.
Colored Fashions—Four Figures.

Fanny Elssler.—The eastern papers have been, for some time past, full of notices of a foreigner named Fanny Elssler, who has been performing her feats at dancing in New York, Philadelphia and Baltimore. We have heretofore studiously avoided saying any thing on the subject, and only now allude to it, with a view of recording one of the most remarkable and detestable instances of human folly and degradation that our nature is capable of. At her performances, in each of these cities, all kind of restraint and decency were thrown off, and the most extravagant enthusiasm indulged. And, in several instances the young men took the horses from her carriage and hauled the lady to her hotel. If the hundreth part of this excitement had been manifested by christians in the worship of God, these very people, no doubt, would censure it as very criminal enthusiasm. It is creditable, however, to the papers in these cities, that they bear a very decided testimony against these contemptible follies. The Philadelphia Courier of the 15th instant, remarks:

Until the present time, we could scarcely find ourselves cool enough, whenever we reflected upon the ridiculous conduct of certain individuals in New York, Philadelphia and Baltimore, in regard to the danseuse Mademoiselle Fanny Elssler, to pen our indignant feelings. We hope that we love our country and our countrymen; but we must say that we look upon that portion of them, who fawn and crouch about this foreign dancer, in such a way as to show that they have lost all attributes of manliness and respect for themselves, with the most unmitigated disgust. To think, for a moment, that in a free country, any body of persons calling themselves men could so contemptibly sink down, as to place themselves (instead of jackasses) in the fills of Fanny Elssler's carriage, and draw her from the theatre to her hotel, is enough to make any one almost ashamed of his species; certainly of all of those who could have so prostrated themselves in menial servility.

We take this occasion to inform our good friends in the country, that the low, debasing, disgusting toadyism of men's tackling themselves up in the harness of her donkeys, meets with nothing but what it deserves from every sensible man, woman and child in this city, viz: utter loathing and detestation. All unite in saying with Shakspeare,

"Now, what a thing it is to be an ass."

It cannot be denied—nor have we any disposition to do so—that many persons made themselves very foolish, at the Chesnut st. Theatre, during the late engagement of Fanny Elssler, who are ordinarily entitled very staid folk. If they were pleased with her dancing (which we would naturally have supposed) it was all very well. They had a perfect right to express their approbation in a proper way. But in our opinion—and in the opinion of all cool-minded and common sense people we have heard speak upon the subject—the showering of boquets of flowers, the throwing of wreaths, the standing up all around the boxes to "shout nine cheers for Fanny," the riding her out of town in a carriage and four, and all that sort of thing, was too silly and too debasing for descent people to be engaged in. If Fanny had been a Howard, whose life had been devoted to relieving the distresses of the poor and destitute—if she had been a Hannah More, who wrote lessons of virtue that shall live in the affections of coming ages—if she had been an Edgworth, whose prolific pen has adorned the literature of her own and that of all other countries—if she had been a Sedgwick, a Sigourney, a Leslie, a Hale, a Hentz, a Stephens, or a host of others of our fair country-women, whose pictures of life have done and are doing much to make life more happy and more glorious—then, aye, then, we too would have taken off our cap and joined in the shouts as most richly deserved and honorably won.

Says the Baltimore Clipper, she having been recently performing in that city:

"Fanny Elssler! yea, nothing but Fanny Elssler. Holiday street Theatre groaned with the weight of the thousands squeezed within its walls, and echoed to the thunders of approbation showered upon Mad'lle Fanny. Perfumed exquisites said it was "dem'd foine;" young clerks thumped canes to pieces; parvenues peered through their lorgnettes; very young ladies cried "Oh ma!" and the men of taste whispered to themselves beautiful!

"The end of all this was, as usual, the showering of boquets upon the stage! the crowning of Mad'lle Fanny with a very beautiful laurel wreath! and then not content with all this, that most foolish custom of calling out was insisted upon. Here is Mad'lle Fanny's speech.

"Ladies and gentlemen; If I could—speak, well—Anglais,—I should tell you how much proud I feel—I am very much happy to see so many warm hearts,"—and then with inimitable niavette "for little time I shall stay with you!"

The Baltimore Sun very appropriately remarks:

Our anticipations of popular enthusiasm and consequent folly (from the visit of Elssler to Baltimore) have been far more than realized; common sense and common decency have gone into retirement, insanity has found its climax, and degradation its lowest depth; the beauty and loveliness of our city have been induced to lend their countenance to one, and some of our young men have sunk into the other. And shall we be silent in view of these things, while five hundred dollars are paid nightly to the woman who produced them, and this too at a time of admitted depression of business, even to the point of distress? And this extravagant folly is carried out into full practice, at a time when, we believe, five dollars could not be raised among those engaged in it, to save the widow and the orphan from starvation, or to rescue virtue, rendered desperate by destitution, from the jaws of destruction. Folly like this is too serious and grave in its character to be treated lightly; and as we would rather be charged with a want of taste by the silly votaries of fashion, than of common sense and humanity by the wise and good, we choose to follow the dictates of our own judgment rather than the suggestions of a wild enthusiasm, and most emphatically condemn the whole of the proceedings and all their discreditable, degrading and demoralizing consequences.

Serenade to Fanny Elssler—Disgraceful Mob.—In pursuance to an arrangement previously made, a full, complete and large orchestral company of German musicians, selected from the accomplished artists, amateur and professional, of that nation who are among that portion of our foreign adopted citizens, assembled last evening, in front of the American Hotel, to serenade their fair countrywoman, Fanny Elssler. She had performed last evening in the favorite Tarantula to a magnificent house, at the Park, crowded to the dome, and we never saw an audience more delighted, and Fanny more ethereal and gay in her exquisite pirouetting, which terminated in the admired Cracovienne, in which, as usual, her winning, artful manner drew down continued applause, and closed with her coming out to the call, and receiving some tributary chaplets. The serenade of her German friends was to be a pleasant sequal, and there never was a more delicious evening for it, the moon beamed so brightly, and the air was so serene and mild, compared with the late excessive heats.

As it was generally understood through the city that a brilliant corps of German musicians were to execute symphonies under the windows of Fanny's apartments at the American, and all our city familiarly knew, from their proverbial talent exhibited in our military bands, that they would give something of a high order on this occasion, a great crowd, probably some 1000 to 1500 persons, some of them ladies in carriages and omnibusses, gathered in Broadway and Barclay streets, between the American and Astor, the boarders of both which large establishments crowded the windows to enjoy the treat. It was observed that the collection of persons far exceeded what could have been anticipated, including some 2000 to 5000 in the Park, and composed evidently of a very rowdy description of individuals.

At one o'clock, Dixon of the Polyanthos, who has been lately serving out a term in the Penitentiary, addressed to the mob in an inflammatory speech, in which he abused the foreigners, and spoke disrespectfully of Fanny Elssler, and said they had never serenaded Edwin Forrest! It seems that this was the offence which these artists had innocently committed, and he thus incited the mob to commit violence. By this time the musicians had arrived, and were quietly proceeding to arrange their music stands and torches, and had just commenced a beautiful strain in the presence of thousands of anxious listeners, when a fraction of about fifty or sixty soap locks moved down the side walk, on pretence of hearing the music more advantageously, and by one concerted move rushed in the circle and commenced a furious onslaught on the musicians, seizing their instruments, and breaking them over their heads, and dispersing the astonished artistes. So sudden was the attack, and so quickly was it finished, that it was impossible to identify the rioters. They then collected the fragments and burnt them in the most shameful manner—and only one police officer was on the ground.—N. Y. Star.

M'Kee's Rock Three Miles below Pittsburgh.—On the hill top above the rocks, there is a small space of ground where the War Dance and the Council Fires were held. About 100 feet from the brow, there is an ancient Indian Mound 25 or 30 feet high, on the top of which are several large forest trees, including a huge oak, supposed to be one hundred years old. There may have been hundreds and perhaps thousands of Indians buried here from time immemorial, as this is a peculiar spot where the untutored sons of the forest believed the Great Spirit resided.

About ten years ago some men were procuring stone here for the Allegheny Aqueduct, and in blasting and removing the rocks, found a large number of human bones in the crevices. Many anecdotes are told by early settlers about this secluded and solemn spot, but we will introduce only one. A long time ago one of the M'Kee family, with his blanket on and rifle in hand, was suddenly surprised on the Rocks by a hostile party of Indians, who perhaps had returned to visit their favorite ground; and he had just time to slip over the rocks and secrete himself; as it was late in the evening they did not find him, and supposed he was drowned. They kindled their fire, and were sitting round it, and perhaps getting a little sleepy, when M'Kee, to save his life, had only one way to escape from his hiding place, and that was to take them by surprise, and pass right through their company; and this he effected in the twinkling of an eye. As they supposed he was drowned, they thought, in the quickness and boldness of his movements, that it was his ghost, until he passed beyond danger and escaped. Mr. James M'Kee settled upon this farm upwards of 60 years ago, and he and a number of his family, neighbors and friends, lie buried in the Grave Yard in this place, just behind the old Indian Mound. Two of his sons, Thomas and Alexander, live on the farm near the rocks.—Harris' Intelligencer.

Cold Heartlessness.—Between the hours of eleven and twelve o'clock, the big dark cloud that had been frowning upon us from the mountain's brow, burst in a torrent upon our city, deluging our streets, and causing the hapless wight who had not been warned of its near approach, to flee for shelter to the next friendly door or gateway, while our comfortable gentry peeped out at their windows, admiring the sublimity of the scene. But beneath the pitless pelting of the storm sat the disconsolate widowed immigrant and five helpless orphans; the youngest a wasted skeleton, lay on its mother's breast, apparently breathing its last; a sixth was stretched by her side, in the silent embraces of death. Their thin clothes, (perhaps their only ones) were completely drenched by the falling shower. The big tears that rolled down the mother's cheeks as she bent over the little sufferer to shade it from the rain, spoke in silent eloquence of the depth of that grief that preyed upon her heart.

The following is an abridgment of her tale of woe:—A few days after their arrival at Quebec she was doomed to follow to the grave her dearest earthly protector. Penniless and friendless, Mrs. Stockdale conceived her wrechedness now consummated. Through the kindness of Dr. Douglas of Quebec, a passage is procured for her on board the Eagle steamer, to Montreal. Doctor D. also informed her that he had made arrangements with the Captain of the boat to supply her and her children with food on the way, but on making application to Captain Thomas, instead of receiving as she supposed, her necessary food, she received a volley of curses, and was driven away, and had it not been that some of the children had got a small loaf given to them in Quebec they would have died of starvation on the passage. The Eagle arrived in Montreal between seven and eight o'clock last evening, and early this morning Mrs. Stockdale and her children were thrust ashore, where they remained in the manner already described till after eleven o'clock.—Montreal Herald.

Railroad Accident.—A singular accident occurred on the Eastern Railroad, near Salem, a few days since. A gentleman was walking on the road, regardless of danger, when his ideas were aroused by the near approach of the train. With much presence of mind he threw himself upon the central part of the road and permitted the cars to pass over him, but when the engine come over him, which was not connected with the cars, his fright was so great that he attempted to rush between the wheels. He was caught most cruelly in the attempt and the tip of his nose was shaved off as clean as if done by a razor.

The Way of the Thief is Hard.—Last Wednesday night, a gentleman sleeping in a house in Pittsburg, had his purse, containing two thousand and seven dollars, abstracted from a pocket in his clothes, and no knowledge whatever was possessed of the thief; but information of the theft, and descriptions of the money, were sent to the different police offices in the various cities by the authorities of Pittsburg, the Mayor of which city offered three hundred dollars as a reward for the apprehension of the thief and the return of the money. A day or two ago, Mr. Downer, of the City Police, saw a note which had been passed away, corresponding to one of those which had been stolen. This, combined with other circumstances, induced him to suspect a man lodging at Tomlinson's "Western Hotel," in Market, between Eighth and Ninth sts. yesterday morning these were confirmed by other proofs, and at dinner time the vigilant officer kept a sharp look out, and secured his man. He gave the name of T. G. Walker, which is the same he has used in purchasing certain goods, and in which the bills are made out. Nine hundred and fifty dollars, answering to the descriptions of the money stolen, were found upon him; as his purchases have not been heavy enough to have consumed the remainder of the amount, it is conjectured either that he has an accomplice, or that he has hidden one thousand dollars of the money—a note of that amount being still unfound. The prisoner had a hearing before Recorder Rush yesterday afternoon, after which he was committed until he should be delivered up to the proper authorities from Pittsburg.—United States Gazette.

France—Strange Affair.—A most extraordinary affair has lately been brought to light. The French journals are filled with reports of the trial of Madame Laffrage, formerly Miss Cappelle, for stealing a valuable ornament of the hair, studded with costly diamonds; it was stolen from Madame Laffrage's intimate friend, Madame Leotand, and since the discovery of the jewels on Madame Laffrage's premises, the latter has written a letter to her former friend, threatening that if her evidence was not falsified or withdrawn, she would retaliate by accusing her of the worst crimes, and by revealing her amours. These disclosures resemble more a novel of Balzac's, than a tale of real life. Madame Laffrage is a grand daughter of Madame Genlis and Philip Egalite. The trial closed on the 15th ult., when a verdict was pronounced, and she was condemned to two years' imprisonment. She is to be again indicted for the murder of her husband, which, it is said, she effected by sending him a basket of poisoned cakes, as a pretended mark of affection.

A Good Wife and Mother.—Mrs. Rachel Johnson, the widow of the late Col. John Johnson, of Upper Piqua, Ohio, has departed this life, at the age of 57. She was a native of this city. After her marriage, which was nearly 40 years ago, she removed to the West, her husband having accepted the appointment of Indian agent to the tribes then living north of Piqua. She was the mother of 15 children, one of whom is dead, six are married, and although settled at a considerable distance, it was so ordered in the providence of God that 11 of them should meet under the parental roof about the commencement of her short illness. She was a most kind, affectionate and loving wife, a most tender, anxious and devoted mother.—Philadelphia Courier.

The Mistakes of a Dandy.—On Sunday evening last, one of our soap-lock-Chesnut-street dandies came near meeting with his deserts. He grossly insulted a very respectable married lady in Chesnut street, who, however, with a view to award him that punishment which he deserved, permitted him to walk home with her. As soon as the fellow found that he was "entering the wrong pew," he ran off before the lady's husband had an opportunity to chastise him for his impertinence.—Ledger.

Ships of War at Boston.—The Boston papers inform us that their harbor is filled with ships of war. We do not recollect to have seen so many at one time for several years, says the Traveller.—The Columbus, Macedonian, Erie, Levant, Grampus, Concord, and Constellation, are at present in full view from the wharves. The Macedonian, together with the Concord and Constellation, are soon to sail for the East India station.

The celebrated financier, Albert Gallatin, formerly Secretary of the Treasury of the United States, is at present on a visit to this city; whither he has been principally led to the deep interest he feels in the pending application of his friend, M. D'Hauteville.—Philadelphia Messenger.

The Dead Napoleon.—It is said that 350 vessels touched at St. Helena between January 1 and May 15, for the sole purpose of showing passengers the tomb enclosing the remains of Napoleon. The amount of money spent on the island by those visiters is estimated at a million of francs per annum.

Illinois Loan Taken.—Colonel Thornton, who went to London for the purpose of negotiating a loan for the State of Illinois, of one million of dollars, met with no difficulty in immediately succeeding in the object of his mission, and has returned in the Great Western.

The Fate of Men of Talent.—Homer was a beggar; Plutus turned a mill; Terence was a slave; Boethius died in jail; Paul Borghese had fourteen trades and died with them all; Tasso was often distressed for five shillings; Bentinoglio was refused admittance into a hospital he had himself erected; Cervantes died of hunger; Camoens, the celebrated writer of the Lusiad, ended his days, it is said, in an alms-house, and at any rate was supported by a faithful black servant, who begged in the streets of Lisbon for the only man in Portugal on whom God had bestowed those talents which have a tendency to exalt the spirit of a downward age; and Fangelas left his body to the surgeons to pay his debts as far as it would go.

In England, Bacon lived a life of meanness and distress; Sir Walter Raleigh died on a scaffold; Spencer, the charming Spencer, died forsaken and in want; the death of Collins was caused through neglect, it producing mental derangement:

"Each lovely scene shall thee restore,
For thee the tear be duly shed;
Beloved till life can charm no more,
And mourned though pity's self be dead!"

Milton sold his copy right of Paradise Lost for fourteen pounds, at three payments, and finished his life in obscurity; Dryden lived in poverty and distress; Otway died prematurely and through hunger; Lee died in the streets; Steele lived a life of perfect warfare with the bailiffs; the Vicar of Wakefield was sold for a trifle, to save Goldsmith from the gripe of the law; Fielding lies in a burying ground of the English factory at Lisbon, without a stone to mark the spot; Savage died in prison at Bristol, where he was confined for a debt of eight pounds; Chatterton, the child of genius and misfortune, destroyed himself; John Kates died of a broken heart, occasioned it is said, by the merciless manner in which his works were received.

An Anecdote for Man-Worshppers.—Patrick Henry's biographer, gives the following incident. When Mr. Henry was verging towards three score and ten years, the political aspect of affairs, induced him to forego the comforts of his retirement, and to be presented as a candidate, for the house of delegates. On the day of the election, as soon as he appeared on the ground, he was surrounded by the admiring and adoring crowd, and whithersoever he moved, a concourse followed him. A preacher whose piety was wounded, by this homage paid to a mortal, asked the people aloud—Why they thus followed Mr. Henry? Mr. Henry, said he, is not a God! No, said Mr. Henry, deeply affected, both by the scene, and by the remark, "no my friend, I am but a poor worm of the dust; as fleeting and unsubstantial, as the shadow of the cloud that flies over your fields and is remembered no more." The tone with which this was uttered, and the look which accompanied it, affected every heart, and silenced every voice. Envy and opposition were disarmed, by humility; the recollection of his past services, rushed upon every memory, and he read his history in their swimming eyes.—Here was an affecting illustration, of the principle, that he that humbleth himself shall be exalted.

A storm of unusual violence visited the upper portion of Adams county, on the afternoon of the 11th inst. In the neighborhood of Hanover, in the first named county, the rain fell in torrents, and there was a heavy blow, which, for a while, raged like a tornado, levelling trees and unroofing buildings, in its course. Much damage was done in this way; but the rain which fell—so welcome after several weeks of drought—more than compensated for it. In the vicinity of Oxford, Adams county, there was a violent hail storm the same evening, which, beside other injuries, destroyed several hundred panes of glass in that village.—Bicknell.

AGRICULTURAL.

Rotation of Crops.—It is a curious fact in the action of vegetable poisons, that a plant may be killed by the poison which it has itself secreted, as a viper may be stung to death by its own poison. Hence it has been very generally noticed, that the soil in which any particular plant has grown, and into which it has consequently discharged the excretions of its roots, is rendered noxious to the growth of plants of the same or of allied species, though it be quite adapted to the support of other species. This fact is of the greatest importance in an economical point of view, as the whole theory of the rotation of crops may be considered to depend upon it. The discovery of this important step in agriculture is said to have been made by the Belgians, at least they have the merit of having developed the theory of it. Formerly it used to be said that the whole secret of good husbandry consisted in ploughing well, and manuring well; but to these must now be added the equally important act of so arranging the cultivation of different crops that they may mutually assist each other, and thus enable the farmer to obtain the greatest possible annual return from the same land. The whole theory depends upon the fact that all plants succeed badly upon lands which have lately borne crops of the same species as themselves, or even of the same genus or of the same family. This effect is not owing to any exhaustion of the soil that must have taken place during the growth of the previous crop, but arises from a corruption of the soil, by the intermixture of vegetable excretions given out at the root, which are always more injurious to plants of the same kind than to others. It is even ascertained that the excretions of some plants are beneficial to the growth of others of a different family; the leguminous for example, as the pea, bean, &c. improving the soil for the grasses Agriculturists have proposed various theories to account for the beneficial results obtained by a change of crops. Some have supposed that one species, by its denser foliage, chokes the weeds which otherwise would spring up and assist the crop in exhausting the soil; others have attributed the improvement that has taken place to the remains of the previous crop, which they suppose may have acted as manure; a third have said, that the roots of different crops extend themselves to different depths, and so extract their nourishment from portions of the soil which do not interfere with each other; and lastly, it has been urged that plants of different families may possibly derive their nourishment from different materials. It may be true that some of these causes have a certain degree of influence in determining which may be the most proper plants for a rotation, but they can only be considered as of very secondary importance when compared with that which relates to the deterioration of the soil, by its intermixture with the radical excretions of a previous crop. De Candolle, a famous French writer on the physiology of plants, after enumerating some of the collateral circumstances which should direct the judgment of cultivators in selecting such plants as may be best adapted to follow each other in any particular district, proposes the following fundamental and physiological principles which ought to be attended to where complete success is to be expected. First, a new crop ought never to succeed another of the same kind, unless under some very peculiar circumstances, as where the soil is annually renewed, or where it is naturally so fertile as to be capable of resisting the inconveniences which ordinarily result from such a system. Secondly, a new crop ought not to succeed another which has been raised from plants of the same family. Thirdly, all plants with acrid and milky juices injure the quality of the soil, and their remains should never be buried after the removal of a crop. Fourthly, plants with sweet and mucilaginious juices improve the soil for others of a different family. The chief of these are the leguminous, which are commonly adopted in practice for this purpose. It would be a very desirable thing for the agriculturist to study botany more zealously than he has hitherto done, and perhaps than it is possible for him to do, the subject being left more properly for the agricultural schools to do, if the wisdom of the legislatures will assist us, as they ought, in establishing them.—Western Farmer.

The theory of agriculture is built upon the following fundamental principles, and with one or other of them every part of rural practice is more or less connected. First, that the soil ought to be kept dry or free from all superfluous moisture.—Secondly, that it ought to be kept clean or in other words, free of noxious weeds. Thirdly, that it ought to be kept rich, or in other words, that every particle of manure, which can be collected, ought to be applied, so that the soil may be kept in a state capable of yielding good crops.

We subjoin the following principles of the rotation of crops, hardly inferior to the three first, from the Farmer's Cabinet, Philadelphia:—

1. Whatever may be the nature of your soil, and situation of your farm, remember, that there is no soil so good, but it may be exhausted and ruined by bad tillage, and that there is none so bad that cannot be rendered fertile by good tillage, even barren heath, if it can be ploughed and swarded.

2. The true art of husbandry consists in suffering no crop to grow upon your land, that will so far exhaust your soil as to lessen the value of your succeeding crop, whatever profit such a crop may afford you.

3. To avoid this, suffer no one crop to grow two years successively upon the same piece of ground, excepting grass and buckwheat, without the fertilizing aid of rich manures to support the strength of the soil; and even then, a change of crops will generally be best, excepting onions, carrots, and hemp.

4. Every plant derives from the earth for its growth, such properties as are peculiar to itself; this plant, when followed successively for two or more years upon the same ground, will exhaust the soil of some of those properties peculiar to itself without lessening its powers to produce some other plants. The fact is most striking in the article of flax, which will not bear to be repeated oftener than once in seven years, and is common to all crops with the exception of those noticed above.

5. To avoid this evil, arrange your farm into such divisions as will enable you to improve all the variety of crops your lands may require, in such regular succession, as to form a routine of five, six, or seven years, according to the nature, quality and situation of your farm.

6. This method will make poor land good, and good land better. Try and s

E RECORDER.

ZANESVILLE.

DAY, ... AUGUST 26, 1840.

tion was passed at the last confer- esting the President to deliver an the ensuing conference, to commence clock on the day of its opening.

ersons who have not yet paid for the ie of the Recorder, can send by the r delegates to the conference; also, advancee for the second volume.—this opportunity pass.

informed, that our old friend, Wm. f Pittsburgh, departed this life on the nt. In him the church has lost a warm d liberal supporter. His youngest Jane, who had been married about one a few weeks before her father.

tters as the following are what cheer an is toil. A man fortified with a consid- tion of such kind friends as these would against a regiment of grumblers, who fault any way, for fear the public might eir ability to judge of the matter. We it as a very friendly act of any of our en who will follow this example:

Editor: Duty prompts me to do something excellent paper. I have been a careful it since you issued your first sumber, been much entertained with its week- I have noticed several who say they paper, but discontinue because of the s. I might make the same excuse, but s me to say to you continue my paper. h send you four dollars for Br. Stout and a advance for the second volume. I no- one of your numbers a request to any no might feel disposed to aid you, to ubscribers for you. I here send you the rone whose paper you will direct with . Stout and myself will obtain all we conference, which I expect to attend, then hand you the cash for them. I will oming for all the names I send you.

Yours, &c. JOSEPH EVANS.

ton co., O., Aug. 20, 1840.

he friends of the paper would act as this we should soon have an addition of sev- dred subscribers, and be put in possession hundred dollars cash. All that is want- esolution to attend to the matter.

t the following article from the Circle- io, Telescope, of the 19th inst., a paper e patronage of the United Brethren.— sayings and doings of the last Legisla- have been expecting greater outrages son than at any former period, at the etings. We hope all the churches inter- the law "for the further protection of meetings," will promptly pursue such a s will be likely to secure the passage of posed law.

RAGE AT A CAMP-MEETING.—The rowdies d, a few days since, a camp-meeting held 2 miles from Circleville. One of the rs received a stone on his mouth, which, doing other injury, knocked out several of h. We do not wonder at such conduct abble, when we remember it was stated in Ohio Legislature by some respectable s that "camp-meetings are neither more s than ———, (our decency prevents tioning the slanderous word as they did,) uld not be protected by the laws of Ohio." thorities in the vicinity can as well pre- isorder at these meetings as at political t they have received their cue from some t in our "high places," using their influ- villify every thing good and holy. The g that grunts through the streets is proper- ected by the laws of the United States, many instances where they most need followers of God are thrust beyond the American justice—and we have the char- believe that the said legislators, should arn the above instance of brutality, will wish the rowdies success in such doings."

have received a letter from Br. John Wil- of Indiana, in reply to Br. Bassett, em- g three pages of fools-cap. We would ully comply with the Br's. request to pub- , if we thought any good would result from olication, but we think no good purpose e served by giving it in our columns. He s Br. B. with too much severity; of course, ill call for a reply, and we do not wish our to be occupied with personal recrimina- As we hold our paper free to investigate ings of all our public functionaries, Br. ams had a right to call on the committee in e of getting up a new conference in Ia., gh our columns for explanation, accordingly blished his communication on that subject, rich he implicated the committee very se- y. His letter, after publication, had scarcely ur office before one from the committee was ved, doing all which Br. W. required to be . Since when, Br. B. has defended the com- ee, and it is our opinion the defence is no er than the charges, and brethren ought to be contented to square accounts.

e will, however, extract a sentenee or two Br. W.'s late communication, which we x in point. Says he: "I would inform Br. hat he is correct in his opinion that the sense of the quarterly conference of the te river circuit did not ordain this castiga- y—the letter was my own,—they only desir- nformation I presume. And I disclaim all ntion of involving the moral integrity or ugning the motives of the committee. I no doubt they done what they tho't best."

☞We, some time since, published this de- on but not the facts, which are here briefly n.

IABILITIES OF STAGE CONTRACTORS.—A case decided in the United States Circuit Court, Columbus, July term, between Adam M'Kin- and William Neil, of the Ohio Stage Com- y, settling, to some extent, the liability of e contractors in the conveyance of passen- . M'Kinney sued Neil for injuries which he eived by the upsetting of a coach between umbus and Zanesville, on the National Road, which the leg of the plaintiff was so much ised and mangled as to render him a cripple ing the remainder of his life. The cause of upset was alleged to be the unskilfulness, ligence, carelessness and recklessness of the er. On the occasion of this disaster he com- nced whipping his horses at the top of a hill ch he was about descending, and the passen- gers becoming somewhat alarmed at the furious rate he was descending it, requested him to use the brake or patent lock, which he declined, say- ing there was no danger. The stage and horses however got off the bed of the road, and in rein- ing them on again the stage upset and occasioned the injury complained of. Judge M'Lean charged the jury, in substance:

"That the fact that the carriage was upset, and the plaintiff injured, was prima facie evi- dence of carelessness on the part of the driver, and throws the burden of proof on the defend- ant that the accident was not occasioned by the carelessness or fault of the driver—that admit- ting the carriage was upset, it was incumbent on the defendant to prove that the driver was a person of competent skill, good habits, in every respect qualified and prepared for the business of driving; and that he acted on the occasion of the upset with the utmost prudence and cau- tion. And if the disaster was occasioned by the negligence or want of skill, or prudence on his part, the defendant was liable—that, although the stage proprietor does not warrant the safety of his passengers, yet his liability and under- taking go to this extent—that he or his agent, (if he acts by agent,) shall possess competent skill, and that as far as human care and foresight can go, he will transport them safely."

After a few words further from the Court as to the extent of damage, if any, the jury retired for a short time and returned with a verdict for the plaintiff for five thousand three hundred and twenty-five dollars.

ITEMS.

One case of yellow fever and two of malignant were reported at the Charity Hospital, New Orleans, for the week ending on the 1st instant. The Bulletin says—"The fact does not indicate the prevalence of an epidemic and ought not to create alarm."

SPORTING.—A porpoise, seven and a half feet long, was shot a few days since in Maspeth creek, Long Island, and singular as it may appear, the old fellow had made his breakfast of thirty eels, three flounders, two toad-fish, and about half a peck of soft crabs.

The Marshal in Cincinnati, who has furnished several paragraphs for the newspapers, in his rounds of census taking, gives the following:—In the the 5th ward of that city, he states that he found two instances of the instability of for- tune. In destitute circumstances, dependents for the bread of the day on the labors of the day, were 2 women, one a grand-daughter of a distin- guished Governor of Massachusetts, and the oth- er a cousin of a late Governer of New Jersey.

EXPLOSION.—The powder works of Mr. Jame- son, on the Falls Road, about 7 miles from Baltimore, were blown up on Saturday last, and Mr. Richard Bates, employed in the mills, was so much injured that he died shortly after the explosion.

A correspondent informs us that Maj. Hatch, proprietor of the Poughkeepsie Hotel, was killed yesterday afternoon, almost instantaneously, by a flash of lightning.

Commodore Warrington, one of the heroes of the last war, will, it is believed, command the squadron fitting out for the China seas.

The United States ship "Ohio" was at Toulon on the 4th of June, with the small pox on board.

Fanny Wright, who was driven from our shores by public indignation (which the Courier cer- tainly never failed to excite) is now in England where they will not permit her to spout her de- moralizing views.—Phil. Courier.

The neat and retired village of West Chester, Pennsylvania, has two thousand one hundred and fifty souls, and many of them are noble ones.—Chester county is a great place for beautiful wo- men and lovely girls, and for good farmers, there is no mistake.

Forty thousand dollars are yet wanted to com- plete Bunker Hill Monument. The ladies of New England have undertaken to raise it.—They'll do it. We endorse the ladies of that region. They never stop half way in what they undertake.

Professor Espy, "the storm-king," has been lecturing in London.

BOYS, "SEE HERE."—M. Thiers, the present prime minister of France, is the son of a shoe- maker of Marseilles.

NEWS FROM FLORIDA.—Two soldiers killed by the Indians—names not given.

The murderer of Colonel Winn, at Natchez, proves to be a negro, who has confessed, and is in jail. The Colonel was shot while sitting eating his supper.

BOUNDARY SURVEY.—The Fredericton, N. B., Herald of the 1st instant, says: Capt. Broughton, of the Royal Engineers, who has been appointed to continue the survey of the Disputed Territory commenced last year, came passenger in the steamer Britannia from England, and arrived here last Wednesday. Capt. Broughton is ac- companied by a son of Mr. Featherstonhaugh, who was engaged in the survey last summer, and Mr. Russel.

The thunder-storm, on the afternoon and night of the 3d instant, appears to have had a tremendous sweep. We hear of barns burned in Bucks county, Pennsylvania, and near Burling- ton, New Jersey.

EXPLOSION.—The steam chamber, on board the boat Erie, exploded in Detroit river on Tuesday the 4th instant. Six persons, four of whom were boat hands, were injured—two of the deck hands dangerously and shockingly. One of the passengers, Mr. Leary, of Fort Gratiot, died of his wounds. Mr. Baby, Sheriff of the Western District of Upper Canada, jumped overboard in his alarm and was drowned. The boat was but slightly injured.

The dwelling of Mr. Daniel Donnery, near Ebensburg, Cambria county, Pa., was torn from its foundation on the 30th ultimo, in a gale which passed over, and himself and three children were crushed beneath its ruins.

The Philadelphia Gazette states that the ship Virginia recently arrived at that port, brought over one hundred and eighty Welsh passengers. There are no better settlers in this country than they.

The Secretary of War has ordered one thou- sand five hundred troops to Florida, and has appointed Gov. Read to command them.

The "RAT" CASE.—The Grand Jury of New Orleans found a true bill against the President of the Typographical Society for libel, in pub- lishing two printers as "Rats." The District Attorney immediately moved for a nolle pros., which was granted, and the case thus turned out of court.

Four of the men scalded by the explosion on board the steam boat Erie, in Detroit river, have died of their burns.

A one hundred and thirty pounder has been cast at Alger's Foundary, Boston. Col. George Bomford, of the United States Ordnance depart- ment is conducting experiments to test it.

MELANCHOLY.—The body of a boy nearly naked was taken out of the water on Sunday in Balti- more. The key to his death is supposed to be found in the following note picked up in the street on Friday. It is but another instance of the effect of morbid fictions, and death and car- nage literature—the potent and universal poison of the minds of the young:

Baltimore, July, 1840.

Whoever picks up this paper will tell my mother not to weep for me, for I am dead and my body is at the bottom of the basin, for sooner and work for my boss, Mr. S———, and sooner than receive a licking from him, I will die the death of Cleopatra, not stung with the bite of an asp, but drown myself. WM. ROSE, aged 15.

July 31st, 1840.

The Wilmington Chronicle states that a Mr. Jno. Smith, knocked overboard from a Wilmington vessel in a storm, she going ten knots, was lost sight of, and given up. A very heavy shower of rain came on directly, and he was of course giv- en up as lost. But after the rain had ceased, and whilst the schooner was on another tact, he was discovered swimming, and taken on board, having been in the sea something like an hour. Good for John—you can't kill that child. He has a thousand lives, for every unit in a cat's nine.

MORE CANDIDATES.—The two great political parties may as well stop throwing the charge of abolition at the rival candidates for the Presi- dency. The abolitionists denounce both, and at their convention held at Syracuse last week, nominated Gerrit Smith, of Madison, for Go- vernor, Charles O. Shepard of Genesee, for Lieu- tenant Governor; Arthur Tappan, of Kings, and Benjamin P. Johnson, of Oneida, for Sena- torial electors, with 40 District Electors, pledged to support James G. Birney for President, and Thomas Earle for Vice President.

The President has appointed Philip Schuyler, of New York, to be Consul of the United States for the port of Liverpool, in the place of Francis B. Ogden, resigned. His commission to take effect from the 15th of October next.

LORD BROUGHAM.—It is stated in the English papers that this nobleman has been duly initiated into the mysteries of the secret society called "The Odd Fellows." At a recent meeting of the Fox Lodge, held at Dover, one of the mem- bers stated this as an honor of which they could boast. An odder fellow than the ex-Chancellor never belonged to the body, say the papers. He must be a great oddity—for he is one of the greatest men of the age.

A large number of emigrants assembled in Third street above Chesnut, early yesterday morn- ing, and passed on by the cars westwards. Sev- eral thousands must have gone by this route within the last three or four months.—Bicknell.

Dr. Madden has gone to Damascus, to inquire into the persecution against the Jews.

Specie at New Orleans at the last dates, 5 a 6 per cent. premium. United States Bank notes 4 a 5 per cent. premium.

The corner stone of the Fourth Presbyterian church was laid at Washington city in June last, and the building has already progressed to the elevation of the first story.

A fellow in Mobile, entered a room where sev- en or eight young men were sleeping, picked all their pockets, and got off undetected.

During the half year ending on the 30th of June, there were coined at the United States Mint and branches 4,117,724 pieces of money, of the various denominations, ranging from half ea- gles down to half dimes—the total value of which was $1,517,035.

The French fleet in the Mediterranean is quite formidable—it consists of 47 ships-of-the-line, 2 frigates, 4 corvettes, 25 brigs and smaller vessels, 10 armed transports, and 21 steam vessels—in all 79 ships.

The Richmond banks are checking on New York at 2½; on Philadelphia ½; and on Balti- more 1 per cent. Specie in that city 2½. Mo- ney is still in demand.

Two men at Louisa Court House, Virginia, on Monday, 10th inst., got into a warm dispute a- bout politics, which resulted in a fight, in which one struck the other with a billet of wood a blow so severe as to occasion his death. They were both intoxicated at the time.

The Farmers and Mechanics' Bank of Detroit have made acceptable arrangements to the U. S. government to liquidate the debts to the latter.

A man named P. H. C. Lennen, arrested in New Orleans, some weeks ago as a counterfeiter, and discharged, has been again arrested, and his implements, half-filled notes, &c., to a large amount, found in his house. His wife was be- trayed by artifice into making affidavit against him; though for hours she refused to betray him.

NOVEL SUIT.—Two printers, named Douglas and Wayne, have brought a libel suit against the Chairman of the "Rat Committee" of the New Orleans Typographical Association, for pub- lishing their names as "rats." The suit was brought in the Recorder's Court, where it will be decided in a few days.

The two Arabian horses, sent by the Imaum of Muscat as a present to the President of the United States, were sold on Tuesday, at Wash- ington, as we learn from the Baltimore Sun.—The light gray was taken by L. M. Powell, Esq., of Virginia, at 650 dollars; and the dark gray by Gen. John H. Eaton, of Tennessee, at 675 dol- lars.

STATE PRISON STATISTICS.—Capt. Knapp, who conducts the convicts from this city to the State Prison at Sing Sing, informs us that there were between the 29th of June and the 6th of Au- gust, discharged, by expiration of sentence, 7; pardoned, 1; and 1 died. There remained in the prison on the 8th instant, 792 men, and 67 women—total, 859.—Br. Jonathan.

REDUCING THE PROFITS.—It is stated in the Cincinnati Gazette, that eleven brokers have been convicted in the Court of Common Pleas in that city, of acting as officers of banks not incorporated by law, and fined a 1000 dollars a piece. Their real offence is issuing the currency that floods the West.

SPORT.—A party of officers, seven in number, has left Montreal to hunt buffaloes on the Mis- souri prairies.

THE WRONG CHAISE.—A gentleman in Phila- delphia, the other day, got arrested as a horse- thief. He had merely stepped into the wrong wagon and driven off, his own being standing by; and he in too balmy a state to know his own when he saw it.

Several meetings have recently been held in Upper Canada, with the object of imposing a tax on American Agricultural produce.

Five of the gentlemen concerned in the late duel, between Hudson and Chambers, near St. Louis, have been indicted.

ANOTHER SUSPENSION.—The City Hall clock refuses to take notes—of time. It will "re- sume" in a week, the interval being occupied in cleaning it.—N. Y. paper.

A MUSICAL EARTHQUAKE.—An enormous or- gan is now being erected in the abbey of St. Dennis, at Paris. It contains about 6000 pipes, amongst which are some measures 52 feet, and weighing 12,000lbs. This magnificent instru- ment is nearly completed.

The Wall street Presbyterian Church, the Rev. Dr. Philips, recently took up a collection for the American Bible Society, amounting to $804 50.

The Express perpetrates the following, which it calls a "Natural Coincidence:" In the great sale of Durham breeds, which took place lately at Lexington, Ky., we notice the following co- incidence. Victoria, purchased at one thousand seven hundred and fifty dollars, and Prince Al- bert, her calf, at three hundred dollars.

In the United States Court on Friday, Russel Moore, who has been a year under arrest, charg- ed with counterfeiting United States coin, was acquitted.

A man was last week discharged from the United States Naval service, by the Court of Common Pleas, it having been proved that he was intoxicated when enlisted.

FOREIGN NEWS.

From the Correspondent of the "New World."

LONDON, JULY 24, 1840.

The trial of Oxford for the attempt against the life of the Queen, has resulted in a verdict of insanity. This was expected, but the evidence is far from proving that the jury were justified in doing so. A great many absurdities were bro't forward to prove the boy silly, and the medical faculty gave their opinion that his brains were disordered. His mother testified that from child- hood he would take fits of crying without cause; another witnessed that he would laugh when there was nothing to laugh at.

There was evidence also that his grandfather was an odd fish, and that his father was very pas- sionate and fond of liquor. But the proofs are not all convincing that there was hereditary in- sanity affecting the prisoner, and there was cer- tainly nothing to show that at the time he com- mitted the act, he was incapable of distinguish- ing right from wrong. It could not be ascertained that the pistols were loaded; at first the prisoner acknowledged that they were so, but afterwards denied it. The motive appears to have been notoriety, in which case, as the judge stated in summing up, he was held responsible for the con- sequences of the action. We shall have every schoolboy, shortly, playing fantastic tricks, en- dangering people's lives, and excused by an Old Bailey jury, because they happen to descend from besotted grandfathers.

A trial for bigamy, lately, at Durham, shows to a remarkable degree, how people will allow themselves to be imposed on by a little ingenu- ity and impudence. The gay Lothario, in the present case, is a mere youth, still under twenty, of no education, and in personal appearance every thing but attractive.

He gave himself out as the son of Lord Ken- nedy, and to his dupes he produced documents proving bequests to over a million, in three per cent. consols, houses, lands, ships and property beyond calculation. With such a fortune he had wooed and won the hearts of no less than six maidens, two of whom came forward at the trial in question. The one he obtained with the assistance of a Wesleyan preacher, to whom he had promised ten pounds for the service. Pro- ving that he was a lord only needed an introduc- tion. After six weeks he deserted his wife, meantime borrowing a sum of money from his serviceable friend the parson. The other he saw at a Methodist chapel, of which he affected to be a pious member, as likewise a rigid teetotaler. In three days they were married after showing that he was worth £60,000 a year, and the father lending four pounds for expenses. In a fortnight or so he decamped. That there should be such fools, so easily imposed, would almost appear in- credible. The miscreant was sentenced to two years and a half hard labor, on hearing which he expressed his anxiety to the Judge, whether when released any of his other wives should have a claim upon him.

The Post Office envelope, which has been so universally laughed at, is about being superseded by a new one, of more simple description. It is to consist of a plain head of the Queen in one corner, instead of the three hundred animals hitherto illustrated. A curious trade had sprung up in these by persons posting advertisements upon them, the profits on which allowed their being sold at twenty-five per cent. less than the regular price.

Lucien Bonaparte, the younger brother of Napoleon, and the most clever of that family, died near Rome, during the present month.—He was born in 1775, at Ajaccie. When his brother was proclaimed First Consul, he became a member of the tribunal, and afterwards Min- ister to the Interior. He took an active share in the public affairs of France until 1804, during which he displayed zeal and talent. But he dif- fered with the more ambitious Napoleon, and went to reside in Italy. In 1810, he set out for the United States, but was shipwrecked on Sar- dinia, where he was not allowed to land. After embarking again, he was captured by some of the English fleet, and taken to Malta, from which he was sent to Worcester, in England, where he lived with his family three years.

In 1814 he repaired to Rome, and next year, when Napoleon was once more on the throne, he went to Paris, and was called to the Chamber of Peers. After the battle of Waterloo, he was compelled to quit France again, and with the consent of the allied sovereigns he was allowed to establish himself at the villa Ruffinella, near Frascati, where he died. His eldest son, who now succeeds to his title of Prince of Canino, is married to the daughter of Joseph, who resided at Bordentown.

Courvoisier was executed on the 6th, at New- gate. The unhappy wretch maintained a degree of firmness to the last. He professed resigna- tion, but had meditated suicide on the evening previous. The crowd assembled, though large, was not so great as on former occasions. Several confessions and explanations have been made in which it is stated that he deliberately contem- plated the murder of his master, and after com- mitting the robbery it was his intention to leave the country. There are still, however, many contradictory assertions, especially aimed against the police, and he has declared himself that his first confession was, except in the fact itself, made up of false statements.

On the 13th, the Queen sent a message to each house of Parliament in reference to appointing a regency, should an infant heir to the throne survive her present Majesty. It was as follows:

"VICTORIA REGINA.—The uncertainty of hu- man life, and a deep sense of my duty to my people, render it incumbent upon me to recom- mend to you to take into consideration the con- tingency which may hereafter occur, and to make such provision as the circumstances may seem to you to require for the exercise of the Royal au- thority.

"I shall be prepared to concur with you in such measures as may appear best calculated to maintain unimpaired the power and dignity of the Crown, and thereby to strengthen the secu- rities that protect the rights and liberties of my people."

Since then a bill has been presented in the House of Lords appointing Prince Albert Regent and guardian until such issue of her Majesty might attain the age of 18 years, and that all acts of royal power and administration of govern- ment must be executed with his consent and authority. These powers are to cease in case the Prince should marry a person professing the Roman Catholic religion, or should he absent himself from the United Kingdom. The appoint- ment gives general satisfaction.

The Queen has lately had another suitor, who has given the police some trouble. In the pres- ent case it was, however, only for the honor of becoming her "preceptor in the classics." The person was a German, who every day posted him- self at the gates of the palace and followed to wherever she went, no matter what the distance. The poor fellow has been sent to Bedlam.

MR. OGLE'S SPEECH.—The New York Herald says:—Mr. Ogle has very politely forwarded us his speech on the "regal splendor of the president's palace," which he delivered in Congress some weeks since. We are indebted to the gentleman for his civility, but we cannot undertake to read his speech. As to Mr. Van Bu- ren's household economy, it is a matter about which we care as little as can possi- bly be imagined. There is no such thing as regal splendor in the White House. It is handsomely furnished, but not a whit too well for the residence of the chief magistrate of the nation; and as to his style of living, it is very proper and sat- isfactory, particularly to those who have partaken of his hospitality. His dinners and wine are capital, but he is rather sparing of his best champaigne—a fault we trust Old Tip will take care not to fall into. We think Mr. Ogle might have been better employed than in rummaging among Mr. Van Buren's pots and kettles, and his constituents will probably adopt the same opinion, but he has turned up some queer things in the course of his exploration among the kitchen utensils. In the midst of other charges, which Un- cle Sam has had to pay, is one of eleven shillings grinding thirty four table knives. Very likely the knives were dull enough, and wanted sharpening sadly, but the President ought to pay for grinding all his knives himself.

FORGERY.—Yesterday morning, a young man presented a check, purporting to have been drawn by Mr. W. C. Card- well, for forty dollars, at the Commercial Bank for payment. The Teller, howev- er, saw reason to doubt the validity of the document, refused to pay it, sent for a police officer, and detained the young man. The check was discovered to be a forgery. On investigation, it appeared that some months since, a check similar- ly forged for $200, had been paid, and as the brother of the person who called at the Bank, had formerly lived with Mr. Cardwell, suspicion was naturally excited against him. He was sent for, and both brothers are now in custody.—Bicknell.

A PRETTY RIDDLE.—"I will consent to all you desire," said a young female to her lover, "on condition that you give me what you have not, what you can ne- ver have, and yet can give." What did she ask him for? A husband.

A GOOD MOVEMENT.—SABBATH ASSOCI- ATION.—There will be an adjourned meet- ing of the Sabbath Association on Tues- day evening next, at 7 o'clock, in Dr. Herron's church, on Wood near Sixth street. We advise our friends who love the institution of the Sabbath, to be there, as we believe it will be a meeting of un- common interest. Public sentiment is becoming very strong in favor of our ef- fort to establish a Sabbath keeping and Temperance line of steamboats, to run between our city and Louisville, and some of our first business men believe that the enterprize will succeed well. There was a very interesting meeting of the Socie- ty on Monday evening, in the Rev. Mr. Sproul's church, Allegheny city, in which Dr. Prestly presided, and the Rev. Drs. Elliott, Swift, Presly, Andrews, Anan, Kerr, Lea, Marks, of Quincy, Illinois, Powell, of Cincinnati, and Mr. Thomas Hanna, merchant, participated, and ad- journed as above. These meetings bring together very happily all classes and de- nominations of christians.—Pittsburgh Intelligencer.

RUMS' DOINGS.—We learn from the Maine Temperance Gazette, that Francis Barney, a Canadian, aged 45, committed suicide in a house in Oak street, Augusta, on Friday of last week, by cutting his throat with a dull rusty knife. Barney was habitally intemperate, and had made free use of the bottle the evening previ- ous.—The Gazette adds:—

"We looked upon the scene, three or four hours after the transaction took place. It was horrible beyond descrip- tion. There upon the floor, deluged in blood, lay the grim and ghastly, the wretched victim of the rum shop. His right arm was raised, and his hand clench- ed, as if, in his madness, bidding defiance to earth and heaven. On his breast was laid the bloody instrument of death. The deportment of those present, with one ex- ception, showed that they regarded it as a serious business. One individual who was bustling and active, manifested the most revolting and heartless levity.—That individual was a rum seller.

A HINT TO BACHELORS.—In a late work on suicide; it is said that marriage is to a certain extent a prevention of suicide. It has been satisfactorily established, that among men, two thirds who destroy them- selves are bachelors.

Business Department.

The fourth quarterly meeting for Charlestown circuit, Indiana, is to be held at Utica, includ- ing the first Saturday and Monday in September next. Will Br. Evans, Br. Simpson, Dr. Ben- nett, and all who can, come to our help?

A. H. BASSETT, Sup't.

RECEIVED PAY FOR RECORDER.

From P. Wymond,		$2 50
" D. Crall for Mrs. P. Carnes,		2 00
" W. Ross for J. Stephens,		2 00
" N. B. Madera for D. W. Stewart,		2 00
" J. A. Mills for W. Avy,		3 00
" A. K. Earl, two for J. March or Mauk—rest for W. Alexander, 50cts. yet in E.'s hands,		4 50
" C. Woodruff for D. Chandler and D. M'Carty,		5 00
" J. Wilson for R. Enyart, for vols. 1st. & 2d. 4; J. Hughes, 1 25; R. Cassingham, G. Littick and O. Thompson, two each,		11 25
" T. Foster for A. Lanning,		2 00
" H. Dobson,		2 00
" A. H. Bassett for T. P. Armstrong, C. Ruddle & J. Fletcher, Louisville, in adv. for 2d vol.		6 00
" J. Evans, 2 for himself, and 2 for J B. Stout, 2d vol.		4 00
" A. N. Johnson,		2 00
" G. Clancy for S. Lancaster,		2 00
" J. DeGarmo for Mrs. A. T. Cokes and J. Pierpont, one each.		2 00
" W. Franklin,		2 50
" T. Ogden,		2 00
" J. Beatty for J. Barnes, 2; J. R. Fleming, 1, and D. Davis, 2, for 2d volume.		5 00
" Col. J. Russell, Jr., for 2d volume,		2 00
" Jacob Griffith, Brownsville,		2 50
" James Brown,		50

LETTERS RECEIVED.

S. Bloomer, 3 sub.; D. Crall, P. Wymond, J. Murray, you were cr.; W. Ross, right; A. K. Earl, all right; "Disciple," J. Williams, W. Warden, A. C. Barnes, J. Fordyce, E. Jean, B. H. Haymond, J. A. Mills, E. Clancy, D. Hunt, N. B. Madera, W. Hamilton, Gratiot, C. Meri- am, W. Bonnett, C. Woodruff, T. Foster, Jane Nace, G. L. Drane, 2, T. Oliver, M. M. Laughlin, J. Burns, H. Dobson, L. Garrett, J. M. Fulton, 2, G. D. Wilson, 2 sub.; Geo. Hughes, 1 sub.; A. H. Bassett, 2 sub.; J. Evans, 1 sub.; A. N. Johnson, W. Hughey, R. L. Foster, Geo. Clan- cy, 1 sub.; J. Degarmo, 1 sub.; D. Huffman, W. Franklin, J. Irons, J. M'Collister, E. Brainard. J. Beatty, E. S. Kisbey, D. H. Stephens, I. C. Garrison, all right; S. W. Thornton, J. Guest.

☞The Quarto New World.

THREE DOLLARS PER ANNUM.

WHEN the publication of The New World was, in compliance with the expressed wishes of many subscribers, commenced in a form convenient for binding and preservation, it was thought expedient to make such additions, in the shape of music, engraved title pages, &c., as would considerably enhance its expense. We find, however, after 8 weeks' experiment, that the paper would be better liked and more generally taken, if, by omission of the music, &c., the whole literary material of the Folio edition could be thrown into the Quarto form, and the price of both the same. It has therefore been determin- ed to ask a uniform sum. The Quarto New World will, therefore, be supplied hereafter for $3 per annum, or six cents per number to those, who, on subscribing, take the back numbers—on- ly a few of which have been issued.

Subscribers who have paid $4, or who may re- mit that sum in advance, will be entitled to the paper for one year and four months from the date of subscription.

Every present subscriber to the Folio edition may, upon renewal of his subscription and pay- ment in advance, change to the Quarto and be supplied with the back numbers at six cents each from the commencement of the volume, by ex- pressing his wish to that effect in a pre-paid let- ter to the publisher.

Edited by Park Benjamin and Epes Sargent.
Published by J. WINCHESTER,
30 Ann street.
New York, August 15, 1840. 53

POETRY.

For the Western Recorder.

Immortality! Immortality! What? Immortality!

What beauteous word is that which strikes my ear
And makes my bosom swell with heavenly hopes,
That makes me humble as in dust and then
Fills my ambitious soul with heavenly fires,
That lifts me far above the fear of death
And bids my spirit mount on eagle's wings,
And soar aloft on swelling gales divine.
O, 'tis the hope of an immortal life
That bids my spirit never tire or faint,
But crawl, or walk, or fly, as God permits,
And press intensely up the heavenly hills.
What though my prospects to a mortal eye,
Might nothing more but midnight darkness seem.
What though each hope of earthly honor die,
And every earthly hope of earthly gain,
What tho' mistaken men through blinded view,
Pursue, afflict and grieve my laboring soul,
And in the throng as we our way pursue,
We overhear that we are outcasts doomed.
What though misfortune like an axe man strong,
With stroke on stroke cut down each blooming tree,
That we had hoped might bear some tasteful fruit.
What though the earth be parched with burning heat,
Or drenched from bursting clouds with mighty flood.
'Tis naught to daunt, 'tis no just cause of dread
If God our Father smile and call us His,
And angels whisper in our list'ning ear
The pleasing news of an immortal life.
The sun may shine or give his shining o'er,
Wrapped up in clouds and hid from mortal view,
The moon may hang a curtain round her head,
And all the hosts of heaven may cease to shine.
Thunders may roll through heaven's immense domain,
And forked lightnings storm this lower world.
The winds may catch the forests in their whirls,
And wring the monarch oak and mow the groves,
The over-hanging cliffs from mountains disc
May lose their hold and with tremendous roar,
Come lumbering down and fill up all the plain.
But if the spirit speak that charming word,
Thy soul shall live eternal in the sky,
I'll ne'er be moved, I'll bear each earthly woe,
And rise superior to each mortal fear.
May that great power that sends the tempest forth
And tells volcanoes when their fires shall burn,
Nerve us to battle with the powers below
And make our way to mansions in the sky.

SELECTIONS.

The Spirit of Adoption.—The members of the divine family have received the spirit which is the privilege of that blessed fellowship. They are enabled, disposed and encouraged to say, "Abba, Father," in all their relations to God, and to draw nigh unto Him, as children to a compassionate and tender parent. The Holy Spirit produces in believers that disposition towards God, which enables them to confide entirely in Him, to cast their eyes upon Him, and to cultivate and exercise the spirit of obedience and love to Him, and thus manifests their regeneration and adoption, and witnesses with their spirits that they are the children and heirs of God. They feel their minds influenced to trust Him in every difficulty, to seek the promotion of His glory, to rejoice in the triumph of His gospel, and to desire in every thing to fulfil His perfect will. They have thus a witness that they are born of God, and adopted into His family, though weakness of faith, misapprehension of His promises, or any temptation, should sometimes create a hesitation in their minds, and take away the actual present enjoyment of their hearts while addressing Him as their Father. How precious and comforting is the consciousness, that God is our God, and that we are His people! "Because ye are sons, God hath sent forth the Spirit of His Son into your hearts." This is the seal, the first fruits, the earnest of present and everlasting felicity.

Why should the children of a King
Go mourning all their days?
Great Comforter, descend and bring
Some tokens of thy Grace.

Assure my conscience of her part
In my Redeemer's blood,
And bear Thy witness with my blood,
That I am born of God.

Gods sits upon a throne of grace, and fills a mercy seat for His people, and they are invited to come unto Him with all boldness. Instead of flying from Him, like Adam, they cleave to Him with full purpose of heart, and the more they enjoy of His presence and blessing, the more do they love to commune with Him. They find always that the more intercourse they have with heaven, the more they wish that intercourse to be renewed and prolonged. True, experimental christianity is this life of communion with Christ, in the exercise of a spirit of adoption. We do not mean by this a constant actual course of outward acts of devotion, but a constant accordance of heart with the Saviour's will and mind, leading to the glad enjoyment of every outward privilege, and performance of every outward duty. Christ and the believer, as members of one family, are as friends dwelling together, and conversing together in habits of mutual friendship and affection. "If any man love me he will keep my word, and I will love him, and will manifest myself unto him, and my Father will love him, and we will come unto him, and make our abode with him." The degree in which this spiritual communion is experienced is different in different persons, and in the same person at different times; but the thing itself enters into the essence of the christian life. "Our fellowship is with the Father, and with his Son Jesus Christ." It would be as reasonable to suppose that two friends who cordially loved each other, would live in the same house, and yet have no conversation, never see each other, and have no connection with each other, as that a christian shall live, as a member of the family of God by his adoption, and yet have no exercise of the spirit of adoption, and no communion in his heart with Christ.

With him sweet converse I maintain,
Great as he is I dare be free;
I tell him all my grief and pain,
And he reveals his love to me.

Such is the experience of the christian. Reader, is it yours? Do you know the power and preciousness of this hidden life, this filial spirit, with which the people of God live upon him?—Episcopal Recorder.

Anecdote of the Lion.—Poor Gert Schepers, a vee-boor of the Cradock district, was out hunting in company with a neighbor—whose name, as he is yet alive, and has perhaps been sufficiently punished, I shall not make more notorious. Coming to a fountain surrounded, as is common, with tall reeds and rushes, Gert handed his gun to his comrade, and alighted to search for water. But he no sooner approached the fountain, than an enormous lion started up close to his side, and seized him by the left arm. The man, though taken by surprise, stood still without struggling, aware that the least attempt to escape would ensure his instant destruction. The animal also remained motionless, holding fast the boor's arm in his fangs, but without biting it severely—and shutting his eyes at the same time, as if he could not withstand the countenance of his victim. As they stood in this position, Gert, collecting his presence of mind, began to beckon to his comrade to advance and shoot the lion in the forehead. This might have been easily affected, as the animal not only continued to stand still with closed eyes, but Gert's body concealed from his notice any object advancing in front of him. But the fellow was a vile poltroon, and in place of complying with his friend's directions, or making any other attempt to save him, he began cautiously to retreat to the top of a neighboring rock.—Gert continued earnestly to beckon for assistance for a long time, the lion continuing perfecty quiet—and the lion hunters affirm, that if he had but persevered a little longer, the animal would have at length relaxed his hold, and left him uninjured. Such cases, at least, they maintain, have occasionally occurred. But Gert, indignant at the pusillanimity of his comrade, and losing patience with the lion, at last drew his knife, (a weapon which every back-country colonist wears sheathed at his side,) and with the utmost force of his right arm plunged it into the animal's breast. The thrust was a deadly one, for Gert was a bold and powerful man; but it did not prove effectual in time to save his own life—for the enraged savage, striving to grapple with him, and held at arms length by the utmost efforts of Gert's strength and desperation, so dreadfully lacerated the breast and arms of the unfortunate man with his talons, that his bare bones were laid open. The lion fell at last from loss of blood, and Gert fell along with him. The cowardly companion who had witnessed this fearful struggle from the rock, however, took courage to advance, and succeeded in carrying his mangled friend to the nearest house—where such surgical aid as the neighbors could give, was immediately but vainly applied. Poor Gert expired on the third day after with the lock-jaw.—Thompson's Travels in South Africa.

☞The Exercise of Gracious Affections.—As sin is increased in the soul by the frequent actings of it, so grace is nourished and strengthed in the soul by its frequent actings. The exercise of grace is always attended with the increase of grace. Prov. x. 4: "The diligent hand maketh rich;" or the nimble hand, the hand that is active and agile, that will see nothing lost for looking after—that hand maketh rich. Ruth ii: How did Boaz follow the business himself? His eyes were in every corner, on the servants, and on the reapers, yea, on the gleaners too.

It is recorded of Severus, that his care was not to look what men said of him, or how they censured him, but to look what was to be done by him. He will rise in judgment against those professors that look more what this man; and the other man saith of them, than what is to be done by them. The heart of a christian is to be taken up with what is to be done by him, and not with what this man thinks or the other judges of him.

Pacunius hath an elegant saying: "I hate," saith he, "the men that are idle in deed and philosophical in word." God loves, saith Luther, "curristas, not quæristas"—the runner, not the questioner. Grace grows by exercise, and decays by disease. Though both arms grow, yet that which a man most useth is the stronger and the bigger; so it is both in gifts and graces. In birds, their wings which have been used most are sweetest; the application is easy. Such men as are contented with so much grace as will bring them glory—with so much grace as will keep hell and their souls asunder, will never be rich in grace, nor high in comfort and assurance: such souls usually go to heaven in a storm. Oh! how weather-beaten are they, before they can reach the heavenly harbor!

O I love to see a captain take down his chart and consult it carefully. It teaches me such a lesson in regard to my own duty. What! shall I be ashamed to consult my bible, when he is not ashamed to consult his chart? I have infinitely greater interest at stake, than he has. His voyage is but temporal; but I am on the great voyage to eternity.—Goodell.

Very True.—The rich are often the veriest slaves on earth. They toil, and labor and calculate, and are filled with anxiety all their days, and all they get in return is a simple subsistence, a coffin, and a winding sheet, and a few pretended mourners when they die, who think less of them than their estates.

"All the Decency"—Who claims it!—One paper calls Gen. Harrison a drunken debauchee, another calls President Van Buren a cut-throat. Oh shame,—where art thou fled? Is there a lower depth of baseness and degradation to which party politicians can descend—then let them reach the bottom as soon as possible.

YOUTH'S DEPARTMENT

From the Youth's Cabinet.

UNCLE WILLIAM, NO. 14.

DO MEN EVER OVERCOME THE FEAR OF DEATH?

What an interesting question for us all to examine. Have any ever been victorious over their doubts and fears, so as to welcome death. I answer, yes.—Thousands and tens of thousands have rejoiced in such a deliverance. A few of these cases I will mention, beginning with what is said in the Scripture on this subject. They lay down the general truth, (Prov. 14: 32,) "The righteous hath hope in his death," and they tell us of a wicked man who said, "Let me die the death of the righteous, and let my last end be like his." Num. 23: 10.

1. A good old man exclaimed, "Lord, now lettest thou thy servant depart in peace." Luke 2: 29.

2. The first martyr to Christianity died with great peace of mind, "calling on God and saying, Lord Jesus, receive my spirit." Acts 7: 59.

3. Paul, when an old man, exclaimed in view of death, "I am now ready to be offered, and the time of my departure is at hand. I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith; henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord the righteous Judge shall give me at that day." 2 Tim. 4: 6—8. In another place in his triumphat views of death, he exclaims, "O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory? Thanks be unto God who giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ." 1 Cor. 15: 55, 57.

I might continue to tell you of men and women who have met death with joy, but I will omit speaking of them, and mention the cases of some little children who had overcome their fear of death.

4. Sarah Howley died when about 9 years old. She was very anxious to have death come, and said, "How long, sweet Jesus! Finish thy work,—come away sweet, dear Lord Jesus, come quickly; sweet Lord, help; come away, now, now, dear Jesus, come quickly. Good Lord, give patience to me to await thy appointed time."

5. Another child who was 8 years old when she died, used these as her last words, "I am going to glory. O, that all of you were to go with me to that glory."

6. A girl who died aged 14, said a little before she died, "My end is now very near; now I shall put on white raiment and be clothed before the Lamb, that spotless Lamb, and with His spotless righteousness. Father, you see that my body is a tabernacle which now shall be broken down: my soul shall now part from it and shall be taken up into that heavenly Jerusalem. There shall I dwell and go no more out, but sit and sing, Holy, holy, holy, is the lord God of Hosts."

7. A young man said to a minister, "Death is never once a terror, I am not afraid to die; it rather seems lovely.—Christ is everything. He is all."

8. Catharine Huldane was about 6 years and a half old, when she died. She often spoke of her peace, and calling for her sister, put her arms round her neck and kissed her, saying, "Love your Savour, I am happy."

9. Jane E. J. Taylor, who died young, said to her aunt on the evening of the 28th of Nov. 1829, "I think I am one of Christ's Lambs. He is carrying me in his arms, and will soon take me in his bosom. I am waiting to catch the signal given to escort me safe to heaven!" In her last moments she was heard to whisper "Victory," and then raising her voice she exclaimed, "Christ! Christ! Christ!" Being asked if she was happy, she sweetly smiled and expired.

Would you die so, my young friend? Then do love the Saviour and begin now.

Your friend,
Uncle William.

About Little Mary.—Dear Children:—As you are fond of reading stories, I will tell you one about a little girl, six years old, who was a member of my Sabbath School class.

She was seldom absent from the school, and could easily be known by her modest retiring manners, her attention to the lesson, and all which was said to her. She did not, like many children, think she was very good, and always did right. She knew if she did not give her heart to the Saviour, and love Him better than all other things, she could not go to Heaven when she died. And I do think she did love the Saviour, and tried to do right, that she might please God. The last time I saw her alive was in the Sabbath School. That day Mary was very still and thoughtful. I had seven little girls around me, all blooming with health, and I little thought it was the last time that we all should meet in the class.

One verse in the lesson that day was, "I love them that love me, and they that seek me early shall find me." When I asked them, "do you love God, and seek to please Him by keeping the Sabbath holy?" all quickly answered they did; but Mary with much feeling and a tearful eye, said: "I want to; I hope I do."

In three days after, as I was walking along the street, one of my Sabbath School scholars came running towards me, crying, and saying, "Mary H. and her brother are dead."

I could not believe it at first, as I had not heard she was sick; I went down directly to the house where Mary's father lived; I went in;—our minister and some of the neighbors were there. I inquired if she was dead: they said she was, that she had been sick only a few hours. I went into the room where she lay:—she was pale and cold; yes, her soul had gone away to God, and we trust to be happy forever.

And O! how sad I felt, as I looked on her sweet pale face, and thought, I shall never again see Mary in my class—never hear her speak to me again. Her little brother, three years old, lay dead in the next room. It was such a sight as I never saw before; two little children to be buried in one grave. Saturday I went to the funeral: there were a great many scholars and people there, and it was a very solemn time.

Her mother told me that when she was well, she said much about her lesson, and told much that her teacher said, and wished to have her little brother old enough to go with her; and chose rather to read some good book than to play with her mates.

Her aunt who slept with her says: "I was often reproved on awaking in the morning, to find Mary kneeling by the bed-side, and praying that God would make her a good girl, and bless her friends.

Now, little children, do you think if you should die as suddenly as these children did, your friends would think that you loved the Savour, and had gone to be happy with Him forever? Will you not remember your Creator now, and pray to Him every day; that you may love Him, be happy and good while you live, and go to Him when you die? A. E. S.

Springfield, June 29, 1840. ib.

How to be Loved.—One evening Maria's father related in her presence an anecdote of a little daughter of Dr. Doddridge, which pleased Maria extremely. When this child, about six years old, was asked what made every body love her? she replied, "I don't know indeed, papa, unless it is because I love every body." The beautiful simplicity of this reply struck Maria forcibly. "If this is all that is necessary to be loved," thought Maria, "I will soon make every body love me." Her father mentioned a remark of John Newton, that he considered the world to be divided in two great masses, one of happiness, and the other of misery; and it was his daily business to take as much as possible from the heap of misery, and add it to that of happiness.—"Now," thought Maria, "I will begin tomorrow to try to make every body happy. Instead of thinking all the time about myself, I will ask every minute, what can I do for somebody else. Papa has often told me that this is the best way of being happy myself, and I am determined to try."—Pastor's Daughter.

COMMUNICATION.

For the Western Recorder.

Br. Springer: I have read a communition over the signature of John Scott, in your paper of the 29th ult., with no little surprise and even pain. From a former essay of his, to which I felt it my duty to reply, I was prepared to expect a degree of coarseness in his style and sophistry in his reasonings; but I was not prepared to expect a studied misrepresentation of my views and even of my language.—Under the supposition that I was dealing with an honest, though erring man, I wrote my review of John Scott's first essay. The arguments in that reply he has not attempted to touch, but with an unscrupulousness that does small credit to his honesty, he attempts to create a false issue by representing me as an advocate for "arraying the Church against the State." To do this he has descended to a gross perversion and mis-quotation of my language, and evidently expects that the fraud which he has thus committed will furnish him a loop-hole whereby he can retreat from his uncomfortable position. Of course, I shall not be expected to continue the controversy with an individual whose reverence for the laws of morality is so feeble, that it permits him to substitute mendacity for argument, for though sophistry may result from a clouded intellectual perception, a wilful departure from truth can only arise from a perversion of the moral sentiment. I shall, therefore, only use enough of your space, Mr. Editor, to expose the dishonesty of John Scott, and shall henceforth leave him to conduct the controversy in accordance with his own taste and his own sense of moral obligation, neither of which I can much admire.

I will quote from John Scott's communication in the Recorder of the 29th ult., to which I refer your readers for the accuracy of my quotation: "But this will not do for Br. Oliver—poor man! zealous soul! nor yet his friends, the ultraists." "Abolitionists (he tells us) believe that the church, as a church, has a solemn duty to perform in relation to slavery." "By moral suasion or by political power, she cannot be released from her obligation to cast the abomination from her," &c.—This quotation shows—1. That Br. O. is for making the church to use not only "moral suasion" but also "political power." 2. This "political power" as well as "moral suasion," the church is to wield, "to cast the abomination from herself."—What! bring in "political power" into the church to crush slavery, and then carry ecclesiastical power into the State to overthrow it there. Why, Br. O., this is amalgamation with a witness. 3. Such amalgamation of Church and State as this brother goes for, would prove a more horrible corruption than slavery itself. Not only from John Scott's quotations from me, but from the whole scope of his remarks upon those quotations, the reader is left to infer that I am for making the church use political power—that I am in favor of bringing political power into the church—and of amalgamating Church and State. I ask the reader to re-peruse the above extract from John Scott and then turn to the Recorder of the 30th of May, and examine for himself what I did say. He will find that instead of the sentiments attributed to me by J. S., I used the following language: "Abolitionists believe that the church, as a church, has a solemn duty to perform in reference to slavery; and let the men of the world act as they will against it, by moral suasion or by political power, she cannot be released from her obligation to cast the abomination from her midst and purify herself from its contamination."

Though I cannot regard J. Scott as a very able logician, I have not so mean an opinion of his intelligence as to suppose that he did not know that the words, "by moral suasion or by political power," in the above paragraph, refer to "the men of the world," and not to the "church." That he perceived this is sufficiently evident from the fact that he struck out from the middle of the sentence, "let the men of the world act as they will against it." This is playing the "gouger" with a witness.

I have done with John Scott, at least until he can give some satisfactory explanation of his studied perversion of my sentiments, or makes such acknowledgment of the wrong as will prove the sincerity of his repentance. With any person whose anxiety for victory will not overcome his regard for veracity, I am prepared to discuss the general question of slavery, the duty of the church in reference to it, or any kindred question legitimately connected with the subject.

Yours, affectionately, Thomas Oliver.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Aug. 12, 1840.

S. C. Haver,

In the flourishing town of Putnam has on hand 40 or 50 SADDLES ready for sale, of different qualities, comprising nearly all the varieties in fashion in our Buckeye State.

A good assortment of Bridles and Martingales: Riding and driving Whips: between 180 and 200 Carriage and heavy draft Collars, which will compare and wear with any others made here or elsewhere.

Also, fine York, Dearborn, heavy team and common Farming Harness. A lot of first rate Carriage and Buggy Harness, (brass and silver plated.)

Trunks, vallises, saddle-bags, and double covered wagon whips, varying in quality and price to suit purchasers.

The only recommendation he now offers for his work, is the testimony and long experience of his old customers and friends. He is still anxious to please and accommodate those who may call on him, and hopes to share so much of the public patronage as his attention to his business shall merit.

Putnam, April 29, 1840. 28tf

William Green,

CLOCK AND WATCH REPAIRER, SILVERSMITH, AND JEWELLER,

Can be found at his shop on Main street Putnam, a few doors north of J. C. Guthrie's store, where he will do his best to accommodate customers. He keeps on hand an assortment of spectacles, watch trimmings, pencils, &c.

As far as we have tried Mr. Green as a watch repairer he has given us good satisfaction.—Ed.
April 22, 1840. 35tf.

Glass Manufactory.

The subscriber having dissolved his connexion with the former company, has taken the GLASS WORKS below town under his own management.

WINDOW GLASS, double and single, all seizes, and of superior quality will be kept constantly on hand for sale on reasonable terms.—The experience of the proprietor, in the manufacture of the article, will insure all made to be of the best quality. Call and see.

S. B. Johnson.
Zanesville, Ohio, May 6, 1840. 37

Stray Mare.

Strayed from the subscriber living in Hopewell township, Muskingum county, O., on the 20th of June last, a light SORREL MARE, about 14 or 15 hands high, with a small blaze in the forehead and one white foot; no shoes on when she left. Any person returning said mare or giving information to the subscriber where she can be found, will be liberally compensated for his trouble.

Naaman R. Grant.
Hopewell tp., Musk., O., July 8, 1840. 46

Notice.

All persons indebted to the late firm of Hartley & Anderson, are earnestly requested to call at the Foundry and make settlement, as the change of owners makes this step absolutely necessary. We ask the attention of all persons concerned, to this notice.

J. J. Anderson & Co.
Putnam, Jan. 1, 1840. (Jan. 29: 23.)

O. White, Book Binder, No. 104 Main Street, Zanesville, Ohio.
January 15, 1840. 21tf

THE CASKET,
AND PHILADELPHIA MONTHLY MAGAZIN
UNEXAMPLED SUCCESS!
Prospectus of a New Volume.

The great increase in the subscription of the Casket, which has been nearly d bled since the commencement of the last volu warrants the most extensive improvements the first of July, 1840—at which time a new ume will be commenced with increased vigor Nothing need be said of the firm basis on wh the Casket stands, it being already the old magazine in the country, and has maintain its popularity in the face of all opposition. I to be found upon the centre table of famil making literary pretentions, from Maine Georgia.

TYPE—EMBELLISHMENTS.

The Casket is printed with a clear and bea tiful type, upon the finest white paper. The lustrations are not surpassed by those of any riodical at home or abroad; and beside monthly steel engravings, a quarterly plate colored fashions has lately been added. T style of these embellishments is unequalled, a they are always accompanied with an appropri sketch. No wood cuts disgrace the work. Wh ever appears in the Casket is of the first order art.

The volume will be opened with the first o series of splendid Mezzotint engravings, prep ed expressly for the work, by the burin of Sarta who deservedly stands as the best engraver of kind in the United States.

LITERARY CHARACTER.

The literary character of the Casket is w known. It is wholly original, of the highe order, and sustained by writers of the first ra Essays, Tales, Sketches, and Travels, compr its prominent prose articles; while, the poet is equalled by that of no other magazine of h character. The variety for which the Casket celebrated, shall suffer no diminution; but the contrary, every exertion shall be made to i crease its interest.

SEVERAL ROMANCES OF THE REVOLUTION have already appeared, and others shall follow the course of the volume, presenting, when fi ished a complete picture of the manners, and historical account of the great battles of th time. Thus, the Casket, instead of being fill with sickly sentimentalities, aims at a true d lineation of human nature in every variety passion.

The series of thrilling Nautical Sketches, e titled "Cruising in the last War," and whi are rated by the cotemporary press, equal to t celebrated Sketches from "Tom Cringle's Log will be continued, and the "Leaves from a La yer's Fort-Folio," which have attained a deserv celebrity, will still furnish attraction to t Magazine.

We shall furnish the readers of the Cask with some valuable papers from entirely ne contributors. "The Author of Old Iron Sid off a Lee Shore," will give the first of a numb of Sketches in the July number. We count u on his prolific and graceful pen to do much maintaining the great popularity of the Mag zine. In addition to the variety already embr ced in the pages of the Magazine, our "Syri Letters," the first of which appeared in the Ju number as introductory, will interest, and a worth to its pages. They are from no unpra tised pen.

FASHIONS.

The fashions are published in the Casket qua terly, or as often as any really new styles arri from Paris. The engravings are colored, an executed from original designs. No old, wor out plates are re-touched, and then published the latest fashions. The truth of our design may be tested by comparing them with the late description of dresses from London and Paris.—They are universally admitted to be the fines specimen of engraving and coloring afforded b any Magazine in this country. The expense o getting them up is great, but we shall in no-wa abate the quality. Remember! The readers o the Casket are furnished with these fashion plate as an extra. They do not interfere with the reg ular, and choice engravings, which always accom pany the work.

TIME OF PUBLICATION.

The Casket is published on the first of th month in every quarter of the Union. The mos distant subscriber consequently receives it o that day, as well as those who reside in Phila delphia. In all the principal cities agents hav been established, by which means subscribers i the vicinity can obtain their copies free of post age.

TERMS—THREE DOLLARS per annum Or two Copies yearly for FIVE DOLLARS, in variably in advance, post paid. No new subscrib received without the mony, or the name of a re sponsible agent. Published by
George R. Graham,
36 Carter's Alley, Philadelphia
August 5, 1840. 50.

Dissolution.

The partnership heretofore existing betwee the subscribers in the Putnam Foundry under the firm of HARTLEY & ANDERSON was this day dissolved by mutual consent.

The Putnam Foundry will hereafter be conducted by J. J. Anderson & Co.

Levi Hartley,
Jacob J. Anderson.
Putnam, Jan. 1, 1840. (Jan. 29: 23.)

Dissolution.

The partnership heretofore existing between S. B. Johnson and J. M. Kirkpatrick, under the firm of S. B. Johnson & Co. was dissolved by mutual consent, on Thursday 19th inst.

S. B. Johnson,
J. M. Kirkpatrick.
Zanesville, March 31, 1840. 32tf

THE
WESTERN RECORDER
IS PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY.

☞The office of the Recorder is five and a half miles west of Zanesville.

TERMS.

1. The Western Recorder will be published weekly, on an imperial sheet, at $2 00 per annum, in advance: $2 50 at the end of three months; $3 00 at the end of the year.

2. No discontinuances will be allowed, except at the discretion of the publisher, until all arrearages are paid.

3. To all ministers having regular pastoral charges, who do any thing at all for the paper, if they will direct us where, a copy shall be sent gratis; any other who forward to us $10 00 for new subscribers, shall have six copies sent to any address he may give.

4. All letters designed for the paper, must be directed to "C. Springer, Meadow Farm, Muskingum, Ohio."

5. A failure to notify a discontinuance before the expiration of the subscription year, will be considered a new engagement.

CHARACTER.—The pages of the Western Recorder will be open to discussion on all moral questions;—it will give articles on Literature, Mechanics, Agriculture,—an abstract of Religious and Political intelligence, and whatever may be interesting and instructive to families in general. A portion of its columns will be open to Advertisements and Prices Current,—another portion to sustain the interests of the Methodist Protestant Church in the West.—These two latter objects will not likely occupy more than one page.

The Recorder will take a firm stand against Clerical Supremacy.

THE WESTERN RECORDER.

J. SPRINGER, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER. | TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM IN ADVANCE. | Vol. 2.--No. 2. | ZANESVILLE, OHIO, WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 2, 1840. | Whole No. 54. | JOHN W. WHITE, PRINTER. | $2.50, IN THREE MONTHS; $3, END OF YEAR.

COMMUNICATIONS.

For the Western Recorder.

W. MR. SHINN—HIS NEW BOOK.

Mr. Editor: The fact is known to all your readers that the Rev. Mr. Shinn been engaged in writing, and has just ished a book "On the Benevolence d Rectitude of the Supreme Being." ious causes tend to call public attend, in an unusual degree, particularly in West, to this new work. Mr. Shinn tensively known throughout the en- West, as well as in other sections of Union, as a writer of great force and r--as a very distinguished and elo- nt divine--a man of extensive uirements—of years and vast expe- ce—of great talents, moral worth ability, goodness of heart, and as an expounder of the Oracles of Truth. se considerations, in connection with fact of the publication of a theological k of no ordinary merit, some twenty rs ago, by Mr. Shinn, tend in an emi- degree, to call the attention of theo- al readers to this new book. The ility manifested, in a certain quarter, his book, which, however, was anticip- d by the author, as is manifest from following quotation from his work, is ther reason why Mr. Shinn will be sively read. He says, in his pre- after referring to his expectation of g pronounced heretical:

"On these grounds the liberty may be ved for the author to entreat all pro- nt christians, not to use unfair efforts nder the following arguments from ing their way through society; but e contrary, let candid christians lend friendly assistance to call off the ic attention from novels and vain sements, to the study of that Divine racter, which is the perfection of all llence, and the source of all felicity."

his extract shows that he did not cipate the most kind and friendly ption for the labor of his pen. His e effort "to vindicate the ways of to man," and to give to the erring dren of our race a correct knowledge he character of our Father—the Su- ne Ruler of the universe, has excited pposition which the author anticipa- but it need give him no uneasiness ear, as the effect of the opposition only be to wake up attention and osity and make the book more eagerly ht and read by an inquiring and stigating community.

Calvinistic journal in Pittsburgh, and Western Christian Advocate at Cin- ati, have each endeavored, and very irly too, to injure our distinguished or. The Pittsburgh Conference of Methodist Episcopal Church, too, ed a resolution condemnatory of Mr. n's book, thus fully realizing the cipated hostility. "The little dogs all, Tray, Blanche and Sweetheart" ark at the author of the book under ew, and endeavor to bark it into dis- it, but the effort will be unavailing.

r. Shinn is one of those original think- and bold, fearless writers, who inves- tes and inquiries for truth, and then rds that truth, however much it may lict with the preconceived notions and ions or the creeds of men. When nvestigates and searches out truth, inquires into the character of our her in heaven, he does it not with his d, or the creeds of men before him, ing to have the results of his investi- ions and inquiries correspond with n. Far from it. Hence, when his stigations lead him to believe and rd as truth, what conflicts with the ular notions of the day, he can rea- ably calculate that those, whose craft danger, will cry out "great is Diana he Ephesians." He writes like a man honesty, candor, integrity and origin- y, and he investigates the character perfections of the Divine Being, with llectual powers of a high order, and an honesty of purpose which shrinks from the declaration of his convic- s and opinions, however little they y accord with the popular opinions of day.

mong other important principles which Shinn establishes and illustrates, are following: 1st. That God is love, that there is nothing in His char- er opposed to this principle. Even ath, as he says, page 174, is kindled at the fountain of love, and is the energy of love.

2dly. That God will always seek the good of all his creatures, whether in time or eternity; in heaven, earth or hell—and that He will eventually seek to make all holy and happy (see page 318.) that are willing to be made so. 3dly. That there may be a change of moral character among the damned; that men may repent in hell and that there may be a corresponding abatement of sufferings. 4thly. That the misery of the damned will not be infinite, but that it will be strictly according to justice and the exact demerit of sin.

The following paragraphs are furnished by Mr. Shinn, in proof of the first principle, above laid down·

"The question before us is this: does the wrath or vengeance of the Lord proceed from the same source with His mercy and kindness, or from a different source. Is wrath, in a holy being, any thing else than the energy of love? or is it something opposite to love? There are two kinds of wrath that are to be carefully distinguished; the one is the action of justice, which flows from love; the other the operation of injustice, which proceeds from malevolence. The devil is represented as a very wrathful being, and we are told he was a murderer from the beginning. It will, doubtless, be granted by all christians, that there is no such wrath in the Almighty. Nay, it must be admitted, that if the divine character be opposite to the character of the devil, which none will deny, the wrath of God proceeds from an opposite principle,—therefore, as the devil's wrath proceeds from malevolence, the divine wrath results from the principle above stated. Some appear to think that a perfectly benevolent being can have, in His nature, no such thing as wrath; while others conclude, "a God all mercy is a God unjust." These seemingly opposite opinions, however, will probably be found to be nothing more than a dispute about words. "To say an unjust being is at the same time all mercy, is a paradox that connot bear examination." The wrath of God is not animosity towards sinners; for He delights to pardon them, whenever it can be done without giving up His kingdom, and sacrificing the welfare of His unoffending subjects. The redemption of the world by our Lord Jesus Christ was intended to open the way for the pardon of sin to be extended as far as it is possible for mercy to extend it. That is, so far as will not impair the moral system on which the common welfare depends; and beyond this, the grant of pardon would be unmerciful. Divine wrath, when put into a flame, is kindled at the fountain of love. It punishes the sinner, in order either mercifully to reform him, or kindly to protect the general happiness. Even in the wonderful suffering of redeeming love, wrath and mercy operated in perfet harmony."

Our author argues as follows, in reference to the second principle, viz: that God will always seek the good of all His creatures, whether in time or eternity, &c.

"The three great axioms of christian theology are these: First, that the God of infinite wisdom, power and love, has formed the best possible plan of holiness and happiness."

"Secondly, that upon this plan He operates in the best possible manner to accomplish the good originally intended.—Thirdly, that His impartial mind has no respect to persons, but that towards all individuals, and in all periods of time and eternity. He invariably and immutably uses the best and most efficient means to promote holiness and happiness, and to prevent and diminish sin and misery."

"A holy being delights in holiness; and of course, is disposed to promote holiness as effectually and universally as it can be promoted: consequently, the Holy One of Israel never will do any thing to prevent the spread of holiness in any region of the universe, where moral agents are willing it should prevail. He will never do any thing to hinder any of His creatures from repenting of their sin and becoming holy; for this is what the devil has been doing ever since sin entered into the world. To affirm that our Creator will pursue this course in a future state, is to suppose the most holy being and the most unholy one, will manifest themselves alike, both in purpose and operation."

Hear Mr. Shinn's arguments in proof of the correctness of the third principle, which he attempts to establish. On page 222, he says:

"But does not this suppose that God will exercise benevolence towards the damned? He is certainly disposed to favor them as much as He can without injury to others. Will any man have the assurance to say, that the divine action towards them will proceed from the principle of malignity? We are aware of the answer, that future puishment will be the act of divine juctice. True, for justice is one essential part of God's eternal character of love. Justice secures to every one that which is right, and consequently, it secures to every criminal an exemption from all degrees of punishment that would be wrong. If God will carry on an administration of justice over hell, it is because hell is under his government, as well as heaven; and consequently its destinies are regulated by the same principles. Is He just in one part of His dominions, and unjust in another? Has He good will towards a part of His creatures, and ill will towards another part?"

"We are aware, that the alarm of heresy will be taken, at the least deviation from the supposed uniformity and infinity of hell torments. It is thought essential to the sound and orthodox view of this subject, to believe that all who are condemned in a future state, are entirely abandoned to absolute misery; that no regard will be had to their welfare, throughout eternal ages; and that any concern for them, other than to perpetuate their misery, is not to be supposed to exist in the Divine Mind, and cannot be entertained by any man, without inexcusable heterodoxy!

"But why should all regard to the welfare of the millions of those wretched creatures be abandoned forever? Has the Deity no right to entertain any other disposition towards them, than that of a fixed purpose to perpetuate and augment their misery? If He has a right to entertain other sentiments towards them, then it would not be wrong for Him to aim, ultimately at their well being, so far as it could be promoted without injury to others. If it would not be wrong for God to do so, then it is not a heresy for us to believe He may at some time or other, modify their condition, with a view to an abatement of their misery, so far as will consist with the common welfare. Would such a procedure be unworthy of our Creator? Would it tarnish His glory? Would it grieve and offend His holy angels? If at any future period of eternity, a benefit could be extended to some of God's creatures, without injury to any, has not God authority to extend to them that benefit? If He has, who will be offended to see Him exercise it? If He has not, in what way has His authority been forfeited?"

In regard to the fourth principle which our author attempted to establish, he holds the following language: "In regard to the future misery of the wicked, the Bible teaches expressly that the degrees of it shall correspond with the amount of turpitude in the guilty individuals. Now, every moral reason which can be given for this judicial procedure, will be exactly the same reason for varying the treatment towards every subject of punishment, as his moral character shall vary. If one shall voluntarily augment the amount of his guilt, his punishment will be increased accordingly; if another shall surrender, and "consent unto the law that it is good," there may be reasons in the system of perfect rectitude, for mitigating his condition; and yet, no reasons whatever, for elevating him to the felicities and glories of the kingdom of heaven."

"It may be replied, that sinners in a future state can never do any thing which will give them a claim to the glories of heaven, yet God has not forfeited his right of benevolence; therefore if it be his will to extend such a favor to penitent sinners in a future state, He has a right to do so. This must be granted; but that which we affirm is that He has not promised such a favor to any of Adam's race except to such as accept the overture upon the gospel plan, during their probationary existence on earth."

Mr. Shinn's view appears to be, that God has a right to restore sinners, throughout the future state of existence, to a participation of the blessedness of heaven. but that He has not promised to do so, hence it may never be done, although the right to do so, is admitted.

Many of Mr. Shinn's views appear to be his own—original—his book is well written,—written in a style worthy of his reputation. His book abounds with many fine thoughts, beautifully expressed, and will tend to give the reader a high opinion of the talents, intellectual powers and benevolence of its amiable author.

Above all I hestitate not to believe that the more the book is read, the better will be our views of the Divive Being, and the better will we be acquainted with his character and attributes. I will not further prolong this review of Mr. Shinn's work, and will conclude it by the following beautiful extract, which will be found on page 75.

"It is delightful, however, to understand, that in the operation of all those mighty attributes, infinite goodness is at the centre. Love reigns supreme, uncontrolled, immutable, immense and eternal. Eternity affords the time for its action, and immensity the theatre; wisdom forms the plan of benevolence, power carries it into effect, truth displays it, and justice defends it. In all this there is a harmony more perfect and complete, than is even exhibited in the serene and untroubled movements of the stars and suns and planets of the material heavens; and as soon will Jupiter fall into the Sun, or the moon be dashed against the Earth, as justice will contradict mercy, or counteract any other perfection of the universal Ruler. The greatness of God should make us modest in our conclusions, and not so immodest as to believe He is too great a sovereign to be righteous and benevolent in all his actions."

LUTHER.

RELIGIOUS INTELLIGENCE.

TYLER CO., VA., AUG. 13, 1840.

Br. Springer: Having to write to you on business, it would not, probably, be amiss, to give a few facts relative to our success since my last communication.—Prospects are becoming quite encouraging. I have taken eleven into society since, and we are looking for more before the year closes. We are looking up to our quarterly meeting with buoyant expectations. I think I can truly say that our membership on this mission is increasing in piety, and seem to have the cause of religious liberty at heart. The public mind seems to be interested in our success. I think, sir, the tree of Religious Liberty, if properly cultivated, promises, ere long, to be the prince among the neighboring trees in this section of the country. In our societies peace reigns, and there is quite a union of effort for the promotion of the good cause which they have espoused.

My heart has been gladdened while perusing the pages of the Recorder, accordingly I have been doing all I can to get good subscribers for the same. It has been of considerable use to us in this section, showing our success through this District, and exposing clerical supremacy and contradicting the false reports that have been put into circulation in the bounds of this mission.

Yours, &c. J. DEGARMO.

JACKSONSBURG, O., Aug., 19, 1840.

Br. Springer: We are much encouraged on our circuit this year. Br. Dalbey has been faithful with us. We have received something rising forty members into society—with a good prospect of future success. Br. D. has now left us to prepare for conference. He has left a good impression on the minds of the people—we have had sone first rate meetings this year. It has been manna to the soul. Indeed, I do not know how they could have been much better for believers—glory to heaven's King—God's children were enabled to rejoice to the full—sinners converted—backsliders reclaimed—and saints built up in their most holy faith. Our dear old Br. Flood, our highly respected President, was with us on the 15th, 16th, and 17th inst. On his return from Indiana, we had a precious meeting at Br. Tetrach Fall's meeting house. It was our last quarterly meeting for the present year—and truly it was a good one—I have not seen so many of our brethren together on any former occasion as at this meeting. They came no doubt with the expectation of seeing and hearing our worthy old President—and they were not mistaken or disappointed. But of this meeting I expect Br. Dalbey or Flood will give an account. It was a precious time—the shouts of the people went up to high heaven, like it was at the time of the demolishing of the walls of Jericho, and something similar to Christ's triumph into Jerusalem. Six united with us in society—brethren of other denominations were in attendance with us and enjoyed themselves as though we were all of the same society—thank God we are all one in Christ Jesus.

The unstationed brethren, on this circuit have labored to profit this year—our old Br. C. Fall has been abundantly useful—he almost becomes young again when he gets into the work. It is gratifying and encouraging to see such old servants of the Lord thus engaged. Br. McGuire has attended with us frequently—and to no little profit--he is a workman who needeth not to be ashamed. I hope we will yet rise over all opposition, and our principles spread until the world will be inundated with them, and not one left to plead the cause of the wicked one, and the principles of republicanism take root downwards, in the very heart and marrow of the people of both church and state, then and in that case, there will not be one to advocate the principles of monarchy, limited or unlimited, in all the happy land of Columbia. Yours,

JOHN H. THOMAS.

NEAR. RUMLEY SHELBY COUNTY OHIO.

Br Springer I have Just Concluded my fourth quarterly meeting on Miami circuit which was in conjunction with A campmeeting it closed the fifth day or tuesday our Ministerial aid Was J. Eckle A lambert D. Stephens. D. Moore. A: Trimbo W. Medearis. J. Medearis Preachers and People of different orders Joined with us to labour for the lord the word was Preached with zeal and in the power of the spirit nevertheless this being the case the People seemed to remain unaffected until monday and monday night when the Lord in his mercy showered Salvation upon the congregation sinners was convicted and converted and believers made to shout for Joy we pray that the great head of the church will bless this meeting to many poor sinners and bring them to experience salvation about forty have been added since the circuit was organized Considering the disagreeable circumstances under which we labored when the circuit was first organized we have great cause to be thankful peace and union with a few exceptions pervades our borders the lord has done great things for us whereof we are glad may his mercy pursue his people and make them instrumental in his hand of conviction and conversion until the whole earth shall be filled with his glory I have written a very short communication please to publish what I have wrote except the bad spelling Yours in the bonds of the Gospel

JOSEPH, PARKE sup

THE CHARACTER OF CHRIST.—When the Greek artist undertook to represent on canvass the tragic scene of the sacrifice of Iphigenia, he employed every secret of his talent in heightening the faces of the assistants, but when he came to that of Agamemnon he drew a veil over it, for he felt that the depth of a father's despair, under such circumstances, was beyond the reach of the pencil. There is one other character, gentlemen, in scripture, which should now be presented to you as a summary of all that I have said, but I dare not make the attempt. What language can delineate, or pretend to give an idea of perfection? What early maturity! While yet a child, He astonishes the wisest by His learning. What docility to His parents! What affection for His friends! What indulgence to the fallen! What sympathy with female weakness, and infant innocence! What faultless purity of life! With all this gentleness, what unshrinking severity for vice! With all this innocence, what unerring sagacity! In this lowly condition, what power of thought, what elevation of sentiment, what grace and charm of language! "Never man spake as He spake." In His doctrine, what before unheard of, unthought of wisdom—the wisdom not of books, of the heart! "I give unto you a new commandment, that ye love one another." In conduct, what unaffected self-sacrifice! "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do!"—Whence then comes this moral phenomenon, still more strange, and on ordinary principles, inexplicable, than the one just alluded to? If the history be true, how happens it that the most unpropitious circumstances have brought out this grand result? If false, how is it that a few illiterate persons have invented a character which to invent would be, in one form, to realize! Answer once more, infidelity! Answer once more, skepticism! Gentlemen; infidelity, skepticism, have answered. The force of truth, long since, tore from the lips of one of their ablest champions the reluctant confession. Hear it in the words of Rousseau:

"Socrates lived and died like a philosopher: Jesus Christ lived and died like a God."

THE BIBLE.—The Bible must be the invention either of good men or angels; bad men or devils; or of God. It could not be the invention of good men or angels, for they neither would nor could make a book, and tell lies all the time they were writing it, saying, "Thus saith the Lord," when it was their own invention. It could not be the invention of bad men or devils, for they would not make a book, which commands all duty, forbids all sin, and condemns their souls to all eternity. The conclusion, therefore, must be drawn, that "All Scripture is given by inspiration of God."—Stackhouse.

If married ladies would consult their husbands instead of their friends on most matters concerning both, there would be less harsh feelings and more comfort among the parties.

Genius is a spark that adulation too often puffs out; emulation can only kindle it into a flame.

LITERARY AGENT'S REPORT, PITTSBURGH DISTRICT.

Mr. Editor: As the conference is approaching, will you have the goodness to give the following a place in the Recorder? I have visited nearly all the stations and circuits in the district, and the people have expressed a willingness to help, but from the general scarcity of money many were hindred. However, we have done the best we could under the circumstances. Will those who have subscribed and not paid be punctual in forwarding it to conference?

Names.	Sub.	Paid.	Names.	Sub.	Paid
Wm Davis,	10 00		G.P.Rogers,	3 00	3 00
D. Davis,	10 00		M. Connell,	2 00	2 00
Wm Miller	5 00	5 00	J.M.Rogers,	5 00	5 00
R. Cole,	5 00		J. Brown,	50	50
R. Lee,	5 00		J. Torrence	5 00	5 00
Jno. Staley	5 00	3 00	D.G.Rogers	2 50	2 50
J. Weaver	1 00	1 00	J M'Clintick	5 00
L. Ross	5 00	5 00	J. Page	1 00	1 00
Wm Staley	5 00	5 00	Ths. Foster	5 00
Jno. Rigby	3 00		M B.Philips
Capt. Hart	5 00		in 4 an. p'ts	20 00
A Robinson	5 00	5 00	AsherSmith	1 50	1 50
H. Funk	5 00	5 00	N. Gibson	25	25
Wm. Cox	10 00	5 00	Cash	12	12
J. Stewart	5 00		John Boyd	50	50
D. Soule	10 00	5 00	H. Gibson	25	25
Jno. Logan	1 00	1 00	J Stillwagon	1 00	1 00
Wm Logan	1 00		T.G.Ewing	1 00	1 00
N Smith	50	50	An'Clain jr	5 00	5 00
J Collins	3 00		T Kilpatr'k	1 25	1 25
P Stephens	1 00	1 00	WLJohns'n	2 00
A Johnson	10 00	10	Josh Hall	2 00	2 00
BJConnell	1 00	1 00	R Smiley	2 00
Geo White	1 00	1 00	J M Coup	2 00	2 00
S Freeman	10 00	10	PTLaishly	5 00	5 00
I Francis	5 00		J Vandevort	5 00	5 00
A Correll	5 00		A Summers	1 00	1 00
S Robbins	2 50		Josh Wells	1 00	1 00
Wm Correll	3 00		O Hawker	1 00	1 00
WDavids'n	5 00	5 00	Ashby Pool	3 00	3 00
E Rogers	5 00		W Smith	2 00	2 00
Jas Davis	2 00	2 00	W Willey	2 00	2 00
Josh Paul	2 00	2 00	G Chadrack	2 00	2 00
H Camlin	1 00	1 00	A Holland	1 00	1 00
H Griffith	50	50	R Holland	1 00	1 00
J Bunker	50	50	W Holland	1 00	1 00
M Griggs	25	25	Tisherwood	2 00	2 00
J Karns	2 50	2 50	J Coh'nb'gh	25	25
Jno Bunker	12	12	Ths Barns	5 00	5 00
— Bunker	12	12	F Chisler	1 00	1 00
E Martin	25		J S Chisler	3 00	1 00
M Burton	25	25	S Shores	1 00	1 00
E Johnson	25	25	A Fleming	1 50	1 50
J Lowry	50	50	An Fleming	1 00	1 00
E Hudson	1 00	1 00	B Fleming	1 00	1 00
J H Deford	25 —	25	J Sh'ckelford	50	50
Wm Ebert	2 —	2 —	D Shoop	1 —	1 —
R Boyle	1 —	1 —	A Hall	2 —	2 —
J Conoway	25	25	DMerchand	5 —	5 —
JHRobison	2 —	2 —	EBrownfield	1 —	1 —
J Fisher	1 —	1 —	D Gantz	1 —	1 —
A Byers	10 —	10	J J Hill	17½	17
H Philips	10 —		M Fleming	62	62
M Hart	50	50	Wm Kerr	85	85
H Griffith	5 —		J Christy	43	43
W Fleming	1 —	1 —	MNicholson	5 —	5 —
N Christy	50	50	S Stockton	10 —	10
Collection	1 06	1 06	CC Vansant	1 —	1 —
A Smith	5 00	5 00	M Hardy	1 00	1 00
John Cole	10 —	1 00	EArmstr'ng	2 50	2 50
R Kidwell	1 —	1 00	MJealoson	1 00	1 00
W Shields	1 50	1 50	S Clarke	1 00	1 00
A White	3 —		J P Davidson	1 00
R Whiting	50	50	W poningt'n	1 00	1 00
H Burdett	1 00	1 00	G Rogers	3 00	1 00
R Kimble	50	50	E S Jones	2 00
JCKemble	2 00	2 00	WHamilt'n	2 00
S H Goff	50	50	I Mahaffe	1 00
R Criss	50	50	JClapsadale	1 00	1 00
J Huffman	1 —	1 —	Josh Morse	1 00	1 00
Ann Blue	50	50	I Hastings	5 00
M Bradley	50	50	J Crowl	1 —	1 00
J Currey	50	50	judge Henly	1 —	1 00
T Poulton	62	62	P Kerner	1 —
J Wright	87	87	M Jenkins	1 —
WERogers	25	25	w niterbidle	1 —
Josh Kirby	10 —		JR Rudolph	2 —
A Wilson	1 —	1 —	Dr Brooks	1 —	1 00
J Leonard	1 —	1 —	D Beggs	5 00	5 00
S Crouse	2 —		A Roach	1 00	1 00
A M'Curdy	1 —		J Dayton	1 00
J Clancy	2 —		W Berryhill	1 00	1 00
J Leisure	1 —	1 —	Wm Davis	3 00
J Inghram	1 —	1 —	Ths Scott	1 00

Names.	Sub.	Paid.	Names.	Sub.	Paid
M Gantz	50	50	Hugh Scott	5 00
G Swartz	3 —		J Bartholemew	1 00
W Imes	2 —	1 —	W Harrison	5 00
N Clutter	1 —		A Townsend	1 00	1 00
W Smith	5 —	5 —	John Parr	1 00
J Langley	2 —	2 —	James Scott	1 00
A Fell	1 —	50	J Swearengen	1 00
HPatters'n	1 —	1 —	D McGrew	1 00
Dr Bates	1 —	1 —	Dr Mitchell	1 00
C Barns	1 —	1 —	Peter Corbett	2 00	2 00
W Mosgrove	25	25	A Burlingame	2 00	2 00
L Kinsey	1 —		Sam'l Byers	1 00
W Phipps	1 —		R Calvert	1 00	1 00
W Sharon	50		E Hoskins	5 00
C A Mahue	25	25	John Combs	1 00
C Glover	50	50	Chas Lukans	1 00
M Kerr	50	50	M Gilbreath	1 00
E Wheeler	25	25	J Secrest, sr	1 00	1 00
T Furbay	5 —		Robt Edie	25	25
J Secrest	50		H A P Davis	2 00
W Barrett	75	75	John Grimes	1 00
M Abdell	2 —		H Dean	50
J Knox	50	50	J Secrest	25
Jno Clarke	1 —		O Jacobs	25	25
Levi Hays	50		A friend	25	25
D Lewis	50		Caleb J. Sears	1 00
W A Sears	1 —		S Henderson	1 00	1 00
I Lewis	25	25	Robt Fulton	1 00
ELukans sr	50		John Sears	1 00
MBLukans	1 —		S Robinson	1 00
Dr Barns	1 00	1 —	James Gregg	50
J Lukans	50	50	J Needham	50
N Johnson	25	25	D Lambert	50
E Lukans jr	50	50	W H Combs	50
Jas Lewis	1 00		A R Jordan	50
G Lukans	1 —		G J Collins	50
John Bear	1 —		S A Fox	50
H Beans	1 —		H Jordan	50
T Kuntz	50		W Dougherty	1 00
J Hastings	1 —		Jac Haymaker	50
Jno Entz	3 —		Jas Scott	1 00
J Mahaffy	1 —		Jno Haymaker	50
A Beale	50	50	P Ladley	1 00
D Chandler	1 —		A Brown, jr	1 00
SBJohnson	5 00		Geo Ditter	1 00	1 00
O White	5 00		Robt Manly	50
J B Stout	3 —		J Poundstone	50
Jno Hobby	1 —		Dr Flowers	1 00
W Hokams	1 —		James Burns	1 00
J H Linder	1 —		Joseph Brown	1 00
J Walker	1 —		J Johnson	50	50
G Smenk	1 —		A friend	20	20
J E Swart	50		James Brown	1 00	1 00
W Hurdle	50		John Brown	50	50
L Hurdle	1 —		M Brotherlen	3 00	3 00
W Camp	1 —	1 —	Ths White	50	50
S Rodman	1 —		Cash	1 00	1 00
S Johnson	1 —		M Lease	1 00	1 00
G Fogle	1 —		Geo Kaufman	5 00	5 00
NWilliams	50		Geo Clarke	3 00
AHamill'n	1 —		Cash	1 00	1 00
D Street	50	50	Robt Reed	50	50
L Starkey	25	25	J Hipsley	1 00
Jos Brown	25	25	B McCracken	1 00
J Johnson	1 —		R Thompson	1 00
I Anderson	1 —		S Longsworth	1 00
A friend	25	25	M Thompson	1 00
C Starkey	1 —		WW Worman	50
W L Clarke	1 00		Isaac Cassel	5 00
J Starkey	50		James Reed	2 00
T Calhoun	2 —		C Strong	50	50
I Vanhorn	25		Robert Reed	3 00	3 00
J Springer	5 00		Mor Moore	50	25
J W White	1 00		C Chambers	50	50
A C Brown	3 00		Geo Ringter	50
J J Fleming	1 —		John Morgan	50
D Jaurot	25	25	James Loyd	50
W Campbel	1 —		Hugh Lord	50
J Robinson	1 —	1 —	M Chase	50
R Smith	50		Cash	25	25
J Grainger	1 —	1 00	A Powers	2 00
Jno Plumer	50		J Stout	2 00
W Smith	25		Wm Williams	50
J S Glimes	2 —	2 —	G Dougherty	1 00	1 00
J Burns	50	50	R & J Francis	5 00
D Scott	1 00		R H Halsted	1 00	1 00
F Beaker	50	50

It is my intention, please Providence, to visit a few more appointments before conference. Perhaps I can obtain a little more. Several whose names we have not, promised to send some help to conference; will they bear it in mind?

Yours, &c. GEO. HUGHES.

For the Western Recorder.

SMITH IN REPLY TO REV. J. CLARKE.

Mr. Editor: Well, really, is not the communication of the Rev. J. Clarke in your number of the 5th instant, more than a little amusing? It seems from the gentleman's statements that he had no allusion to me, and all this time, to use one of your own phrases, I have been "barking up the wrong stump." And moreover, he has strong suspicions, it appears, that I am an "incog." And he also indicates great aversion to being placed in "individual encounter with J. Smith." Why is this? Does he wish to avoid the castigations I might give him? Or does he feel so elevated in his own estimation that he deigns not to stoop to notice a humble layman? I am rather inclined to the latter opinion. At least I would so judge from the tenor of his communications. I noticed a letter in your 43d number, describing the condition of his circuit, in which he tells us, in substance, that he is "highly esteemed for his work's sake," and passes a high encomium on the people of his charge, for their "intelligence," because, forsooth, they swallow all his dogmas. It would seem that every man who opposes his peculiar notions, has either got no sense or is destitute of moral principle, while all who go in his leading strings are quite "intelligent." Pity the gentleman could not see himself, for a few moments, in the light in which others must view him. A man possessed of this kind of mind could very easily "despise the day of small things,"—could think it "beneath his dignity" to notice a man in the humble walks of life.

But I promised in my last to notice some specimens of the logical gentility of the Rev. gentleman. But I confess now that I have undertaken it, I shrink from the task. I feel as though I could not handle the productions of such a mind, "infidel," as it insinuated I am, without becoming defiled. But having given my promise, disagreeable as is the job, under the circumstances, I feel impelled to the performance of my engagement; but as it is rather a nasty business, I will make it as brief as possible.

The first thing I shall notice, is the following extract:

"I have heard preachers speak contemptuously of abolition, and declare their want of interest in the subject; but it has only demonstrated to my mind. their own want of sympathy for human woe and their deficiency in moral sense."

Now, Mr. Editor, this sentence appeared to me, until Mr. C.'s last manifesto, entirely irrelevant to any thing which had occurred in this investigation; but when the gentleman informed us it was you he meant in that production, and not "J. Smith," I at once saw the explanation. You had stated in the article upon which he was animadverting that you had "reasons which were satisfactory to yourself for not taking any active part in the present abolition enterprize," and he meant here very graciously and very politely to tell you that you were destitute of moral principle. This gentleman, who is so zealous and of such strict integrity, that like old Paul, he is "highly esteemed for his work's sake," wishes, in your own columns, sir, to bear his testimony against your want of principle. And, who is better qualified for the task than he?—for, in reference to wisdom, he appears to have been born at least a century before Solomon, and in point of philanthrophy to have inherited the mantle of Howard himself.

Further, speaking of his opponents, he says:

"Charity is compelled to conclude that they are wofully blinded by prejudice, or else so ☞corrupt in principle as to volunteer their hypocritical advocacy for human oppression." Again, "I feel bound in the absence of all evidence to regard the charge of political design" "as ☞contemptably false." In his last onslaugh, says he, alluding to myself;—"when a writer professing to have no connection with the church, comes out in her periodicals, with dictatorial instructions to the ministers of Christ, enforced only by opprobrious epithets and ☞slanderous insinuations," &c.

What fine specimens, these, of mildness and gentility. His training must have been far superior to my heathen education. I should judge from the exceeding politeness and refinement of his style that his early tuition must have been from the original class of Ohio keelboat men. I have little doubt, from the spirit the gentleman manifests, but what he has zeal and goodness enough, if the occasion should call for it, to proceed

To prove his doctrine orthodox,
By Apostolic blows and knocks.

As to my "corrupt principles," "contemptible falsehood," "slanderous insinuations," or wish to "dictate," I have no other reply to make but to refer the reader to my essays. And considering my heathen origin if they do not exhibit as much calmness and courtesy as those of the Rev. gentleman, I will yield the contest.

Once more; "if the organ of the Western Conferences is compelled into criminal silence on this subject, or the weight of its influence is made to bear against the righteous principles of the gospel, when it is attempted to apply them to slavery, it will afford evidence of the lamentable fact that the Methodist Protestant Church, notwithstanding all her boasting of mutual rights, and all her thunders against priestly proscription and ecclesiastical tyranny, is, herself, the willing slave of a ☞corrupt public sentiment."

That is, it will not suffice that the Western Conferences have declared against slavary, and that their organ has published all the stuff written on this exciting topic, but they must all favor and give TONE to all the gentleman's peculiar notions, or else they have either got no "sense" or are the slaves of "public" "corruption."

Now, I cannot but consider such a mind as this an unsafe one in any community, especially if it should be endowed with talent or possessed of influence. It will make all its notions matters of conscience, and if it cannot be gratified it would throw the weight of its influence against the best cause in the world, raise parties, or unite with its enemies for its destruction. And what is the worst of all there is no such thing as satisfying its demands. On the subject of slavery it would first ask for a resolution declaring slave-holding a moral offence, and with this it would propose to be satisfied, but this obtained, ere long it could not rest unless you resolved to exclude all slave-holders from the church; then after reposing here a little it would begin to beat up for a crusade against the infidels, to force them by the strong arm of power into measures. And should any one oppose it, in its onward march, at any stage of its progress, its reply would be easy, "you have either got no sense," or are destitute of "moral principle."

But all this, he will reply, is only "slanderous insinuations." Yes! the best and easiest way in the world to get rid of unpalatable truths is to cry out slander against them.

These are grave subjects, I admit, and should be treated in a dignified manner, but there is no possible way of meeting such excessive dogmatism, but with a little irony. I have, however, kept myself under restraint. If the gentleman should write again without any improvement in his manner, I will either not reply to him, or else let him have the whole benefit of his own style. I would rather, however, he would consign the subject to Mr. Dalbey, it would be more pleasant for me to get along with him, and I am of opinion he would do the subject more credit than Mr. C.

Very respectfuliy, yours, &c.

J. SMITH.

Sugar Grove, O., Aug. 18, 1840.

RELIGIOUS INTELLIGENCE.

FINLEY, O., AUG. 7, 1840.

Br. Springer: Our camp-meeting on Finley circuit, closed last Tuesday. We had on the whole a good meeting. Thirteen were added to the church which makes sixty-two in all this year.

S. W. THORNTON.

WESTMINSTER, O., AUG. 17, 1840.

Br. Springer: We have this day closed the camp-meeting for Lima circuit, which was one of the best kind of meetings. There was such displays of God's grace, that sinners were melted into tears on the outskirts of the encampment.—There were a number of conversions. At sacrament on Tuesday morning we had a special time. Fourteen were added to the church as the fruits of this meeting, and several others have not made up their minds to what church they will attach themselves. Yours, &c.

JOHN GUEST.

OBITUARY.

For the Western Recorder.

Br. Springer: Permit me to record in your valuable paper, the death of our venerable mother, MARGARET HENKLE. She died in triumph on the 8th instant.

The subject of this notice was born October 22d, 1761, in Little York, Pennsylvania, of parents by the name of Montgomery. She embraced religion and joined the M. E. Church. While quite young, married Moses Henkle in Virginia, in 1779,—moved to this State and settled in this county in 1814. Her companion, after laboring long and faithfully as a minister of the gospel in the M. E. Church, was called to rest from his labors, July 27, 1828. She was left to mourn the loss, yet, her losses and crosses were always borne with patience and resignation. The Lord had blessed her with a large family, the most of whom were now grown and settled around her. Several sons are laboring zealously and successfully as ministers in the M. E. Church. When the secessions commenced in 1828, she with several of her sons and others seceded from the Methodist Episcopal Church and took a firm stand in favor of religious liberty. She has been an acceptable and useful member of the Methodist Protestant Church, from its organization down to the day of her dissolution.

To those that have been personally acquainted with mother Henkle, and such are numerous, it is unnecessary for us to say any thing in reference to her walk and conversation. She was a woman of quite a strong mind and one of general intelligence. Her walk and conversation daily had a direct tendency to point all around to the Lamb that takes away the sins of the world. She suffered much affliction during her earthly pilgrimage, especially towards its close; yet, she rejoiced in her last moments that the Lord's grace had still been sufficient. It was truly encouraging to the young christian pilgrim, to hear her in her last moments tell how the Lord had brought her through, and the prospect she had of a blessed state of immortality.

A discourse was delivered from Rev. xiv, 13, previous to her interment, to a large and very serious congregation in the Methodist Protestant Church of this place. After which her remains were carefully conveyed up to Pleasant Hill Church, and there safely deposited along side the sleeping relics of her beloved companion. May their dust there rest in peace until the trump of God shall bid them rise. And may all their children so follow them as they followed Christ, that they may meet them in heaven, the christians eternal home.

D. H. STEPHENS.

Springfield, August 11, 1840.

WESTERN RECORDER.

ZANESVILLE:

WEDNESDAY, ...SEPTEMBER 2, 1840.

Our foreign news came a few hours too late for our last paper. It will be seen by its perusal in this number, that there is a speck of war in Europe.

Great dissatisfaction appears to be manifested by the public, at the delay of opening the college for Orphans provided for in the will of Stephen Girard, of Philadelphia. The last Courier says the bequest left by Mr. G. for that purpose is near six millions. The principal cause of the detention is the splendor of the buildings preparing for the purpose. It is now nearly ten years since the death of Mr. Girard.

The following is the ticket agreed upon by the administration convention of this county, to be supported at the approaching election:

For Representatives,
GEO. W. MANYPENNY, of Zanesville,
JACOB P. SPRINGER, of Springfield.

Auditor,
WILLIAM M. WALLACE.

Commissioner,
J. S. PARKINSON.

Recorder,
ANTHONY WILKINS.

ZANESVILLE.—Wheat has been selling for some time in this town for 50 cents; flour $3.

BALTIMORE, AUGUST 22.—FLOUR—Early in the week, before the receipt of the intelligence by the steamers at New York and Boston from England, the prices of flour had advanced a fraction, and Howard street could with difficulty be obtained at 5 25 a 5 37½, for common to choice brands; but within the last two or three days, however, it having been ascertained that the unexecuted orders for purchasing on British account, had been withdrawn from the markets, prices have somewhat declined, and sales of 1 a 2000 barrels Howard street, for shipment, have been made from store at 5 18¾, 5 25 to 5 37½, the latter for a favorite brand for bakers' use; and the prices were yesterday less firm. We quote 5 18¾ a 5 25. The wagon and car price is steady at 5 12½. Sales of City Mills yesterday of fresh ground in lots of 2 a 300 bbls. were made at 5 50, full. Susquehanna is heavy at 5 25.—Lyford.

The following from Harris of the 22d ultimo shews the price of vegetables in the Pittsburgh market:

Potatoes and Tomatoes from 20 to 31¼ cents per bushel.
Corn per doz. 4 to 6¼ cents.
Cabbage 12½ to 37½ cents per dozen.
Musk and Water melons from one to twenty-five cents each.

FOREIGN NEWS.

NEWS BY THE PRESIDENT & ACADIA.

The new and splendid steam-ship President arrived at her berth in the East River at about three o'clock in the afternoon on Monday, having left London on the first of this month. The Acadia reached Boston early the same morning, having left Liverpool, August 4th. By these arrivals we have files of London and Liverpool papers up to the respective dates of the departure of these vessels.

Notwithstanding the Acadia was detained off Halifax eleven hours, in a fog, her passage is the shortest ever before made across the Atlantic. She arrived in the lower bay at 5 Monday morning.

The Acadia has sixty-three passengers from Liverpool, and thirteen from Halifax. She made the passage from the latter port in thirty-four hours.

By far the most important intelligence is that of the report of the English commissioners, Messrs. Mudge and Featherstonhaugh, for surveying the North Eastern Boundary line. The report is strongly in favor of the claim of the British Government, and renders it probable "that by far the greater portion of the territory now claimed by America as part of Maine, will be declared to belong to the British Government." The Times intimates that the claims which the report advocates, will be firmly maintained by the Government. What will Maine say to this? To your tents, O Israel!

The French papers continue to be filled with complaints relative to the conduct of England in entering into a convention, from which France was excluded, for the settlement of the dispute between Mehemet Ali and the Porte. It will be seen from the extracts below, that France is arming herself to the teeth. The English papers do not seem to have much apprehension of a belligerent rupture.

It is with regret that we announce the premature and sudden death of the Earl of Durham, formerly Governor General of Canada, died at the Isle of Wight on the 28th of July.

The Commerce says that ten of the rabbis who were accused of the murder of Father Thomas, at Damascus, have been released, and that one only, Antebb, remains in prison.

A great number of the most distinguished men of science from France, Prussia, Austria, and America, will visit Glasgow during the sitting of the British Association there next month.

The Marquis of Douglas, the only son of the Duke of Hamilton, is said to have succeeded in winning the affections of the wealthiest heiress in the empire, Miss Coutts.

The King of the French is said to suffer under a disease of the heart.

The treaty of commerce between France and Holland has been signed at Paris.

Earl Granville, the Ambassador at Paris, had arrived in that city on Thursday evening.

The Prince de Joinville, on board the Belle Poule, accompanied by the sloop-of-war Favorite, had arrived at Cadiz, which port it was to leave on the 20th of July, in fulfilment of its mission to St. Helena.

The marriage of Lord Carrington with the Hon. Augusta Willoughby, third daughter of Lord and Lady Willoughby d'Eresby, is expected to take place immediately.

The funeral of Sir Arthur Paget took place on Saturday morning at eight, in the catacombs, Kensalgreen.

THE DIFFICULTY BETWEEN FRANCE AND ENGLAND.—The treaty which had been concluded between England, Russia, Austria and Prussia, which has given umbrage to the French government, and which promises to disturb the present peaceful condition of Europe, is to the following effect: To erect Syria into an independent power. To settle at once the difficulties between Turkey and Egypt, by ceding to Mehemet Ali the hereditary sovereignty of the latter country, as well as the Pachalic of St. Jean d'Acre. If Mehemet Ali did not, in ten days, come to these terms, he was to be restricted in Egypt, and would be coerced into submission by the allied powers.

THREATENED EUROPEAN WAR!

ARMING OF FRANCE!!!

The engrossing topic of the week has been the disagreement of the English and French Government on the Eastern Question, the settlement of which England, Russia, Austria, and Prussia have agreed to attempt without the co-operation of France. The French, at least the French papers exclaim against the perfidy of the English; declare that the alliance between France and England, which they now say, they always regarded as hollow, is dissolved; and threaten instant war against England and her allies. The belligerent tone of the Paris papers had caused some uneasiness on the Stock Exchange, where the prices of all kinds of stock have fallen. We believe, however, that the quarrel between the Sultan and his Viceroy will be settled without provoking a general war in Europe.

The London morning papers of the 3d Aug. in common with those of the whole of the preceding week, are filled with comments on the menacing tone and attitude of France who is terribly indignant that England, Russia, and Prussia should attempt to coerce Mehemet Ali, and prevent him carrying into effect his designs against the Sultan.

The Moniteur of Saturday launches its official announcement that the reserve of the conscription of 1836 is called into activity, as also the entire conscription of 1839. This, with the recall of the solders euconge, will make an increase of 1,000,000.

Thanks to Algiers, the conscription of 1837 and 1838 has been swallowed up there. In addition, it officially corroborates the previous announcement of the Debats, that power had been given or assumed by a royal ordinance, signed on the 28th to raise funds for adding 10,090 seamen to the French navy, with 5 sail of the line, 13 frigate, and 9 steamboats.

There can be no doubt says the Morning Chronicle of yesterday, that this force, in addition to that already possessed by the French in the Mediterranean, and in conjunction with the Turkish and Egyptian vessels, forms a very menacing fleet.

The first effect of these ordinances, says the Times of yesterday, upon the funds was unfavorable. A re-action subsequently took place, it will be seen, and stocks recovered. If our private correspondent be well informed, further improvement may be expected, for he asserts, that although much hurt by the proceedings of Lord Palmerston (who has all the credit of the new treaty,) King Louis Philippe was still determined on cultivating the friendship of this country, and on maintaining general peace. Still it would appear that the most sanguine in their hopes that war will be averted were compelled to admit that chance might defeat the intentions of his majesty, and involve the world in hostility.

The ministerial journals before us are less violent than those of Friday. The Debats abstains altogether from comment.

The latest account from Alexandria state, that the intelligence received there from Syria on the 5th of July had made a deep impression on Mehemet Ali, and had evidently filled him with alarm.

Our Spanish news is satisfactory. The news of the events at Barcolona had reached Madrid, and the changes subsequent thereon had taken place without exciting tumult or opposition.

[From the London Standard.]

The Moniteur of Saturday contains the threatened ordinances for the augmentation of the army and navy of France. The young soldiers that still remain of the class of 1836, and all the young soldiers of the class of 1839 (Algiers has consumed the classes of 1837, 1838,) are to be called into active service; ten thousand sailors, 5 ships of the line, 13 frigates, and 9 steamers are to be added to the navy. This looks warlike at the first view, but upon a moment's consideration it will be found more like a demonstration than an arrangement preparatory to actual hostility. The augmented force would be inadequate to a war with Great Britain alone thrown upon her defence.

Still more inadequate of course to a war with Great Britain supported by her allies, parties to the late treaty.

France must employ much more extensive exertions if she should hope to preserve a single colony for 12 months after the first shot should be fired—if she would save the whole of her African army from being transfered to the prisons of England—if indeed, she would protect her own soil from invasion. We therefore confidently infer that no war is intended. Why indeed should France make war with us? We have given no offence to France—we entertain no scheme of conquest inconsistent with the peace and independence of Europe—we seek to cultivate an universal peace, and to maintain each nation in its proper independent condition.

AFFAIRS IN SYRIA.

Beyrout, July, 3.

The Syrians continue to pursue the work of emancipation which they have undertaken, and every thing leads us to believe that the day of retribution is not far distant.

The Egyptian troops are attacked, beaten or in check, at all points. On the 11th of June, the peasants commanded by Emir Ali, attacked Beyrout, their forces were not considerable, but courage supplied the want of numbers. The discharge of musketry and cannon was incessant from 4 o'clock in the afternoon until midnight, but the losses were not in proportion to the length of time the battle lasted. The Egyptians had 14 men killed.

The following day order was restored, and the beseigers retired to their camp.

Some days after, the garrison, having been reinforced by three thousand men, made a sortie, but they were not more fortunate than that of Seyde. Having been gallantry received by the insurgents, the Egyptians fled, and reached Beyrout in great disorder, after having lost a number of men and left eight hundred muskets on the field of battle. Some persons who were placed on elevated terraces were spectators of the battle, which was fought not more than a quarter of a league from the town. The movements of the two parties could be distinctly observed.

The next day Siloam pasha left Seyde, which was threatened by the Emir Haidar and the six thousand brave fellows that he commands.

On the 29th a sorti was made, and again the Albanians and Egyptians experienced a shameful defeat; they lost a number of men and arms.

Towards evening the mountaineers encamped on the hill of St. Dimitri, which commands the Lazaretto.

DAMASCUS, June 30.

The insurrection is become general. Damascus is threatened by Said Emir at the head of sixteen thousand Syrians, who have all solemnly sworn not to lay down their arms until they have accomplished the ruin of the Egyptian Administration. A caravan of two hundred camels which was conveying ammunition, cannon, and provisions to the Egyptian regiments encamped at Balbeck, has fallen into their power. The detachment which escorted the convoy fled, and returned to Damascus with the loss of a few men. Osman Bey immediately set out with four regiments of infantry, five hundred calvary, and some pieces of artillery, to establish himself, so as to protect the communications with the troops at Balbeck, but it is doubted that he will succeed in his undertaking, for on one hand Said Emir's sixteen thousand troops who intercept the road from Damascus to Beyrout have been re-inforced by numerous bands of mountaineers, and on the other the Egyptian troops, who always feared the Syrians, are at present so disorganized by the numerous successes of the latter, that they have no wish to meet them in battle.

Decidedly the cause of the insurgents is gained, and Mehemet Ali would give a proof of wisdom by evacuating a country which, like Arabia, can only cause him the loss of men and money without any increase of glory or advantage to the dynasty which he aspires to establish.

On the subject of Syria, we find the following in the Constitutional:

"The importance of the insurrection of the mountaineers has been exaggerated. Ibrahim Pacha, surprised in 1833 by an almost general rising of the people of Syria and Palestine, although at the first onset he was obliged to shut himself up in Jerusalem, ultimately defeated the insurgents with great ease. He is now more powerful than he was in 1833, his troops are more practised in war, and the rebellion does not extend beyond the chain of Lebanon, the population of which does not exceed four hundred thousand souls, and is composed of three races, the Ansarias, the Druses, and Muronites. The Ansarias, who reckon sixty thousand souls and occupy the northern part of the chain in the environs of Tripoli, are idolaters; mixing, however, in their worship sometimes Mahomedan and sometimes Christian rites. The importance of this tribe is comparatively trifling.

From the Morning Chronicle.

THE EASTERN QUESTION.—The Paris journals of Monday enter, of course, deeply and warmly into the subject of the arrangement between England, Russia and Austria to fulfil those promises, in which France at first joined, and which pledged them to unity and peace in the Ottoman empire. The Journal des Debats is the only one that does not menance war and cry treason; it merely taunts M. Thiers with existing difficulties, and tells him to remove them by his superior talent. The other journals discharge the full force of their ire against Lord Palmerston, whom they accuse of forcing his colleagues and the country into a policy that unfortunately leaves England supported by Austria and Prussia, and deprived, for the moment, of the adhesion of amity of France.

The unexecuted orders for the purchase of Flour and Wheat have been recalled.—The apparent condition of the forthcoming crops in England was in general promising; a few items in reference thereto, as well as the state of the markets, the reader will find on the next page. There is no later advices from China. A war is spoken of between England and France—and our North Eastern Boundary Question is not yet settled, nor likely to be. The Report of the British Commissioners who had been appointed to survey the disputed Boundary line, has been published. It lays claim to the whole of the disputed territory. One passage in it says:

"Notwithstanding the assertions which during so long a period have been so confidently urged that the United States alone can rightfully claim the territory in question, we hope to have proved that the claim of Great Britain does not, as has been alleged, rest upon vague and indefensible grounds; but that she has a clear and indefeasible title, by right and by possession, to the whole of the disputed territory—a title, it is true, which has hitherto been somewhat obscured by its rather complicated history, and by the want of that interest which countries in the state of a wilderness sometimes fail to inspire."—Lyford.

E RECORDER.

ANESVILLE.

NDAY, ... SEPTEMBER 2, 1840.

munication of the Rev. S. S. Parr in h the law of Pennsylvania in this t is that law we ask for in the Peti-Legislature, so that it may be seen ask.

-meeting for this neighborhood closed
It was one of the wettest and most times we ever recollect on any campcasion. The wet prevented many ng, and those from enjoying who did the attention of the reader to the ition on our last page, to the Legis-law to protect camp-meetings from nce caused by huxters and pedlers.

ery one either to cut it out and paste paper, or to copy it, and immediate-to procuring signers to be forwarded slature, against the opening of the o not neglect this duty. The sooner he more you will be able to procure.
e laity wait for the ministry, but let part.

wing note was stuck in two papers this office. What may have been n on the envelope we cannot say, as it
, but on one of the papers was writ-Green, Ill.," the very place for which designed, and this Post Master was to his duty, which would have been to se papers to their place of destina-d of returning them here. Such a must be much troubled with the fool.
a fair illustration of the political malay; he could not even let a civil man without some abuse; for he certainly aper was not dedicated to politics, or g any administration.

Mt. Morris, Pa., Aug. 20, '40.

ese papers were directed to "Kane,
n.,"—no such place in this county.
was PROBABLY, in misdirecting them mplaint from subscribers, and then, ame the present wicked administraty illustration of Whig tactics!
Asst. P. M.

ORDER.

ety, composed of ministers and laymen ous churches, for the promotion of the of the Sabbath, to which an article referred, met at Dr Herron's church, and after receiving information that a number of business men in the ci-the Ohio, who were in favor of susine of steamboats who would observe
, and regard the rules of temperance, nimously, the following preamble and as the friends of the Sabbath in other expressed a desire that a line of Sabng and temperance steamboats should to run between this port and Louis-have given substantial evidence that tile interests of their respective cities ain the enterprise, and whereas we very large proportion of the mercantile of this city would favor the object, as we believe the interests of the Sab-consequently the religious interests of and the whole community would be moted by such a line—therefore:

lved, That we recommend the organiza-
d line, and that we pledge it our influsupport, if composed of good boats, constrict Sabbath-keeping and temperance and placed under the control of judi-enterprising men."

pril 2d, 1822. 7. Smith, P. 650.
to prevent the disturbance of meet-for the purpose of religious worship.
ION I. From and after the passing of t shall not be lawful for any person or erect, place, or have any booth, stall, age, boat or vessel, or any other place for the purpose or use of selling, giving se disposing of any kind of articles of irituous, liquors, wine, porter, beer, ny other fermented, mixed or strong cepting as hereinafter excepted) within es of any place of religious worship in , during the time of holding any meet-ligious worship at such place.
II. If any person or persons shall or this act by erecting, fixing, or having , stall, tent, carriage, boat or vessel, or e for the purpose or use aforesaid, or , bartering, giving or otherwise dispoy kind of articles of traffic, spirituous vine, porter, beer, cider or other fer-mixed or strong drink, in, at or about booth, stall, tent, carriage, boat or vesy place whatever, prepared or used for oses aforesaid, within three miles of any religious worship, during the time of ny meeting for religious worship at such e person or persons so offending, shall nformed of his, her or their violation of and shall be warned by any Justice of e, Constable or two free-holders of the here the offence is, or shall have been d, to desist from such offence, and to uch booth, stall, tent, carriage, boat, other thing, together with all such artiraffic, spirituous liquors, wine, porter, er or other strong drink, belonging to, or ossession of the person or persons so
, and if such person or persons, on recei-information and warning, shall forth-se to offend against this act, and shall s aforesaid at least three miles from such religious worship, then no further pro-under this act shall be had against such persons; but if such person or persons use or neglect, immediately to remove aid, when informed and warned as aforen all the said articles of traffic, spirit-uors, wine, porter, beer, cider and other d, mixed and strong drink, and all the chests and other things containing the gether with such booth, stall, tent, carat or vessel, or other place prepared and used for the purpose aforsesaid, shall be, and are hereby declared to be forfeited, and it shall be lawful for any Justice of the Peace and Constable with two free-holders of the country, to seize and take possession of all or any part of the said forfeited articles and liquors, together with such booth, stall, tent and carriage, boat or vessel, and at any time within ten days after, to advertise and sell the same, and after deducting and paying the necessary and lawful expenses of such seizure and sale, the residue of the proceeds of such sale or sales shall be paid to the overseers of the poor in the township for the use of the poor of the county, where the support of the poor is a county charge, and where it is a township charge to the poor of the township where such offence shall have been committed.

7. Sec. III. Nothing in this act thall be taken or construed so as to affect any licensed tavern keeper, in his or her ordinary and lawful business, at his or her usual place of residence, specified in his or her license, nor shall it be so taken and construed as to effect any merchant, shopkeeper, farmer, mechanic or other person in the usual and lawful transactions of his, her on their ordinary concerns and business, in their usual place of doing such business, nor shall it be so taken, construed or understood, as to affect any person or persons who shall have a permit in writing, from the person or persons having the oversight, charge and management of any such meeting, to sell bread and other necessary articles of food for man and beast: Provided, The conduct of persons attending such meeting shall accord with the lawful rules and regulations of such meeting, and the property of such persons attending such meetings be not of the description forbidden by this act.

8. Sec. IV. If any suit or action shall be brought against any person or persons for doing or causing to be done any thing in pursuance of the act according to the provisions thereof, the defendant or defendants may plead the general issue and give the special matter under this act in evidence, and if in such suit or action a verdict and judgment shall be given for the defendant or defendants, or the plaintiff shall become nonsuited or discontinue his action, the defendant or defendants shall have and recover double cost of suit.

Sec. V. [Repeals acts of 1st April, 1811. 5, Smith, p. 257.]

9. Sec. VI. From and after the passage of this act, if any person or persons shall be guilty of disturbing any congregation, society or meeting, assembled for the purpose of religious worship, by blowing horns or trumpets, shooting or firing guns, or by any other means, with intent to disturb or interrupt the worship or devotion of said congregation, society or meeting, he or they, on conviction, before any Judge, Justice of the Peace or Alderman of the proper city or county, wherein the offence shall be committed, shall pay a fine not less than one dollar nor more than five dollars, for the use of the poor of the city, borough or township wherein the offence shall be committed, and where there are no poor, it shall be paid to the supervisors of the township for the improvement of the highways.
Act of 15th April, 1835. Pamph, p. 336.

"An act supplementary to an act, entitled 'An act to prevent the disturbance of meetings held for the purpose of religious worship,' passed the second day of April, one thousand eight hundred and twenty-two."

"10. Sec. 1. If any person or persons convicted under the sixth section of this Act, to which this is a supplement, shall refuse or neglect to satisfy the fine imposed on him, her or them, and goods and chattels cannot be found whereof to levy the same, the said person or persons so convicted shall be committed to the jail of the proper county for a term not exceeding five days."

ITEMS.

Destruction of Delaware Flour Mills, St. Clair county, Illinois.—These Mills, the property of J. P. Morris, were destroyed by fire on the 2d ultimo. Loss about twelve thousand dollars. No insurance.

Horrible.—The Boston Post states that the Easton (Massachusetts) almshouse was discovered to be on fire about three o'clock on Saturday morning, the 15th ultimo, and such was the progress of the flames, that four of the inmates were burned alive, and another has since died from injuries received. The fire was the work of an incendiary.

A Rencontre.—At Somerville, Tennessee, on the 7th ultimo, a rencontre took place between P. T. Scruggs, Esq., and Levin H. Coe, Esq., late a member of the Legislature, in which the former was shot by the latter, and not the faintest hopes of his recovery were entertained. No account of the cause, or the circumstances of the affray are given.

North Carolina.—We have but one county (Randolph) in addition to what we gave yesterday, which gives 947 majority for Morehead.—Morehead's majority in the 36 counties heard from is 4,023. Returns from 38 counties give the Whigs 64 members of the Legislature, and the Administration 34.

New Orleans.—Mr. Dennis Prieur, Collector of this port, has received instructions from Washington to take charge of the Post Office Department in lieu of Mr. Wm. McQueen, resigned, until his successor is nominated.

The British Navy.—The Vestal, from Halifax, went up to Quebec on Saturday. Three or four vessels of war were concentrating there, whose officers were to try Capt. Drew.

Drowned.—A lad by the name of Wallace, about eight years old, was drowned in the Connecticut, at Hartford, on Wednesday afternoon, 5th ultimo. He was standing on a log or raft, as we learn, while the steamboat Bunker Hill was passing, and the swell from the boat caused him to slip into the water.

Struck by Lightning.—A barn belonging to Messrs. Bergen at Jamacia, Long Island, was struck by lightning on Wednesday of last week, and set on fire. The barn, with its contents, among which were four hundred and fifty bushels of wheat, was entirely consumed.

The city of Alexandria, D. C., is estimated to contain about nine thousand inhabitants.

A New State.—The taking of the census of Iowa has been completed. The population of the territory is fifty thousand—more than sufficient to entitle it to admission into the Union.

Newspapers on Rail Roads.—The Post office Department has prohibited the Philadelphia, Wilmington and Baltimore Rail Road Company from carrying newspapers, except in the mail.

The population of Portland, as ascertained by the new census, is 15,218. Gain in ten years, 2575. The white females exceed the white males 1230. Colored population, 402.

The cod fishery on the coast of Labrador, is stated to have proved a failure this season.

Capt. Day, of the United States Army, died at the National Hotel, St. Louis, on the seventh ultimo.

A Mr. Newman, of Franklin county, Missouri, has commenced a suit against Mr. Parnell, of that county, for upwards of one million nine hundred and eighty-eight thousand dollars.

A Newfoundland dog swimming in Charleston harbor on Sunday last was seized by a shark and taken off. Several boys were swimming in the adjoining dock at the same time.

An incendiary attempt was made in Baltimore a night or two ago to destroy two houses in Pica street.

Preservation of Flowers and Fruits.—From a series of experiments which have been made during a period of several years, by a gentleman in Scotland, to ascertain the best mode to preserve fruits and flowers in a green and moist state—he thinks that a concentrated solution of common salt is the most effectual.

Mrs. Jarvis, who is residing at Brooklyn, has commenced a suit against the Rev. Dr. Jarvis, in the Court of Chancery, for a sum adequate to her support, to be set off from the property of her husband.

The Jews.—We are glad to learn that the Jews of this city are about to hold a meeting on the subject of the cruelties practised towards their people at Damascas.—N. Y. paper.

Letters from England.—The mail bags of the Acadia, contained over twelve thousand letters.

The news of the arrival of the Acadia was carried from Boston to Salem in 19 minutes.

Very Genteel.—A lady of fashion stepped into a shop not long since, and asked the keeper if he had any matrimonial baskets, she being too polite to say CRADLES.

The best method a man can adopt, to obtain business, is to advertise.

Increase of Population.—The wife of Mr. Kane, in Fleet street, Baltimore, presented her husband, on Wednesday evening, with three daughters at one birth. The lady and children are doing "as well as could be expected."—New York paper.

The Late Duel.—It is reported that the "weapons of death" with which Messrs. Price and Thomas fought, were loaded only with powder and pokeberries!

We suspect this is the case in more than one half the duels that are fought now-a-days. The seconds generally preconcert it, that there shall be no blood shed.

Yankee.—The Philadelphia National Gazette says: "We hold this proposition to be self-evident, that whatever it is the interest of a Yankee to undertake, he can execute better than any other mortal."

Baltimore will have to build an ark, unless they drive out the hordes of free bankers, for she is now most awfully flooded.

Killed Instantly.—Mr. George W. Dinsmore of West Boylston, Mass., was struck by lightning, while in the woods, and instantly expired.

The individual who engaged himself to Elizabeth Reynolds, in New York, and by disappointing the poor girl, induced her to commit suicide, is a fellow named John Strokes, a native of Sheffield, England, where he has a wife and six children.

A destructive fire has taken place at Cleveland, Ohio, consuming the Globe tavern, the Merwin estate hotel and other property, amounting to nearly $50,000.

Moses Emery of Aurora, died in Aurora, New York, of the most frightful spasms, which are thought to have been the result of hydrophobia.

The National Debt of Great Britain is about 760,000,000.

The shock of an earthquake was distinctly felt in many parts of Connecticut on the 9th ult.

Greene has decided that it is not polite for a lady to whistle.

Brooklyn, New York, has more than doubled in ten years—having now a population of 25,000.

The Farmers and Mechanics' Bank of Detroit have made acceptable arrangements with the U. S. government to liquidate their debts to the latter.

A Pickpocket.—A person named Prosper Desoly, Esq. was robbed of a pocketbook at the fire on Tuesday night. The book contained $225. Peter Elliott was arrested as the thief.—Phil. paper.

Young Thieves.—A lady passing thro' 13th street, near Walnut, on Tuesday, about 11 o'clock, A. M., had her reticule stolen from her by two lads, one apparently about nineteen years old, and the other 13, who came behind her and cut the bag from her arm, leaving the strings, and ran away before she could give an alarm. Its contents were not very valuable.

Forgery.—William and Frederick Lush, the former late in the employ of Wm. C. Cardwell, 22 North Front street, have been committed to Moyamensing on a charge of drawing money from the Commercial Bank, on forged checks.

The British Boundary Line Report. The New York Commercial has received a copy of the Report of the British Commissioners in relation the Maine Boundary Line. It is excessively voluminous, and we therefore avail ourselves of the following notice by the editor of the Commercial.—Bicknell.

"The 'report,' strictly so called, we have read with care, and with constant reference to the map by which it is accompanied, and while we acknowledge its admirable adaptation to the end which the commissioners seem to have had chiefly in view, namely, to mislead the government and people of England by presenting to them a strong ex-parte statement, we hesitate not to say that it adds no real strength whatever to the British claim. We can very easily understand how it appeared so conclusive to the editors of the Times, and other journalists, whose ignorance upon the subject is profound; but that it can be and will be utterly exploded in this country, where the boundary question is better understood, we assert with unlimited confidence. We assert farther that it is disingenious and deceptive—the plausible argument of an ingenious advocate, not the candid, truth-seeking judgment of an impartial umpire.

There is little novelty in the positions contended for by the commissioners, but considerable in their mode of sustaining them. They claim Mars Hill as the North West angle of Novia Scotia—deny that a river flowing into the Bay of Fundy is a river flowing into the Atlantic—and insist that the small streams running into the St. Lawrence between the 67th and 72d degrees of west longitude, are not rivers within the meaning of the treaty. According to them, the only 'rivers' flowing into the St. Lawrence are the St. Francis and the Chaudiere—the only rivers flowing into the Atlantic are the Androscoggin, the Kennebec and the Penobscot.

The principal novelty in their statement of the case is the adoption of a new phrase instead of the term "highlands" employed in the treaty. This new phrase is "the axis of maximum elevation," which they employ to designate the more Southern range of highlands, claimed by the British as the range intended in the treaty, and which they lose no opportunity of flourishing about our ears with an importance that clearly manifests their consciousness of the advantage to be gained by the substitution. They have measured the heights of the principal elevations along this range, and asserting that the heights are greater and the elevation more continuous than in the other range, they insist that therefore the "axis of maximum elevation," is to be taken as the thing contemplated by the treaty.

On this point the map is ingeniously deceptive. Upon it the Southern range, or "axis of maximum elevation," is darkly shaded, so as to catch the eye at once as it falls upon the map, and form a conspicuous object, even to the most casual glance; while the Northern range is set down very gingerly, as a mere doubtful line of spurs, unworthy to be called a range of highlands."

Highway Robbery by Two Men.—The Miltonian states that a robbery was lately committed in Penns Valley Narrows, on the person of Charles Gorr, of Lehigh county, Pa. He was passing through in a truck wagon, when he was attacked by two men, who dragged him from his wagon, and after beating him with a club until he was senseless, robbed him of $1500. The money was all in bank notes of the Northampton Bank of the denomination of twenty and fifty dollars. Mr. G. describes one of the robbers to be about six feet high, stout built, and had on a black coat and hat, with long black hair hanging over the greater part of his face. The other was about five feet eight or nine inches high, and had on a dark grey coat and black hat. He offers $300 reward for the apprehension of the robbers and money—$150 for the money or robbers, or in proportion for either robber or part of the money.

Rev. Albert Barnes, of Philadelphia, has declined the acceptance of the title of D. D., given to him at the late commencement of Union College. This is in accordance with the views he expressed relative to the term Rabbi in his "Notes." We have beheld with regret the eagerness with which some religious men have grasped after honorary titles. It is more in the spirit of pure religion to reject than court such honors. And we very much doubt whether the devoted servant of God will derive any advantage from them.

Rev. Edward Payson, who was one of the most devoted and successful ministers of the gospel, likewise declined the acceptance of such a title as being inconsistent and cumbersome.—Baptist Begister.

Wedding in a Steamboat.—The Buffalo Journal tells us something pleasant. On the last upward trip of the Cleveland, a party of ladies and gentlemen came on board at the Manitou island, with a view to take a trip as far as Chicago. Finding a clergyman passenger, a couple on board signified their desire to be united in the holy bands of matrimony, and the ceremony was accordingly performed in presence of all on board. The Rev. Mr. Allanson of Racine, W. T., officiated. The names of the nuptialized were Mr. Seymour S. Davis, and Miss Harriet L. Jackson.

Professor Biggs, late of the Lane Theological Seminary, Ohio, has been unanimously elected President of Cincinnati College.

Probable Piracy and Murder of many Passengers.—The French ship La Lise, from the Mauritas for Bordeaux, was wrecked on the Agulhas Rocks, not far from the Cape of Good Hope, in February last. A great many passengers, both at Mauritas and the Island of Bourbon, had embarked in her, relying upon her known good qualities and the experience of Captain Lechacheux, who commanded her. From causes hitherto inexplicable, the captain, all the officers and passengers and the cabin servants perished, while the whole of the crew, including a man who had fallen before the wreck and broken one of his thighs, together with a man who had taken his passage in the forecastle, and of course lived and messed with the sailors, were saved, and have reached the Cape, and made a declaration as to the loss of the ship. The English authorities, however, observing that the sailors had brought with them all their own effects, the trunks of the passengers and other valuables, and that they were spending money very freely, entered upon a rigid inquiry. While this was pending, the sea cast on shore the captain and several of the passengers, who exhibited numerous wounds and bruises, evidently inflicted previous to the wreck. Measures have accordingly been taken to discover the truth, and punish whoever may be found to have been guilty.

DREADFUL NEWS FROM FLORIDA.

Indian Key Destroyed, and the Inhabitants Butchered by the Indians!

The intelligence of this most disastrous occurrence was brought to this port, by Capt. Kenyon, of the schr. Victoria, arrived at Quarantine yesterday, from Key West. He states that a wrecking vessel arrived at Key West, from Indian Key, 7th ult. with a few of the survivors, who stated that a number of Indians in their canoes, attacked Indian Key, on the night of the 5th ult. and after murdering part of the inhabitants, and filling their canoes with plunder, burnt the whole settlement, consisting of about 30 houses, dwellings and stores. The Indians remained until noon on the following day, when they left for the main. The survivors were concealed during this time under a wharf, and left immediately after the Indians departed for Key West. Our informant not having conversed with any of the survivors, is unable to give us a more detailed account. It was stated at Key West, that some two or three of the inhabitants at Indian Key had made their escape in one of the Indian canoes, and arrived at Tea Table Key, in the immediate vicinity.—Charleston Courier, Aug. 20.

Extraordinary Language.—The Recent Riot Case.—Many of our readers are aware, that during the Rail Road riots, which recently occurred in our city, two men named Ortman and Jennings, were arrested, tried and sent to the Penitentiary for a number of years. At first this prompt conduct in vindication of the law, was received with a warm burst of approbation, but subsequently an excitement was raised, the trial and sentence were denounced as hasty, and an effort was made to induce the Judges to rehear the case. This point was argued in much detail for several days, when a majority of the Judges, Messrs. Barton and Conrad, decided against the application. A new excitement is now in progress, having for its object, the censure of the Judges and the destruction of the Court.—Bicknell.

Another Man With Many Wives.—A fellow named Henry C. Craft, was last week convicted at the Oyer and Terminer of Hudson county, N. Y., of polygamy. He had married four wives, of whom three were in attendance at the court. The culprit pleaded guilty and was sentenced to eighteen months' imprisonment in the state prison. If it were not unconstitutional to inflict unusual punishments, it would have been more befitting to have condemned the fellow to live with the whole squad.

Suicide.—The Richmond Star has an account of the suicide at Petersburgh, Virginia, of a man named Lewis, who was known to have been under the influence of insanity. While his watchers slept, he locked himself in a closet, put a carving knife into his throat, and forced the handle against the wall, driving the knife down so as to split his heart. On entering the closet the unfortunate man pointed to his throat, when the handle of the knife was discovered. On drawing it out the blood flowed in great profusion, and he died immediately.

The Elections.—We have little to add under this head, in addition to what was stated in our last. The whole story may be sumed up in a few words. Kentucky has gone for the friends of Harrison, by a majority of about 16,000; Indiana ditto, by a majority of about 10,000; and North Carolina ditto, by a majority of about 7,000.

Alabama has gone for the administration by a majority of several thousand, Illinois ditto, and Missouri ditto.—Bicknell.

Affair of Honor—Almost.—A duel came off at New Orleans on the 3d ult., (or would if the police had not interfered,) between two gentlemen of color, their names not learned. The scene of blood selected, was a vacant lot in a faubourg above the city. As it was, six free negroes were arrested and imprisoned.—The weapons were secured and lodged in the office—they consisted of rifle barrelled pistols of the first water, sword canes, Bowie knives, &c.

We find the following intelligence in regard to the fate of the Chesapeake in a late London paper. To what base uses may we come!—New World.

"The American Frigate Chesapeake. The ultimate fate of the above vessel, which, under the command of Commodore Lawrence, who fell in the heat of the action, after a severe conflict of some time, and struck her colors to the gallant crew of his Majesty's frigate Shannon, commanded by Capt. Brook, may not be generally known. The Chesapeake, which once floated disdainfully upon the waters of the Atlantic, is now completely 'shivered' as to her 'timbers,' which latter, together with other portions of her, have been employed in the construction of a corn mill at the village of Wickham, near Portsmouth. The wood is in good condition, and promises to continue so for some time to come. Many strangers visit Wickham-mill to gratify their curiosity.

Miami University.—The Board of Trustees of this Institution have made some important changes in its faculty. Dr. Young, of Danville, Kentucky, has been appointed President in place of Dr. Bishop, who was transferred to the Department of History, just established.—Professors McCracken and Olds having resigned, their places have been tendered to Mr. Armstrong, of Franklin College, for the first, and Mr. Telford, late of the Cincinnati College, for the second.

The Grammar School has also been reorganized. Mr. Robertson is the only teacher for the present.

It is not known whether Messrs. Young, Telford and Armstrong have, or will, accept their appointments.—Lebanon Star.

Counterfeit Plates.—The following described plates have been recently recovered by our police through information received by the warden of the Eastern Penitentiary:—One of ten dollars of the United States Bank, letter D., 1838, imitation of the late genuine ten, (Draper, Toppan, Longacre & Co, engravers;) one ten dollar plate of the Bank of Northern Liberties, letter A., 1839, (Underwood, Bald & Draper, engravers;) one two dollar plate of the Bank of Delaware, letter D., 1839; one three ditto, and one five dollar plate of the Farmers' Bank of Virginia, and one five on the Bank of Louisiana at New Orleans.

Russian Toleration.—The jealousy of England and France against Russia leads to distrust of stories which appear in the papers of those countries. The last and worst allegation that we have met, is that the Czar has issued a proclamation confiscating the property of all subjects who shall embrace the Roman Catholic religion, or who shall have embraced it within the last 25 years!!!!—It is said that he has thus fully carried into operation a law which had previously existed; but at all events it is expected, and it is more than probable that this despotic edict of tyranny will have directly the opposite effect to that which he anticipates from it.

The Balances.—The Ledger says, the balances, the great bone of contention and cause of most of the difficulty and ill feeling among our banks, ever since the suspension, we understand are now likely soon to be adjusted, a suit at law, we learn, having been instituted for their collection by one from another of the city banks. What the consequences of this movement may be to one or two of the larger debtor institutions, should it be generally followed, we will not at present contemplate. That it will produce a crisis of some sort it is quite easy to imagine.—Bicknell.

The Resumption in Philadelphia.—We learn that the Board of Directors of one of the Philadelphia Banks, a few days since debated the question whether they should resume specie payment forthwith, or wait until the 15th of January, when it was decided in favor of the latter period. This may be considered as settling the question. All our Banks will doubtless resume on the 15th of January ensuing, or in less than five months from the present time.—ib.

Pirates on the Ocean.—An article published in the Matanzas Aurora of the 23d July, contains a statement made by Capt. Breinholm, of the American brig Mary Avrill, from Kingston, Jamaica, in which he represents that he was chased by a schooner off Cape Antonio, that kept after him for 20 hours, which he was convinced was a pirate, and which he out-sailed.

Business Department.

RECEIVED PAY FOR RECORDER.

From N. Kennon, for W. Gardner,	-	$2 00
" T. Foster for Jos. Lanning,	- -	3 00
" J. R. Tallentire for J. Leonard, Berlin,	- - - - - - - - -	2 00
" W. Marshall for E. E. Parrish and E. Hoskins,	- - - - - - -	4 00
" W. Yontz,	- - - - - - -	1 00
" Parish and Davis,	- - - - - -	2 00
" J. Hall, 3; one for second volume,		3 00
" J. Thrap,	- - - - - - - -	2 00
" D. Vandenbark,	- - - - - - -	2 00
" J. K. Poundstone,	- - - - - -	1 00
" P. Wolf,	- - - - - - - -	2 00
" A. Brown,	- - - - - - - -	2 00
" J. Sidle,	- - - - - - - -	2 00
" J. A. Mills for J. Abauathey,	-	3 00
" E. E. Parish,	- - - - - - -	1 12

LETTERS RECEIVED.

W. Haymond, N. Kennon, J. Kingman, J. Parke, T. Foster, E. Heaton, W. Reeves, 1 sub.; J. R. Tallentire, 2 subs.; J. Smith, W. Marshall, 2 subs.; J. A. Mills, A. K. Earl, 1 sub.; W. Burk, J. Taylor.

AGRICULTURAL.

From the Cultivator.

MANAGEMENT OF MILCH COWS.—I have read with much interest the remarks of your able contributors on stock, and especially on milch cows; yet there is one particular in the management of milch cows which seems to have been passed over unnoticed—that is, milking. Perhaps there is no one point of dairying treated with so much neglect and indifference, and attended with as great loss to the dairyman as milking. Not more than twenty-five years ago, it was considered a good lot of cows to produce two hundred pounds of cheese to the cow on an average, and the farmer who obtained that was a skilful dairyman; and even at the present day, many keep along in the same old track, doing well enough as they term it, while others obtain five hundred pounds, and some have gone as high as six hundred pounds and over, besides a good quantity of butter. How is this difference to be accounted for? One reason I would give, is milking. A cow, to give a large quantity of milk, should have one steady hand to milk—one that can draw the milk quick and easy; care should be taken to milk the cow perfectly dry (or in other words clean.) Another important object is to milk at regular hours. In long days, cows should be miked and turned to the pasture before sunset, that the time between milkings may be nearly equal; yet the practice with some is to work in the field as long as they can see, then drive up the cows and have them milked by inexperienced hands, and those too who take no interest in the business; then leave them in a close yard during the night. I have always noticed that those who make an odd job of milking, never realize much profit from their cows. That there is a great difference in cows, I will admit, though I think there is more in the management of them than in the quality; yet the farmer should be very careful in the selection of cows for the dairy. I find some of my best cows would be counted worthless if they had different hands to milk them, and those, too, who are inexperienced in the business. I am often told by my neighbors that I have some peculiar method of making more cheese from the same quantity of milk than they; and it is true there may be something to be considered on this point; but I never as yet have found the secret of making butter and cheese without milk.

Another reason is, good keeping. Cows should be kept in warm stables, well littered, until late in the spring. The practice of letting cows lay out on the cold wet ground as soon as it is bare, is a bad one. They should be kept up and well fed, that they may be in good heart and high order when turned to grass. Salt should always be kept in troughs under sheds, that cattle can have it at their command throughout the year. Another fact of much importance is stabling cows early in the fall. As soon as cold storms come on they should be stabled, which will add one third to the quantity of milk. Stantials are to be preferred for putting up cattle, allowing each one three feet, and boarded between the stantials to keep the fodder from wasting; the stantial fastened at top by running through the upper timber and a long iron link, made to drop on the top, which by raising one end will loose the moveable stud of the stantial. Stable floors should be a little sloping, that a dry bed may be kept to keep the cattle clean and comfortable.

A. B. COLE.

ON STRIPPING COWS.—Winter Product of a Devon Cow.—Every milkmaid has been cautioned that the last milk yielded by the cow at any one milking, is richer than that which is first obtained—but this is not the only consideration which shows the importance of thorough milking. The more there is left in the udder, the less will the cow give at subsequent times, and the sooner will she "go dry." After once going through the cow-pen, the milk-woman or man, (for in New-England the men milk the cows,) ought to be compelled to go round again and completely strip each cow.

The importance of this will be better understood if there be truth in the statement which we have lately read, apparently on good authority. We confess we were not prepared to believe that the difference was so great as there stated, between the first and last portion of the one milking. The statement is that "Several large coffee cups having been successively filled from one cow, till she was quite dry; the following results appeared, great care having been taken to weigh the cups when filled, to ascertain that they held exactly the same quantity.

"In every case the quantity of cream was found to increase in proportion as the process of milking advanced. In different cows the proportion varied, but in the great number, the excess of cream in the last cup as compared with the first, was as sixteen to one! In some it was not so considerable, therefore as an average it may be called as ten or twelve to one.

"The difference in quality of the two sorts of cream was no less striking; the cream given by the first drawn was thin, white and without consistence; while that furnished by the last was thick, buttery, and of a rich color."

In the Philadelphia Farmers' Cabinet, we have the winter produce of a Devon cow; "Abraham P. Holdrich, of Spencertown, Pa. had an accurate memorandum kept of the butter made from a Devonshire cow, which calved last autumn.—The result was that from the 10th of December to the 10th of January, including both days, there was made from her milk fifty-six pounds of well worked butter—nearly equal to two pounds a day. The cow was fed with roots, hay and buckwheat bran. Estimating it at twenty-five cents per pound, the butter made in the depth of winter was worth $14, and if we consider this the average product of eight months in the year, the aggregate amount for that period would be $112."

This shows the importance of keeping a good breed, and of keeping it well; like cultivating rich land instead of poor, it takes no more labor to milk and take care of a good cow than a bad one.—American Farmer.

MILK.—From careful experiments and observations made by Dr. Schubler, professor of chemistry, applied to agriculture, in the celebrated institution of Fellenburg, at Hofwyl, in Switzerland, he says, he found the morning's milk commonly to yield some hundredths more cream than the evening's, at the same temperature; and that in milking cows, this singular phenomenon is observed, that the milk obtained from one and the same milking, differs, considerably in quality; that contrary to what might be expected, the milk first extracted is not the best—but that which is obtained the last, contains invariably the largest proportion of cream. To satisfy himself thoroughly on this point, he caused a meal's milk of one cow to be milked into five vessels of the same size, and then separately examined the milk in each, in the order in which it was taken.

No. 1, or that drawn first,	gave 5	per ct. of cream.
" 2,	gave 8	do.
" 3,	gave 11.5	do.
" 4,	gave 13.5	do.
" 5,	gave 17.5	do.

Making an average on the whole of 11.05 pr. ct

He extended his experiments so as to test the quantity of caseous or cheesy matter obtained from different drawings of milk, which displayed a similar result—proving, in the most satisfactory manner, that the last drawings of the milk were constantly much richer, both in butter and cheese, than the first; and demonstrating in the most conclusive manner the vast importance to the farmer, of having trusty milkmaids, who will tug away as long as a drop of the precious fluid remains in the udder.—Farmer's Cabinet.

MISCELLANEOUS.

EXTRAORDINARY MATRIMONIAL ADVENTURES OF A PRETENDED LORD.

On Monday last, at the Durham session, Robert Taylor, one of the most impudent impostors that we ever remember to have heard of, was tried for polygamy. The offender is a mere youth, between 19 and 20 years of age, but his numerous matrimonial adventures and devices to obtain money mark him as a person of singular cunning and dexterity. His plan seems to have been in all cases to practice first on the cupidity of his own sex, by holding out a pecuniary reward to any one who would procure him a suitable alliance, and then, by representing himself as of aristocratic birth and heir of extensive possessions, to dazzle and win over the victim and her friends. To aid his views, he represented himself as a son of Lord Kenedy, of Ashley Hall, Leicestershire. He was furnished with numerous documents, framed to corroborate his misrepresentations. These, which he carried in a tin case, were found on his person when he was apprehended. Among them was a parchment, on which was written in a fine clerkly hand, what purported to be "the last will and testament of Lord Kenedy," &c. By this document, Taylor appeared to be heir of £1,015,000, three per cent. consols, besides immense wealth in coal mines, salt factories, woollen factories, machinery, houses, plate, jewellery, and ships. "John Nicholson, Thomas Johnson and Mrs. Robinson" appeared to have been constituted "guardians of the said Robert Taylor." The document bore date 22d September, 1829, and exhibited the signature first of the supposed testator, "Kenedy," and then of the attesting witnesses, "Sam. Robinson, clerk to James Lee and John Turner," and "William Cowley, barrister." He had also an indenture certifying the correctness of the will, and describing his person by certain marks on his right arm, &c. He had sundry other papers ingeniously enough contrived for the purpose of aiding his deception; but, as he is a youth of coarse and vulgar manners, the success which attend the impostures can only be accounted for by the blind avarice of his dupes. Up to the present time six of his marriages, in several parts of the north of England, have come to the knowledge of the police, and there is reason to believe that the number is much larger. It is supposed that he married one or two young woman in this county. Like many who have pursued a career of base and unprincipled deception, this scoundrel affected great sanctify, and connected himself, at different times, with both the Wesleyan and Primitive Methoists. Indeed, one of his principal dupes was a M. Fryer, a preacher in the last named connexion, who Taylor, having promised a reward of £10 to any one who would procure him a young and religious wife, offered him the choice of his two sisters-in-law. Taylor chose the youngest, a girl about eighteen years of age, and was married to her. The preacher not only failed to obtain the expected reward, but was swindled out of £12 which he lent to the roguish adventuer! This, however, proved the last of his exploits, for having made several fruitless attempts to run away from his wife, as he had done from the others, he was at length compelled to take her with him, and on his way through the county of Durham he was apprehended.

The budget of papers found in the prisoner's possession contained a multitude of curiosities besides those above alluded to, which our space will not allow us to particularize. It appeared from one of them, an indenture of apprenticeship, (he seems to have treasured all written documents most carefully) that he had, at the age of 13, been apprenticed to a sweep and collier in Staffordshire, till he should be 21 years old.—The indenture described him as a poor child from Fairfield, in the county of Durham.

There were several licenses and documents relating to his marriages. One of them was a memorandum of agreement between Robert Taylor and Mary Wilson, of Newcastle-upon-Tyne, to marry in three months from October 16, 1839; Taylor to forfeit £20,000, if he married any other woman, and Mary Anne to forfeit one-third per annum of her yearly salary if she proved faithless. Annexed to this was a memorandum of a loan of £4 from Mary Ann's father, with an engagement, on the part of Taylor, to pay £1 per annum interest. Many of the papers related to the prisoner's connection with the Wesleyan and Primitive Methodists, and with the teetotalers, of which latter society he appears to have been a staunch adherent. The most curious paper was "a memorandum of agreement made between Rob't Taylor, Esq., son of the late Lord Kennedy, of Ashley Hall, in the parish of Ashby-de-la-Zouch, and those he may engage as servants." It bears what purports to be the prisoner's signature, and from it he appears to have engaged an establishment of stewards, butlers, footmen, grooms, coachmen, gamekeepers, helpers, &c., at salaries of from £20 to £60 per annum, sufficient for half a dozen princes. The stipulation of the engagements is, that the servants, butlers included, are to observe the teetotal pledge.

THE TRIAL.

On Monday last, when the prisoner was placed at the bar, the court was excessively crowded, and all eyes were fixed upon the young Lothario, who had so readily succeeded in procuring half a dozen wives. Instead of a handsome, seductive gallant, there stood before the court a shabby-looking individual, with a face not merely ordinary, but repulsive. He was evidently much amused at the sensation which his appearance produced, and joined in the smiles of the by-standers. He was perfectly unabashed, and conducted himself throughout the trial with the utmost ease and unconcern.

The first case taken was that of the prisoner's intermarriage with Mary Anne Davidson, the sister-in-law of Mr. Fryer, the Primitive Methodist preacher.

John Wood, a wagoner, of Birmingham, was called upon to prove the first marriage of which the authorities have any knowledge. It appeared that this witness met the prisoner in Birmingham in 1838. The prisoner told Wood that he was heir to £60,000 a year under the will of his father, Lord Kenedy. In proof of this assertion he produced papers. He said he had a great wish to be married to a young lady (laughter,) and if Wood could introduce him to such a one, he would make him a handsome present.—Wood introduced him to Miss Sarah Anne Skidmore, and to her father, who was a shopkeeper. The documents were shown to the young lady and her parents, the license and wedding-ring were procured that very day, and the couple were married the next morning, (loud laughter.) Shortly after the prisoner returned to London to settle his affairs, (laughter.) He subsequently returned and lived with his wife, but he had not been married more than six or seven weeks, when he deserted her altogether.

As the prisoner was undefended, the Court asked him if he had any questions to put to the witnesses.

Prisoner—I'll ax him one or two (laughter.) I axed you if you knew a decent girl as wanted a husband, and you said you did; you knew as how one Sarah Ann Skidmore wished to be married, and I told you I'd advertised and offered a reward of £10 (laughter.) You took me to Benjamin Skidmore! Now are you sure as how he saw the docyments? (laughter.)

Witness—Yes, quite sure; you showed him a document stating that you would have £60,000 a-year when you came of age.

Prisoner's mother (from the middle of the court)—Robert, tell them thou's under age, and thy marriage can't stand good (laughter.)

The prisoner gave a lordly wave of the hand, accompanied by a significant gesture, intimating to his maternal parent to leave the management of the case to his superior skill; then, turning to the witness, he said, "Are you sure that you youself saw the will?"

Witness—Yes.

Prisoner—No, it was not the will; it was only the certicket of my guardians, to show who I was; and what property was coming to me (laughter.)

Here Mr. Granger, counsel for the prosecution, drew forth the tin case, which was a pitman's candle box, bearing the following inscription, "Robert Taylor, otherwise Lord Kenedy." From this case the learned counsel drew the "docyments." The "will" was rich alike in its bequests and odours. It was a foul and filthy affair to look upon and to approach; but while it offended it also amused. Disregarding the usual long and dry prefaces in which lawyers are accustomed to indulge, it rushed at once into the marrow of the subject. Mr. Granger tickled the ears of the court with a line or two. Thus:—"I give and bequeath to Robert Taylor, son of Elizabeth Taylor, single woman, £1.015,000, three per cent. consols, and no more" (great laughter.) The will proceeded to bestow upon him four coal-pits, a woollen factory, two or three ships, and sundry other trifles, as before mentioned.

Mary Davidson, a neat modest looking girl, detailed the circumstances which led to her marriage with the prisoner. The latter, she said, was introduced to her at the house of her father, on the 4th of April last, by Benjamin Fryer, her brother-in-law, who was a preacher among the Primitive Methodists. The latter said he had known the prisoner sometime, and he recommended him as a pious young man whom he had brought to the house on purpose to marry her. The prisoner said he was the son of Lord Kenedy, and the moment he arrived in London with a wife he would have £700 and £20 a year until he was of age, when he would have £60,000 per annum. He showed her several documents, one of which was a certificate that he was Lord Kenedy's son and would have £60,000 a-year when he came of age. He had previously seen her unmarried sister, whom he rejected in favor of her. They were married by license the very next morning. They lived together three weeks, during which time the prisoner had made several attempts to get away, and many times in the night he had tried to slide the ring off the finger. While they were together he lived upon money which he borrowed from her brother-in-law, to whom he owed £22.

The prisoner, being again directed to ask the witness any questions he pleased, said, placing his hands upon the bar, and leaning forward in a chancellor-like attitude, "Now, Mary, are you certain that I had £22 from your brother-in-law?"

Witness—You had £12 in money, and you were to pay him a reward of 10*l*.

Prisoner—You say I had 12*l* in money, Mary. Now there was 10s. to be paid for the ring, 5s. for fees, 3*l* 10s. for the license, and 8*l* I had in money, which makes 12*l* 5s. So you see, Mary, you are wrong. You were also wrong when you said I told you I was to have 20*l* per annum per year (laughter.)

Witness—You said 20*l*.

Prisoner—No, Mary, I said 150*l* per year per annum (laughter.) And I wish to ax you if I didn't say, "Will you have me, money or no money?" (laughter.)

Witness—No, you did not.

Prisoner—Yes, Mary, I axed you, would you have me, money or no money, and you consented either way (laughter.)

The witness, in reply to the court, stated that the little money she had of her own she expended in coach-hire whilst she was with the prisoner.

The prisoner spoke at considerable length in his defence, giving a rambling account of his various migrations from the north to "Brummagem," from "Brummagem" to the north, &c., with some amusing particulars of his marriages and courtships, whereby he wished to make it appear that all the young ladies he came near wanted to have him, and that he had been in every instance inveigled into wedlock for the sake of his possessions. His main defence was, that he was under age, and that all his marriages were illegal; and his conclusion seemed to be that having contracted one illegal marriage he thought himself perfectly justified in contracting a hundred.

The prisoner's mother having expressed a wish to give evidence, and the prisoner having consented, she took her place in the witness-box, and deposed that she was now the wife of Michael Rickaby.—The prisoner was not born in wedlock; she had him in a love affair; but she would not say who his father was; she had not come there for that.

The jury found prisoner guilty.

The prisoner was next indicted for having, in October last, married Mary Ann Wilson, daughter of George Wilson, a tobacconist, of Newcastle. The marriage to Miss Skidmore was again proved by the certificates which bore his lordship's mark. The prisoner, it appeared, had advertised for a wife in the Newcastle papers. In that town he appears to have attached himself to the Wesleyan Methodists. By his professions of religion and his teetotal pledges, he obtained a high character of morality and sanctity. Miss Wilson said she first saw the prisoner in October last, at a Methodist chapel, in Newcastle. On the same day she met him at a class meeting. On the 16th October she was introduced to him by a friend, when he promised to call upon her at three o'clock that afternoon. He did so, and as soon as he sat down, he pulled out a tin case, (laughter) which was marked "Robert Taylor, otherwise Lord Kenedy." He said he was entitled to 60,000*l* a year, and other hereditaments, (laughter.) The following day he made her an offer of marriage, and she accepted him. He said if he could get the loan of some money, they would be married next morning. Her father lent him four pounds, a license was bought, and they were married the day but one after she had accepted him, and three days after her introduction to him.—Eighteen days after this he deserted her, and she heard no more of him till he was in custody.

By the prisoner—He spoke of putting in the banns. She did not say "she would rather be married off hand."

Prisoner—Oh, yes, Mary, you did.—(Laughter.) I consented to take you immediately if the money was raised, and you raised it.

The jury returned a verdict of guilty.

Mr. Granger said the police officer who took the prisoner had received several letters, stating him to have contracted other marriages than those which had been the subject of inquiry

The court having spent some time in deliberation,

The Chairman said—You have for some time been going about the country in a most unprincipled way, marrying weak and unsuspecting girls, and bringing misery upon them and their friends. We have seriously considered whether it is not imperative upon you to visit you with the severest penalty that the law allows. We have determined, however, to stop short of this; but you must be punished with great severity for your wicked conduct. For the first offence of which you have been convicted, you are sentenced to be imprisoned one year at hard labor; and, for the second to be imprisoned eighteen months to hard labor, making, altogether, two years and a half.

Prisoner—Gentlemen, when I come out again will any of my wives have a claim upon me? (Laughter.)

The court declined to answer the question, and he then requested that his "docyments" might be restored to him.

The court thought it better to make no order; they might be placed in the hands of the governor of the jail.

The mother of the prisoner, on quitting the court, finding herself an object of some attraction, became somewhat communicative on her family history. Among other things she stated that her son was one of General Evan's "Legion;" and that she had sent a letter into Spain, which had the effect of procuring his return to England. She had come from Workington, in Cumberland, a distance of 115 miles, to attend the trial; for "her son was her son;" and she could not rest without coming. One thing she would not allow curiosity to penetrate—and that was, the mystery which hung over the prisoner's birth. She had kept "the secret" for nineteen years, and was not going to reveal it in the twentieth.—Dublin Weekly Messenger.

Demonax, being asked by a wag, "how many pounds of smoke might be obtained from an hundred weight of wood," calmly replied, "Weigh the ashes, and what is wanting is smoke.

To the Honorable, the Legislature of the State of Ohio:

The undersigned, citizens of the State of Ohio, respectfully represent, that they have witnessed with extreme pain, the demoralizing influences growing out of the practices of certain huxters and pedlers, for their own personal interest, vending at camp and other religious meetings, throughout this State, ardent spirits, beer, cider, cakes, &c., to the great annoyance of the public worship of God, and to the extensive injury of the peace and good order of the community.—The existing law, prohibiting the sale of intoxicating drinks within one mile of any place of religious worship, after more than twenty years' experience, is found to be totally inadequate to the object for which it was enacted. The process by which conviction is had is extremely difficult; beside, the owner of such property can usually procure some irresponsible person to sell for him. The only effectual way, therefore, in our opinion, to prevent this practice would be to forfeit the property offered for sale.—There is no law prohibiting the sale of eatables, yet the victuallers are, in reality, the greatest disturbers of these public meetings, because they usually erect their booths and kindle their fires, near the place of worship, which become an asylum for the drunken and profane, who will remain there, indulging in all kind of obscene language and disorderly conduct, to the great disturbance of the services of religion and injury of the public morals. Your memorialists would therefore respectfully suggest to your honorable body, the propriety of so amending the present law as to prevent the approach of trespassers nearer than two miles distance, and to contraband, not only all articles of intoxication, but, also, all goods, wares, or merchandize of any description, as the only and effectual way to prevent the abuses complained of.

Those interested in the proposed law, for the protection of religious worship, are a numerous and law-abiding class of the community. They have borne with these unconstitutional infractions of their rights until forbearance has ceased to be a virture, and if longer persisted in, would degenerate into meanness; they are, therefore, moved to pray your honorable body to throw the shield of law around them, so as to protect them in future from these annoying and demoralizing practices. We respectfully refer your attention to the law of Pennsylvania on this subject, a copy of which shall accompany this petition. We believe this law is as perfect as human wisdom can devise, for the object contemplated. It is mild, yet efficient. The experience of many years has shown that it affords ample protection to religion, and yet it has not been made the instrument of oppression. It would be highly satisfactory to your petitioners if this law, without alteration, could be adopted in our Statute book.

As in duty bound your memorialists will ever pray.

☞The Quarto New World

THREE DOLLARS PER ANNUM.

WHEN the publication of The New was, in compliance with the expr wishes of many subscribers, commenced in a convenient for binding and preservation, thought expedient to make such additions, shape of music, engraved title pages, & would considerably enhance its expense. find, however, after 8 weeks' experiment, tha paper would be better liked and more ge taken, if, by omission of the music, &c., the literary material of the Folio edition co thrown into the Quarto form, and the pr both the same. It has therefore been dete ed to ask a uniform sum. The Quarto World will, therefore, be supplied hereaft $3 per annum, or six cents per number to who, on subscribing, take the back numbers ly a few of which have been issued.

Subscribers who have paid $4, or who m mit that sum in advance, will be entitled paper for one year and four months from th of subscription.

Every present subscriber to the Folio e may, upon renewal of his subscription an ment in advance, change to the Quarto supplied with the back numbers at six cent from the commencement of the volume, pressing his wish to that effect in a pre-pa ter to the publisher.

Edited by Park Benjamin and Epes Sar
Published by J. WINCHES
30 Ann
New York, August 15, 1840. 53

S. C. Haver,

IN the flourishing town of Putnam has o 40 or 50 SADDLES ready for sale, of e ent qualities, comprising nearly all the var in fashion in our Buckeye State.

A good assortment of Bridles and Ma gales: Riding and driving Whips: betwee and 200 Carriage and heavy draft Collars, will compare and wear with any others here or elsewhere.

Also, fine York, Dearborn, heavy tea common Farming Harness. A lot of first carriage and Buggy Harness, (brass and s plated.)

Trunks, valises, saddle-bags, and double red wagon whips, varying in quality and to suit purchasers.

The only recommendation he now offers fo work, is the testimony and long experienc old customers and friends. He is still an to please and accommodate those who ma on him, and hopes to share so much of the p patronage as his attention to his business merit.

Putnam, April 29, 1840. 28tf

Glass Manufactory.

THE subscriber having dissolved his co tion with the former company, has take GLASS WORKS below town under his management.

WINDOW GLASS, double and single seizes, and of superior quality will be kept stantly on hand for sale on reasonable ter The experience of the proprietor, in the m facture of the article, will insure all made of the best quality. Call and see.

S. B. JOHNSO
Zanesville, Ohio, May 6, 1840. 37

William Green,

CLOCK AND WATCH REPAIRER, SILVERSM AND JEWELLER,

CAN be found at his shop on Main st Putnam, a few doors north of J. C. G rie's store, where he will do his best to accom date customers. He keeps on hand an as ment of spectacles, watch trimmings, pencils,

As far as we have tried Mr. GREEN as a w repairer he has given us good satisfaction.— April 22, 1840. 35tf.

Stray Mare.

STRAYED from the subscriber living Hopewell township, Muskingum county on the 20th of June last, a light SORR MARE, about 14 or 15 hands high, with a s blaze in the forehead and one white foot shoes on when she left. Any person retur said mare or giving information to the subsc where she can be found, will be liberally com sated for his trouble.

NAAMAN R. GRAN
Hopewell tp., Musk., O., July 8, 1840. 4

Dissolution.

THE partnership heretojore existing betw the subscribers in the PUTNAM FOU under the firm of HARTLEY & ANDERS was this day dissolved by mutual consent.

The Putnam Foundry will hereafter be ducted by J. J. Anderson & Co.

LEVI HARTLEY,
JACOB J. ANDERS
Putnam, Jan. 1, 1840. (Jan. 29 : 23.)

Notice.

ALL persons indebted to the late firm Hartley & Anderson, are earnestly requ ed to call at the Foundry and make settlem as the change of owners makes this step a lutely necessary. We ask the attention o persons concerned, to this notice.

J. J ANDERSON & C
Putnam, Jan. 1, 1840. (Jan. 29 : 23.)

Dissolution.

THE partnership heretofore existing betw S. B. Johnson and J. M. Kirkpatrick, der the firm of S. B. Johnson & Co. was diss ed by mutual consent, on Thursday 19th ins

S. B. JOHNSON,
J. M. KIRKPATRIC
Zanesville, March 31, 1840. 321f

THE

WESTERN RECORDE

IS PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY.

☞ The office of the Recorder is five a half miles west of Zanesville.

TERMS.

1. The WESTERN RECORDER will be pub ed weekly, on an imperial sheet, at $2 00 annum, in advance: $2 50 at the end of th months; $3 00 at the end of the year.

2. No discontinuances will be allowed, cept at the discretion of the publisher, until arrearages are paid.

3. To all ministers having regular past charges, who do any thing at all for the pa if they will direct us where, a copy shall be s gratis; any other who forward to us $10 for new subscribers, shall have six copies sen any address he may give.

4. All letters designed for the paper, must directed to "C. Springer, Meadow Farm, M ingum, Ohio."

5. A failure to notify a discontinuance fore the expiration of the subscription year, be considered a new engagement.

CHARACTER.—The pages of the WEST RECORDER will be open to discussion on all ral questions;—it will give articles on Lite ture, Mechanics, Agriculture,—an abstract Religious and Political intelligence, and wh ever may be interesting and instructive to f ilies in general. A portion of its columns be open to Advertisements and Prices Curre —another portion to sustain the interests of Methodist Protestant Church in the West These two latter objects will not likely occ more than one page.

The RECORDER will take a firm stand agai Clerical Supremacy.

THE WESTERN RECORDER.

INGER, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.
DOLLARS PER ANNUM IN ADVANCE.

Vol. 2.--No. 3. ZANESVILLE, OHIO, WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 9, 1840. Whole No. 55.

JOHN W. WHITE, PRINTER.
$2.50, IN THREE MONTHS; $3, END OF YEAR.

ew of Shinn's Book.

From the Lutheran Observer.

E BENEVOLENCE AND RECTITUDE SUPREME BEING, by Asa Shinn. ore, Book Committee of the M. urch. Philadelphia, Jas. Kay, Brother, 1840." 12*mo.* 403 pp.

most unquestionably the production und and lucid thinker. None but a p and extensive thought, possessed accustomed to a close and logical rea- d of a heart full of devout admiration vine character, and abounding with pathies for the human family, could en such a book. The topics on which are interesting and varied, and yet in- nnected, so as to constitute one har- hole; the mode of treatment is natu- highly satisfactory, and the language igorous and racy, never pedantic or nd always clear and intelligible. We ure in stating, that so far as our lim- has permitted us to examine this wo k r admire it, particularly its indep n- benevolent spirit, and its chaste and le.

must confess that we are somewhat at what department of learning to locate neither a body of divinity, a system of r a treatise on natural or mental phi- It is not purely theological nor exclu- sophical; it cannot be termed meta- nor scientific, nor literary. But it somewhat of each of these, and most of logy. Let it not, however, be thought a conglomeration of irrelevant doc- of heterogeneous subjects. The very the fact; for it constitutes a beautiful, and most instructive concatenation ral, philosophical and practical truth, alike favorably on the intellectual and t character of its able author. The mewhat general, and in our view, in- y adapted to convey a satisfactory idea ny and varied ramifications into which r is progressively, and step by step con- nd yet it is, perhaps, the most appro- t could have been selected. The work et, either directly or indirectly discuss, nning to end, the "Benevolence and e of the Supreme Being." It is, in- nlightened and biblical exhibition and on of the benevolent character and op- f our heavenly Father, but it certainly out in directions into which the plain nd perhaps even the learned, would xpect, from its title, to be conducted. that very striking out into new or un- ed paths, is what gives additional in- d value to the volume.

these general remarks, it will, perhaps, ed that we should enter into detail, ain by quotation and argument, the high have thought proper to bestow upon in question. But this we cannot do; multiplicity of our engagements, we yet found time to give the whole of it tive perusal, having merely looked at de- arts, as occasional leisure afforded us an ity; yet are we satisfied from what we d, that we have not over-estimated its Moreover, we have not time at present a minute review, and shall therefore to supersede its necessity by publishing ION" or two at full length, one of which found on our first page this week, on aginary decrees of God," &c. We have ted this "Section" because we deem it discussion than some others, or even as ory; but because it is one in which we r readers will take particular interest.

annot, however, thus cursorily dismiss ect;—Mr. Shinn's views on future pun- demand more than a passing notice. If ake not, we have somewhere seen this arged with inculcating Universalist prin- This is undoubtedly an unfounded im- n, though after reading the last two or ections of PART III., we are not much d that such a charge should have been d, as there are not wanting those who ly to accuse their brethren of heresy, not very slight grounds, but even on the su- appearance of such grounds. Nay, we not be astonished if the Universalists ves should hereafter claim our worthy au- one of their staunch adherents and advo- since we know that they have boasted of hority and countenance of other writers ite as little foundation.

however, it strikes us, that there is in k, that which looks a little toward final iversal Restoration;—or that which may t be so interpreted, and which, if the le suggested in the book be carried out to l length, will, in our opinion, ultimately o it; though, we presume, the author by no means admit such an interpreta- deduction to be warranted by his premi-

.S. again and again asserts in the plainest st positive language, the eternity of the ts of hell. Expressions like the following t unfrequent:

candid examination of the Scrip- will fairly and fully conduct us to nclusion, that the separation which take place between the RIGHTEOUS he WICKED, in the day of judgment, ended to be an ETERNAL separation." 36.)

regard to the modern system of ersalism, which teaches that all pun- nt is confined to the present life, it usly saps the foundation of respon- sibility, denies a future judgment, nullifies the warnings of the Bible, and opens wide the door for accumulating ungodliness and crime. It is difficult to conceive, therefore, how it can be regarded in any other light than as a covert scheme of infidelity." (p. 383 and 239.)

"The eternity of future punishment we are bound to believe, upon the indisputable authority of the Bible." (p. 249.) "Even if the most hardened reprobates should surrender, after fighting against God for millions of centuries, it cannot be proved that good principles would then require that they be rewarded with the honors and felicities of the kingdom of heaven." (p. 253.)

Other declarations to the same effect might be quoted to prove incontestibly, that the Reverend author maintains most unequivocally and unqualifiedly the endless duration of future punishment.

Where then, it may be asked, do we find those suggestions which seem to look toward final restoration?—or that principle which, in its more extended development, would conduct to such a result? We will endeavor to explain.

Mr. S. rejects with disdain the idea that the Bible teaches that the future punishment of the wicked will remain uniform, invariable, or endlessly increasing, and maintains that "this is an assumption without evidence, immensely reproachful to the Supreme Being." He also thinks that the appalling and awful exhibitions of the torments of hell, which in the present age are too frequently heard from the pulpit, are calculated to do more harm than good, inasmuch as they represent God as a heartless Tyrant, and sometimes become the means of driving men into Universalism and infidelity. There is, undoubtedly, much sober truth in this remark, and ministers should look well to it, that they may not, in this way, become instrumental in strengthening, instead of diminishing the ranks of God's enemies. There are thousands of sinners who may be drawn by the sweet cords of the Gospel, but who instinctively rebel against the denunciation of ever-accumulating wrath and damnation. We cannot refrain from permitting Mr. S. to speak for himself on this point:—

"The state of future punishment has often been represented as an indiscriminate crowding of all the condemned together in one common fire;—that after groaning for ages of burning torture, they are hurried away and frozen fast in dreadful regions of ice;—that after groaning for ages in that frozen climate, they are hurried back again into fire;—that their eyes, ears and nostrils are used as mediums of the greatest possible misery; and, finally, that each individual in hell suffers an amount of agony that would be sufficient in a very short time to kill all the inhabitants of the earth, by the mere force of the pain endured. Such, and more, are the representations which have been given of this subject, as the writer has heard and seen, from the pulpit and the press. The design of them, commonly, is to deter men from sin, that they may not go to hell. It must indeed be acknowledged, that the unaccountable stupidity and obstinacy of mankind in sin, appear to call for warnings of the most arousing tendency; but these matters may be carried to an extreme, so as to produce results entirely opposite to those which were intended. Do we deplore the progress of Universalism? It would then be well to reflect upon the strong probability that hundreds of Universalists have been made, and hundreds of Deists also, by such horrible representations of future punishment, as caused them to receive the impression that the Christian religion represents the God of nature as an Almighty tyrant. Will the souls of these men escape hell, and be brought to heaven, by being driven into infidelity? If not, let our concern for the salvation of sinners lead us to consider, whether such representation of future punishment as can be clearly sustained by justice and benevolence will not have a more salutary influence upon mankind, than such as would seem to shroud the divine government in the darkness of an infinite tyranny." (p. 231 and 232.)

In addition, however, to the above, we find passages like the following:

"How far the divine penalties will operate, through the depths of eternity, to diminish existing misery, or to prevent its augmentation, we are not competent to determine." (p. 221 and 222.)

"To say the sinner's punishment will be eternal, is only to say in other words, that he is imprisoned for life; and how much misery will be prevented, in his own individual soul, by restraining him from deeper criminality, and peradventure by subduing, in some measure, and in some period of his existence, his wicked spirit, who but the great Omniscient himself can tell?" (p. 248.)

"Now if corporeal sufferings should at some period, and in some instances, be diminished or removed, and if all mental sufferings should be removed also, except a sense of degradation and contempt, it would still be eternal punishment." (p. 249 and 250.)

"But why should all regard to the welfare of the millions of those wretched creatures be abandoned for ever? Has the Deity no right to entertain any other disposition toward them, than that of a fixed purpose to perpetuate and augment their misery? If he has a right to entertain other sentiments toward them, then it would not be wrong for him to aim ultimately at their well-being, so far as it could be promoted without injury to others. If it would not be wrong for God to do so, then it is not a heresy for us to believe he may at some time or other, modify their condition, with a view to an abatement of their misery, so far as will consist with the common welfare. Would such a procedure be unworthy of our Creator? Would it tarnish His glory? Would it grieve and offend His holy angels? If at any future period of eternity, a benefit could be extended to some of God's creatures, without injury to any, has not God authority to extend to them that benefit? If He has, who will be offended to see Him exercise it? If He has not, in what way has His authority been forfeited?

"To extend a benefit to some, without injury to any, would not be unjust, nor would it be unmerciful; then if neither justice nor mercy would be infringed, what attribute of God would hinder Him from exercising such an administration?

"It may be replied, perhaps, that we have no right to inquire after any other reason why God makes hell-torments invariable and infinite, than that such is His will. But this is begging the question. The only way by which we can ascertain the will of any agent, is to draw our conclusion from his known attributes. If these be of the benevolent kind, so will be his will, if of the malevolent character, of course we may expect his will to correspond with his moral principles. We are supposing it may possibly be the will of God, at some future period, to modify the condition of the moral universe in a manner of which we have no definite conception; and if in doing it He should be disposed to diminish the amount of existing misery, what moral attribute will stand in the way?

"It will doubtless be urged that Divine truth stands in the way; inasmuch as God would thereby fail to accomplish His threatenings. But this is again begging the question. We do not concede the point that the Bible gives any authority whatever to believe that God will make future punishment either invariable, augmenting, or infinite. Those who hold the affirmative must not take their position for granted, but must show from the clear testimony of the revelation, if they are able, that God has threatened these things. It is granted he has threatened eternal punishment; but that invariability, accumulation and infinity are necessarily included in this, is a silent assumption which is unsupported by proof, and which ought not to be taken for granted without examination." (p. 250 and 252.)

From the foregoing we think it may be fairly deduced, that Mr. S. inclines to the opinion, that in the administration of God's moral government, the wretched inhabitants of hell may, possibly, in process of time, be subdued, relent, and soften down into a degree of penitence;—that if so, God's benevolence will constrain Him to mitigate the penalty they endure, just in proportion to the measure of the contrition they feel. We may indeed misapprehend our author, but certainly this is the impression left on our mind after reading the preceding quotation. He does not cite Scripture to prove this to be a doctrine of revelation, but gives it rather as an hypothesis, or throws it into the form of a query, and seems to look mainly for evidence to the well-known and conceded benevolence of the divine character, and the reasonableness of the supposition.

We have already intimated that the suggestions contained in the above quotations, look toward final restoration, and that the principle involved, if fully carried out, must lead to it.—For if, after the lapse of, say ten thousand years, the condemned sinner may relent, and voluntarily yield in some measure to the great design of God's moral government, (which we are told is the diminution of misery and augmentation of happiness,) and in consequence thereof, his punishment be so modified by God's infinite benevolence, as to reduce the sum of his suffering, then this relenting and yielding may continue; and the sinner having been already rewarded with a mitigation of penalty, will be quite likely to continue, from age to age to relent and yield, and consequently to experience repeated modifications and diminutions of misery, until at last, all sense of misery will have been lost forever;—a consummation most devoutly to be wished.—Nay, the principle may be legitimately carried much further. If the lost rebel may thus, by a gradual cessation of his original hostility to God, be progressively released from the penalty of the divine law, may he not after so long and oft-repeated an experience of the benefits of yielding to the government of God, and of the consequent increased exercise of divine benvolence, also to learn to admire and love that benevolent Being to whom he is indebted for so much kindness?—and if so, will not that same benevolence prompt our heavenly Father to reward him with positive blessings? Is there not just as much force in the latter hypothesis as there is in the first with which our learned author sets out? Here then, we have the sinner in hell, in a state of probation, gradually emerging from the depths of his deep degradation and damnation, and mounting up, until ultimately he is restored to the favor of God and the bliss of heaven!

God forbid, that we should charge this heresy on our worthy and excellent brother S.; for as we have already seen, he deprecates it, and leaves us no room to doubt the soundness of his orthodoxy to the eternity of future punishment. But what we mean is, that his suggestions look toward this final issue; and if the principle revealed therein, be pressed forward, necessarily leads to it. At least, so the matter strikes us; but if mistaken, we shall gladly recant.

But we also think we see a difficulty in the argument, as well as the tendency of Mr. S.'s suggestion. When he speaks of God's subduing the wicked spirits of sinners in perdition, or of sinners relenting and yielding to the divine administration, the question arises: What is to produce this effect? Mr. S. ascribes it (if we apprehend his meaning) to the influence of the torments they endure. "His (God's) penalties," says he, "speak to the centre of their souls, that their character is utterly wrong, and that God is right, in the whole of His proceedings against them. Is not this calculated to convince them of the depth and inexcusable nature of the evil that is within them? and has not that which convinces men of evil, a tendency to discourage and weaken the evil, and consequently to promote the opposite good?" Now we readily concede that punishment may, to some extent, subdue the hardened rebel; but that it will per se produce that brokenness of heart, and that deep and self-abasing humiliation which are necessary to qualify him for an appropriate reception of divine mercy, or for a befitting exercise of the divine benevolence to the abatement of his sufferings, is by no means clear to us. The instrumental means of penitence in the sinner's heart, is the word of God, and we are taught to believe, that even in this means is in itself insufficient, and can only be rendered efficacious by the accompanying influences of the Holy Spirit. But what evidence have we to believe that the gospel will be preached to those who perish in their sins?—or that the grace of God will be present to give energy to that gospel?—Can any part of the future penalty denounced in God's law be relaxed, on any other ground than that of the blood and righteousness of Him of Calvary? and can we find any foundation either in reason or Scripture to indulge the hope, that His merits may still become available for those devoted victims of divine justice? The divine benevolence may indeed be referred to, as that which will prompt a mitigation of punishment so soon as proper indications of a relenting spirit become manifest. But does not a mitigation of punishment pre-suppose, more or less, a remission of sin, and can pardoning grace be exercised apart from Christ's atonement?—Moreover, what has mere benevolence to do with absolution from sin? It is the prerogative of mercy,—of mercy in Christ Jesus, to remit transgression; and apart from Christ's righteousness there is no mercy promised to the broken-hearted sinner even in his present state of probation, much less in the world of final and eternal retribution.

The whole of Mr. Shinn's argument in support of the hypothesis in question, seems to be inferential, and to hinge upon the benevolent character of the Deity. But when the human mind is led prominently to fix, and to delight to dwell upon any one of the divine perfections, as appears to be the case in the present instance, there is great danger, even with the most powerful intellect, to glide into an extreme, and unduly exalt the favorite attribute at the expense of other attributes. In all such cases, inferential arguments from the divine character, will be likely to come into conflict with the positive teachings of revelation. Our views of any one divine perfection, must, therefore, if we would escape error, always be modified by a due contemplation of the other perfections. We say not that Mr. Shinn has for a moment lost sight of the justice, truth and holiness of God, but the divine benevolence is his theme,—his favorite all-absorbing theme, and certainly he has laid great and mighty stress upon his admired subject.

But, notwithstanding these strictures, we consider the work under consideration a highly valuable contribution to the theological literature of our country. The character of the Supreme Being is ably guarded against the reproaches cast upon it by Universalists, infidels and worldlings, and the divine administration is so set forth as to exhibit perfect benevolence in all the various modifications of the great system of God's universe. The ways of God to men are vindicated and justified beyond all cavil and sophism; even Universalism itself, is completely dislodged from one of the strongest holds in which it is wont to glory. Calvinism is incidentally handled with unsparing freedom, and yet with due respect. The supposed partiality of God toward nations is treated in a masterly manner; in a word, we are at a loss to decide in what part of the work the power of argument and acuteness of reasoning are most eminently displayed. We recommend it to our readers with great cordiality, and will take pleasure in procuring it for them. The price is $1 25 cts. per copy.

At the close of the book, the author gives a partial promise, that he will shortly appear before the public again, in a publication in defence of the Arminian views of the divine decrees. We hope he may not abandon this idea, as we should rejoice to see something from his able pen on this subject. Few men, we presume, would be likely to discuss the subject with superior ability. We trust he will adapt the publication to the churches generally, that entertain kindred views on this subject, and thus add to its usefulness as well as its circulation. K.

From the Southern Literary Messenger.

SERENADE.

Good night—Love, good night!
Eve over earth her mantle throws,
'Tis now the hour for calm repose.
Sleep, dearest, sleep, thy slumbers blest,
While angels guard thy couch of rest—
Good night—good night!

Good night—Love, good night!
Rest while the gentle moon's bright beam
With silvery tint tips wood and stream;
And shine the stars as if to keep Their heavenly vigil o'er thy sleep—
Good night—good night!

Good night—Love, good night!
All blessed spirits ever o'er
Thy couch of slumber gently hover;
From every ill and harm to ward thee,
God, and good angels ever guard thee—
Good night—good night! L.J.CIST.

COMMUNICATION.

For the Western Recorder.

Mr. Editor: In a communication which appeared in your paper of August 12th, from the Rev. Mr. Lawder, there are several things which I wish to notice.

In giving an account of a controversy which took place between him and myself, on the subject of baptism, he says: "Dr. Clarke was quoted as authority in favor of immersion being the only mode of baptism." Now, Sir, this is incorrect. In the article alluded to, Dr. Clarke was not quoted at all. Butterworth was quoted; and even he was not quoted to prove immersion the only mode of baptism, but the meaning of the words used to express that christian ordinance. The only reason why Clarke was mentioned at all, was to show the work whence the quotation was taken.

The next thing which I wish to notice, is the impression made in that communication, that an alteration has been made in a work of Dr. Clarke's, which causes him to say that which he does not believe. The truth is, Clarke's work has never been altered; but Butterworth's has been, and he has been made to say that which he did not believe, and to express himself in contradictory ways. Butterworth, a Baptist clergyman, in England, published a Concordance of the Bible, in which he says, in his definition of baptism, that it is an ordinance of the New Testament, instituted by Jesus Christ, whereby the person is in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost "immersed in and covered with water," &c. After Butterworth's death, Dr. Clarke revised this work, and it was published in England and re-published in America. In this revised work, Dr. Clarke had no right to make any alteration, unless he apprised his readers of such alteration, so that they could distinctly know which was Clarke's and which was Butterworth's. In the American edition of Clarke's Butterworth there appears two sets of books. One set retains the definition as given originally by Butterworth of baptism, the other has the alteration alluded to in the communication, in which it reads, "or sprinkled with water," instead of "and covered with water." This alteration gives an entirely different definition from the one given by the author, and is, therefore, doing manifest injustice to him.

The question now before the public, is not which is the genuine Butterworth, as we have a number of copies of that work with which Dr. Clarke has nothing to do; but by whom and how was the alteration made from "and covered with water," to "or sprinkled with water?"—Or, in other words, who committed this forgery on Butterworth? I contended that from all the evidence which could be adduced in the case, it must have been done by the book-sellers,—but Mr. Lawder contended that it was made by Dr. Clarke, because it corresponded with his known sentiment on that subject. I could not believe that a man of Dr. Clarke's standing in community would be guilty of such a decided impropriety, as that of altering a man's work after he was dead, and causing him to contradict himself as Butterworth does in this very article. For if we admit that Clarke did it, we see him not only committing a forgery of the grossest character, but studiously laboring to conceal that forgery by the manner in which he speaks of the alterations which took place in the work as it passed through his hands for revision. He says, in his preface: "In the definitions of some theological terms a few alterations have been made, which it is hoped, will appear to be an improvement.—But as several readers may, probably, think the former definitions best, they are introduced below, in order to obviate all cause of complaint." Now, this term is not in that list of theological terms, altered,—consequently, if Clarke did make the alteration, he did it with a design to palm it off on community as the opinion of Butterworth, and thereby make that author bear testimony against what he considered the truth, but against what he had published to the world as such. And, to make it worse on the Dr.'s side, he has published a preface to the world which is, as to matter of fact, false, for no other purpose and with no other design than to cover up or conceal the forgery committed. This is, certainly, placing the Dr. in an unenviable light before community; but in this light he now stands, if Mr. Lawder's opinion and the book-seller's account be true, in relation to this matter.

I will now call your attention to the position of the publishers of Clarke's Butterworth, according to their own account. They say, "the English edition of Clarke's Butterworth, from which their edition was stereotyped, had it 'or sprinkled with water,' and that it was altered from that and an edition published for the Baptists," in which it reads, "and covered with water." I know not how this may appear to your readers, but to me, it is decidedly incredible, and is not deserving of the least confidence, whatever. The idea, that a denomination as intelligent and respectable as the Baptists, would require a book to be altered for their special benefit, is too foolish for any intelligent person to believe,—especially when it could and would be so easily exposed in all its naked deformity. No, my word for it, it is not true.—And then, again, what right had the publishers to make such alteration, even if they had been requested thus to do? I answer, none; and the fact that they were willing to do it, shows that they are not entitled to credit, inasmuch as they publish their own shame.

What then is the probable truth in the case? Why, this. When the publishers had issued a copy of that work according to the English edition, they were shown by the Baptists that it was a forgery on the original author, and they being convinced of the truth of it, made the correction, not for the benefit of the Baptists, but to do justice to Butterworth.

We see now what sectarianism will do. It will take a man's work, after he is dead, and alter and mutilate it, that it is made to contradict itself, and the entire life and practice of its author. Yours, respectfully,

S. S. PARR.

Zanesville, August 27, 1840.

METHODIST DISSENTERS.—It is known to all who are acquainted with the Methodist denomination, that there are dissenters from the Methodist Episcopacy.—The only material difference between the two branches of the church is relative to the manner of church government. In looking over our foreign files, we find some statistics respecting the "New Connexion" or dissenting Methodists, which may be interesting. The connexion is at present possessed in the British Isles, of 304 chapels, and has several other buildings. It has 89 circuit preachers, 18 missionaries and three scripture readers in Ireland; 3 missionaries in Canada, and others received on trial at the late conference. It also reckons 862 local or occasional preachers, and 21,836 members of society, forming a nucleus of about one hundred thousand hearers of the gospel.—Brother Jonathan.

Parents cannot be too careful what books go into the hands of their children. Many a boy has been ruined by reading highly wrought narratives of the crimes of highwaymen, robbers &c., in which it is not an uncommon thing that the authors make their heroes to appear more like injured innocents than the vilest of criminals. Here is a case in point of the evil of such readings.

The sheriff of London in a letter to the editor of the Times, says, "I think it my duty to state distinctly, that Courvoisier did assert to me that 'the idea of murdering his master was first suggested to him by a perusal of the book called Jack Sheppard, and that the said book was lent to him by a valet of the Duke of Bedford.'"

A GOOD JOKE.—That Cincinnati Census Marshal keeps at it. Here is his last, from the Chronicle:

"Madam, what age shall I put you down?—(no direct answer.) How old is your husband?" "Sixty one." "And your eldest son?" "Twenty-seven."—"And the next?" "Twenty-one." "And how old do you call yourself?" "I do not know my age exactly, but it is about thirty." "Did I understand you, madam, that your eldest son was twenty-seven?" "Yes." "You must surely then be more than thirty?" "Well, sir, (quite snappishly,) I told you about thirty; I can't tell exactly; it may be thirty-one or two, but I am positive it is not over that."

TAX ON BACHELORS.—A lady having remarked in company, that she thought there should be a taxation on the single state—"Yes, madam," replied Colonel ———, who was present, and was a most notable specimen of the uncompromising old bachelor, "as on all other luxuries."

ROAD TO FORTUNE.—Mind your own business with diligence and perseverance.

WESTERN RECORDER.

ZANESVILLE:

WEDNESDAY,.....SEPTEMBER 9, 1840.

TERRIBLE DISASTER AT ALBANY.

TWENTY LIVES LOST.

An accident such as may not occur in all its circumstances again for a thousand years, happened on Saturday afternoon in Albany. The particulars we gather from slips issued from the newspaper offices in that city, on Saturday and Sunday evenings. The scene of the occurrence was the State street Bridge, perhaps ten minutes before the departure of the afternoon boats. A Mr. Cavener, a deranged person, of Westmoreland, Oneida county, under the charge of Messrs. Stevens and Fuller of that county, on his way to the asylum at Hudson, became refractory when they reached the draw, and attracted a crowd of persons passing to and from the steamboats; and these crowded the passage so as to prevent the progress of the carts, carriages, &c., until the weight became too great and the draw broke, precipitating all who were on it into the Basin twenty feet below and in twelve feet water.

It is supposed that at least eighty persons fell with the draw; surrounded by horses, baggage wagons, carts and the falling timbers. Instantly citizens ran to the scene of danger, and put off in boats to the rescue of those who were struggling for life. The surface of the water was literally black with the moving heads, and with floating hats, papers,&c. As soon as these were taken into the boats, the broken portion of the draw was drawn away, and then commenced the search and efforts to recover the bodies that had fallen under it In the course of fifteen minutes a large number were taken out, and conveyed to the different canal boats for resuscitation, if possible; not one, however, was restored to animation. At sun-down, on Saturday, says the Argus slip of Sunday evening, nineteen bodies had been recovered. On Sunday, the Argus says, one more was taken out, —— Chamberlain, making in all twenty. Passengers by this morning's boat, report one man and two boys, which would make the whole number twenty-two. But we hear no names beyond those reported in the papers. The following is the slip from the office of the Journal:—Brother Jonathan.

Our city is the scene of a most distressing and calamitous dispensation. At 5 o'clock this afternoon, just as the steamboats were departing for New York, and when hundreds of people were crossing the bridge over the Canal basin, the draw broke and precipitated from seventy to eighty persons and three or four horses and carts into the basin! They fell about twenty feet into twelve feet water. The struggle for life, among the sufferers was brief but awful! We shudder at the horrid recollection of it. Hundreds of citizens, with boats, sprang to the relief of their fellow citizens. At 7 o'clock eighteen dead bodies had been recovered, of which we can only learn the names of the following:—

James Hinman, constable, of this city; Mr. Driscoll, merchant, of Palmyra; Charles Lyons, tobacco pedlar, of this city; a son of Jacob Henderson, of this city, 14 years old; a son of Sybrant Kettle, of the city, 16 years old; Roderick Davidson, an interesting and promising youth, employed in this office, 16 years old; —— Groesbeck, a boy belonging to the boat Mohawk; Mr. Cavener, an insane man from Westmoreland, Oneida county, under the charge of Mr. Stevens and Orin I. Fuller, of Rome, on his way to Hudson—Cavener and Fuller were lost and Stevens saved; James Van Buren, of German Flats, a canal driver, who was assisting Fuller to get Cavener to the boat; Samuel Fisher, lamp lighter of this city; Francis Rogee, laborer, of this city; —— Wood, a boy about 14 years old, of this city; Thomas McDowell, of this city; Wm. L. Morey, of Vermont; —— Jones, of this city; H. L. Hoffman, of Fultonville; Smith Matthews, of Troy.

A part of the draw fell after most of the sufferers were in the water, from which many were injured. Others were wounded by the struggling horses. The body of Mr. Hinman and that of a boy, show severe wounds..

Capt. Jacobs, of the boat Col. Little John, who was assisting with the insane man, though in the midst of this destructive scene, was saved; James Henry, bookseller, fell outside of the crowd and saved himself. Among the hats recovered, was one with a letter directed to "Jonathan Hart." Mr. Carr, of the Pearl street House, was slightly injured but saved himself; Thomas Greene, of the firm of Rathbone, Chapin & Greene, who was surrounded by struggling men and horses, swam out; a young man (Samuel H. Ransom,) saved himself and an old man who was exhausted and sinking; Mr. Wilson, of Juliet, Illinois, son of J. Q. Wilson, of this city, swam out; Capt. Morgan, of a canal boat, saved himself; a man, whose name we could not learn, was saved with a broken arm; Daniel Gavit, engraver, swam out.

Several cartmen, among whom we recognized David Terry, John W. Butler, Chas. Rock, John Stockpole and Peter Simonds, saved themselves and horses.

This dreadful loss of life was occasioned by the refractory conduct of the insane man who was refusing to go with his keepers. His resistance drew a crowd which blocked up the passage until the mass of people and carts became too heavy for the draw. Officer Hinman, the moment the draw gave way was endeavoring to disperse the crowd.

A large number of citizens continued their search for the bodies until dark.—Several missing persons are supposed to be numbered among the dead.

Medical gentlemen continued their efforts to restore life until hope expired.—All their exertions were unavailing.

Several bodies were recoverd within five minutes after the fall, and we can only account for the abortiveness of every effort to resuscitate life by supposing that the persons lost were injured by the fall, or wounded before they sunk.

Our medical men, (among whom we noticed Drs. Coggswell, Aimsby, Van Olinda, McNaughton, Hinkley & Staats,) were prompt and untiring in their efforts to resuscitate life. In two or three instances respiration was slightly effected, but all finally sunk.

The Mayor, who was early on the spot, assisted to save two boys who were nearly exhausted.

Among the citizens who made praiseworthy efforts to save lives and recover bodies, were Colonel Groesbeck, Robert L. Learney, John McCardle, Edward Brinkerhoff, S. M. Fish, J. E. Gavit, David Terry, Jr., Elijah Brainard, and several others whose names do not occur to us.

In addition to the names given in the above slip, we have the following; Joseph Welch, of Albany, hackman; John Rierdon, of Albany, carpenter; and Samuel A. Chamberlain, of Canada, aged 11, who had been with his father but a few days in Albany. The Argus thinks that the twenty bodies found, are all who were lost, though there are rumors of one or two boys missing from families in Albany. Eight bodies, not claimed by relatives, were deposited on Saturday night in the City Hall. On Sunday morning three of them were removed by friends; and the funeral of the remaining five took place from the City Hall, at 1 o'clock P. M., under the direction of the Corporation, attended by several of the clergy and a large concourse of citizens.

John Plateau, reported drowned, is alive. The Argus gives the following account of persons injured, in addition to what is stated above. Charles Mosely, severely wounded in the head and side—delirious; Ten Eyck Quackenbush, dangerously wounded in the head; James McKernan, porter at Congress Hall, was taken from the water with his shoulder badly dislocated; Connelly, a blacksmith, is said to have had his thigh broken.

One of the narrowest escapes was that of A. Gullup, jr. He was passing to the boat with a package of money. Feeling the downward motion of the bridge, he threw the money forward on the unbroken part, and caught the foot or boot of a person, who, in his turn, clung to the timber above. Being on that part of the draw which came up by the force of the weights, when relieved of its load, he was relieved from his perilous situation and recovered his package.

I WON'T BE A NUN; OR THE NAUTICAL ADVENTURE OF A YOUNG LADY.—A singularly romantic affair has just been bro't to our notice, namely, that of a female sailor having arrived here some days ago in the ship Bucephalus. We understand that she is a very comely, interesting girl of eighteen, the daughter of a British officer, and related to an English nobleman, who, having the misfortune to lose her mother at an early age, was placed in an English convent, with the view ultimately of taking the veil. Whilst a boarder in this place, she, for the sake of her health, visited occasionally some friends in the neighborhood, where in the house of one, she first met the object of her attachment, now an officer in one of the native regiments. Subsequently she was consigned to a convent in Dublin, to the end that she should take the veil.—Here she remained some months; but resisting every argument to induce her to do so, privation, suffering and cruel treatment at the hands of the lady superior were her lot; she fell sick, and was conveyed to an hospital, whence, thro' the connivance of a young English lady, an inmate of the convent, who supplied her with the means, she made her escape in the disguise of a boy, and formed the romantic resolution of coming out to Bombay, in search of the young officer above mentioned. We are told it would occupy a volume were we to recount all her wanderings, and the sufferings and the innumerable privations of the poor young creature in her endeavors to get on board a ship bound for Bombay. This at last she accomplished. A few days after the ship sailed, "the strong boy," on being questioned by the captain from whence he came, proved to be a young lady; a cabin was humanely allotted to her at once, and she was treated exactly as a lady passenger.

"Truth is strange—stranger than fiction;"

and here is a romance in real life that decidedly elucidates the saying of the poet. We understand that this young lady's history has excited considerable interest and admiration among the society of Bombay. Probably the whole ample page of fiction could not present an instance of greater determination and constancy than is exemplified by this case.—Bombay Times.

SCRUPLES.—"Josiah, how many scruples are there in a drachm?"

"Don't know, zur."

"Well, then, recollect there are two."

"O, the is, hay! wal, daddy takes his dram every mornin' without no scruples!"

TERRIBLE SUSPICIONS.—A few years ago, while a resident of Lowell, Mass., we recollect having heard a great deal of village gossip respecting the marriage of Rev. Enoch W. Freeman. The person he had selected for a wife displeased a portion of his church, and indefinite allegations were made and circulated against her. The worst that we can remember is that she was charged with being a woman of too frivolous mind to be united to a minister of the gospel. The affair resulted in a partial separation of the couple, we think—but upon this point we are not positive. A coolness grew up between Mr. F. and his church. All this, however, was healed by the sudden death of the reverend gentleman. All past complaint was forgotten, and not only the church and congregation, but the whole town united in testimony of respect to one of the best and most sincerely pious men who ever lived—for such was Enoch W. Freeman. His widow partook largely in the public sympathy. All past charges against her were forgotten, and there was nothing in them which was not of a nature so venial as to be easily forgotten and forgiven. None of the complaints made of her conduct extended further, if we recollect, than to that lack of a serious turn of mind of which we have spoken; though the fact that she had another husband living, from whom she had procured a divorce was frequently brought up.

Mrs. Freeman, after the death of her husband, opened a dry goods store of some description, and the ready sympathy of the female portion of her late husband's congregation made her exceedingly thriving and prosperous. She is a person of manners very fascinating, of great intelligence, and of unusual conversational powers. All objection to her appeared buried with her husband. Some time after his death she married a gentleman named Kinney, and with him removed to Boston. Mr. Kinney died recently, very suddenly. He was a member of a volunteer military company, and was buried under arms, and with extraordinary testimonials of respect. Having a large sphere of acquaintance, and being with them very highly esteemed, the suddenness of his decease was much discussed among them, and the circumstances of it led at last to suspicion. The body was exhumed, and the certainty that he had died by foul means was demonstrated by the presence of arsenic in his stomach.

Mrs. Kinney has absconded. The facts relative to the death of Mr. Kinney, reaching the ears of some of the friends of Mr. Freeman, the sudden death of that much lamented clergyman was called up; the circumstances relative to it were revived in the public mind, and with suspicion for a clue to guide investigation, many circumstances were re-called which possessed an importance under the new view of things, greater than was originally given to them. The body of Mr. Freeman was disinterred, and the Lowell News states that it was found undecayed. That arsenic is used by French physicians in the preparation of bodies for preservation, is a fact well known. Injected into the veins, in solution, it is a more potent embalming agent than the ancient Egyptians possessed. But whether the taking up of arsenic by the absorbents, before death, would preserve the corpse from which that terrible poison had driven life, is a question. The violent inflamation which follows the corrosion of arsenic produces the commencement of decomposition before death. That, after death, decomposition is arrested by the very means which make it commence during life, is an opinion to which we find some of our medical friends incline. If, as the News states, the body of Mr. Freeman was found undecayed; or, if the stomach and parts adjacent only, were found in a state of preservation, the fact will go far to establish a new point in medical jurisprudence. We trust that the medical gentlemen of Lowell, among whom are some of the first in New England, have paid such attention to this matter, as will prove or disprove what seems now to be current report and opinion in New England, in relation to it.—Br. Jon.

From Brazer's Magazine.

WOMAN AND POETRY.

What to us were this world and its burden of care,
But a fetter of clay, that in slavery bound us,
Were our troubles not soothed by the smiles of the fair,
And if Poetry spread not its magic around us?

In the hour of our gladness, if Woman be near,
More smoothly the stream of enjoyment will flow,
And where can our grief find a balm like the tear
From the bright eyes of her who partakes of our wo?

To the poet a power of enchantment is given,
Which time cannot limit, space cannot define;
Which can lift on its wings the rapt spirit to heaven,
And make dull mortality almost divine!

Oh! Woman and Poetry, each is a treasure,
A mine of delight that enriches life's span;
The first is a minst'ring angel of pleasure,
While the gift of the next makes an angel of man!

MR. MILLER'S PREDICTION.—The 11th of August last, was the day, according to Mr. Miller, which was to have closed the day of grace, or when Christ was to have left the mediatorial throne. Mr. Miller has all along maintained, that after the 11th of August, 1840, there could be no conversions—that Christians would lose their desire and their spirit of prayer for the conversion of sinners—in fine, that that day would close up the day of grace.—Zion's Herald.

LATE AND IMPORTANT FROM TEXAS.

The Baltimore Patriot has been favored by a passenger, just arrived at that port from Galveston, with the following startling intelligence:

From the Galveston Daily Courier, Extra.
August 12, 1840.

The following letter, addressed to us "with despatch" came to hand yesterday, with the following endorsement on the back: "Will Mr. Pinckard see this delivered immediately as it contains important news from the frontier?"

Sunday Morning, Matagorda.

To A. Shepherd:

Dear Sir—Capt. Hanson has just arrived from Linnville, and states that he saw Linnville in flames, an an army of 2,500 Mexicans and Cherokee Indians. Capt. Watts and Maj. O'Neil were killed. The inhabitants fled naked to their boats.—Capt. Hanson had also learned that Victoria and Dimmits had also been burned. Watts' wife is a prisoner. This news is not to be neglected. Hanson saw Linnville in flames, and also the army parading. Written to you by order of Col. Horton. S. PILKINGTON

P. S.—Concentrate your forces at Casey's old ferry. You will warn all your county forthwith.

Friend Case: The above is a copy of a letter handed me this moment by Austin Bryan, Esq., from Quintana. There is thought to be no doubt at all with regard to its truth. Your friend,

JOHN F. HUNTINGDON.

IMPORTANT FROM MEXICO.

Gen. Urrea Escaped from the Inquisition.

ANOTHER REVOLT!

By the New Orleans Commercial Bulletin, and other papers of that city, we have intelligence of very great importance from Mexico. It appears that Urrea, the Federalist General who had been made a prisoner, had escaped, or was released. Followers flocked about him, and the spirit of rebellion issued forth in the very heart of the capital.

On the 15th of July, Urrea, assisted by his coadjutors, Gomez Padrasa, Ex-Vice President, and Gomez Garillas, attacked the Palace, and after a bloody engagement, in which 300 men are reported to have been killed, Bustamente was taken prisoner. Before dark, the city of Mexico was in the hands of Urrea, who declared himself in favor of Federalism; and he will sink or swim with the cause he has espoused. Subsequently, the Seminary, the Cathedral, and the Disputation were taken possession of; these, with the Palace, form the four corners of the great square.

Dates from Mexico are up to the 23d of July. Up to that time there had been two partial engagements; the first when the Federalists got possession of the city; the second on the 22d, which appears to have been a draw game. The Federalists are reported to have lost very severely in both cases; but on the 23d Urrea held possession still of the public buildings, and Bustamente was preparing to attack him. The general battle which was pending would decide who should hold possession of the city.

Santa Anna immediately repaired to the capital and proffered his assistance—which was declined. Condea and Conaliza, Generals of the Government army at Matamoras had arrived to the capital, and Matamoras was left in a very defenceless position. In a proclamation issued on the 16th July, President Bustamente talks in the diplomatic rhodomontade about "the insignificant sedition of a small part of the population and garrison of the capital"—promises in a few hours that tranquility will be restored, and hints clemency to the insurgents. In the same proclamation the defection of a portion of the military is admitted. It appears, that the few hours in which tranquility was to be restored, had extended to a few days, and that the issue was still uncertain.

There were reports at Matamoras on the 1st of August, that New Mexico had declared in favor of Texas, and St. Louis Potosi in favor of the Federalists; but much confidence was not placed in those rumors.

THE MEXICAN REVOLT.

Ten Days Continued Fighting in the Capital!!

The schooner Doric, arrived at New Orleans from Mexico, brought further and highly important intelligence of the progress of the revolution.

Gen. Urrea and the Federalists under him, have been carrying on the war in the heart of the city with a desperation worthy of the great cause of liberty, and the establishment of the confederacy of Sovereign States of 1824, which they espouse.

A scene of carnage had existed for 10 days from the moment of the revolution, July 15, and there was every prospect of its continuance. Urrea occupies his first position on the public square, and such is the enthusiasm of his troops, that they are using for catridges the Dictator's edicts and records in the public edifices. The civic militia are with them, and Bustamente, fearful that the detachments of troops he has sent for, to other places, may be cut off by the Federalists, has given orders for them to fall back on certain garrisons specified.

The Governor of the Department of Mexico, July 20, issued a proclamation granting free ingress, without duty, to persons bringing provisions while the Federalists have possession. So it appears that, maugre the bombastic proclamation of Bustamente, July 18, the insurgents had possession four days after.—More alarming yet for the hopes of the Dictator, is the following:

"The Government Bulletin of the 21st July, has the following postscript: After our form was made up, we learned from an undoubted source, that the insurgents have demanded the furniture, and gold and silver plate of the Holy Cathedral, with a threat that they would take it by force, unless their demand was civilly complied with in two hours."

FROM TAMPICO AND TEXAS.

ATTEMPTED REVOLT AT TAMPICO!

The government papers assert that a plot by Gisosola, a federal leader, to revolutionize the city on the 30th ult., had been discovered and prevented.

The steam packet Columbia, Captain Windle, arrived at New Orleans, bringing dates from Houston to the 8th ultimo. According to the Austin Sentinel, a detachment of the Federalists have marched upon Laredo, which is in possession of the Central forces. It is expected that they will take the town with ease, and be ready to join the main body in an attack upon Matamoras.

The Houston Times of the 5th ultimo, says: "By a gentleman who arrived this morning from Victoria, we learn that Canales and his army are at San Patrico; his force is said to be 900 men, of which number, 300 are Americans, all well armed and equipped for battle; 400 Mexicans and 80 Americans left about ten days since for the neighborhood of the Rio Grande to attack a party of Centralists who are said to be advancing towards San Patricio. Carabajal has been despatched by Canales to Galveston."

There was a battle lately fought on the Rio Frio, between the Camanche and Lipan Indians, in which the latter, it is said, killed 13, took 7 or 8 prisoners and sent them to Bexar.

THINK OF ME.

Go, where the water glideth gently ever—
Glideth by meadows that the greenest be,
Go, listen to our own beloved river,
And think of me.

Wander in forests, where the small flower layeth
Its fairy gem beside the giant tree;
List to the dim brook pining, while it playeth,
And think of me.

Watch when the sky is silver pale at even,
And the wind grieveth in the lonely tree;
Go out beneath the solitary heaven,
And think of me.

And when the Moon riseth, as she was dreaming,
And treadeth with white feet the lulled sea;
Go, silent as a star beneath her beaming,
And think of me.

A PRETTY CUTE TRICK, according to the Spirit of the Times, was played off by a swindler, in Philadelphia, a few days since. A genteel-looking young man called upon the Rev. Mr. Clay, and represented himself as a namesake of that gentleman, who had found himself, by accident, in Philadelphia, without money, asked a loan of five dollars to enable him to return to New York, where he pretended to reside. The Rev. gentleman was so much prepossessed in his favor, that he immediately complied with his request. The next day, however, happening to call on the Episcopal Bishop of the city, and finding him engaged, he seated himself to await his leisure. He heard the bishop in conversation with a gentleman in an adjoining room, and his astonishment was not a little to find that it was his acquaintance of the day previous, who was relating his story with "variations." Mr. C. immediately rushed into the room and confronted the villain, who appeared astounded at his detection, refunded the money taken from Mr. Clay, and then begged to be permitted to go.

On consideration, the Rev. gentleman believing him to be a dangerous fellow, concluded to detain him. Mr. C. started for a police officer. The fellow attempted to whip the bishop and escape, but the bishop locked the door, put the key in his pocket, forced the rascal into a seat, took up a poker, and thus armed, treated him to a severe lecture upon the wicked course of life he had adopted, and the disgrace to which it must ultimately lead. While thus occupied, the door bell rang, and the servant informed the bishop, that a man with a big stick awaiting his coming.—Presuming that, of course, it was the police officer, he looked into the entry, the impostor looking over his shoulder.—"Aha!" said the man with a big stick, when he caught a glimpse of the rogue, "it's you, is it! come along with me!" So saying, he seized the culprit by the collar, (the bishop gladly relinquished him) and led him off. When he and his prisoner reached the pavement, strange to say, they both turned round, and looking significantly at the bishop, clapped each their right thumbs to their noses, and moving their fingers spirally, "a-la Veller," exclaimed with a horse laugh, "you can't come it, judge, no how," and ran off with the celerity of a locomotive. The man with a big stick was an accomplice!

SOMETHING "DISPISHIUS."—"Sambo, I devise you to sleep wid one eye open desc dark nights—dere's something berry dispishius comin!"

"What on airth you mean, I'ke, what's de matter! tell us all about em—don't keep poor nigger in dispense."

"Wal, de fac is, dat are Scroub Treasury bill has passed by Washington and Fullmondelfy; an he aint left a spec ob skin on de shin ob any nigger dis side ob de souf-pole! He'll be here fore long, dat's sartin—den look out for your ole wool, Sambo!"

"Gosh amighty! dat are critter comin here! Don't git dis child out arter dark widout a Spanish knife—mind dat I'ke."—Picayune.

AGRICULTURAL

From the Western Farm

LIME.

It has occurred to us, that this valu assistant in the productions of the might be resorted to in many case worn out lands, now beginning to s themselves too plainly by ocular de stration, in many parts of our wes country; and we are moreover ind to bring this matter forward, in co quence of there having appeared of in some of the eastern periodicals, st prejudices against the use of this min manure. Although it is not prete but that its stimulating properties be abused, and especially if there is vere cropping after its application which case, nothing but vegetable animal manures can effect any rest tion of fertility. Almost every far knows how to burn lime in this well bered country; and considering the f ities of materials and location, and need of its aid in many places, it is surprising that more of it is not prepa Dr. Shaler, we find, has set a good ample on his farm in this neighborh in this way, as well as in many o respects, in agricultural improvemer

At the same time that the proper of lime is highly to be recommen farmers ought to be put on their g against that sort of lime which cont a high percentage of magnesia, as suited for water lime, it being well as tained by scientific deductions, to be and injurious for the purpose of agr ture. The following brief and com dious directions on and for the us lime, are taken from our work la published—The Practical Farmer, G ener and Housewife, &c:

"LIME, AS A MANURE.—Very usefu land where there is no calcareous mat On a moory soil, lime will produce g herbage where nothing fit for man beast grew before. Grass land hav poor and inferior grasses, will by it made to produce those that are more uable. Lime is wonderfully useful turnips. In new lands of a toler quality, the richest manure will not e ble them to bring any crops, but thos oats or rye to maturity; with a suffic quantity of lime, peas, barley or wh may be raised to advantage. Summe the proper season for liming land. land intended for wheat after corn, l can be applied to the land in June July, on small one-horse sleds, betw the corn rows. For a turnip crop, it on in the spring. Lime is not g for potatoes. Lime is best for str loams and stubborn clays. It should applied in a powdered state, and slac in heaps in the field to spread it even. should be ploughed in shallow. In g eral, eight or ten barrels of lime to acre is sufficient. Unslacked powde lime is the best. It is an excellent dressing for a green sward. Slac lime applied to the side of hills of Indi corn, increases the crop. Sandy s are greatly improved by lime. Limi should be repeated every ten or fift years. Some spread it upon the sod a plough it under, and consider there is much profit in this way as in any oth Light sandy soils containing but lit vegetable matter, should not have mu lime applied to them."

A writer in the Farmer's Cabinet, sa of lime, "I have seen it applied at t rate of from sixty-five to one hundr and twenty bushels per acre, upon la entirely worn out by our old-fashion mode of cropping, and the effect has be to increase the value of the land in thr years, five hundred per cent. The Ca inet is taken and read with much atte tion by some of the farmers in this neig borhood, and any thing that may be fou in its pages against the use of lime, e anating from practical farmers in t neighborhood of Philadelphia, would u questionably have much weight with t farmers here; but, judging from wha saw when travelling through a part Pennsylvania a few years ago, I am i duced to think that the use of lime is n held in as high estimation in Bucks coun as it is in some of the neighboring cou ties. I recollect when travelling thro' part of Philadelphia county, with a fa mer of that county who had used lime a great extent upon his farm, and I thi I never saw a farm more highly impr ved; but, to my utter astonishment, in t course of our ride through this high cultivated region, we suddenly came up an old sedge field! How is this, said how came one of my countrymen her 'Oh,' said my fellow traveller, 'don't alarmed, we are in *Bucks county no we passed the line about ½ a mile back.'

*There must be some mistake in this stat ment; we have a number of Bucks county far ers in this neighborhood, and they have been t introducers of lime here, and have succeeded satisfying every one of its utility as a manu Editor Recorder.

HE RECORDER.

ZANESVILLE:

...NESDAY, ... SEPTEMBER 9, 1840.

...e editor is absent attending conference, ... is now in session at Steubenville, Ohio.

... old side friends have refreshing times at ... camp-meeting now in progress in the neigh... of this office. On Sunday they had one ... largest congregations we ever witnessed ... similar occasion. Saturday and Sunday ...ings the altar was crowded with mourners.

...Beatty is informed that we mail all the ...eny city papers regularly on the day of ...cation. They are sent in two packages.— ... Stevens' paper is found in Pittsburgh, the ...ies not with us,—we send it to Allegheny. ...reception of only one packet we cannot ...nt for, unless we charge it to Uncle Sam's ...ats.

...s somewhat of a phenomena to find a young ...ever thirty years of age; twenty-five is gen... the stopping place. One has been found ...t. The census takers have found a young ...ear Richmond, Virginia, who says she is ...-five, and sticks to it!

...S.—She can't come in possession of her ...'s money until she is thirty-five.

...n accident of a serious nature occurred one ...st week, by which a youth of ten or twelve ... lost his life. It appears that the youth ...n the employ of Mr. Philip Zane, of Hope... township, Muskingum county, and was en... in tending a brick making machine, and ...me means his ear was caught and his head ...n into a space of four or five inches, and ...ed in a most shocking manner. He linger... days and expired.

ELECTIONS.

...ODE ISLAND.—The election in this State ...esulted in electing 56 Whig members to the ...bly, and 14 Van Buren men. Last year ...ssembly stood 50 Whig and 20 Van Buren ... The Senate stands same as last year, all ...

...RTH CAROLINA.—All the counties heard ... Moorehead's (Whig) majority for Gover... 8,416. The Legislature stands as follows:

	Whig.	Van Buren.
...Senate,	28	22
...House,	75	45
	103	67

... majority on joint ballot, 36.

...ABAMA.—All the counties are heard from.

	Whig.	Van Buren.
...Senate,	13	20
...House,	46	54
	59	74

...Buren majority on joint ballot, 15.

... D. C. Carson writes from Highland circuit, ... "Br. Ewing has closed his year's labor and ...rone to conference. His labor has been ...d; he has added near one hundred to the ...h this year. Highland circuit is looking up, ...as advanced fifty per cent. in her finance. ...cause of the M. P. Church in onward."

...tract of a letter from Br. John Beatty, da... Allegheny, Pa., August 25, 1840:

... returned yesterday afternoon from camp... ing, which commenced on the 17th and end... sterday, 24th. We had, perhaps, one of the ...camp-meetings ever held since the organi... n of Protestant Methodism. We had no... like confusion or disorder—we had no dis... nce from any of the outer court worship... Fifty were added to the church and a great ...er of conversions. There was not an invi... n given without mourners coming up to be ...d for."

... John Fordyce, writing to the editor on bu... s, from Green county, Pennsylvania, under ... of August 26, 1840, concludes with the fol... g pleasing intelligence:

"Having now concluded our last quarterly ...ing for the present year, the friends of the ...lletown circuit will expect to hear the result ...e meeting through the Recorder. We say ... the meeting was a good one. It continued ... days—the congregation large throughout. ...ocal brethren who were in attendance labor... ith uncommon zeal and effect. The love... on Sabbath morning was a time of refresh... The sacramental service was well attended; ...ly two hundred of the professors of the chris... religion on that occasion surrounded the sa... ental board. Some twenty persons were ...ized during the meeting, and eighteen gave ...heir names as members of the Methodist ...estant Church, a number of them obtained ...verance through faith in the crucified. Near... ...ree hundred and sixty have joined the M. P. ...rch on this circuit the present year, and the ...ease is estimated at three hundred."

ADAM'S SLEEP.

... laid him down and slept—and from his side ... woman in her magic beauty rose; ...zled and charmed, he called that woman bride, ...nd his first sleep became his last repose.

LONG COURTSHIPS.—We have before ...says the United States Gazette, a re... t of a case of breach of promise tried ...Dublin, and we copy the decision of ... learned judge for the benefit of all ...rties in this country, and the gentle... n of the green bag especially:

"Baron Pennefather charged the jury ... an exceedingly able and feeling ad... ss, in the course of which he remark... that he hardly ever knew a long ...rtship to turn out well, and that what... r the lady might do to remain con... nt, the gentleman seldom did.

"The jury retired, and in about half ... hour returned with a verdict for the ...intiff—£1,200 damages and costs."

This is high authority against long ...rtships.

DEATH OF TIMOTHY FLINT.—The Salem (Mass.) Gazette mentions the death of Timothy Flint, at the age of 60. He died at Reading on Tuesday last. He left his residence on Red River, La., last May, in feeble health, hoping to derive benefit from the bracing air of the north. He came to his native place, where his disorder soon assumed symptoms of a speedy and fatal termination. He wrote to his family, that before they received his letter he should be no longer among the living; which intelligence was so taken to heart by Mrs. Flint, that she was seized with a fever, and died just four weeks before her husband. Mr. Flint is well known on the other side of the Atlantic, as well as in this country, as the author of various works, principally descriptive of the geography, resources, and character of the great West, or descriptive of scenes which have been enacted in that vast and interesting region, which have given him a rank among the most distinguished writers of our country.—New World.

THE RUMORED NEGRO INSURRECTION.—The Richmond Star of Wednesday says: "We do not learn sufficient of the facts to state with certainty the cause of the precautionary measures taken in neighboring towns. Our first statement located the point of difficulty aright, and we believe some arrests have taken place; and it is strongly asserted that disclosures have been made and arms (swords) seized, although the number is uncertain. A volunteer company was under arms in Norfolk on Monday night, showing that the rumors have authentic foundation.—The place where the discovery was made, is stated to be not far from Southampton county, but from all we learn, we judge the cause of alarm to be isolated, and far from serious. It may not, however, result injuriously, as it will excite a vigilance which ought always to be maintained."

Letters have been received from the Mauritas, dated Port Louis, 20th April, which state that a severe hurricane had visited that place. Seven small schooners were sunk: one totally lost, and all hands on board perished. Several large ships were lost outside. Four ships were driven ashore in the harbor, and all the other vessels in port are said to have sustained considerable damage. On shore, the destruction is described as having been awful. Roofs of houses blown off, trees torn up by the roots, sugar plantations destroyed, and a number of lives lost in the ruins. The whale ship Arabella, Capt. Bishop, is reported to have put in to stop a leak, on the 17th April, but we do not see her name reported as having sustained damage, or otherwise, during the hurricane.

TEARS OF THE HERO OF AUSTERLITZ.—Who forgets the anecdote of Napoleon, and the village bells of Brientz?—He was riding late one day over a battle-field, gazing stern and unmoved on the dying and the dead that strewed the ground by thousands about him, when suddenly "those evening bells" struck up a merry peal. The Emperor paused to listen; his heart was softened; memory was busy with the past; he was no longer the conqueror of Austerlitz, but the innocent, happy school-boy at Brientz; and dismounting from his horse, he seated himself on the stump of an old tree, and, to the astonishment of Rapp, who relates the circumstances, burst into tears.—The rock was smitten, and the living waters came gushing from it.

QUEEN MARY'S TREE.—This memorable tree, which has braved the blasts of centuries, yielded to the fury of the gale on Monday last. It stood at the east end of the village of Duddingtone, about two miles from Edinburgh, and nearly opposite Lord Abercorn's gate. It was perhaps, one of the oldest thorn tree in Scotland, and of the greatest dimensions. Its exact measurement we do not at present recollect, but we know that two men embracing its trunk, at oppposite sides could not make their hands to meet. It was commonly called Queen Mary's Tree, though it is probable that it was planted before her reign.—Aberdeen Banner.

LARGE FIRE AT PATTERSON, N. J.—A gentleman who came from Patterson this morning informs us that a fire broke out there last night, in the stable of John Hart, in Main street, near Congress Hall. About a dozen houses were consumed, together with some barns, workshops, and a lumber yard. So rapid was the spread of the flames that all the horses could not be removed from Hart's stable, and two of them were burned to death. Our informant states that all the houses, front and rear, from Congress Hall to the Museum, are destroyed. The fire, it is supposed, was caused by an incendiary.—N. Y. Com. Adv.

REMAINS OF BONAPARTE.—We learn, says the New York Express, that H. B. M. S. Dolphin arrived at St. Helena, in 47 days passage, with despatches from England, for His Excellency the Governor, acquainting him that the British Government had granted permission for the disinterment of the remains of Napoleon Bonaparte, for transmission to France; and that His Excellency should make every preparation (at the expense of the British Government) to entertain the Prince de Joinville, who is on his way in H. M. C. Majesty's ship Artemis for this express purpose. The Artemis was seen forty days ago by the Dolphin.

ITEMS.

If any one knows Jeremiah Fox, who came to this country from Galway county, Parish of Mount Bellows, Ireland, he will much oblige by informimg his brother John Fox, who is now in Philadelphia.—This is a work of kindness.

Mr. James Cane of Baltimore, a very respectable gentleman, paid the last offices to a departed wife, retired to bed and was found a corpse the next morning.

Five Spanish pirates, who captured the English brig Vernon, on her voyage from Falmouth, Jamaica, to Halifax—and who murdered Captain Cunninghan and several sailors, plundered the cargo and burned the vessel, have been shot at Havana.

Dr. Mann, of Boston, has invented a material called lithoden, which is said to be vastly superior to any thing before used for filling up the decayed teeth of elderly ladies. Of course, young ladies' teeth don't require any thing of the kind.

A QUEER REVENGE.—Elizabeth Sutton, a colored woman, was last week charged before Recorder Rush with having threatened to set fire to a house in Filbert, below Tenth, because, as she said, the occupants owed her a dollar!—Phil. paper.

TRYING.—A tallow chandler, named Elkinton, in Kunckle street, Northern Liberties, was recently fined $4,67 for having been in the habit of rendering fat of so offensive a nature as to cause his neighbors to complain of it as a nuisance.

HORRIBLE.—The Boston Post states that Easton, Mass., almshouse was dicovered to be on fire about three o'clock on Saturday morning, the 15th ultimo, and such was the progress of the flames that four of the inmates were burned alive, and another has since died from injuries received. The fire was the work of an incendiary.

"THE RIGHT END OF THE YARN."—A poor aged woman of Liverpool, who had long earned her livelihood by knitting, one day coming to the end of her worsted ball or cluse, found it to be wound on a piece of old newspaper, which she had the curiosity to read; when, to her astonishment and delight, she discovered it to contain an advertisement respecting herself, as the heiress of a large property.

AN OLD GENTLEMAN.—Died at Dervock, county of Antrim, Ireland, Andrew Lochin, Esq., at the advanced age of 110 years. Until the last few months, he retained all his faculties unimpaired. He had seen five sovereigns successively ascend the throne.

A STEAMBOAT SUNK.—The Pacific, lying at Willow Grove, New Orleans, went down on Sunday night, the 9th ultimo, suddenly, mysteriously and unexpectedly; what is rather strange, she had no insurance. Thus has the Mississippi swallowed up the Pacific!

VERY GOOD.—The editor of the Mercantile Journal has ventured to perpetrate a pun. He says, "if Captain Woodruff beat the QUEEN, Captain Miller has made all square by beating the President!

MOTHER KILLED HER CHILD.—At the late York assizes, Ann Gilmore was convicted of the murder of her own child at Hull, in March last, by giving it laudanum and oil of vitriol, and was sentenced to death.

THE TRIO.—At Liverpool, the wife of Mr. Joseph Stabbs, was safely delivered of three sons, who, with their mother, are all doing well. On the same day they were baptised with the following: Shadrack, Mesech and Abednego.

The Baltimore Letter Mail of the 10th ultimo, for Wheeling, Va., and places west of that point, was robbed near Hagerstown, Md., on the evening of the 19th ultimo.

BANK OF KENTUCKY.—The teller of the bank of Kentucky has been held to bail in $5,000, on the charges alleged against him of having appropriated the funds to his private use.

BOZ'S MADNESS.—The report of Boz's madness originated, it appears, in a pun. Dixens has a pet raven, to which he pays much attention. A friend who had been visiting him while thus engaged, afterwards informed a mutual acquaintance that Boz was raven mad. The mutual friend understood it raving mad, and started off to communicate the lamentable intelligence to all his acquaintances.—The report soon became general.

The schooner Doric at New Orleans from Tampico, brings $109,000 in specie.

The Fly, corvette, 18 guns, at Spithead, brought $1,700,000 from Brazils for British merchants.

HEALTH OF BANGOR, ME.—During the month of July not a single death occurred at Bangor with a population of about 8000.

The English Baptist Missionary Society has, on the Island of Jamaica, 54 outstations, 37 churches, 22 missionaries; baptized the past year 3457—number of members — 24,677, —of inquirers, 21,-098,—of Sabbath school scholars, 9,150.

The Baptist Meeting house at Littleton, Mass., was destroyed a few weeks since, by fire—supposed to be the work of an incendiary.

An important case between the Old and New School Presbyterians respecting church property, has recently been decided in New York, in favor of the New School.

Fanny Elssler was serenaded in New York on Thursday night, without interruption. She appeared at one of the windows of the American Hotel, when the band played the music of the Cachucha, accompanied them on the Castanetts, and was repeatedly and loudly cheered.

The Baltimore Patriot states that a vessel has just arrived from "Bremen," conveying a number of emigrants who have lately been liberated from some of the Alms Houses in that quarter of Europe, to be thrown upon our shore, and to be taken care of by the legal authorities.

Mr. Robertson Tarver, who resided near Augusta, Ga., was recently struck by lightning while standing at his own door, and instantly killed.

The Paris correspondent of the National Intelligencer says:—"It is understood that the Chambers will adopt readily the Ministerial bill for the various lines of Steam Navigation between France and the two Americas. No time will be lost in the execution of the comprehensive object. which the official and semi-official organs confess to be even more political than commercial."

Tight sleeves and flounces are all the rage for ladies' dresses, in France.

"OLD WOMAN, SAID I."—Mr. Doxey, the officer employed to take the census of King's county, informs us that he met at the residence of Mrs. Maria Stilwell at Gravesend, a colored woman at the advanced age of one hundred and thirteen! She appears to be in perfect health; eats, drinks, and sleeps well. She performs all her duties as a domestic with astonishing energy and activity. She says she can milk the cows as readily as she could a hundred years ago!—Brooklyn News.

THE AFRICAN EXPEDITION.—The English are about making a great effort to penetrate the interior of Africa, by ascending the Niger. Three iron steam vessels built expressly for this purpose are to be used, to be commanded by Capt. Henry D. Trotter of the Navy, who will also have charge of the expedition, Commander William Allen, and Commander Bird Allen.

THE SUSPECTED PIRATE, MALEK ADHEL.—We see it stated, that the U. S. steam frigate Fulton went to sea Wednesday afternoon, from the Navy Yard, Brooklyn, to cruise after the Malek Adhel, in consequence of her recent piratical demonstrations. Her instructions are, to continue the cruise until she captures the suspected vessel, or at least discovers her intentions.

CITY OF AUSTIN, TEXAS.—The whole of the city and outlots, not reserved for the use of Government, or by order of Congress, have been sold. The last sale, says the Gazette, will bring about $48,-000 into the Treasury.

A SHOCKING DEATH.—A house carpenter named Thomas Morris, formerly of Philadelphia, while at work in New York, a day or two ago, fell from the height of some fifteen feet, striking in his fall upon the sharp pickets of an iron fence, by which he was completely impaled. He was removed to the house of Henry McCloskey near by, and every possible assistance rendered him. He was however so severely injured as to survive but a few minutes.

FROM PERNAMBUCO.—The Boston Democrat of Thursday says:—"The schooner Rienza, Capt. Bangs, arrived this morning, from Pernambuco, whence she sailed on the 21st ult. Capt. B. reports that some revolutionary movements had occurred at that place, in favour of abolishing the present regency; but on the day he left, they had been suppressed.—Flour had declined to $15; hides $4 40. Sugars continued low, and most of the crop in the market."

"John, has the doctor arrived?"

"Yes, sir."

"Then go immediately for the undertaker."

A marriage between two deaf and dumb persons was solemnized in Charlestown, Mass., on the 16th ultimo.

A correspondent of the Journal of Commerce, under date of Marseillses, June 20th, gives intelligence of the death, on the 17th of June, of Capt. T. Oxnard, for many years a resident of Marseilles. During the late war he was Captain of the True-Blooded Yankee, and afterward in the merchant service. Those acqcainted with him will not be astonished at his last request, which was to be wrapped in the American flag, and so interred. His funeral was largely attended, and all the Americans in port half-masted their flags on the occasion.

A work on the state of public instruction of Russia, has recently been published in Hamburg, which says that there are 100,000 scholars in the public and private schools in the Russian empire.—In the seven universities there are 2700 students. There are at St. Petersburgh, under the patronage of the government, 9 gymnasiums, 50 high schools, and 104 national and 100 private schools. In 1838, 777 original works were published in the Russian empire, and 51 periodicals. In 1839, 500,000 books were imported from foreign countries into Russia.

Tacitus declares that early marriages make us immortal. He says, they are the soul and support of an empire. Well, Tacitus knew a thing or two. We vote for Tacitus; don't you girls?"

From the Portland Advertiser.

OUR QUALITY COUSIN.

Marm Peabody has got a proper sight of relations, scattered about, here and there, and some of them hold their heads up pretty high in the world. There is Mrs. Joel Gibbins of Portland. and her husband is one of the first gentlemen in the place, for he is a merchant and lives in a fine house and has made a glorious spec in the lands, down east.

She paid us a visit last summer, and liked us so well that she staid a fortnight; and I don't know how much longer she would have staid, if it had'nt been for a northeast storm that come up and drove her away. She is a sort of cousin, in a roundabout way, of Marm Peabody's; being akin to the Smiths and Jordans, up about Umbagog. And they are cousins enough to come three miles out of their way, every time they go to market to Portland, just to see how we do and put up with us, all night, bag and baggage.

Well, no matter how she came by it, Mrs. Gibbins is Marm's cousin, and so, by that means, cousin to the whole family. And that aint all,—she is one of your first chop ladies. There's no mistake at all about it; she is the top of the pot in Portland; real superfine upper crust; and up to all manner of gentility. I tell ye what, we had to mind our p's and q's when she first come here, or we should have disgraced ourselves directly. Hannah, my wife, was scart out of a year's growth at the first sight of her, all dressed out in her silks and sattins, and shirt sleeves as big as meal bags. It was something just about a hair finer than she ever see before. And even I was put up to all I knew, to get along through the ceremonies on the grand occasion.—But I am an old hand at your compliments, and I give her some samples that she did'nt expect to see.

Good Lordy! just to see me at the table! setting up so prim, and mincing and taking small mouthsfuls. Hannah was ready to split, and had to look t'other way to save laughing right out. She declares I took two bites at a bean. But I minded well what I was about, and did'nt make a single slip. Catch me wiping my chops upon the table cloth, or picking my teeth with a fork, in such company.—Then such apologizing and politeness, and poking the victuals at her! Hannah says if she did'nt get enough to eat, it was'nt my fault. And whenever the lady said "Mr. Beedle, I'll trouble you for this thing or that"—I always spoke right up with "O marm, that trouble is a pleasure."

Finally our cousin had to come and say, that she was surprised to find "so civilized a being, so far up the country," and she could'nt invent how, nor where, I had picked up so much politeness, as I had never been to Portland.

Well my lady had hardly been in the house two hours, before she begun to ask me about the prospects here in the country. "Oh," says I, "pretty fair, considering. Hay will come in short, owing to the drought in the spring: but the potatoes look well, and corn is going to turn out a grand crop."

"Mr. Beedle," says she, "I have heard before that you were a funny man. I am going to look for myself." With that she claps on Marm Peabody's old sun-bonnet, and out she goes, dragging wife and me after her, through the fields. And away she streaked it, through bush and briar, and over fence and stone wall; 'twas neck or nothing, but no whow. And her tongue was running, all the time, as fast as her legs, every mite and grain. Sometimes I understood what she said, and sometimes I did'nt. But when I did'nt understand, I made as if I did, and she was none the wiser.

"Mr. Beedle," says she, "don't you admire the beauties of the country?"

"I used to, marm," says I, "before I was married; but now, you know, that won't do at all."

"O, you are a queer little man, always thinking of the girls.—I am speaking of the beauties of nature."

"O ho—you mean the beauties of nature. Sartin, I admire the beauties of nature."

By and by we got to the top of Bareback hill, and all at once she began to play such antics that I thought she was stung by a bumble bee. "My stars! (says she) what a charming prospect! beautiful, delightful, pictorickstick! Come here, good folks. This is the spot to look from. Is'nt that charming?"

At this Hannah she stretched her neck and stared all round, without saying a word, for she could make nothing ont, and she did'nt know how to hide her igrance. But I blurted right out. "Ooooo! I sniggers!" says I, "If that don't take the rag off the bush. That bangs every thing. It's equal to cash."

"I dont't see nothing, John," says Hannah, says she, "what is it."

"Why look," says I, "can't you see with your eyes?"

"Where, where?"

"There, there," says I, and give a sort of a jupe with my head; for I could'nt point any where particular; I had both hands in my pockets, but Hannah would'nt be quiet. "Shew me what it is, John, this minnit," says she; and so she kept worrying and teazing me, till our cousin spoke up, and says she, "is it possible, Mrs. Beedle, that you have lived here all your life time and never found out the beauties of this spot?" "Yes," says I, "is it possible?"

Hannah now begun to get ryled, as I see plain enough. When her under lip begins to curl over downwards, there's no joke in it. But Mrs. Gibbins took her by the hand, and spoke so kind and suant, that she soon brought her to reason.—And while she was pointing out and showing her how many hills and hollows and woods and meadows it took to make a prospect, I had a chance to breathe a little. But I hardly had time to think how nicely I had walked over the pole before the lady bust out again; and this time, she fairly screamed. Faith, I'd a good will to cut and run, for thinks I, I shall never be able to hoe my row through another prospect as long as I live.

But it was nothing after all—great cry and little wool. It was only the sun setting. It come out of a cloud and shew'd a great red face about two minutes and then went down behind the White Mountains. And our cousin made as great a towse about it as if heaven and earth was coming together.

However, our cousin is a right down nice clever woman, any how. Hannah got more than one new wrinkle while she staid. She learnt her to sing, and wanted to learn her to play the pyanny, but had'nt the means. O, she sets every thing by Hannah. But she didn't like our calling one another "John and Hannah." Says she, "you should say my dear and my love." But the first time we tried to practice dearing and loving, we burst right out a laughing in each other's faces and there was an end on't. Says marm, says she, "they'll never swallow that no how. It won't go down."

When she was going away, she insisted upon it that we must come down to Portland and pay back the visit. She says I shall be a lion when I get there, and take the shine off of all the Portland gentlemen. But she was always joking and jesting with me, and I don't know half the time whether she means what she says or no. Any how I mean to let my whiskers grow (I cut them off last spring at sheep shearing) and see what will turn up next winter, when sleighing time comes round. Who knows!

A PIRATE.—Captain Brown, of the barque Emily Wilder, who arrived at Boston on Wednesday, from Palermo, informs the editor of the Patriot as follows:

"About the 25th ult. when a little to the westward of the Western Islands, he observed a suspicious looking brig on his starboard bow, steering WSW. the Emily Wilder at the time heading NW. by N. The stranger, finding the E. W. sailed more rapidly than he anticipated, gradually altered his course so as to cut her off, but fell astern, and then commenced a chase. Finding that Captain Brown would not heave to, he ran out a gun, and fired a blank catridge; but Capt. B. still refused to come to, as he rather gained on the pirate, when going free. He then saw the pirate load their gun with a ball, which he discharged at the E. W. the shot passing very near her. Capt. B. then hove, and was hailed by the pirate, informing him that his cargo consisted of sulphur and rags. The pirate then hailed to know if he had a chronometer on board, and being answered that he had, he ordered him to bring it on board, as his own was run down, and he wished to set it. The mate of the E. W. then took the boat and went on board the brig, and found that the chronometer was going, and was corrrect. He was then allowed to leave the vessel with Capt. B.'s chronometer. While on board, the mate and boat's crew conversed with the crew of the brig, and learnt that she was the Malek Adhel of New York, which name and city she had on her stern.

The crew said she was intended for a slaver, and although she showed but two guns, that she had 14 more in the hold, which, with provisions, was all she had on board; but the mate saw a number of bags resembling bags of coffee, some spare sails, and a number of travelling trunks about the cabin. Amidships, abaft the long boat, was something carefully covered with canvass, which he presumed was a long gun. The mate of the brig was an American, and acted as captain; but the real captain was a Spanish mulatto, who spoke broken English, and told the mate "your captain gave great deal of trouble to speak him." He also said the E. W. was the fourth or fifth vessel he had brought to, the others without trouble. He gave the mate a slip of paper to report the Malek Adhel, as bound to the Coast of California; but the crew said she was bound to Rio Janeiro, to change her papers and flag, while Capt. Brown states that the course she was steering was for Havana.

Only 15 or 20 men were seen, consisting of Americans, Englishmen, Spaniards, Italians, &c. She was a brig of 300 tons, painted as well as her spars and topmasts, entirely black; lower masts varnished; Cornucopia figure head, very sharp bows, and would easily have overtaken the E. W. on a wind. She had a poop deck, the wheel forward of the poop, was very straight, and sat low in the water. The Spaniard inquired if Capt. B. had any passengers, and particularly if he had any lady passengers. One of the seamen gave one of the boat's crew a letter for Capt. Storey of the ship of the line Columbus, now in this harbor, and stated that he had been discharged from her but a short time before he joined the brig in New York. The brig was apparently not more than one day out from Fayal, as she had cabbages and pumpkins hanging at her stern. The occurrence took place in latitude 36½ longitude 29.

On reference to our files we find that the new brig Malek Adhel, Capt. Nunez, cleared at New York, June 26, for Mexico on Pacific Ocean, and was reported sailed 30th.

Jefferson College, Canonsburg, Pa., has two hundred and sixteen students.

OBITUARY.

For the Western Recorder.

Br. Springer: It becomes my painful duty to inform you that our worthy and beloved brother, Rev. William Kearn, of Highland circuit, is gone. He departed this life on the 31st, of last inst. at Bournsville, Ross county, Ohio, after a short illness, in the triumphs of faith, aged 73 years.

The subject of this obituary notice was born in Virginia, where he was reared up to manhood, where he married when very young. He was educated in the Roman Catholic faith, his parents being members of that church and the principles of early piety were inculcated on his mind by his parents, especially by his mother whom he has often represented to me as deeply pious. But at an early period of his life, under the labors of the first Methodist preachers who visited that part of Virginia, where he resided, he then became a subject of pardoning grace, and renouncing his Catholic faith, united himself with the people who under God was made instrumental in his conversion. Not long after his union with the church he was licensed to preach, and shortly thereafter with his family, consisting of his wife and one or two children removed to the state of Kentucky in the year 1795. Few, if any, engaged in the ministry stood as fair in the public esteem as he then did in that country. In the year 1798 he removed to the then North Western Territory, now the State of Ohio. His first location was on Pee Pee near where Piketon now stands. He however remained there but a short time and settled himself and family on Paint creek, 10 or 11 miles above Chillicothe, in the neighborhood of which he remained until at the command of his great Redeemer he left the militant to join the church triumphant.

Although Br. Kearn devoted the most of his labors in the church under the character of a local preacher, yet he endured more toil and fatigue in planting the gospel and organizing classes under the banners of Methodism, in our then frontier country, than some who gave themselves up entirely to the work, and far greater than almost any who are now engaged in the itinerant ranks. He assisted in forming the first class in Chillicothe, Pee Pee, Haller's Bottom, Twin creek, &c. &c. In the performance of which labor he often had to my knowledge, for I was then a resident of the N. W. Territory, to make his way through the trackless desert in order to preach a crucified Saviour to the few scattering inhabitants living in our little Log cabins, and after the fatigues of travelling and preaching, would partake of the coarse fare with which our tables were liberally spread, and then proceed on his onward march to discharge similar duties and toils, or return to his own cabin in the forest. And all these labors were performed without any remuneration from the church, or any expectation whatever of receiving any. It is true, however, he did travel some two or three years as an itinerant preacher, and would have continued his labors longer in that relation, if his temporal concerns would have justified the course.

His house for many years was a chapel, and the weary & way-worn messenger of heaven's best gifts to man always found it an asylum where he never failed to meet a kind reception from the old veteran of the cross & his pious, sensible companion, who now sweetly sleeps in the clay, and that comfort not a little augmented by the kind, agreeable treatment of his amiable and affectionate daughters; all of whose houses are now the preachers homes.

In the summer of 1823 when the subject of Lay representation became a subject of controversy in the M. E. Church, Br. K. from a clear conviction of the justice of the measures contended for by the Reformers, embraced the principles and continued a firm advocate for the same until all earthly probability of a change in the government of the church was at an end, and those who contended for the principles of equal and mutual rights were driven to the necessity of seceding, he with several of his old associates in the church withdrew from her fellowship and attached themselves to the Protestant Methodists. In that church he continued until the close of his earthly career. Although his age and infirmities stood as a preventive to the exercise of his ministerial gifts, yet his counsel and universal moderation were of great service to the M. P. Church.

It has been remarked more than once by a politician of no mean talents "that if Rev. W. Kearn had turned his attention to political affairs he would have shined in the first ranks of statesmen in our Union. In theology he was well read and in polemical divinity surpassed by few in the region of his acquaintance; but in the last few years of his life the principal theme of his discourses was practical and experimental religion. But his seat is left vacant with us—the pulpit is no longer filled by him—his counsel is no longer afforded us to assist in our deliberations. We already realize the loss of so valuable a member and minister in the church. Community also sensibly feels the loss. He has left four daughters and a numerous train of respectable grand-children to mourn their loss, which, to him is doubtless an infinite gain.—"Blessed are the dead that die in the Lord; yea, saith the spirit, for they rest from their labors and their works do follow them."

W. Hughey.

Ross co., O., August 15, 1840.

From the N. O. Picayune.

HOTELS.

A subject which is dear to every Traveller.

All lands has some perwadin' taste
Or rational, or fashion all;
Some vide characteristic, vhich
Sets itself up as national;
Vell, these 'ere States from end to end
Echoes vith gongs and bells—
If ve 've a nation'l taste at all,
It is for big Hotels!

The taste for politics is strong,
And orators the men are all;
The Bowie knife's established, and Juleps is wery general;
But there is only one thing fixed
Vithout a fluctuation—
The rage to have a big Hotel
In a little corporation!

Vell, it's all right—vot sight is like
Three hundred heads, see-sawin',
Three hundred noses over plates,
Six hundred jaws a chawin'.
Vot sound is like the rush of feet,
Tongues, knives and plates a clatterin';
So sweetly minglin' vith the gong
Vhich they keeps on a batterin'!

That gong! ve often talk about
The music of the spheres,
Vhich is taken on report, becos
Its re-port ve never hears;
It's no doubt a surprisin' von
To them as hears it swell,
But penal spheres might hush, compar'd
Vith the sphere of a Hotel!

And then they always take such care
To give von timely varnin'
To "bolt your door," in case you vants
Your money in the mornin':
And then they vaits on you so vell,
Vith every thing at vill;
And never troubles you at all
'Till they present their bill.

And then the lot of friends von makes,
Such scrapers, dowers, duckers,
Of a wery ancient family,
And vhich they calls the "suckers!"
The friendly int'rest vhich they takes—
Attentions vhich von't slumber—
And the best of vine vhich they calls in
To be charged to your own "number!"

Besides—the lot of sleep you gets
'Tween vhen to bed they bows you,
And that 'ere necessary hour
Vhen the gentle gong vill rouse you;
Vith the servants racin' 'bout the hall
So particularly active,
And never axin' any thing
All the vhile they're so ex-active!

Von's nerves vibrate so evenly,
Von's thoughts so free from flurry;
Von's stomach is so tranquil, and Von's tongue so nice and furry!—
There goes the gong!—I von't go down—
It isn't a la mode—a—
I think instead I'll take some super-Carbonate of soda!

Straws.

Relation of Husband and Wife.—A writer in the New England Review, who expounds the Legal Rights of women, showing that he can look at the relation subsisting between the Husband and Wife with a true eye, thus beautifully vindicates the Common Law, in one particular:—

"Should either, forgetting the obligation of good faith and all the proprieties of that relation, be willing to bear witness against the other, the law sternly forbids it. It will not allow the rule to be violated, even by agreement. It has no hand to raise the veil of that sanctity; no ear to listen to the breathings of its hallowed communion; it lays the hermetic seal of its finger on the lip that would reveal those secrets. Nay, if the parties themselves have drained the bitter cup of domestic dissention, and been finally divorced by a judicial decree, still, neither is permitted to testify against the other, to any matter of confidential communication, made while the marriage tie existed."

New Counterfeits.—The Wheeling Times states that a large quantity of counterfeit fives of the Bank of Kentucky were put in circulation at that place on Friday and Saturday last. The Bank has a variety of plates of that denomination, and the one counterfeited has a vignette of a horse. They are letter B, various dates, signed G. C. Gwathmey, cashier, and W. H. Pope, president. The engraving is most defective in the circles in which the figures 5 are situated, and the wreath round the figure is but partly formed.

To the Honorable, the Legislature of the State of Ohio:

The undersigned, citizens of the State of Ohio, respectfully represent, that they have witnessed with extreme pain, the demoralizing influences growing out of the practices of certain huxters and pedlers, for their own personal interest, vending at camp and other religious meetings, throughout this State, ardent spirits, beer, cider, cakes, &c., to the great annoyance of the public worship of God, and to the extensive injury of the peace and good order of the community.—The existing law, prohibiting the sale of intoxicating drinks within one mile of any place of religious worship, after more than twenty years' experience, is found to be totally inadequate to the object for which it was enacted. The process by which conviction is had is extremely difficult; beside, the owner of such property can usually procure some irresponsible person to sell for him. The only effectual way, therefore, in our opinion, to prevent this practice would be to forfeit the property offered for sale.—There is no law prohibiting the sale of eatables, yet the victuallers are, in reality, the greatest disturbers of these public meetings, because they usually erect their booths and kindle their fires, near the place of worship, which become an asylum for the drunken and profane, who will remain there, indulging in all kind of obscene language and disorderly conduct, to the great disturbance of the services of religion and injury of the public morals. Your memorialists would therefore respectfully suggest to your honorable body, the propriety of so amending the present law as to prevent the approach of trespassers nearer than two miles distance, and to contraband, not only all articles of intoxication, but, also, all goods, wares, or merchandize of any description, as the only and effectual way to prevent the abuses complained of.

Those interested in the proposed law, for the protection of religious worship, are a numerous and law-abiding class of the community. They have borne with these unconstitutional infractions of their rights until forbearance has ceased to be a virture, and if longer persisted in, would degenerate into meanness; they are, therefore, moved to pray your honorable body to throw the shield of law around them, so as to protect them in future from these annoying and demoralizing practices. We respectfully refer your attention to the law of Pennsylvania on this subject, a copy of which shall accompany this petition. We believe this law is as perfect as human wisdom can devise, for the object contemplated. It is mild, yet efficient. The experience of many years has shown that it affords ample protection to religion, and yet it has not been made the instrument of oppression. It would be highly satisfactory to your petitioners if this law, without alteration, could be adopted in our Statute book.

As in duty bound your memorialists will ever pray.

Act of April 2d, 1822. 7. Smith, P. 650.

An Act to prevent the disturbance of meetings, held for the purpose of religious worship.

5. Section I. From and after the passing of this act, it shall not be lawful for any person or persons to erect, place, or have any booth, stall, tent, carriage, boat or vessel, or any other place whatever, for the purpose or use of selling, giving or otherwise disposing of any kind of articles of traffic, spirituous, liquors, wine, porter, beer, cider or any other fermented, mixed or strong drink, (excepting as hereinafter excepted) within three miles of any place of religious worship in this State, during the time of holding any meeting for religious worship at such place.

6. Sec. II. If any person or persons shall or do violate this act by erecting, fixing, or having any booth, stall, tent, carriage, boat or vessel, or other place for the purpose or use aforesaid, or by selling, bartering, giving or otherwise disposing of any kind of articles of traffic, spirituous liquors, wine, porter, beer, cider or other fermented, mixed or strong drink, in, at or about any such booth, stall, tent, carriage, boat or vessel, or any place whatever, prepared or used for the purposes aforesaid, within three miles of any place of religious worship, during the time of holding any meeting for religious worship at such place, the person or persons so offending, shall first be informed of his, her or their violation of this act, and shall be warned by any Justice of the Peace, Constable or two free-holders of the county where the offence is, or shall have been committed, to desist from such offence, and to remove such booth, stall, tent, carriage, boat, vessel or other thing, together with all such articles of traffic, spirituous liquors, wine, porter, beer, cider or other strong drink, belonging to, or in the possession of the person or persons so offending, and if such person or persons, on recieving such information and warning, shall forthwith cease to offend against this act, and shall remove as aforesaid at least three miles from such place of religious worship, then no further proceedings under this act shall be had against such person or persons; but if such person or persons shall refuse or neglect immediately to remove as aforesaid, when informed and warned as aforesaid, then all the said articles of traffic, spirituous liquors, wine, porter, beer, cider and other fermented, mixed and strong drink, and all the vessels, chests and other things containing the same, together with such booth, stall, tent, carriage, boat or vessel, or other place prepared and used for the purpose aforsesaid, shall be, and are hereby declared to be forfeited, and it shall be lawful for any Justice of the Peace and Constable with two free-holders of the country, to seize and take possession of all or any part of the said forfeited articles and liquors, together with such booth, stall, tent and carriage, boat or vessel, and at any time within ten days after, to advertise and sell the same, and after deducting and paying the necessary and lawful expenses of such seizure and sale, the residue of the proceeds of such sale or sales shall be paid to the overseers of the poor in the township for the use of the poor of the county, where the support of the poor is a county charge, and where it is a township charge to the poor of the township where such offence shall have been committed.

7. Sec. III. Nothing in this act thall be taken or construed so as to affect any licensed tavern keeper, in his or her ordinary and lawful business, at his or her usual place of residence, specified in his or her license, nor shall it be so taken and construed as to effect any merchant, shopkeeper, farmer, mechanic or other person in the usual and lawful transactions of his, her on their ordinary concerns and business, in their usual place of doing such business, nor shall it be so taken, construed or understood, as to affect any person or persons who shall have a permit in writing, from the person or persons having the oversight, charge and management of any such meeting, to sell bread and other necessary articles of food for man and beast: Provided, The conduct of persons attending such meeting shall accord with the lawful rules and regulations of such meeting, and the property of such persons attending such meetings be not of the description forbidden by this act.

8. Sec. IV. If any suit or action shall be brought against any person or persons for doing or causing to be done any thing in pursuance of the act according to the provisions thereof, the defendant or defendants may plead the general issue and give the special matter under this act in evidence, and if in such suit or action a verdict and judgment shall be given for the defendant or defendants, or the plaintiff shall become nonsuited or discontinue his action, the defendant or defendants shall have and recover double cost of suit.

Sec. V. [Repeals acts of 1st April, 1811. 5, Smith, p. 257.]

9. Sec. VI. From and after the passage of this act, if any person or persons shall be guilty of disturbing any congregation, society or meeting, assembled for the purpose of religious worship, by blowing horns or trumpets, shooting or firing guns, or by any other means, with intent to disturb or interrupt the worship or devotion of said congregation, society or meeting, he or they, on conviction, before any Judge, Justice of the Peace or Alderman of the proper city or county, wherein the offence shall be committed, shall pay a fine not less than one dollar nor more than five dollars, for the use of the poor of the city, borough or township wherein the offence shall be committed, and where there are no poor, it shall be paid to the supervisors of the township for the improvement of the highways.

Act of 15th April, 1835. Pamph, p. 336.

"An act supplementary to an act, entitled 'An act to prevent the disturbance of meetings held for the purpose of religious worship,' passed the second day of April, one thousand eight hundred and twenty-two."

"10. Sec. I. If any person or persons convicted under the sixth section of this Act, to which this is a supplement, shall refuse or neglect to satisfy the fine imposed on him, her or them, and goods and chattels cannot be found whereof to levy the same, the said person or persons so convicted shall be committed to the jail of the proper county for a term not exceeding five days."

For the Western Recorder.

AN ADDRESS

BEFORE A POLEMIC SOCIETY.

Whether slavery or intemperance be the greatest evil in these United States of America, seems to me be a very narrow question:

"Both are monsters of so frightful mein,
That to be hated needs but to be seen."

Intemperance, whilst it invades the peaceful, hallowed homes of civilized society, and mingles the bitterest cup for social life, may be viewed by some as the grand emporium of earth's dark catalogue of human woe, whilst slavery being (thanks be to heaven,) only known to us in Ohio by the hearing of the ear, may be looked upon as a "fiend less foul."—This afternoon I have endeavored to arraign the two dark demons side by side before my closetted consideration, and whilst I find no deficiency of ugliness in either, I have thought there is to be seen the few following darks traits of character written on the forehead of slavery, which justly entitles him to the pre-eminence.

1st. Slavery is voluntary. Intemperance is involuntary. Slavery is like wickedness in high places, it is systematical sinning, and not more systematical than sure; it not only involves our representatives, judges and governors in a two-fold capacity, both as men and magistrates, but it also fixes its unhallowed fangs upon every individual in the State. It is a well known fact that every man who holds a voice in the choice of his representative, stands constitutionally chargeable with their crimes. Let us not deceive ourselves by thinking their misconduct is no voluntary act of ours. I ask you, is it not a voluntary act of Congress? Is not the subject of slavery brought up before them year after year in a due and regular form, placed upon their table and deliberated upon (at least ought to be,) in a most solemn manner, and in all its bearings debated over and over until they come to the conclusion that the United States of America, (who in almost every other respect holds up a pattern of laws to the world,) shall not only be the tolerators, but actual aiders and abettors in that most horrid crime, of not only destroying the moral sensibilities of our nature, but trafficing in the bone and sinews of our fellow creatures? Debauchery, beastly debauchery and intemperance, with all its abominations, its heart-rending and hellish consequences about it, is not once to be compared with the devil daring doings of slave-dealers. Recollect that none of us can plead ignorance, that this has been the pitiful trifling, or rather the wicked disposition our representatives have made of that all important question for many years, and how few of us move either a finger or tongue in the righteous cause; nay, how many is there amongst us who cry "havoc and let slip the dogs of war" upon the sons of Africa. "Whoso is not against us is for us," and visa versa, whoso is not with us is against us. Let this suffice to prove slavery our voluntary crime.

2d. The evil of slavery is universal. The evil of intemperance is limited. The evils of slavery being attachable, as I have said, to every one who votes, holds office, or is in any way connected with the representation of these United States, temperate as well as intemperate; it involves not only the poor drunkard in a double crime, but also the most moral man in the land in one of darkest die. Surely, intemperance may exultingly exclaim, "I am but a little harmless thing," when she views herself, compared with slavery in sweeping extent; but on this point the evil of slavery is but half told. We have only been yet looking at the white man's crime as it regards the white man, whilst that very crime alone involves millions of our colored brethren, corporeally, in pains, groans and misery; mentally, in blindness, darkness and ignorance, and ultimately not only in the gulf of intemperance, murder and suicide, but it is much to be feared in that gulf "where hope ne'er comes, that comes to all but torture without end still urges." Now, if all this grows naturally out of the white man's deliberate and voluntary crime of slavery, pray tell me, where in all the blotted calender of our national evils is there one that for a moment may once be compared with it? This night, Sir, you have got the mighty monarch's grim sister to stand by his side. I believe a darker couple never were wed. I should be sorry to say one word to white-wash the foul adultress, but my motto is, "give the devil his due," I would therefore say the poor dupes of intemperance want that shame facedness, that brazen brow that "wipeth her mouth and saith I have done no evil." I never have been acquainted with many drunkards, and I hope never will, but all of them I have seen as soon as the debauch was over had deep compunctions of heart, and to human eye it appeared "their repentings were kindled within them;" true, these oftimes are but short lived,—like the morning cloud or early dew, they are driven away before the hot sun of temptation, but still they are sufficient for my purpose, which is to draw two short arguments from them in support of our cause this evening.

First. The drunkard exhibits to society around him the most uninviting picture of human degradation and misery, his wallowing in the mud to-night, and his wallowing in the mud to-morrow, his ranks can never be filled up with calm, deliberate, well advised volunteers; and Second. It appears the crime he is tempted to commit, is what his conscience disapproves. It may therefore be called his involuntary or secret fault. Whilst slavery, committed with the better understanding and the will, being the calm, considerate voice of a free nation, (surely the blackest blot on the bright page of its history,) may be likened unto our voluntary, and of course presumptous sin.—Somewhere in the course of my reading I have met with an address to intemperance couched in language like the following, which goes to prove it involuntary:

Intemperance! thou bane of human life,
Thou caterer for the tomb! Thou green grave filler,
More trophies canst thou boast of mortal misery
Than all the other ills our "flesh falls heir to."
With sly, slow, sure, insinuating art
Thou perpetrates thy dire designs on man;
First curtesie to the fashion of the day,
And shame of being singular beguiles
The Nazeritish youth. Next love of company
Puts in her witching and bewild'ring claims.
Then suddenly comes on an appetite diseased,
The dismal climax of the poor man's woes,
Forever gnawing, urging, craving, tempting
His better judgment and his best desires.
These three combined the qualms of conscience can repulse
And smooth the brow of bold authority,
And toss the helpless victim at their will.

Lest I should waste too much of your time I shall only hint at one other idea before I sit down. Since God hath made of one flesh all nations who dwell on the earth, and since the righteous ruler of the universe is no respecter of persons, but hath commanded us to love our neighbors as ourselves, and whatsoever ye would that men should do unto you do ye even so unto them, suppose we were to change places with our colored brethren for a century or two, at all events let the change take place in your mind's eye when you, Sir, shall be called upon to pass your decision upon this question, and I shall not dread the result.

True Dignity.—In some of our exchange papers we find the following anecdote of Gen. Harrison:—"I was traveling in company with the General in September, 1836, and at the landing near Fredericksburg, while the porters were wheeling off the baggage from the steamboat to the stage, of young blades from the springs, Gen. Harrison, catching hold of his own trunk, threw it over his shoulder, and in the hot sun and dust, carried it near two hundred yards to the stage. Some one of us remarked, 'why, General, haven't you fatigued yourself unnecessarily?' 'No,' he answered, 'it is ridiculous for a poor man to throw away a half dollar when he can save it; and I never was ashamed to carry any thing that belonged to me.'"

Conjugal Obedience.—"Only let me have my own way, and I will always obey you, my love," said a young lady, three months after marriage. There are many who obey in this manner.

☞ The Quarto New World.

THREE DOLLARS PER ANNUM.

When the publication of The New World was, in compliance with the expressed wishes of many subscribers, commenced in a form convenient for binding and preservation, it was thought expedient to make such additions, in the shape of music, engraved title pages, &c., as would considerably enhance its expense. We find, however, after 8 weeks' experiment, that the paper would be better liked and more generally taken, if, by omission of the music, &c., the whole literary material of the Folio edition could be thrown into the Quarto form, and the price of both the same. It has therefore been determined to ask a uniform sum. The Quarto New World will, therefore, be supplied hereafter for $3 per annum, or six cents per number to those, who, on subscribing, take the back numbers—only a few of which have been issued.

Subscribers who have paid $4, or who may remit that sum in advance, will be entitled to the paper for one year and four months from the date of subscription.

Every present subscriber to the Folio edition may, upon renewal of his subscription and payment in advance, change to the Quarto and be supplied with the back numbers at six cents each from the commencement of the volume, by expressing his wish to that effect in a pre-paid letter to the publisher.

Edited by Park Benjamin and Epes Sargent.
Published by J. Winchester, 30 Ann street.
New York, August 15, 1840. 53

S. C. Haver,

In the flourishing town of Putnam has on hand 40 or 50 SADDLES ready for sale, of different qualities, comprising nearly all the varieties in fashion in our Buckeye State.

A good assortment of Bridles and Martingales: Riding and driving Whips: between 180 and 200 Carriage and heavy draft Collars, which will compare and wear with any others made here or elsewhere.

Also, fine York, Dearborn, heavy team and common Farming Harness. A lot of first rate Carriage and Buggy Harness, (brass and silver plated.)

Trunks, vallises, saddle-bags, and double covered wagon whips, varying in quality and price to suit purchasers.

The only recommendation he now offers for his work, is the testimony and long experience of his old customers and friends. He is still anxious to please and accommodate those who may call on him, and hopes to share so much of the public patronage as his attention to his business shall merit.

Putnam, April 29, 1840. 28tf

Glass Manufactory.

The subscriber having dissolved his connexion with the former company, has taken the GLASS WORKS below town under his own management.

WINDOW GLASS, double and single, all seizes, and of superior quality will be kept constantly on hand for sale on reasonable terms.—The experience of the proprietor, in the manufacture of the article, will insure all made to be of the best quality. Call and see.

S. B. Johnson.

Zanesville, Ohio, May 6, 1840. 37

William Green,

CLOCK AND WATCH REPAIRER, SILVERSMITH, AND JEWELLER,

Can be found at his shop on Main street Putnam, a few doors north of J. C. Guthrie's store, where he will do his best to accommodate customers. He keeps on hand an assortment of spectacles, watch trimmings, pencils, &c.

As far as we have tried Mr. Green as a watch repairer he has given us good satisfaction.—Ed. April 22, 1840. 35tf.

Stray Mare.

Strayed from the subscriber living in Hopewell township, Muskingum county, O., on the 20th of June last, a light SORREL MARE, about 14 or 15 hands high, with a small blaze in the forehead and one white foot; no shoes on when she left. Any person returning said mare or giving information to the subscriber where she can be found, will be liberally compensated for his trouble.

Naaman R. Grant.

Hopewell tp., Musk., O., July 8, 1840. 46

Dissolution.

The partnership heretojore existing between the subscribers in the Putnam Foundry, under the firm of HARTLEY & ANDERSON, was this day dissolved by mutual consent.

The Putnam Foundry will hereafter be conducted by J. J. Anderson & Co.

Levi Hartley,
Jacob J. Anderson.

Putnam, Jan. 1, 1840. (Jan. 29: 23.)

Notice.

All persons indebted to the late firm of Hartley & Anderson, are earnestly requested to call at the Foundry and make settlement, as the change of owners makes this step absolutely necessary. We ask the attention of all persons concerned, to this notice.

J. J Anderson & Co.

Putnam, Jan. 1, 1840. (Jan. 29: 23.)

Dissolution.

The partnership heretofore existing between S. B. Johnson and J. M. Kirkpatrick, under the firm of S. B. Johnson & Co. was dissolved by mutual consent, on Thursday 19th inst.

S. B. Johnson,
J. M. Kirkpatrick.

Zanesville, March 31, 1840. 32tf

THE

WESTERN RECORDER

IS PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY.

☞ The office of the Recorder is five and a half miles west of Zanesville.

TERMS.

1. The Western Recorder will be published weekly, on an imperial sheet, at $2 00 per annum, in advance: $2 50 at the end of three months; $3 00 at the end of the year.

2. No discontinuances will be allowed, except at the discretion of the publisher, until all arrearages are paid.

3. To all ministers having regular pastoral charges, who do any thing at all for the paper, if they will direct us where, a copy shall be sent gratis; any other who forward to us $10 00 for new subscribers, shall have six copies sent to any address he may give.

4. All letters designed for the paper, must be directed to "C. Springer, Meadow Farm, Muskingum, Ohio."

5. A failure to notify a discontinuance before the expiration of the subscription year, will be considered a new engagement.

CHARACTER.—The pages of the Western Recorder will be open to discussion on all moral questions;—it will give articles on Literature, Mechanics, Agriculture,—an abstract of Religious and Political intelligence, and whatever may be interesting and instructive to families in general. A portion of its columns will be open to Advertisements and Prices Current,—another portion to sustain the interests of the Methodist Protestant Church in the West.—These two latter objects will not likely occupy more than one page.

The Recorder will take a firm stand against Clerical Supremacy.

THE WESTERN RECORDER.

S SPRINGER, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.
WO DOLLARS PER ANNUM IN ADVANCE.

Vol. 2.--No. 4. ZANESVILLE, OHIO, WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 16, 1840. Whole No. 56.

JOHN W. WHITE, PRINTER.
$2.50, IN THREE MONTHS; $3, END OF YEAR.

SELECTIONS.

From the Casket for July, 1840.

UIZING IN THE LAST WAR.

e more upon the waters! yet once more!
he waves bound beneath me as a steed knows his rider. Welcome to their roar!"
Childe Harold.

THE PIRATE'S HOLD.

beard the lion in his den."—Marmion.

ere than a week passed, during which we a southwardly course, until at length one unny day we beheld the low islands of the nas looming up on the horizon. A calm d down upon us when we were still some es from land, and continued all day, leaving y rolling on the swell, wearied of inaction, tlessly gazing upon the monotonous scene. d. No one unless he has witnessed such a can picture to himself a calm off the Baha- There was not a breath of air; the ripple e waves was sluggish and measured; the surface of the sea glowed like a furnace; er the low sandy island, lying on the dis- seaboard, flickered a wavy atmosphere, be- ing the intense heat of the noon-day sun. ionally a bird would sail slowly by from the shore; and anon we caught the glistening surf, like diamonds, in the sunshine.— y and wearily the day wore by. The men groups under the bulwarks, or wherever least shade could be obtained; and the sails idly flapping as the brig heaved on the or cheeping their yards as they swayed lly to and fro. The approach of evening ailed with unbounded joy, for it promised least a partial relief from the sultriness of ay; and when at last the sun set behind a land in the west, bringing out its outline a moment against the sky, and then grad- leaving it in shadowy indistinctness, not e that did not gaze with delight upon the s.

withstanding the courteous demeanor of aptain of the brig I had several times en- ned uneasy suspicions as to the character craft. There was a licence perceptible gen- among the crew unusual even in privateers most exceptionable class, and though ex- ience had shown me that, in moments of peril, dy of men could be more ready to obey the r in whom they placed apparently the most nded confidence, yet I well knew that a- all free-booters the least mutinous attempt, ch times, was considered as little better treachery, and that the utmost unity was d upon by officers and men as the sole de- against capture. There were idle words opped now and then on the quarter deck, ayings reported to me from the forecastle ffrail and my own men, which admitted of er interpretation. Still, however, the sin- character of their leader seemed to me lit- unison with an outlaw's life. Gay, idle, versatile, with an air even of aristocratic e, and now and then a tone of feeling in nversation that partook of sentiment it- e appeared to be too much of a gentleman in opinion and habits to be the leader of a of freebooters. Subsequent events led me lieve these manners were wholly affected on rt, but if so, they were worn with an air tural to be suspected by any one. There however, much in his face that belied his ss mien. An eye of fire; a thin, scornful and a brow already stamped with the lines e and thought, told that he was more than emed. But though even then I saw all this, did I imagine the passion that really slum- below. Wild, erring being!—an outcast the world, and returning that world's pro- ion with undying hate, the smiles that hed that face were only assumed to mark ighty passions slumbering at the heart.— digress.

e last faint glow of the declining day had upon the western horizon, and the short ght of those regions had already half gone by, the look-out reported a sail upon our lee and directly the tall masts of a ship were emerging around a promontory of the neigh- g island, faintly traced against the now owy background of the sunset sky. A mo- 's scrutiny proved the stranger to be a mer- tman. In an instant the late silent brig med with an eager crew. Every port, look and ratlin was filled with inquiring faces. leader, too, caught the infection, and in an nt was another man. He looked first at stranger; then hastily run his eye around horizon; and with a smile wetting his finger ld it up a moment in the air.

t dries—the breeze is coming," he shouted l, "fate wills that yon fat sluggard shall be rize,—cheer up my lads,"—and as a puff of suddenly curled the glassy surface of the at his feet he added gaily, "make all sail a will, and we e'l be on board of our chase e midnight—away all."

e tone, the look, the gesture of the leader, the wild exultation in the answering shout e crew revealed all at once. We were on l a piratical vessel, and about perhaps to ess the merciless slaughter of unoffending . What might yet be our own fate no hu- being could tell. The same wilfulness in eader of the outlaws which had hitherto pre- d our lives, might the next moment destine death as a necessary precaution required is own safety. But though these uneasy ations for a moment tortued my bosom, the ral buoyancy of my character soon asserted equilibrium, and the increasing interest of chase eventually banished them totally, for time, from my mind.

he merchantman was at first nearly two miles nt, well on our lee bow, but no sooner did ive chase than the space between us rapidly lessened, though every effort was made on her part to escape from a neighbor so suspicious looking as the long, low, rakish brig on her weather quarter. Knowing the deadly character of that neighbor, I had fervently hoped the ship might prove the better sailer, and a sickening sensation came over me as I saw how swiftly the pirates were gaining on the unoffending merchantman. Sail, after sail, was distended from her lofty mast,—but all in vain. We could see them wetting down her canvass to the courses. A short half an hour, however, convinced them of the folly of attempting an escape, and then with a sullen air the kites were taken in, they hauled up across our bows, and in another instant the American flag shot up to the gaff, and opened majestically to the breeze. It was answered by displaying the British ensign from the brig. Little ah! did they know the deceitful foe they had to deal with. What would I not, at that moment have given to have ensured their escape from their relentless pursuers.

"They don't mean to fight?" suddenly exclaimed the captain of the brig, as the merchantman luffed short up toward us, and disclosed a row of bristling ports, while her crew could be seen hurrying to and fro upon her decks, "they can't have such pluck."

The words had scarcely left his mouth when a cloud of smoke puffed out of the stranger's bows, and a shot richochetting along the water, plunged into the sea, so close to the bows of the brig, that it sent the spray in showers over the forecastle.

"Yankees to the core, by —," ejaculated the captain, and then lifting his voice, he thundered forth "cast loose the swivel—peg into the hull of that noisy rascal—all hands to quarters—luff, luff—Fire?"

The shot went whizzing on its way with unerring certainty, and the next instant was crashing among the timbers of the merchantman. But though far beneath the brig, in effective force, the crew of the ship was not disheartened.—They cheered lustily as they returned the fire of the piratical vessel, keeping their craft well up to the wind, and endeavoring to gain a raking position on the bow of their pursuers. Their metal, however, was so much lighter than that of the pirates, that it did little or no injury; and their determined resistance only served to exasperate men in whom every gallant feeling was long since dead. Half an hour passed in this exciting contest, during which the ship had got dreadfully cut up, and though the fight had changed into a running one, the distance between the combatants had gradually decreased. Still the merchantman shewed no signs of surrendering. A ball at this instant came crashing across the deck, and tearing away the quarter railing, within a foot of the pirate captain, cut the man at the wheel completely in two. It was a ghastly sight. The lip of the rover quivered, and his eye flashed fearfully.

"Killed the best man of my crew, by the—. Ho! here let us show these devils our true colors, and then for revenge—up with the flag."

The deep, thrilling tone in which this was spoken curled my very blood. Every vestige of the former man had vanished from his countenance, and he stood before me as he really was, the lawless, reckless pirate. As the bunting was brought on deck he seized it ghastily, and with his own hands sent it glancing to the gaff. It unrolled slowly, fluttered an instant uncertainly, and then streaming out in the moonlight, disclosed a black flag, unrelieved by a single emblem. The merchantman was by this time rapidly closing, and I could hear, I thought, a stifled groan from her crew as they beheld the fearful ensign. But the next moment a shout of defiance rung out upon the night, and the whole broadside of the ship was discharged at once. It came crashing and tearing with terrific execution, strewing the crew of the pirate, wounded and shrieking along our decks. The guns had been loaded with grape.

"Up with the helm—run the villians aboard," shouted the pirate captain, seemingly transformed into a perfect fury, "have done with this child's play, and let us board, and sweep their decks. No quarter—no quarter."

Not a sound came from the merchantman as we ranged rapidly alongside, but a silence like that of the grave hung over her late noisy decks. The two vessels were now swiftly approaching each other; and the firing for a moment ceased, as if by mutual consent. It was a scene little in unison with the fierce passions of the two contending crews. The moon shone calmly down upon the untroubled ocean, holding her cloudless way on high in unrivalled beauty; while the smoke of the conflict, floating slowly down to leeward, hung like a thick veil on the surface of the waters. No sound was heard except the rippling of the waves, the creaking of the gun carriages, and the deep breathing of the men. An instant of suspense ensued, and then the voice of the pirate thundered forth,

"Cast out the grapnels—muster on the forecastle all—boarders ahoy!" and in another moment the two vessels were afoul, and the solid masses of the outlaw crew, were clustering like bees in the fore-rigging of the brig. Not a second was suffered to elapse before the pirate captain waved his sword in the moonlight, and crying out for his crew to follow him, sprung at one bound upon the deck of the merchantman. His followers gave a cheer, that sounded in my ear like the shout of fiends, and brandishing their cutlasses aloft, swept after him upon the almost deserted deck. They had scarcely, however, reached it before the scanty crew of the ship sprang from their hiding place behind the deck-cabin, and with a shout of daring, desperate defiance, unmasked a carronade they had kept concealed, and whose muzzle now frowned not a half a dozen yards from the crowded masses of the boarders. A scream of suppressed agony burst simultaneously from the outlaws; but over all was heard, as calm and collected as ever, the deep voice of their leader shouting,

"Forward—forward—down with the gunner," and dashing furiously upon the gun, he drew a pistol from his belt and fired at the man who held the match. The flash of the pistol gleamed an instant out, but the report was drowned in a fiercer and more terrific sound. For one instant the deck seemed a blaze of light, as that stream of fire gushed from the carronade along the decks, and then rose up mingled groans, shrieks, curses, and blasphemies, telling how fearfully the grape and cannister had done its work. Never—never shall I forget that sight. A dozen men lay mangled upon the deck, torn by that discharge, literally into pieces; for an instant there was a pause, as if the slaughtered and living were alike stunned by the blow; and when the smoke floated lazily aside I beheld a complete lane made through the masses of the boarders. But the pause was only for an instant. The pirate captain was unhurt, for his impetuous charge had placed him beside the muzzle of the piece at the very moment of its discharge; and before the blinding flash had vanished, or the roar of the gun died on the air, he had driven his cutlass through the skull of the gunner, down to the very chin. The first sounds that again broke the thrilling silence were his hoarse, fierce tones,

"On—on, my lads—revenge—no quarter to the murderers."

"Stand by me boys, and let us die like men," came sternly back from the leader of the gallant crew grouped on the quarter deck of the merchantman, and drawing a pistol from his belt, he added, turning to the pirate captain, "come on—that to your heart."

"Cut him down," shouted a dozen outlaws, striking at and disabling him before he could fire; while a deep voice thundered in the midst, "cleave him to the chin," and the next instant I beheld him reeling to the earth.

I could see no more. All was confusion. The smoke, the clash, the curses of men, the shouts of victory, and the cries of the wounded rose up together in terrific discord. It was a scene of wild tumult, and unmitigated slaughter. Tho' fighting like men, determined to die nobly, the little band of my countrymen was no match for the hordes that poured in upon them from the brig. As soon as one fell another supplied his place, the blows of the combatants growing more incessant as the contest thickened, until at last, wounded, worn out, and terribly thinned in number, the little band made a last stand beside the wheel-house. I felt all my spirit leap within me to rush to their aid, and I know not what madness I might have committed had not Henley forcibly restrained me. So few, so gallant,—and yet so hopelessly contending. A desperate struggle ensued around this their last retreat; but it was in vain. A rush was made for them—there was a momentary clashing of swords, a few wild shouts, and then, one by one, the overpowered victims were butchered and cast overboard. Oh! God, I think I see that dreadful scene. The despairing groans of the wounded; the wild straining eye-balls as they were cast backward into the sea; the few agonising struggles of the hapless sufferers who still lived in the water, and the dark, bloody hue of the ocean, deepening to a livid purple, marking the spot where they had sunk to their martyred graves. Not a soul was spared. Every living being fell a victim to the rage of the pirates. But I cannot dwell upon the sickening picture. My brain reeled, a faintness came over me, and I was glad to hide my feelings in the silence of my cot.

When I came on deck after an hour's absence, how changed was all around. Every vestige of the late butchery had vanished; the ocean had resumed its wonted color at my feet, and the full, unclouded moon was pouring her liquid light upon a scene as lovely as I had ever witnessed. The captured merchantman lay in her old position. It was evident from the appearance of her decks that the work of pillage had been going on without intermission since the capture.—Boxes, bales, the most costly merchandise, and articles of every description whatever were strewn promiscuously around, and so occupied were the pirates in securing their spoil, that every sign of discipline appeared to have vanished from the brig. For some minutes I stood on the deserted quarter deck full of uneasy thoughts as to my own situation. I could scarcely believe after what I had witnessed that the pirates would permit me to depart alive; and yet I felt a doubt in my breast, whether, even if I could escape, I ought to avenge my murdered countrymen, and bring to justice my own preservers. But these thoughts were cut short by the loud summons of the boatswain, calling all hands aboard, and in a moment their prize was deserted, and the most valuable articles having already been transferred to the piratical vessel, the ship was given to the flames. All sail was then made on the brig, and she stood away rapidly to the southward.

The burning ship meanwhile lit up the whole horizon with its glare. It was a magnificent spectacle. The flames soon caught the shrouds, ran up the ratlins, licked around the masts, shot into the tops, and streaming, meteor-like, along the stays, caught to the royals themselves, and wrapped the gallant vessel in a pyramid of fire; while the smoke rolling in dense masses on high, gathered in a thick cloud just above the mast-head, and eddying slowly away to leeward, formed a black, pitchy back-ground, against which the lurid flames stood out in bold relief. Occasionally a gust of wind would sweep a forked fragment of fire waving away upon its bosom; while ever and anon showers of sparks would go glittering far down to leeward, until they faded into the dim obscurity. How long I might have gazed spell-bound on the sight I know not, but at this instant the look-out reported a strange sail on the starboard bow.

"Bring me the night glass," eagerly said the pirate captain.

It was brought, and he took a long, scrutinising glance of nearly five minutes.

"A frigate by —," said he, as he took the telescope from his eye, "and an American one too by her heavy lower yards, I should say—we must take to our heels," and lifting his voice, without a moment's pause, he thundered, "all hands make sail,—boatswain crack on every thing."

"Ay, ay, sir!" was the answer; then followed the piping of the whistle, and the shrill cry, "all hands make sail ahoy," and in five minutes we were stretching away from the stranger at the rate of seven knots an hour. For a short space the pirates flattered themselves they were undiscovered; but the burning ship was too sure an evidence of their neighborhood to be disregarded; and in less than a quarter of an hour I had the gratification of seeing the frigate alter course, and bear down after the brig with every rag of canvass aboard. She was a capital sailor, and I soon saw a hair's breadth might decide the pursuit. It was to be a chase of life or death.

I had insensibly become so deeply interested in the pursuit that, in my eagerness to obtain a better view of the frigate, I had gone forward as far as the main rigging, when I felt a hand laid upon my shoulder, and turning round I beheld the now stern countenance of the pirate captain.

"Follow me," said he laconically, and knowing the uselessness of resistance, I stepped on deck, and went aft. No sooner had he reached the wheel-house than drawing me to one side he said in a whisper, but still sternly:

"You are my guest, Mr. Danforth, and I am bound to protect you; but I canuot answer for your life if you go foolishly forward among my men. They are highly exasperated for this night's work, and there is a devil in their eyes whenever they catch a sight of you, which bodes you no good. Your companion has very wisely gone below, it would be well for you to do the same?"

This was said in a cold, measured tone that seemed intended to put an end to all further conversation, though once or twice while he was speaking I fancied I saw his features working as if with some inward emotion. But I could not misinterpret his desire to make our interview as short as possible. I felt, however, indebted to him for a warning, which I saw at a glance had perhaps saved my life. I therefore, muttered something by way of thanks.

"Thanks! well perhaps you are right," said this singular being abstractedly, "but I feel somehow an interest in you—you remind me of poor —" but checking himself, he added with affected reserve, "I will do all I can to protect you, for I am not the foe to hospitality. I must trust to your honor if we escape," and he turned upon his heel.

I paused a moment in wonder at the conduct of this mysterious being. Who could he be?—how had he been driven to this course of life?—what strange event in his history was it, to which he had now for the second time adverted, and which seemed to interest him in me?—were questions that passed rapidly before my mind. Fierce and relentless as the late butchery had proved him to be, I could not help feeling a concern in him almost amounting to sympathy. I was still occupied with these thoughts, when he crossed over rapidly toward me, whispered sternly as he passed,

"Fool! is your life worth nothing?—the men are grumbling louder every minute,—go below."

The intimation could no longer be disregarded, and casting a last look at the pursuing frigate, I turned and descended to my cot. Despite my anxiety, the excitement of the day had been such as to overpower me with fatigue, and in a little time I was sound asleep.

When I woke from my slumber, the hurrying of feet on deck, and the shouts of the officers, convinced me that the crisis of the chase had come, and, regardless of danger, hastily leaping from my cot, I hurried upon deck, cautiously screening myself partially from sight, however, behind the wheel-house, while I could at the same time command an unobscured view of the horizon around.

It was early morning, and a light haze still hung upon the waters, dimming the view upon the sea-board, but leaving the sky above unclouded. The first rapid glance around me disclosed the dangerous position of the pirate's vessel.—Directly ahead of us lay a low, sandy island, covered with dwarf trees, and indented with a narrow bay, toward the mouth of which we were stretching under a press of canvass, that almost seemed jerking the masts bodily out. Well, on our starboard quarter, with every rag abroad, could be seen the frigate, scarcely a cannon shot off, dashing furiously toward the same goal; while a couple of miles or so up on our starboard bow, with a pyramid of canvass rising from her low, dark hull, and her long, slender masts bowing half way to the horizon, was a man-of-war schooner, in which, at a single glance, I recognised The Storm. My heart leaped at the sight. I saw that escape was almost inevitable, every thing depending upon weathering the cape of the bay, which lay so directly in the wind's eye, that none but desperate men could hope to pass in without tacking, and thus running directly into the arms of the schooner, whose forces could at least, hold the outlaws in bay until the frigate should come up. But daring as the attempt would be, it was the only hope of escape; and the pirate captain was just issuing his order to attempt it when I came on deck. Every thing was hauled close; the helm put hard down; and then, like an arrow, the brig glanced through the surging waters.

"There goes the frigate—look out," shouted the captain, as the man-of-war, perceiving the design of the pirate, and coming at the moment within range, opened a rapid, well-directed fire on the brig, "thrown well, by heaven," he added, as a ball whizzed up to within half a dozen fathoms and then pitched headlong into the sea.

The chase now became one of absorbing interest. The breeze was blowing almost a hurricane, and the heavy frigate gained rapidly on the light brig; while momentarily her guns came booming along the deep, in rapid succession.—Could the pursuit have lasted a half an hour longer the capture of the pirates would have been inevitable, but in the very heart of the chase the frigate came within her soundings, and was compelled to haul off. She still, however, kept up a cannonade upon the brig; while the gallant little schooner was rapidly closing ahead. It was an exciting moment. We were now within a half a cable's length of the surf that broke on the hard, sandy beach of the cape, and the lead, that had been kept constantly agoing, told that in another moment we would be aground.—There was scarcely a dozen fathom's left to pass. The helmsman wavered. At that instant a fierce, sudden puff of wind laid the brig down to her bearings.

"Keep her to it," thundered the pirate captain, leaping on a carronade, from whence he could observe the perilous point without obstruction, "swerve not a hair's breadth, and we clear the point yet, close, close—closer," he shouted, and, as in obedience to his orders, the brig was kept down until the water bubbled through her scuppers, she glanced like a meteor by the point, leaving the breakers foaming not a pistol shot on her lee, and the next instant amid a loud cheer from the men, was gliding along in the smooth water of the bay. Owing to the curve of the estuary we almost instantly lost sight of our pursuers, or only caught a glimpse of their royals, for a moment, over the tops of the intervening trees. We could hear the frigate, however, firing signals for the schooner's recall. In half an hour the brig had passed through a narrow strait, at the head of the little bay, and entered a broad sluggish lagoon, such as are found embosomed in many of the low, sandy islands of the South. It was thickly surrounded with woods, coming close down to the water's edge.—At the very outlet of this lake, and in a position to rake the strait, the brig was moored broadside on; the guns from the starboard side were brought over and accommodated on the larboard; the nettings were triced up, the ammunition served out, and the small arms distributed. Besides this a carronade was landed near the mouth of the strait, and being charged to the muzzle with grape, was concealed with a party of men among some thick bushes; while a half a score of good marksmen were posted behind the trees along the strait to pick off the boats' crews if they should attempt to carry the lagoon. The rations were then served out, and the men given a double allowance of grog. Every thing betokened how fierce and desperate would be the defence of THE PIRATE'S HOLD.

From Bicknell's Reporter.

THE POSITION OF MEXICO AND TEXAS.
A NEW VIEW.

Important events may be supposed to be in the womb of time, as well in the New World as the Old—and especially as relates to Mexico and Texas. It is possible that the trouble which existed in the former misnamed Republic at the last dates, will be temporially adjusted. The Centralist or Government forces, doubtless had the advantage, but it must be clear to every observing mind, that the political and social elements of the country are thoroughly convulsed, and that some utter and radical change in the system must take place, before any thing like security or repose may be looked for, for any considerable period of time. We have expressed the opinion on more than one occasion, that ultimately, Mexico will be conquered either by the Texans or some European power. This opinion gathers strength with the progress of events. Indeed, we have private letters from intelligent sources in Texas, which state that "although the Government of that country are anxious to secure a negotiation of independence on peaceable and equitable terms, and to avoid any course of conduct calculated to depreciate them in the estimation of the civilized nations of the earth—that the people cannot and will not be restrained, when they feel sufficiently powerful, from endeavoring to obtain by the force of arms, what was promised by Santa Anna, and is withheld from pacific, liberal and conciliatory negotiation."

"The object of the Texans," writes our correspodent, "is to identify their cause as much as possible, with justice. The more moderate of our politicians and statesmen see the position of this embryo nation, know her present weakness, and are satisfied that thus far, she has done very little to entitle her to a place among the discreet and enlightened governments of the earth. They know, moreover, that she was but the other day a revolted province, and that a large portion of her population even now, consists of adventurers, needy, and sometimes profligate—the refuse of European cities, and the lost in reputation of the United States. Hence it is, that they desire to move with cautious steps and slow. Already some valuable laws have been incorporated in our system, and others of a still more rigid character, and calculated to foster virtue, protect property, and promote good order, are in contemplation. Difficulties have been and continue to be encountered. As may be well imagined, with a mixed population like ours, we have many men among us utterly devoid of principle, and who would not hesitate to sacrifice the Republic to-morrow, provided that such a course would result to their immediate advantage. But the influence of such is daily diminishing. Emigrants continue to pour in—some with means, and all with industry and enterprise.—These men have abandoned their homes in the Old World, with a two-fold object—in the first place, to obtain the enjoyment of a greater equality of rights, and in the second, something like an independence in property. They go, therefore, for law and for order; and will soon outnumber by thousands, the few dissolute and depraved who have sought this asylum with baser views and less permanent purposes. Looking at all these circumstances, therefore, observing our rapid progress thus far, and watching with a curious eye of interest and of speculation, the wretched and revolutionary condition of Mexico, the future seems big with events. Who may foretell the occurrences of the next twenty-five years?"

The above is from a source of much intelligence and respectability. It may be said to embody the views of such of the citizens of Texas, as not only desire to live and die in that Republic, but to win for her a respectable position among the nations of the earth. The New Orleans Bulletin, speaking of the recent events of Mexico, says that the affairs of that country seem at last to have reached their crisis.

"The whole Republic," adds the editor, "is a scene of dissension and revolt. The capital is now in possession of the revolutionists, and from all accounts it appears altogether probable that they will be able to maintain their position. All our advices, it must be observed, have come thro' the Government papers, which would of course publish representations as favorable as possible to the Centralist party. Great allowances must be made, therefore, in reading their statements. The facts, however, which they are compelled to state, show conclusively that the Government is reduced to extremities. We may expect soon to hear of its complete overthrow. It appears impossible that the Centralists should any longer retain power in the face of such formidable opposition. The success of the insurrection in the city of Mexico will no doubt stimulate similar attempts in other districts of country, many of which, it is well known, are ripe for revolt. Unless Government succeeded very speedily in crushing Farias and Urrea, the probability is, that ere this, every province in the Empire is in a state of revolt. These events indicate the certain triumph and establishment of Federalism.

"The political organization of Mexico will undergo a radical change, much more favorable to the development of liberal principles and the enjoyment of a good Government. Upon the restoration of Federalism, the Republic, profiting by the experience of past bloody revolutions, will settle down upon a plan of organization, based upon popular representation, and conformable to the constitution of our American system. If Texas should be prevailed upon to join the Federation, she would be an important acquisition, infusing as she would into the Commonwealth, the healthy, vigorous principles and enlightened institutions of the Anglo-Saxon race. We should regard the amalgamation of Texas with Mexico, as the greatest blessing a kind Providence could bestow upon that semi-barbarous benighted people. A gradual renovation might then take place, civilizing and elevating the population, and qualifying for the enjoyment of the inestimable blessings of liberty. The ability of the Mexican and South American Spanish race to maintain free republican governments may be well doubted. Every experiment, has, as yet, signally failed. The best hope, therefore, presented for the establishment of a Republic in Mexico, is the union of Texas with the other provinces, into one grand confederacy. The intelligence and solidity of the American character might be imparted to the Mexicans, and the country would thus be regenerated, and saved from the anarchy that now threatens its dissolution."

This latter is a new view of the case; but the aspect of affairs, as relates to Mexico and Texas, is certainly beginning to assume a new and a deep degree of interest. We shall look with anxiety for later advices.

WESTERN RECORDER.

ZANESVILLE:

WEDNESDAY,..... SEPTEMBER 16, 1840.

MELANCHOLY SHIPWRECK,—FIFTY LIVES LOST.

The following particulars of the loss of the brig Florence, of and for this port, from Bremen, we copy from the Boston Transcript of last evening. The news was received at Boston, from Newfoundland, by the brig Attention, Captain McCurdy; and as the chief mate of the Florence came to Boston a passenger in the Attention, and the particulars were derived from him by Capt. McCurdy, there can be no doubt of their correctness.—Br. Jonathan, Sept., 5th.

The following disaster is one of those awful occurrences of which the south eastern coast of Newfoundland is often the scene. The brig Florence, of and for New York, Samuel Rose, master, sailed from Rotterdam, June 30th, with a crew of eight persons and seventy-nine passengers. Cargo, ballast, and a few casks of wine. They were favored with pleasant weather until nearly up with the eastern banks of Newfoundland, when they were assailed with a succession of gales, attended with a fog and rain, up to the time of their shipwreck.

On Sunday morning, August 9th, the man on the look-out cried "hard down the helm, breakers ahead." The helm was immediately put a-lee, but before the sails were taken aback, the brig struck the rocks on her starboard side. A moment before, she was going at the rate of seven or eight miles the hour. She instantly filled and fell over on her side, when a scene of confusion and terror presented itself, the horror of which can better be imagined than described. Here were the wife and the husband bidding each other a last farewell—the frantic mother clasping her infant to her bosom, as if even death itself should not separate them—while some few, who had no relations on board, were endeavoring to secure what money they had, by fastening it to their bodies, but which, alas, proved the means of their destruction. For that which they thought would secure to them a comfortable home in the fertile lands of the far west, changed their destination to an eternal home in death. On attempting to swim to the land, the weight of the money sunk them to the bottom.

Capt. Rose, with commendable coolness, commanded all to remain by the wreck until some means were devised for escaping with safety. For this purpose, Mr. Wm. Robbs, of Springfield, Massachusetts, took the end of a line and sprang from the vessel to a ledge which lay between her and the shore. An overwhelming wave, however, overtook the devoted sailor, and dashed him against the rocks, a mangled corpse. Capt. Rose next attempted this, the only means of saving the lives on bord. He was more fortunate, and reached the land in safety. The crew were all saved except the second mate. But only thirty of the seventy-nine passengers were saved, and of these, many were saved by Capt. Rose and Mr. Schofield, chief mate, at the imminent peril of their own lives, and by the time these were saved, about three hours after the brig struck, there were scarcely two of her planks together. All were literally in splinters.

Thus thirty-seven persons were thrown ashore on a barren, and to them an unknown part of the coast. Many of them were but half clad, and most of them were without shoes. Not a solitary biscuit was saved. In this pitiable condition, they commenced their journey thro' the thick woods and swamps, and over black and rugged hills, in hopes of finding some human habitation.

For four days they continued their course, governed chiefly by the wind, the sun, moon and stars being obscured nearly all the time by the fog and rain squalls, which latter were very frequent—sometimes eating the bark from the trees, and what few berries they could find. Early on the morning of the 13th, Capt. Rose and Mr. Schofield ascended a hill, in hopes the fog might clear off, and afford them a view of the surrounding country. At nine o'clock the weather cleared a little, and they were enabled to see the harbor and village of Renouse. The happy intelligence was soon communicated to the rest, and they resumed their march with lighter hearts. When they entered the village, its hospitable inhabitants welcomed them with every thing which their present need demanded.—Mr. Goodrich, of whose benevolence the crew and passengers speak in the warmest terms of gratitude, gave money and clothes to them, and furnished a vessel to convey them to St. Johns, the residence of the United States Consular agent.

At 7, P. M., on Saturday the 15th, they were landed at St. Johns. The news of their arrival soon brought to the shore rich and poor, old and young, some putting bread into the hands of the shipwrecked strangers, and others taking the poor wretches home with them. Nothing was spared which pity could suggest, to alleviate their wants and sufferings. The next day being Sunday, nothing was publicly done for them; but on Monday handbills were posted up, requesting a meeting to take place at the Chamber of Commerce, to devise means to relieve the necessities of those whom fate had thrown upon their shores. Some seventy or eighty pounds were collected in a short time, and resolutions were passed to raise a sufficient sum whereby the emigrants might be enabled to reach the place of their destination. A committe was appointed to receive clothing and money from all who felt disposed to give. Capt. McCurdy did not hear the result, as he sailed on the following morning, but thinks, from the philanthropic spirit manifested by the people of St. Johns, that these unfortunate people were amply provided for.

CASE OF MRS. KINNEY.—The Boston Daily Advertiser has the following paragraph relating to this case, which has caused so much excitement in that quarter:

At the suggestion of the Attorney General, Coroner Shute, on Tuesday, held an inquest over the body of Mr. Kinney, who recently died very suddenly, in Ballard Place. The inquest was in session the whole day, and at a late hour made up their verdict, which was, in substance, that the deceased came to his death by means of arsenic, administered by his wife. We learn from one of the jury, that the examination was very minute and faithful, and the circumstances were such as to leave no doubt on their minds of the truth of the verdict. The contents of the stomach of the deceased were subjected to the proper tests by eminent chemists, who were entirely satisfied of the presence of arsenic. This, with the subsequent conduct of Mr. Kinney, her declarations, and the fact that a paper marked "poison" was found about the premises, were very strong circumstances, in the opinion of the jury, to show her guilt.

We understand that a warrant has been issued for her arrest by the proper authorities. She is now absent from the city, but where she is we do not learn.

ARREST OF MRS. KINNEY ON A CHARGE OF MURDER.—We learn from the Boston Times that Mrs. Kinney was brought up for examination at the Police court on Monday morning. Judge Rogers presided; Attorney General Austin acted as prosecuting officer for the Government; and Patrick Riley, Esq. as Counsel for the prisoner.

Mrs. Kinney was brought into Court, by the acting officers, and placed upon the common prisoner's bench. She was dressed in a neat, half mourning style—black silk dress, dark straw bonnet, black veil, plain mob cap, and dark shawl. Her hair was parted upon the left side, and combed back, under her cap, in two very plain folds. Her appearance was modest, dignified and becoming. Her countenance wore an air of mingled firmness and resignation, with a shade of melancholy. The reports respecting her beauty are nearly correct. She has evidently been a fascinating woman. Her countenance, even under such adverse circumstances, appeared very interesting, and her eyes were sparkling and brilliant. She is apparently about thirty-five years of age.

The complaint charged the prisoner with the Murder of her husband, George F. Kinney, by administering arsenic in his food. She pleaded not guilty, in a subdued tone of voice, and submitted the case to the direction of her Counsel. Mr. Riley informed the Court that he was wholly unprepared to go into an examination of the case and desired that the trial might be postponed for one week. The Attorney General expressed his willingness to comply with the wishes of Mr. Riley—and the Court accordingly granted the request. When the Clerk announced to Mrs. Kinney, the order, that she must be committed to the county jail, without the liberty of bail, the hot blood seemed to rush into her cheeks, her lips trembled, and her eyes filled with tears. She made a strong effort to check this emotion and it was soon over. The officers then led her out of the court room, and took her directly back to jail. The examination was postponed till Monday next, at 11 o'clock, A. M.

We learn from the friends of Mrs. Kinney, that the appearance of the case is not so bad as the public have imagined. Many of the circumstances that have been stated in the newspapers are capable of explanation; and there are some very material facts in relation to this affair, upon which they rely to prove the innocence of Mrs. Kinney, which have not been mentioned at all.

The following anecdote relative to Mrs. Kinney, we find in the Boston Post:

While going from Nashua to Concord, in the stage, two ladies, utter strangers to her, commenced a conversation about the "horrid poison case in Boston."

Says one—"Her name is Kinney, and she is one of those jilting beauties, who know how to attract the men, and lead them where she has a mind to. When she was a widow, she came up to Lowell, and dashed about till she got away the Rev. Mr. Freeman from the daughter of the woman he boarded with, when every body thought he would have married her, as a matter of course, as he had boarded a long time in the family."

"Yes," replied her friend; "and the strongest circumstance against her now is, that she ran away the very next day after her husband was buried. But I guess her rig is now up, and that he is the last husband she will finish."

While in the stage, Mrs. Kinney listened in silence to this charitable colloquy; but, upon her arrival at the hotel, in Concord, she invited one of her censors into her chamber—(the other had proceeded on her journey)—and, after a little preparatory conversation, Mrs. Kinney asked her if she had not been talking in the stage about the poison case. The stranger replied "Yes," and Mrs. K. then said she had overheard part of the conversation, and should like to hear the whole of it. The garrulous guest complied with her request, with embellishments; and then, after a short pause, Mrs. Kinney said to her—"I am the Mrs. Kinney you have been talking about!"

The lady was literally dumbfounded by this discovery, and attempted to apologize to Mrs. K., as well as she might. Mrs. K., by her genuine affability of manners, soon, however, relieved her from her embarrassment, and acquired her friendly sympathy.

THE POISONING CASE.—The public mind has become so much excited on this subject, that we suppose any facts in regard to Mr. Kinney, or Mr. Freeman, will be read with interest.

Mrs. Kinney's maiden name was Hannah Hanson. She was first married to a Mr. Witham, from whom, after giving birth to four children, she was divorced. She is said to have been assisted, in obtaining her divorce, by Mr. Geo. F. Kinney, with whom she continued to be intimate, and to whom she was said to be engaged. She was afterwards married to her cousin, Rev. Enoch W. Freeman of this city. There was too much objection, among the members of Mr. Freeman's Society, to his marrying her, on account of her reputation, but it was as ineffectual as opposition to a person's will, in such matters generally is. It is said that after Mr. Freeman was married, Mr. Kinney was in the habit of visiting at his house. We are informed that he was in Lowell on the morning of the day that Mr. Freeman was taken sick.

Mr. Freeman was taken ill, between meetings, on Sunday, Sept. 20, 1835, and vomited several times. He went into his pulpit, however, in the afternoon, and commenced the service; but was unable to proceed with them, and returned to his house. He continued to grow worse, and suffered exceedingly, with unequivocal symptoms of inflamation of the stomach, and about 5 o'clock on Tuesday morning, when he expired, one year and one day from the time he was married.

Mrs. Freeman appeared to be much affected by his death. A post mortem examination was made, and the stomach was found to have been highly inflamed: but as no suspicions of poison were then entertained by his physicians, no chemical analysis of its contents was had.

We have already remarked that his marriage occasioned some division in the church. Just as he closed his eyes in death, he was asked if he had any advice to leave for his people? He replied; "Tell them to be humble, faithful, zealous, united in love." His dying counsel has since been placed over the pulpit in the meeting-house where he preached.

Mrs. Freeman afterwards kept a milliner's shop on Merrimack street, in this city. She is said to be good looking, and exceedingly fascinating in her manners, or rather, as an acquaintance of hers said to us this morning, "in her eyes."

Although it has long been the opinion of many who knew her, that she was the cause of her husband's death, she has been accustomed to speak of him with much apparent feeling, and would sometimes weep, when conversing about him.

Mrs. Freeman is said to have lived with Mr. Kinney, some time, in Boston, before she married him.

The account of his sudden death, and the fact that arsenic was found in his stomach, are already well known.

A handsome marble monument, with a granite base, has been erected over Mr. Freeman's grave, and by its side is a weeping willow which was sent by his widow after her removal to Boston, to be placed there. The following is the inscription upon his monument:

"Rev. Enoch W. Freeman, Pastor of the First Baptist Church and Society in Lowell. Died, Sept. 22, 1835, aged 37 years."

We saw Mr. Freeman's remains after they were exhumed, on Monday evening, August 17th. They were in a remarkable state of preservation. They had turned black, and shrunk somewhat; but one of the physicians who was present, said that he had seen a subject used for illustrating lectures, on anatomy which was farther advanced in putrefaction.

We have heard a report, which, if true, furnishes another curious link in the chain of circumstances which are now becoming developed. It is said that, after Mr. Freeman's marriage, his father, who resided in Maine, died very suddenly, while Mr. F. and his wife were making him a visit.—Lowell Courier.

The rumors about a slave insurrection at the South, are assuming a new shape. It is stated that the civil and military authorities of Washington city, were summoned by the Mayor on Sunday, as a precautionary measure against an apprehended slave attack upon that city. These apprehensions were owing to information which had been received from a highly respectable source in Charles county, Md., stating, that some negroes had been arrested upon suspicion of having been engaged in insurrectionary movements, one of whom confessed that a plot had been made up to commence an attack on Washington city, "on the night of the 30th of August," for the purpose, as was alleged, of "obtaining their rights."—The Mayor, to be secure, took the precautions above mentioned, and stricter regulations were adopted for the preservation of peace and good order.—Brother Jonathan.

The Boston Fire Department was called out only 8 times during the month of August. Loss by fire during the month was $14,000.

MORE INDIAN MURDERS.—We are indebted to the Savannah Georgian for the following:

CENTERVILLE, Aug. 19, 1840.

Dear George: I am sorry to inform you that the Indians have done a good deal of mischief on the Suwanee, and it is thought that they have again come into the Okafanoke; last Friday they killed Joseph Howell's wife and two children, and Daniel Green's wife, and shot his daugther through the shoulder; they have robbed and burnt out the inhabitants as they went, beginning at Green's—they have burnt nearly all the dwellings up to Fort Gilmur. Joseph Howell and George Johns got in here to-day; they followed them up the Suwanee several miles, and found 11 dwellings burnt.—They all are forted in at old Bill Cone's and Capt. Sanderlain's. The Indians fired on Sanderlain's house all night on Friday night, the next morning took the road up the river, and went five or six miles to old Sumarall's place, and killed some hogs and cattle, and stayed all night.

This is the most bold and daring act they have committed since the commencement of the war; the people above this are generally very much alarmed, and some of them are already moving off, whether with sufficient cause I cannot say. Absalom Cossey's children, six in number, were killed last Wednesday, on the south prong of the St. Mary's, some suppose by the same party. I have nothing more worth your attention at present. I remain, yours most truly,

STEPHEN MCCALL.

Geo. Lang Esq.

P. S. Thomas Wright is burnt out amongst the rest.

CENTERVILLE, Aug. 23d, 1840.

Dear George:—All is excitement and alarm up this way; the Indians have killed Thomas Davis and two of his children, and John Patricks' wife. They had all gathered at Arch. Hogan's (Monia,) and on Wednesday, just about night fall, they attacked the place and killed the above named persons, and burned every building on the place except the one that they defended. They have burnt Davis' place and Miney's and one other in this county. It is about 20 miles from here. I do not think we are in danger as yet, though others think different. There is a part of two companies of Dragoons from Black Creek already scouting about the Okefanoke, and Tracy is trying to raise fifty men for thirty days, under an order from Gen. C. Floyd. What will be the final issue, time only will show. If I think there is any danger here, I shall at once take my family away.

Yours, in haste,

STEPHEN MCCALL.

Geo. Lang, Esq.

THE BLOODY MASSACRE BY THE INDIANS IN FLORIDA.—Last week we gave our readers all the particulars we had of this fatal tragedy. Indian Key was the summer retreat of the inhabitants of Key West, and had been built up into a pleasant village by the enterprising proprietor of the Island, Mr. Houseman. It is now one of the monuments of Seminole barbarity. The following persons were on Indian Key at the time of the attack: Mr. Houseman and wife, Charles Howe, wife and five chilldren, Dr. Perrine wife and three children. Mrs. E. Smith, child, brother and mother, John Motte, wife and two children; Messrs. Otis, Blocks, and Glass, carpenters, Mr. Goodhue, clerk of Houseman, eight men, crew of wrecking sloop Key West, and some ten or twelve negroes, the latter saved.

Out of this number Mr. Motte, wife and two children were destroyed, and Dr. Perrine and the brother of Mrs. Smith, with all of the houses, except one of Mr. Howe's. Dr. Perrine was a scientific gentleman, well known in Philadelphia. He had obtained a grant of land from Congress, in Florida, for the prosecution of agriculture experiments there, and the development of the resources of the soil. He attempted to address the Indians, and was shot by them. He retreated to his house, sent away his wife and children, who escaped to a hulk, whence they were afterwards taken by a boat from Tea Table Key. The Doctor's house was burnt, and his body destroyed in the flames.

Capt. Motte, master of the sloop Key West, and family secreted themselves in an out house. The Indians discovered and dragged them out. Mr. Motte's mother escaped by running into the water. Mr. Motte and wife were shot, the two children's brains were dashed out, and their bodies thrown upon the corpse of their parents. Young Smith was concealed with a carpenter named Blocks, in the cistern of a house. Smith was burned to death by the falling cinders and timbers which fell into the cistern.—Blocks escaped badly burned. The only other person injured was Mr. Otis, wounded by a rifle ball—but he is since doing well.—Saturday Courier.

DON'T KNOW YOU.—We saw a gentleman (?) last evening, who was pleni Bacchus, make a sudden stop before a pump, and, probably imagining it to be a friend, a familiar acquaintance—a human being—extended his hand for the purpose of having a hearty shake. "How do you do, sir," said the animate being—no reply from the inanimate—"fine evening this"—no reply—"take that, then," said the gentleman, as he struck it with his fist, and left part of the skin of his knuckles adhering to the wooden standard. It is not to be wondered that the pump did not recognize him, as for a long time the gentleman has been unacquainted with the merits of cold water.—Phil. Chron.

LATER FROM MEXICO.—By the Norma at New York, from Havana, we have papers of that city of the 20th ult., with accounts from Mexico, carried to Havana by the British gun brig Sea Gull, to the 28th July.

The civil war in the city of Mexico had, after thirteen days fighting in the streets, been terminated by an armistice and agreement, which replaced authority in the hands of Bustamente.

The extra of the Diary of Havana, of the 20th August, presents a summary of each days translations, from the 15th to the 28th July—which, however, is of little interest beyond the daily recurrence of firing from the palace and its environs by the troops of Urrea and Gonzales Furias, who had taken possession of it, and made Bustamente prisoner—and those of the Superior Government, which thought to drive out the revolters.

The final result was that on the 27th, through the intervention of the Archbishop, a truce was negotiated, of which the following are the chief items:

Art. 1. Security of life, persons, property and offices under Government, are guaranteed in every sense of the word, to all persons.

Art. 2. The General-in-Chief, Don Gabriel Valencia, promises in all legal modes to interpose his good offices with the General Government, to induce the Chambers to proceed to a reform of the constitution.

Art. 3. Entire oblivion shall be extended to all the political occurrences in this Capital, since 15th instant.

Art. 4. Passports shall be granted to leave the Republic to all persons compromised in the revolt, even though under persecution for political opinions.

Art. 5. The revolted troops shall take up the positions designated by Gen. Gabriel Valencia, who shall indicate what officers of their number are to command them, who is to be held responsible for all disorders, and for the fulfilment of all orders.

Art. 6. The General-in-Chief, and the other generals of the army, pledge their honor before the world, for the faithful execution of this agreement.

Art. 7. This agreement to extend only to Mexicans.

After the signing of this capitulation, the Government troops took possession of the government house, and other points occupied by the revolters, who dispersed, some to their homes, others fled, and the remainder laid down their arms at the place designated by the commander-in-chief.

Gomes Furias and Urrea fled, without its being known what direction they had taken—and thus tranquility was again, for a time, re-established.

It is a sad comment upon such civil strife, that while, during the 13 days of contest, only 80 of the troops on both sides were either killed or wounded, 460 peaceful and quiet citizens—some of them distinguished—were either killed or wounded.—New York Sun.

A DREADFUL DISASTER.—Five Young Ladies Drowned.—The Portland Argus of Wednesday contains the particulars of a most melancholy disaster, namely, the drowning of five girls just entering upon womanhood. The Argus details the circumstances thus:

A party was made up yesterday at noon, (as there had been hundreds during the stay of the U. States' vessels in our harbor) to sail down to them and among the Islands. The party consisted of nine persons, three lads and six young women. It was a beautiful afternoon, and the buoyant and happy inmates of the boat promised themselves much pleasure. But how little did we know of the future.—Little did they or their friends imagine that but few hours would elapse ere five of them would be returned to their parents cold in death! The vessels having sailed, the boat ran down to Hog Island, and when quite near the shore, (having touched at the island and being just leaving) a flaw of wind struck her and she filled. The sun's rays being uncomfortable, just before the boat filled, five of the misses had gone into the cuddy to shield themselves, and at the moment were cheerfully conversing. One miss and the three young men were in the open air, and clung to the boat until one of them unloosed the small boat attached, and saved those clinging to the sides of the other. For those in the cuddy there was no relief! As the boat capsized it filled entirely, and they were hurried in a moment, from time to eternity!

The names of those that thus untimely perished were, Elizabeth and Caroline Ilsley, (aged 11 and 13 years) daughters of Mr. Nathan Ilsley; Frances Ingraham, daughter of the late Thomas Ingraham; Julia Plumer, daughter-in-law of Capt Millikin; Adeline Thurston, (aged 17) daughter of Mr. Samuel Thurston.

Those saved were Emeline Richards, daughter of the late Mr. Jesse Richards—a son of Nathan Ilsley, and brother to two of the drowned—a son of the widow Carter, and Charles Pettengill.

LETT AGAIN—ACQUEDUCT BLOWN UP.—The Rochester Democrat says—"The Aqueduct of the Welland Canal, which crosses Chippewa Creek, was blown up, early on Saturday morning, with a terrible explosion, while two schooners were in it; one of which settled down in the chasm made by the explosion, the other fell over her beam ends. The navigation is of course stopped, until the damages can be repaired. There is every reason to suppose that it was the work of the miscreant Lett, who recently made his escape while on his way to the residence of such scoundrels at Auburn.

From the Philadelphia Christian Observer.

IN CHANCERY—STATE OF NEW YORK, AT UTICA, JULY, 1840.

Jessup vs. the Trustees of the Presbyterian Congregation in Florida, Orange county, New York.

This case was brought before the Chancellor, and sent by him to be argued before the Hon. Philo Gridley, Vice Chancellor of the 5th Circuit, and decided by him the 25th of July, 1840.

The church in Florida was organized in 1741, and a deed was executed to "the Trustees of the Presbyterian Congregation in Florida," and to their successors for ever, of a tract of land, on which their house of worship was erected, to be held for the use of said Presbyterian Society, and for no other purpose, and some funds also dedicated to the same purpose. The church in Florida belonged to the Presbytery of Hudson, which was a part of the Synod of New York. At the first meeting of the Synod of New York, after the organization of the two General Assemblies in 1838, it will be recollected that a division of the Synod of N. York took place, which also resulted in a division of the Presbytery of Hudson. The church in Florida remained with the, so called, New School (or Constitutional) division of the Presbytery and Synod. In 1839, a minister was called and installed over the church and congregation by the New School Presbytery of Hudson.

The complainant filed a bill in Chancery against the Trustees, charging them with a violation of their trust in employing a minister who was installed by the New School (or Constitutional) Presbytery on the ground that they were not Presbyterians, and that the installation was invalid; and that the use of the house, and the employment of the minister, was a perversion of the trust from the purposes designed; and claiming that an injunction be granted, restraining the Trustees from employing their minister or using the funds of the society to pay him.

The Trustees, in their answer, aver that the majority of the congregation, who adhere to the New School, are Presterians, and as such are entitled to use the funds in the payment of such a minister as they shall select, and that the minister settled over the church is one who was installed pursuant to the requirements of the Presbyterian church.

The cause was argued at great length before Vice Chancellor Gridley, about the 9th or 10th of July, by Mr. Thompson, of New York, for the complainant, and by Mr. Wisner, of Goshen, Orange county, for the trustees.

It was contended on the part of the complainant's counsel that the majority of the church and congregation were not Presbyterians within the meaning of the original grant made in 1741. The question as to which of the General Assemblies is the true and legitimate General Assembly, was argued at great length, and with much ability. His honor the Vice Chancellor, in the decision of the case, remarked that, in the decision of the matter before him it was not necessary to decide the question: Does Presbyterianism, as recognised in the conveyance of 1741, necessarily depend upon a connection with the General Assembly? He supposes not. There was no General Assembly when the grant was made, and they would have remained Presbyterians though they had never united with any General Assembly; and as it expressly appears in the case that a majority of the church and congregation are in favor of their present connection, he decides that the applying of the funds in the payment of a minister installed by the New School Presbytery, and the use of the house for its present purpose, is not a violation of the trust. The following are the concluding remarks of the very clear and able opinion of the Vice Chancellor, after reviewing, at great length, the various points raised in favor of the right of the complainant to the remedy sought.

He says: "My opinion is, that it does not appear that the trustees of the congregation of Florida are using the house and funds of the congregation in a manner and for a purpose, unconnected with the trust they assumed on their election as trustees. The complainant, in my judgment, has no legal claim to the relief he seeks. The majority of the church and congregation, it seems, are in favor of the present incumbent, and it does appear that he is of a denomination different from that for whom the house and funds were designed. The complainant is precisely in the same situation as he would be, provided the majority were in favor of a person who was either, on account of his character or his talents, or personal manners, unaccountable to the minority. They may withdraw from the congregation, or they may wait until they convince a majority of the congregation that it is expedient to change their pastor."

The motion for an injunction is denied.

☞AN INTELLIGENT POPULATION.—The population of the 14th Ward of this city under the new census, is 20,331, viz: 9499 males, and 10,741 females. Showing an increase of 2890 since 1835, and 5860 since 1830. There are in this Ward 991 white persons, over 20 years of age, who can neither read nor write.—N. Y. Jour. of Com.

NEW SOUTH WALES.—As as instance of the fertility of the soil in some parts of this country, it is stated, that land upon which last year a bushel of wheat had been sown to the acre, returned, at the last year's harvest, the astonishing quantity of ninety-five bushels to the acre.

E RECORDER.

ZANESVILLE:

SDAY, ... SEPTEMBER 16, 1840.

RRESPONDENTS.—A large number of lations have been received and laid await the return of the editor; they attended to. J. W. W.

ost made his appearance in the neigh- f this office, on Friday and Saturday last. As yet no material damage has to vegetation. J. W. W.

s Doings.—Dr. John A. Turner de- is life on Sunday morning, the 6th he 38th year of his age. Dr. T. was resident of Fauquier county, Va.

s Accident.—Joseph C. Vance was the 28th ult. by being thrown from his hile descending a hill near Steubenville, he horses became frightened and ran off Mr. V. was a son of Ex-Governor f this State. J. W. W.

ermont election has resulted in favor of s, they having secured the whole dele- Congress, five in number, 28 members nate, and 150 Representatives. The ration party have elected 2 Senators epresentatives. J. W. W.

and Girls, do you hear that?—A the vicinity of Deer Creek, Pa., inform- ditor of the Pittsburgh Intelligencer, ks since, that twenty-three marriages place in her neighborhood since last Who'll follow the example, eh? J.W.W.

ery worthy and gifted young ministers, Boston Olive Branch, were rejected by conference of the M. E. Church, because d not conscientiously say that they ap- the recently expounded doctrine, that nd their creatures only know and declare e government of Annual and Quarter- ences. J. W. W.

Times vs. Kissing.—Times 'down east' uite so hard as they have been, and as ur assertion we give from the Nantuck- er, the fact that a chap recently paid ve dollars for a kiss in that town. The is not forthcoming, however, without the minister of the law. We hope this ex- ll not be followed by the ladies of this we could not purchase more than nine he girls are dear enough, already. Mr. us describes the offence: J. W. W.

e abroad from her residence, engaged in able exercise of shopping, and being of full dress, the culprit laid rude hands alabaster neck and shoulders, and in of every known rule of established eti- as well as in utter despite of her dis- pressed order to forbear—aye, in viola- the peace and dignity of the common- did then and there, vi et armis, and with urrent connivance of an unshaven chin otruded lip, violently inflict upon her mouth, or some contiguous feature, a rmous and vociferous kiss!" meetings are being held throughout gland and other parts of the country ressing an opinion that the late order Post Office Department, forbidding the ation of bundles of newspapers on mail s extremely arbitrary and grossly oppres- the reading community. The order is to be without law & against law. It will upon the Neutral Press, more so than Political Press, as the former circulates n double the papers of the latter, and upon the most influential portion of the ity. It is asserted by some that if it make Whigs, it will lose the adminis- nore votes than all the hard cider con- in the country. Both parties justly the arbitrary order. The editor of the Olive Branch says that a bundle of his ntended for Lynn, Massachusetts, was roken open and robbed by an agent of tty post office. J. W. W.

Franking Privilege.—Great complaint made of the abuse of the franking priv- members of Congress. A section of the law gives the privilege of franking let- nembers for sixty days before and after the for which they have been elected. Not with deluging the mails with documents ras during the last six months' session, for party advancement, to the detriment rue object of the Department, the pro- on of information relative to the true in- of the country, the members on leaving gton left with their friends at that city antities of blank paper with their franks d on them, to be used by those friends may think proper. The Post Master has put his veto upon this mode of de- g the Department, already sufficiently d and imposed upon, by erasing the f members not in the city of Washing- d requring postage to be paid thereon.— right. J. W. W.

erhill Monument.—This Monument, d to commemorate the glorious battle of hill, has been suffered to remain in an ed condition for more than ten years. gh the project was first started in 1824, sufficient amount of capital collected, if sly expended, to have completed the no- praise-worthy design, yet it was carried y about half its height and suffered to he "laughing-stock of foreigners, and the of the descendants of those who fought d on that consecrated ground, in one of st memorable battles ever fought." The ground, or nearly all of it, has been laid o house lots on many of which tenements have been erected. This should never en permitted: it should never have been led. The ladies of New England have forward and resolved to do that which fathers and sons have neglected to do—to finish the Monument, that it may answer the original design of its projectors. It will be accomplished. J. W. W.

The Casket for September has been received, and, as usual, presents its readers with a fine table of contents. We this week give an article from the July No. descriptive of the capture of a merchant vessel by a pirate, and his subsequent retreat to his strong hold, and in our next we will present to our readers a continuation of the series, in which an attact is made upon the pirate who is captured and killed. Such extracts from its pages speak more in its favor than any commendation of ours. The "embellishments of the present number are a beautiful plate of the Full Fashions, richly colored, and a fine steel engraving of 'The Agra Gate.'" The following is the table of contents:

The Agra Gate. From "Unpublished Travels by an American in the East." Illustrated by a superb engraving on steel.
Leaves from a Lawyer's Port-Folio. No. VIII. The Widow's Son.
The Coquette. A Story of Real Life. By H. B. Hirst.
Lines to S. By J. T. S. Sullivan.
Isabel De Vere. A tale of the Plague in London.
Ballad.
The Baron Thievry. From the French.
Stanzas for Music. By C. Theresa Clarke.
Cruizing in the Last War. No. XIV. The Escape.
Stanzas. To Psyche.
Ancient and Modern Times.
The Young Martyr. A tale of the Tunisian Jews.
Parted Forever. By Catharine H. Waterman.
The Harem Queen. By Wm. J. Harris, Va.
I Think of Thee.
The Old Cross. A Legend of Other Times.
Stanzas.
A Tale of Saragossa.
The Dying Girl to Her Lover.
The Dawn is Breaking O'er Us. Written by Thomas Moore, Esq. Arranged for the Piano. By M. W. Balfee.
Review of New Books.

☞We have received the first number of the "Christian World," a monthly periodical, published in the city of Philadelphia, under the patronage of the Methodist Protestant Church, and edited by Thomas H. Stockton, who is a gentleman of elegant literary attainments. For taste and neatness, the Christian World is not surpassed by any publication, we believe, in the United States. It will advocate the cause of religious liberty. Price $1 25, per annum, or five copies for five dollars, in advance.

ELECTIONS.

The table below shows the time of holding the elections in the several States, during the year. The States whose names are marked with a star, elect members of Congress on the same day with the State officers:

States.	State Election.	Pres. Elec.
New Hampshire	March 10	November 2
Connecticut	April 6	" 2
Rhode Island	" 16	" 18
Virginia	" 23	" 2
*Louisiana	July 6	" 3
Alabama	August 3	" 9
Kentucky	" 3	" 3
Indiana	" 3	" 2
*Illinois	" 3	" 2
Missouri	" 3	" 2
Tennessee	" 6	" 3
North Carolina	" –	" 19
*Vermont	Sept'r. 1	" 10
*Maine	" 14	" 2
*Georgia	Oct'r. 5	" 2
Maryland	" 7	" 9
*Pennsylvania	" 13	October 30
*Ohio	" 13	" 30
South Carolina	" 12	by Legislature.
*New York,	Nov. 2, 3 & 4	Nov. 2, 3 & 4
*New Jersey	" 3 & 4	" 3 & 4
Mississippi	" 2	" 2
Michigan	" 2	" 2
Arkansas	" 2	" 2
*Massachusetts	" 9	" 9
*Delaware	" 10	" 10

ITEMS.

The death is announced of J. G. A. Williamson, the United States Charge at Carracas. He died on the 7th of August, of dysentary.

The Cincinnati Gazette mentions a report, which it says appears to be well authenticated, of the death, at Indianapolis, of Judge Bigger, Governor elect of Indiana.

A Mistake.—Lest our honored cotemporaries of the press, should go too far into a discussion of the probable reception of Hon. John Quincy Adams, in Europe, we would inform them that he has taken passage in the Acadia for Halifax, only—and not for Liverpool, as has been stated. The venerable gentleman is too busy in receiving and answering the letters of his constituents to venture so far from home.

During a camp meeting held at Red Stone, Mount Pleasant, Ohio, a tree was blown down and fell among a group of men, several of whom had limbs broken. One named McClain is dead, and others are not expected to survive.

The Exeter News Letter chronicles the death at East Kingston, New Hampshire, of a widow Abigail Rowell, aged one hundred years and eleven months. She left 8 children, 27 grandchildren, 65 great grandchildren, and 2 great, great, grandchildren!

The lion and lioness sold on Monday in Philadelphia, brought 250 dollars and 125 dollars.—Cheap, for the king of beasts and his wife.

Sublime.—As the ostrich uses both legs and wings when the fleet Arabian courser presses on his rear: or as the winged lightnings leap from the heavens when the Eternal has unbound their bolts, so does a little nigger run like the devil when a big dog am arter him.

A La Ellsler.—Master Diamond the negro dancer was serenaded at his boarding house in New York, one night last week.

There is a tobacco factory at Seville, which employs 9000 wom en and 1000 of the other sex. Rather a large family!

"Anna, my dear, oh what a beautiful sky—how I admire it." "Yes, John, my dear—I sometimes wish I was a s-k-y."

Letters from Bessarabia, published in the Gazette de Cologne, speak of the march of large bodies of troops from Poland, followed by a considerable quantity of siege artillery. It is supposed that this force is not destined exclusively for the Caucacus.

There are 300 widows at Marblehead, Mass., in a population of 5,575; and a vast number of them are said to be very beautiful. There's a chance, Colonel.

Mr. Norris, of this city, has closed a contract with the Emperor of Russia for 200 locomotive engines—40 of which are to be delivered each year. Cost, 1,400,000 dollars.—Phil. paper.

Fifty-three persons have taken passage to Europe by the noble steam-ship, Acadia. John Quincy Adams, the Ex-President, goes in her as far as Halifax, and not to Europe, as has been stated in some of the papers. She sailed on Tuesday last.

The indemnity to be paid by Naples to England is said to be fixed at 800000 ducats, or about £130,000.

The deaths in New York last week, numbered one hundred and ninety-eight.

Very great distress prevails at this moment among the peasantry in the west of Ireland, particularly in Galway and Mayo. Some of the landlords—resident and absentee—have contributed considerable sums to the alleviation of this melancholy state of things. The price of provisions was, however, fortunately falling in the markets.

Vandalism.—We learn from the Portland Argus, that the elegant monument erected to the memory of the late Dr. Payson, was overturned and broken on Friday night last, by some evil minded beings. Such pitiful and atrocious manifestations of malice degrade the species.

A man named George Philips, has been arrested and committed in Philadelphia, on charge of robbing the mail from Baltimore, between Philadelphia and Washington.

We learn by the ship Asia from Canton, that while at St. Helena the British brig of war Brisk arrived there with three Portuguese vessels, the Adriana, Coringa and Montevidean, as prizes, taken on the coast of Africa in May last, engaged in the slave trade. They were ordered by the Vice Admiralty Court at St. Helena to be broken up and sold.

According to the Philadelphia Ledger, there is in that city a little girl of about 11 years of age, who can and always does, whether at work or play, raise herself from a sitting posture without bending the knee joints; she also invariably seats herself in the same way. Her limbs are not defective—she walks well, and is smart and active.

It is stated that the Duke of Wellington has sat more than 150 times for his portrait, since the battle of Waterloo, and that the applications come still. There are about an equal number made to him for his bust, miniatures, and so forth. The old gentleman might very well take the liberty to decline such compliments now.

The Circassians appear to be indomitable against Russia—and fresh accessions are daily made from Poland. What a revenge it would be if the devoted Polanders could bow the Autocrat's neck for their irreparable wrongs.

In Frazer's travels is mentioned a curious Arab superstition. "As we alighted at the camp, an old woman brought a young infant in her arms, and passed it three times under the belly of one of our horses. We were told that it was regarded as lucky to do so with a horse of a strange guest."

Some rogues with both malice and mischief in their composition, amused themselves on Saturday night with oiling the rails on the road from Washington to Philadelphia. The consequence was, that though there was no difficulty in turning the wheels of the train, there was some objection on the part of those wheels, to going ahead, and the train was delayed an hour in consequence; being forced forward only by throwing sand upon the road.—Br. Jonathan.

Indian Wars.—Mr. R. W. Pomeroy, No. 3 Minor street, has just published a work in one volume, entitled "Indian Wars of the United States, from the Discovery to the present time, from the best authorities; by William V. Moore."—This is a valuable and interesting volume, giving accounts of all the Indian Wars, on the territory of what is now the territory of the United States, from the invasion of Ponce de Leon to the Seminole war which now rages. The work is embellished with numerous woodcuts, and will be serviceable both for the general reader and for the instruction of youth.

A Dreadful Massacre at Yucatan.—We have further painful news from Mexico. An arrival at New Orleans from Campeachy, states that perfect tranquility reigned in that city on the 13th. It relates the following bloody story.

We have already alluded to the capture of Tobasco by the Federalists. It seems from all that we have been able to ascertain from the captain of the Atrevida, that a part of the Centralist army, consisting of two hundred men, who had been obliged to leave the city, had afterwards received reinforcements, and had marched towards Tobasco, which they had succeeded in re-capturing, and taking advantage of the feebleness of their enemies who were suffering from sickness, had been guilty of cruelties of the most revolting nature. Nothing was spared; all the inhabitants who pronounced themselves in favor of the Federalists were massacred without distinction, and their property pillaged and devastated.

Another Haul—Counterfeiters taken up.—An opposition mint to Uncle Sam's has been broken up in Carrollton. A gang of hard money men have been arrested, who were no wise particular about the quantity of alloy which they put in their coin. Thus it was done:

Sheriff Bouligney obtained information that some of the parties who lately broke jail were staying at the house of a certain Doctor Angel, at Carrollton. He proceeded there on Thursday, accompanied by his deputy, Mr. Elliott, Mr. Cammeyer and four members of the city police and arrested Wm. Baker, —— Cunningham and Martha Baker, the mother of the former. Baker was one of those who had escaped from prison—Cunningham was out of there but a few days.—Martha Baker had also been in on the charge of passing counterfeit money; she took sick and was removed to the hospital, from which place she made her escape.

The suspicion of the Sheriff's officers having been excited, they set about searching the house, and their search was not an unfruitful one. In the garret were found a small furnace, a quantity of copper, cut up in small pieces, for smelting, fine sand and several other evidences, which plainly told that the plans for an extensive swindling business were matured, and that the preparations to carry on their nefarious trade were complete.

Doctor Angel was arrested on these discoveries being made, and on his person were found some counterfeit coins; his mistress, Eliza Berry, f. w. c. was also made prisoner. The affair will shortly undergo an investigation before the Mayor.—Picayune.

A New Orleans correspondent of the Baltimore American says:—"Eighteen of the passengers of the Cadiz Packet, lost near Neuvitas some time since, have arrived at Guanaja, making in all 23 saved out of the 74 souls that were on board."

The receipts at the Park, during the eight nights of Fanny Elssler's engagement, amounted to about $10,000.

Wholesale Prices Current.

CORRECTED WEEKLY FOR THE WESTERN RECORDER.
BY SPERRY & ABBOT,
(Successors to Geo. Reeve & Son,)
Wholesale and Retail Grocers, No. 96, Main St Zanesville, Ohio.

ARTICLES.		FROM.	TO
Almonds, hard shell,	pound.	8	9
" soft shell,	"	16	20
Allum,	"		9
Alspice,	"		12½
Apples, green picked,	barrel.	1.12½	1.50
Bacon, Hams,	pound.		12½
" Shoulders,	"		8
" Sides,	"	8½	11
Beans, white,	bush'l.		1.00
Butter, keg,	pound.	7	8
Beeswax,	"	23	25
Brazil Nuts,	"	10	11
Corn, in ear,	bush'l.	20	25
Candles, Sperm,	pound	48	49
" Mould,	"	18	23
" Dipped,	"		10
Coffee, Rio,	"	14	14½
" Java,	"	17	18
" Havana,	"	14	14½
" Laguira,	"	15	16½
Cheese, Western Reserve,	"	9	10
" Country,	"		8
Copperas,	"	4½	5½
Cinnamon,	"		28
Cloves,	"		45
Feathers,	"		40
Flaxseed,	bush'l.		62½
Flour,	barrel.		3.00
Filberts,	pound.	8	9
Fish—Mackerel, No. 1,	barrel.	18.50	—
" No. 2,	"	18.50
" No. 3,	"	14.50
Dry Cod,	pound.	6	6½
Herring,	box.	1.00	1.25
Ground Ginger,	"	13	15
Glass, 7 by 9,	box.		3.75
" 8 by 10,	"		3.75
" 10 by 12,	"		4.75
Hay,	ton.	7	8
Indigo,	pound.	162½	1.75
Leather, Spanish Sole,	"	24	26
" Country "	"		—
Lead, bar,	"	7	7½
Nutmegs,	"		162½
Madder,	"	15½	18
Molasses, New Orleans,	gallon.		45
" West India,	"	63	65
Oil Flaxseed,	"		87½
" W. Sperm,	"		162½
" Refined whale,	"	00	1.25
Oats,	bush'l.	18	20
Pepper,	pound.		12½
Potatoes,	bush'l.	20	22
Plaster Paris,	ton.	23.00	2500
Rice, North Carolina,	pound.	—	6½
Raisins, Bloom,	box.	2.75	3 00
" Smyrna,	"	—	3.50
" Muscatil.	"	2.50	3.00
Soap, Rosin,	pound.	—	7
" Castile,	"	19	20
Shot, Nos. 2, 3 and 4,	bag.	2.25	237½
Salt,	bush'l.	31	35
Sugar, New Orleans,	pound.	—	8
" Muscavado,	"	8½	10
" White Havana,	"		15
" Brown "	"		13½
Tea, Young Hyson,	"	75	85
" Gunpowder,	"	80	90
" Imperial,	"	—	70
" Black,	"	—	—
Tobacco, Kentucky Twist,	"	12	12½
" Cavendish,	"	31	44
Tallow, Rendered,	"		11
Vinegar,	barrel.	4.50	6.00
Wheat,	bush'l.		50

PRICES OF IRON AND NAILS.
BY D. APPLEGATE & CO.
WHOLESALE PRICES.

Bar Iron, assorted sizes,	pound.		6
Round and square,	"	6¾	10
Nails, 10d, 12d, 16d, 20d,	"		5¾
" 8d and 9d,	"		6
" 6d,	"		7½
" 5d,	"		7
" 4d,	"		7¾
" 3d,	"		8¼
Retail Nails, by the keg,	1 cent advance.
" Iron,	1 " "

PRICE OF CORDAGE.
BY G. L. SHINNICK.

Manilla Bedcords,	90 feet.	3 25
" "	60 "	2 00
Hemp "	90 "	3 00
" "	60 "	2 00
Plough Lines	30 "	1 00

The ship Mary, arrived at New York, brought $20,000 in specie for the Phœnix Bank.

The Commissioners appointed to settle and close up the affairs of the Manhattan Bank, Ohio, have examined the assets of the bank, and assure the public that they are sufficient and ample for the redemption of all the liabilities of that institution. Bill holders will do well, therefore to hold on to such funds as they have in their possession.—Bicknell.

An Eventful Life.—James Greenleaf, Jr. a native of Bristol, R. I., died at New Orleans, on the 9th of August, from injuries received by falling through a trap door. From an obituary notice in the National Intelligencer, we copy the following:

On his first voyage from Baltimore to New Orleans, in the fall of 1822, he was captured by pirates, off the coast of Cuba, was severely wounded on the head with a cutlass, was several days a prisoner, subject to the most cruel treatment; but, in company with the mate of their own vessel, succeeded in making his escape in an open boat, during a calm, amidst a shower of bullets. After rowing for two days and nights on the briny deep, without provisions or water, and out of sight of land, they at length succeeded in reaching the coast, about 20 miles from Matanzas, whence a United States vessel was despatched in pursuit of the pirates, who, finding themselves so hotly pursued, ran the vessel on shore, and many of them escaped to the woods. In this engagement Lt. Allen of the U. S. Navy, lost his life. Since that period, Mr. G. has been several times wrecked, and made some hair-breadth escapes.—Two years ago, while ascending the Mississippi in a schooner, a squall of wind capsized the vessel, and he barely escaped with his life. His history is a continued chapter of accidents and misfortunes, yet he bore all with a degree of philosophy which was truly astonishing. He had encountered death in almost every form—in the cruel and bloody pirate, in an open boat tossed upon the briny deep, in yellow fever, in cholera, in shipwreck—still his life was preserved: his hour had not yet come. But, alas! in a moment of security, in an hour when no danger threatened, behold the summons is at hand! a false step, and his eventful career is terminated, and he is called, without a moment's warning, to the presence of his Creator.

THE WIDOW AND HER SON.

BY WASHINGTON IRVING.

I approached the grave. The coffin was placed on the ground. On it was inscribed the name of the deceased:—"George Somers, aged 26 years." The poor mother had been assisted to kneel down at the head of it. Her withered hands were clasped, as if in prayer; but I could perceive, by a feeble rocking of the body, and a convulsive motion of the lips, that she was gazing on the last relics of her son with the yearnings of a mother's heart.

Preparations were now made to deposit the coffin in the earth. There was that bustling air, which breaks so harshly on the feelings of grief and affliction; directions were given in the cold tones of business; and there was the striking of spades into the gravel, which at the graves of those we love, is of all sounds the most withering. The bustle seemed to wake the mother from a wretched reverie. She raised her glazed eyes, and looked about with a faint wildness.

As the man approached with cords to lower the coffin into the grave, she wrung her hands, and broke out into an agony of grief. The poor woman who attended her, took her by the arm, endeavored to raise her from the earth, and to whisper something like consolation. "Nay, now; nay, now; don't take it so sorely to heart." But the mother could only shake her head, and wring her hands, as one not to be comforted.

As they lowered the body into the earth, the creaking of the cords seemed to agonize her; but when, on some accidental obstruction, there was a jostling of the coffin, all the tenderness of the mother burst forth; as if any harm could come to him, who was far beyond the reach of worldly suffering.

I could see no more—my heart swelled into my throat—my eyes filled with tears—I felt as if I were acting a barbarous part in standing by and gazing idly on this scene of maternal anguish. I wandered to another part of the churchyard, where I remained till the funeral train had dispersed.

It was sometime before I left the place. On my way homeward I met with the woman who had acted as comforter. She was just returning from accompanying the mother to her lonely habitation, and I drew from her some particulars connected with the affecting scene I had just witnessed.

The parents of the deceased had resided in the village from childhood. They had inhabited one of the neatest cottages, and by various rural occupations, and the assistance of a small garden, had supported themselves creditably and comfortably and led a happy and blameless life. They had one son, who had grown up to be the staff and pride of their age.

But unfortunately, this son was tempted during a year of scarcity and agricultural hardship, to enter into the service of one of the small crafts that plied on a neighboring river. He had not long been in this employment, when he was entrapped by a press-gang and carried off to sea. His parents received tidings of his seizure, but beyond that they could learn nothing. It was the loss of their main prop. The father, who was already infirm, grew heartless and melancholy, and sunk into his grave. The widow left lonely in her old age and feebleness, could no longer support herself and came upon the parish.

Time passed, till one day she heard the cottage door which faced the garden, suddenly open. A stranger came out, and seemed to be looking eagerly and wildly around. He was dressed in seaman's clothes, was emaciated and ghastly pale, and bore the air of one broken down by sickness and hardships. He saw his mother and hastened towards her, but his steps were faltering—he sunk on his knees before her, and sobbed like a child. "O my dear, dear mother! don't you know your son, your poor boy, George?"

It was, indeed, the wreck of her once noble lad, who, shattered by wounds, by sickness and foreign imprisonment, had, at length, dragged his wasted limbs homeward, to repose among the scenes of his childhood. The rest of the story is soon told: for the young man lingered but a few weeks, when death came to his relief.

The next Sunday after the funeral I have described, I was at the village church; when to my surprise, I saw the poor old woman tottering down the ailse to her accustomed seat on the steps of the altar. She had made an effort to put on something like mourning for her son; and nothing could be more touching than the struggle between pious affection and utter poverty; a black ribbon or so, a faded handkerchief, and one or two such humble attempts to express, by outward signs, that grief which surpasses all show.

When I looked around upon the storied monuments, the stately hatchments, the cold marble pomp with which grandeur mourns magnificently over departed pride, and turned to this poor widow, bowed down by age and sorrow, at the altar of her God, and offering up the prayers and praises of a pious, though broken heart, I felt that this living monument of real grief was worth them all.

I related her story to some of the wealthy members of the congregation, and they were moved by it. They exerted themselves to render her situation more comfortable, and to lighten her afflictions. It was, however, but smoothing a few steps to the grave. In the course of a Sunday or two after, she was missed from her usual seat at church; and, before I left the neighborhood, I heard, with a feeling of satisfaction, that she had quietly breathed her last, and gone to rejoin those she loved, in that world where sorrow is never known, and friends are never parted.

The New World.

The Largest, Cheapest, Handsomest and most Comprehensive Newspaper in the United States.

EDITED BY
PARK BENJAMIN AND EPES SARGENT.

With multiplied resources for rendering the New World more valuable than ever as a compendious newspaper and repository of elegant literature, we enter upon the second volume (folio) on the 24th of October, dressed in a beautiful garb of new type, cast expressly for the purpose. It will therefore be a fitting time to commence new subscriptions, as well as for the renewal of those which may then expire.

During the first year of the existence of the New World, it has acquired a reputation and circulation superior to that of any weekly paper in the country; and has furnished to its subscribers, during that period, (besides all the current news of the day, domestic and foreign) new and valuable works by Talfourd, D'Israeli, Thomas Moore, Miss Mitford, Mrs. Jameson, Charles Dickens, Ainsworth, Knowles, Bulwer, Marryat and others—works, which in London could not be purchased for fifty times the amount of the subscription price of the New World. In addition to works of interest by these eminent authors, it has contained the cream of the periodical literature of the day, as well as original articles from the pens of some of the most popular writers of America, among whom we may mention Miss Sedgwick, Orville Dewey, Professor Longfellow, the author of "Yankee Notions," Simms, Street, &c., &c.

In politics we shall, as hitherto, maintain an armed neutrality. Our columns will as hitherto be unobjectionable in a moral point of view. In criticism we shall, in justice to the public, maintain a perfect independence, even though we incur the vengeance of all the dunces. We shall, in conclusion, earnestly strive to render our sheet not only worthy of the unparalleled favor it has experienced, but of a continully extending circulation. While we continue to furnish with all possible promptitude the most attractive literature of the day, we shall, as our means enlarge, afford that compensation to native authors, which may induce them to make the New World the medium for presenting to the public their best productions. Our excellent London correspondence will be continued, and due attention will be paid to the commercial, agricultural and news departments of our paper.

A QUARTO EDITION

Of sixteen large pages was commenced on the sixth of June last, in order to meet the wishes of a large number of subscribers, by giving them its rich and varied contents in a suitable form for binding. This we have done without having enhanced the price, so that new subscribers, and others on the renewal of previous subscriptions, can take their choice between the Quarto and Folio form. ☞But a few sets of the Quarto, from No. 1, now remain on hand in the office, and we shall, therefore, not be able long to supply them.

TERMS—Three Dollars a year in advance, for either edition; or Five Dollars for two copies. In all cases letters must be free, or post-paid, or they will remain dead in the post-office.

☞All Postmasters who will act for us are our authorized Agents, and may retain 25 per cent. on the subscription price, (Three Dollars,) for commissions, if remitted in New York or eastern money; or 50 cents on each, if in notes of other solvent banks, which may be at a discount here.

Letters relative to the editorial department must be addressed to Park Benjamin and Epes Sargent, Editors: those relative to the business department, to J. Winchester, Publisher, No. 30, Ann street, New York.

September 16, 1840. 3t

LADIES' DEPARTMENT

THE PLEDGED RING.

BY MRS. C. B. WILSON.

Give but a ring, a simple ring,
'Tis all the pledge I ask—
And as time creeps on weary wing,
'Twill cheer life's gloomy task!
When thou art absent, 'twill recall
Thine image to my view,
In lonely scene, and crowded hall,
And bid me think thee true!
Then, give a ring, a simple ring,
Whose magic power shall last,
Like Eastern talisman, and bring
To mem'ry's eyes—the past!

Give but a ring, a simple ring,
The gift I will retain,
Till death's chill mists around me cling,
Through scenes of bliss or pain—
In sorrow it will yield relief,
To think thy heart is mine—
And make the hour of joy, though brief,
With brighter radiance shine!
Then give a ring—a simple ring,
No costly gain I ask—
Affection's talisman, 'twill bring
New strength for every task.

THE WIFE.—Woman's love, like the rose blooming in the arid desert, spreads its rays over the barren plain of the human heart, and while all around it is blank and desolate, it rises more strengthened from the absence of every other charm. In no situation does the love of woman appear more beautiful than in that of wife; parents, brethren and friends, have claims upon the affections, but the love of a wife is of a distinct and different nature. A daughter may yield her life to the preservation of a parent, a sister may devote herself to a suffering brother, but the feelings which induce her to this conduct, are not such as those which lead a wife to follow the husband of her choice, through every pain and peril that can befal him, to watch over him in danger, to cheer him in adversity; and even remain unaltered at his side, in the depths of ignominy and shame. It is an heroic devotion which a woman displays in her adherence to the fortunes of a hopeless husband; when we behold her in the domestic scenes, a mere passive creature of enjoyment, an intellectual toy, brightening the family circle with her endearments, and prized for the extreme joy which that presence and those endearments are calculated to impart, we can scarcely credit that the fragile being who seems to hold existence by a thread, is capable of supporting the extreme of human suffering; nay, when the heart of man sinks beneath the weight of agony, that she should retain her pristine powers of delight, and by her words of comfort and patience, lead the distracted murmurer to peace and resignation.

Man profits by connection with the world, but woman never; the principles of thought and action are moulded variously, and where the character of man is dignified and ennobled, that of woman becomes reduced and degraded. The one is raised and exalted by mingled associations, the purity of the other is maintained in silence and seclusion.

Woman was created by the great Giver of all good, as the help-mate of man; formed in a superior, though more delicate mould—endowed with better and purer feelings—stronger and more exalted affections, to play a distinct character in the great drama of the created world; in fact, to reward the toil and labors of man. God made her not man's slave, neither to buffet the billows of the troubled sea of life, nor the jarring elements of public duties; but to share his pleasures, to console his troubled thoughts, to join with him in his joy, and exalt him in his happiness, by her participation, and to meliorate his griefs by kindness and endearments. Connection with the world destroys those other traits of feeling. She beholds man in all his aspects stalking abroad,—the creature of evil,—the slave of debased thoughts,—the destroyer of innocence,—the despoiler of all that is bright and beautiful; and the scenes of guile, fraud and villainy that meet the eyes, that glance at every turn, gradually stifle the kindly feelings of woman, and at length destroy that unsophisticated purity of soul, or if you will, those feelings of romance, which are all best; and the most productive of happiness in the sex, which "heaven made to temper man."

THE MERCHANT'S DAUGHTER.—If the fashionable young ladies of the day would take example after a beautiful and amiable creature we are acquainted with, perchance many a merchant now in straitened circumstances might, after the storm is over, bless the fate that made him the parent of so considerate an offspring.

'Father, I want twenty dollars for shopping to-day,' said Miss ———, as she entered the counting office of her father.'

'Really my love,' replied the good-natured man, 'I have not the money in the desk, and I would not like to draw a check.'

'Can't you send and borrow it?' said she impatiently.

'No, child—I have borrowed and borrowed until I am tired; and I have heavy responsibilities to meet to-day, which will drive me to the fraction of a cent.'

'La pa! you never told me of this before.'

'Because I didn't think it necessary, my child, to let you into the secrets of my business. What do you want with twenty dollars?'

'I want nothing—Miss ——— has just come to town, and invited me to go a shopping with her, and you know I would feel very awkward if I had no money to spend. But, if you are in need, it alters the case entirely.'

'I am in need of every cent, my child.'

'Then, father, I shall never trouble you until you let me know that you have extricated yourself from your difficulties.—I will stay at home, for I have laid in my fall and winter dresses—and shall need nothing until next spring.'—Balt. Clip.

AN OLD FRIEND.—A man whose first wife was remarkably neat, married a slut. On one occasion she mustered resolution to rub down the old mahogany table. Her good man sat quietly regarding her until she had done, when he burst into tears.—She desired to know what had affected him in so unusual a manner.

"The sight of that table," said he,—"for I now recognize it as an old acquaintance, and it awakens reminiscences of days that are gone, for it always looked thus when my poor wife was living."

It is unncessary to say that the insulted lady bounced out of the room, and declared, as she slammed the door behind her, that she would make herself a slave to no man.—N. Y. Atlas.

ATTENTION LADIES.—An infallable means of destroying black beetles and cockroaches is to strew the roots of black hellebore on the floor at night. Next morning, the whole family of beetles and cockroaches will be found either dead or dying; for such is their avidity for the poisonous plant, that they never fail to eat of it when they can get it. Black hellebore grows in marshy grounds, and may be had at all herb shops.

"O spare me, dear angel, one lock of your hair,"
A bashful young lover took courage and sighed;
" 'Twere a sin to refuse you so modest a prayer,
So take the whole wig," the sweet creature replied.

While thousands fall by clashing swords,
Ten thousands fall by corset boards.
Yet giddy females sacrifice
Their health, to please a dandy's eyes.

"Put out your tongue a little further," said a physician to a female patient, "a little further, ma'am, if you please—a little further still." "Why, Doctor, do you think there is no end to a woman's tongue?" cried the fair invalid.

A BRAVE COUPLE.—At Stamford, Ct., on the 11th ult., deacon Milo Wood and widow John Curtis, both of whom had attained the ripe age of 65 years, ventured again into the matrimonial noose.

THE WIDOW.

The widow she wept, and the widow she cried,
For it was but a week since her husband had died,
And a good soul was he, but just turned of four score,
So the widow declared she would marry no more.

The widow was young, and the widow was fair,
And her mourning she wore with so touching an air
That many folks said—nay, a great many swore—
'Twas a pity she vowed she would marry no more.

The widow had houses, the widow had lands,
And silver laced lackies t' obey her commands,
A carriage to ride in, with rhino in store
Yet, still she declared she would marry no more.

The widow she wept, and the widow she cried,
'Twas a twelvemonth that day since her husband had died,
A gallant came in—he had been there before—
"Oh! say not fair lady, you'll marry no more."

The widow she blushed, and the widow she smiled
Of her grief and her tears, for the moment beguiled,
"Well, perhaps, once again, but although to three score
I should live, I'm determined I'll marry no more."

YOUTH'S DEPARTMENT

A WARNING VOICE.—A writer in the Knickerbocker draws, in the subjoined brief sketch, a rovolting picture. Yet how many young men are chasing butterflies, things of a day! "How unaccustomed to the world, to that of the heartless and false doll of dress, whose every word is for effect, and every thought a desire for admiration; who can sacrifice domestic pleasure, and follow fashion and vice—vice of thought—who lives only in crowds and is miserable alone—who loves pleasure supremely, takes husband for his carriage and house, and enters matrimony for the liberties it allows her. There are such women; the idlers of the ball-room, the belles of the watering places. They enjoy butterfly celebrity, and then decay early in mind and body, victims to fashion or worse. What thoughts must linger around the bosoms of such women on their dying beds, as they think of their neglected God! Young men know not what they follow, as they glide on in the wake of the syren of the dance. They are the false lights which meteors hold out to draw the tumbling ships upon the rocks. They lure us on with the music and the pattering of tiny feet, and jeweled fingers and false smiles and false hearts; and when the victim is caught, like the veiled prophet, they display their awful hideousness. No, no! Love is found in gentle hearts. It dwells not amid the riots of pleasure; it dies in the glare of splendor, and cannot live in a heart devoted to dress and weak follies; it is more matured in quietness than loud applause, or the world's praise. Give me the sharply defined feelings of a young and timid girl, and I leave you the professions of the gaudy coquette. Give me the beaming glances of a liquid eye, and I yield the bright and flashing blaze of proud beauty to others."

THE TWINS.—Why, then, must every body die? The Bible tells us, "Death hath passed upon all men, in that all have sinned." Yes, all are sinners, and must, therefore, die. The old gray headed man must soon go. Death will not respect his silver locks. He will put him in the grave. The man in middle life, too, though wife and children may weep and pray against it. The fair youth and the sweet child are not spared; and I think I have never had my heart more affected, than when called to attend the funeral of children. I have seen them in the coffin, when they looked so fair and beautiful that it seemed hard to bury them up in the ground. The beautiful lines, which I am now about to give you, describe two little twin babes, dead, and in the coffin, and the mother bending over it, and looking upon them through her tears:

" 'Twas summer, and a Sabbath eve,
And balmy was the air:
I saw a sight which made me grieve,
And yet the sight was fair.
Within a little coffin lay
Two lifeless babes, as sweet as May.

Like waxen dolls which infants dress,
Their little bodies were;
A look of placid happiness
Did on each face appear;
And in the coffin, short and wide,
They lay together, side by side.

A rose-bud nearly closed I found
Each little hand within;
And many a pink was strew'd around,
With sprigs of jessamine;
And yet the flowers that round them lay,
Were not, to me, more fair than they.

Their mother, as a lilly pale,
Sat by them on a bed;
And bending o'er them told her tale,
And many a tear was shed;
Yet oft she cried, amidst her pain,
'My babes and I shall meet again!' "

CONSUMPTION OF FOOD IN LONDON.—It is stated that there are upwards 6000 acres of ground cultivated as gardens, within twelve miles of the metropolis, giving employment to 30,000 persons in winter, and three times that number in summer. The total value of the cattle sold in Smithfield is calculated at £8,500,000. It is supposed that a million a year is expended in fruits and vegetables. The consumption of wheat amounts to a million of quarters annually; of which four-fifths are supposed to be made into bread, being a consumption of 6¼ mil. of quarter loaves every year in the metropolis. The annual consumption of butter in London amounts to about 11,000, and that of cheese to 13,000, tons. The money paid annually for milk is supposed to amount to £1,250,000. The quantity of poultry annually consumed in London is supposed to cost between 70,000 and £80,000. That of game depends on the fruitfulness of the season. There is nothing, however, more surprising than the sale of rabbits. One salesman in Leadenhall market, during a considerable portion of the year, is said to sell 14,000 rabbits weekly. He disposes of them by employing between 150 and 300 men and women, who hawk them through the streets.

INDIAN KINGS.—The New York Express states that in Lambyaque, Peru, are to be seen the stupendous graves of the Indian Kings who must have died in the times of Incas. These stupendous mounds of earth are just upon the outside of the city, and are built of sun dried brick, and are of the most gigantic dimensons; some of them are 3000 feet in circumference and over 150 in height, and must have required time and a deal of labor in their erection—one of them was opened in Truxillo, and silver and gold taken from it amounting to over $2,000,000. A company of merchants have been organized, and are about opening several others, in search of more hidden treasures.

LYING.—There was a famous problem among the stoics, which ran to this purpose: "When a man says 'I lie,' does he lie or does he not? If he lies, he speaks the truth; if he speaks the truth, he lies." Many were the books written upon this wonderful problem; Chrysippus favored the world with no fewer than six, and Philletus studied himself to death in his vain efforts to solve it.

There is now living near Canterbury, England, a man whose name is James Port, who has thirty-one sons and daughters, by two wives viz:—thirteen by the first, and eighteen by the latter; is grandfather to forty-nine, and great-grandfather to eight, making the number of his family eighty-eight all born in wedlock.

A Counsel sometimes meets with his match in the witness box. "Could you see a hole through a wall?" asked Mr. Freeman, when cross-examining a Kerryman at the Limerick Assizes. "I could if it were made there," was the ready reply.

A person advertised in the New York Sun, offering a reward of twenty dollars for a politician of one party, who will talk to one of the opposite party half an hour without getting angry. There have been no applicants for the reward as yet.

Never sign a writing till you read it, nor drink water till you have seen it.

AGRICULTURAL.

From the Franklin Farmer.

EARLY HARVESTING WHEAT.

Sir: As the wheat harvest is approximating, I feel it my duty to say a few words on the subject of harvesting that valuable crop. I have, for the last four years, cultivated about one half of my ground in wheat, and my time of harvesting has been about eight days earlier than my neighbors. and my experiment has been attended with the most signal success. Sir, I find that my wheat is fuller, larger and finer than my neighbors', who followed the old practice; and, sir, this is not all—the weevil, which sometimes commit such sad havoc upon the wheat crop, will not touch it, if it is cut eight or ten days sooner than the common time of harvesting. That it is advantageous to reap wheat before it is fairly ripe, my experiments have fully proved, not only to my own satisfaction, but also to my neighbors'. But in ascertaining the proper state, it is necessary to discriminate between the ripeness of the straw and the grain; for in some seasons the straw dies upwards; under which circumstances, a field, to the eye may appear to be completely ripe, when in reality the grain is imperfectly consolidated and perhaps not much removed from a milky state. Though it is obvious that under such circumstances no further benefit can be conveyed from the root, and that nourishment is withheld the moment that the roots die, yet it does not follow that the grain so circumstanced should be immediately cut, because after that operation is performed, it is, in a great measure, necessarily deprived of every benefit from the sun and air, both of which have greater influence in bringing it to maturity so long as it remains on foot than when cut down, whether laid on the ground or bound in sheaves. The state of weather also at the time deserves notice, for as in moist or even variable weather every kind of grain when cut prematurely is more exposed to damage than when completely ripened. All these things will be studied by the skilful husbandman, who will also take into consideration the dangers which may follow were he to permit his wheat crop to remain uncut till completely ripened. The danger from wind will not be lost sight of by the judicious husbandman. Even the quantity dropped in the field and in the stack yard when wheat is over ripe, is an object of consideration. Taking all things into consideration, it seems most prudent to have wheat cut before it is fully ripe, as less damage will be sustained from acting in this way than by adopting a contrary practice. If the weather be dry and the straw clean, wheat may be carted to the stack yard in a few days, indeed, if quite ripe it may be stacked immediately from the sickle, especially when not meant for early thrashing. So long, however, as any moisture remains in the straw, the field will be found to be the best stack pard.

Yours, T. L. M.

From the Western Farmer.

BOOK FARMING.

Considering the unfortunate prejudice that exists in the minds of many, against receiving instruction from books, on the subject of agriculture and gardening, we are very desirous of presenting to the farming community much valuable information in a less distrustful shape, coming directly from the practical cultivators of the soil. It is, no doubt, owing, in some measure, to the existence of this prejudice against what are termed book farmers, or in other words, against scientific farming, that so many of our most enlighted and enterprising agriculturalists withhold from the public the beneficial results of their labors. This ought not to be so. Who, more than the cultivator of the soil, requires the light of knowledge to guide him in his arduous duties, to give confidence to action and a successful result to his labors? We have our schools and colleges, learned professors, and extensive libraries, to qualify our young men for the learned professions, while the humble votary of agriculture, whose art contributes more to the support of society than all the other arts united, and more than any other requires the aid of science, is left to feel his way in the dark, with nothing to guide him but vague conjecture or blind tradition. Hardly a town in the United States which has not its social library, filled with books giving instruction upon any subject but that of agriculture, while nine-tenths, if not ninety-nine hundredths of its readers are, to a greater or less extent, cultivators of the soil. Almost every village in the State has its lyceum, and its lyceum lectures, and yet how seldom do farmers, who constitute a great majority of the hearers, get from these sources any information on a subject, which is not only most interesting to them, but to the whole community? They listen with profound attention, and are no doubt much edified, with descriptions of the exact dimensions of the pyramids of Egypt, or the crusades of Peter the Hermit, while the subjects most intimately connected with their every day occupation, such as the composition, structure and mode of treating the different kinds of soils, the method of producing and applying the various kinds of manures, the best mode of renovating and improving their wornout fields, rotation of crops, and the numerous branches of science and vast field of knowledge immediately connected with agriculture, are seldom if ever touched. In order then to provide, in our humble sphere, for the prejudice that exists among farmers in general, against any kind of information reaching them in any other way than through the medium of actual practical proof, fresh from the soil itself, and not through the secondary channels of learned colleges, schools or societies, or scientific persons, we again and again entreat our farmers to send us communications on as many important points, however trivial they may appear individually, as may come to their knowledge in the course of their agricultural practice.

SUMMER FOOD FOR STOCK.—Three acres are required in summer for pasture for a horse or an ox, even if changed; for a cow two and a half acres; and the same for summering twelve sheep. To grow clover, lucerne or tares for them on the soiling system, or cutting these and carrying them to the stable or yard where they are kept, will take rather less than one-fourth of the same quantity for each in proportion.

WINTER FOOD FOR STOCK.—A horse requires near two tons of hay for a winter; an ox as much; a cow one ton and a half; and for twelve sheep, one ton and a half; provided they are not what is called manger fed three or four times a day with chopped food, when about two-thirds of the above quantity for each will be sufficient.

TICKS IN SHEEP.—Put Scotch snuff into the wool after opening it; make also a ring with it round the head, and another near the shoulders. Do it with a tin pepper box; have it made shaped like a funnel, with five very small holes at the little end of the cap; fill it with snuff.

TO CLEAN HIVES.—Burn them out with straw. Rub them with balm, and dip it in salt and water; rub the hive with it, inside and out, till the balm is worn out.

EXTRAORDINARY SPECTACLE.—There is now to be seen at one of our places of public resort, a person who was a New York merchant in 1837. and who then failed, owing over $300,000, says the N. Y. Journal of Commerce. The whole of his property was made over to a rich relation, and his creditors have not received one dollar to this day. This man is now at ——, making quite a swell with his family, among the honest gentlemen. while the widows and orphans, whom he has reduced to poverty, are compelled to remain at home, pining in distress, and vainly hoping he will pay them some small pittance of the amount he owes their husbands and fathers.

To the Honorable, the Legislature of the State of Ohio:

The undersigned, citizens of the State of Ohio, respectfully represent, that they have witnessed with extreme pain, the demoralizing influences growing out of the practices of certain huxters and pedlers, for their own personal interest, vending at camp and other religious meetings, throughout this State, ardent spirits, beer, cider, cakes, &c., to the great annoyance of the public worship of God, and to the extensive injury of the peace and good order of the community.—The existing law, prohibiting the sale of intoxicating drinks within one mile of any place of religious worship, after more than twenty years' experience, is found to be totally inadequate to the object for which it was enacted. The process by which conviction is had is extremely difficult; beside, the owner of such property can usually procure some irresponsible person to sell for him. The only effectual way, therefore, in our opinion, to prevent this practice would be to forfeit the property offered for sale.—There is no law prohibiting the sale of eatables, yet the victuallers are, in reality, the greatest disturbers of these public meetings, because they usually erect their booths and kindle their fires, near the place of worship, which become an asylum for the drunken and profane, who will remain there, indulging in all kind of obscene language and disorderly conduct, to the great disturbance of the services of religion and injury of the public morals. Your memorialists would therefore respectfully suggest to your honorable body, the propriety of so amending the present law as to prevent the approach of trespassers nearer than two miles distance, and to contraband, not only all articles of intoxication, but, also, all goods, wares, or merchandize of any description, as the only and effectual way to prevent the abuses complained of.

Those interested in the proposed law, for the protection of religious worship, are a numerous and law-abiding class of the community. They have borne with these unconstitutional infractions of their rights until forbearance has ceased to be a virture, and if longer persisted in, would degenerate into meanness; they are, therefore, moved to pray your honorable body to throw the shield of law around them, so as to protect them in future from these annoying and demoralizing practices. We respectfully refer your attention to the law of Pennsylvania on this subject, a copy of which shall accompany this petition. We believe this law is as perfect as human wisdom can devise, for the object contemplated. It is mild, yet efficient. The experience of many years has shown that it affords ample protection to religion, and yet it has not been made the instrument of oppression. It would be highly satisfactory to your petitioners if this law, without alteration, could be adopted in our Statute book.

As in duty bound your memorialists will ever pray.

☞ The Quarto New World

THREE DOLLARS PER ANNUM.

WHEN the publication of The New W was, in compliance with the expre wishes of many subscribers, commenced in a convenient for binding and preservation, it thought expedient to make such additions, in shape of music, engraved title pages, &c. would considerably enhance its expense. find, however, after 8 weeks' experiment, that paper would be better liked and more gener taken, if, by omission of the music, &c., the literary material of the Folio edition could thrown into the Quarto form, and the pric both the same. It has therefore been determ ed to ask a uniform sum. The Quarto N World will, therefore, be supplied hereafter $3 per annum, or six cents per number to th who, on subscribing, take the back numbers—ly a few of which have been issued.

Subscribers who have paid $4, or who may mit that sum in advance, will be entitled to paper for one year and four months from the of subscription.

Every present subscriber to the Folio edit may, upon renewal of his subscription and ment in advance, change to the Quarto an supplied with the back numbers at six cents from the commencement of the volume, by pressing his wish to that effect in a pre-paid ter to the publisher.

Edited by Park Benjamin and Epes Sargen
Published by J. WINCHESTER
30 Ann str
New York, August 15, 1840. 53

S. C. Haver,

IN the flourishing town of Putnam has on h 40 or 50 SADDLES ready for sale, of di ent qualities, comprising nearly all the varie in fashion in our Buckeye State.

A good assortment of Bridles and Mart gales: Riding and driving Whips: between and 200 Carriage and heavy draft Collars, wh will compare and wear with any others m here or elsewhere.

Also, fine York, Dearborn, heavy team a common Farming Harness. A lot of first Carriage and Buggy Harness, (brass and si plated.)

Trunks, vallises, saddle-bags, and double ered wagon whips, varying in quality and p to suit purchasers.

The only recommendation he now offers for work, is the testimony and long experience of old customers and friends. He is still anxi to please and accommodate those who may on him, and hopes to share so much of the pu patronage as his attention to his business merit.

Putnam, April 29, 1840. 28tf

Glass Manufactory.

THE subscriber having dissolved his conn ion with the former company, has taken GLASS WORKS below town under his management.

WINDOW GLASS, double and single, seizes, and of superior quality will be kept c stantly on hand for sale on reasonable terms The experience of the proprietor, in the ma facture of the article, will insure all made to of the best quality. Call and see.

S. B. JOHNSON
Zanesville, Ohio, May 6, 1840. 37

William Green,

CLOCK AND WATCH REPAIRER, SILVERSMI AND JEWELLER,

CAN be found at his shop on Main str Putnam, a few doors north of J. C. Gu rie's store, where he will do his best to accomm date customers. He keeps on hand an asso ment of spectacles, watch trimmings, pencils, &

As far as we have tried Mr. GREEN as a w repairer he has given us good satisfaction.—E April 22, 1840. 35tf.

Stray Mare.

STRAYED from the subscriber living Hopewell township, Muskingum county, on the 20th of June last, a light SORREL MARE, about 14 or 15 hands high, with a sm blaze in the forehead and one white foot; shoes on when she left. Any person return said mare or giving information to the subscrib where she can be found, will be liberally compe sated for his trouble.

NAAMAN R. GRANT
Hopewell tp., Musk., O., July 8, 1840. 46

Dissolution.

THE partnership heretofore existing betwe the subscribers in the PUTNAM FOUNDR under the firm of HARTLEY & ANDERSO was this day dissolved by mutual consent.

The Putnam Foundry will hereafter be co ducted by J. J. Anderson & Co.

LEVI HARTLEY,
JACOB J. ANDERSON.
Putnam, Jan. 1, 1840. (Jan. 29: 23.)

Notice.

ALL persons indebted to the late firm Hartley & Anderson, are earnestly reques ed to call at the Foundry and make settlemen as the change of owners makes this step abs lutely necessary. We ask the attention of persons concerned, to this notice.

J. J ANDERSON & Co.
Putnam, Jan. 1, 1840. (Jan. 29: 23.)

Dissolution.

THE partnership heretofore existing betwee S. B. Johnson and J. M. Kirkpatrick, u der the firm of S. B. Johnson & Co. was dissol ed by mutual consent, on Thursday 19th inst.

S. B. JOHNSON,
J. M. KIRKPATRICK.
Zanesville, March 31, 1840. 32tf

THE

WESTERN RECORDER

IS PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY.

☞ The office of the Recorder is five an a half miles west of Zanesville.

TERMS.

1. The WESTERN RECORDER will be publish ed weekly, on an imperial sheet, at $2 00 pe annum, in advance: $2 50 at the end of thre months; $3 00 at the end of the year.

2. No discontinuances will be allowed, ex cept at the discretion of the publisher, until a arrearages are paid.

3. To all ministers having regular pastora charges, who do any thing at all for the pape if they will direct us where, a copy shall be sen gratis; any other who forward to us $10 0 for new subscribers, shall have six copies sent t any address he may give.

4. All letters designed for the paper, must b directed to "C. Springer, Meadow Farm, Musk ingum, Ohio."

5. A failure to notify a discontinuance be fore the expiration of the subscription year, wil be considered a new engagement.

CHARACTER.—The pages of the WESTERN RECORDER will be open to discussion on all mo ral questions;—it will give articles on Litera ture, Mechanics, Agriculture,—an abstract o Religious and Political intelligence, and what ever may be interesting and instructive to fam ilies in general. A portion of its columns wil be open to Advertisements and Prices Current —another portion to sustain the interests of th Methodist Protestant Church in the West.— These two latter objects will not likely occup more than one page.

The RECORDER will take a firm stand against Clerical Supremacy.

THE WESTERN RECORDER.

SPRINGER, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.
WO DOLLARS PER ANNUM IN ADVANCE.

Vol. 2.--No. 5. ZANESVILLE, OHIO, WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 23, 1840. Whole No. 57.

JOHN W. WHITE, PRINTER.
$2.50, IN THREE MONTHS; $3, END OF YEAR.

SELECTIONS.

From the Casket for September, 1840.

UIZING IN THE LAST WAR.

e more upon the waters! yet once more!
e waves bound beneath me as a steed nows his rider. Welcome to their roar!"
Childe Harold.

enable the reader to obtain a correct under-ng of this chapter of "Cruizing in the War," it will be necessary to give a synop-one or two preceding ones. The reader, a perusal of the number published in our must have become aware that Lieut. Danan American, and Capt. Henley, a British , and a number of seamen of both nations, prisoners among the pirates. After reading escription of the horrible and merciless ery of the devoted merchantman's crew, nowing the motto among pirates, that men tell no tales," some surprise may be d that they were retained as prisoners, ot having been doomed to the fate meted many of their fellow-creatures who were so unate as to fall into their power. During uize of "The Storm," to which vessel Lt.
rth was attached, an English schooner, une command of Capt. Henley, was captured, ter removing part of the prisoners on board orm, Lieut. D. and a prize crew were placommand of the captured vessel. Dur-violent squall the vessels were separated, ize became an unmanageable wreck, and went to the bottom. Previous to her g, by the united exertions of both crews, this emergency they regarded not each as enemies, but as friends and brothers, all ness of feeling was wiped away, and love h other, and sympathy for each other's suf-s, reigned in its stead, a raft had been has-onstructed, and upon this frail barque they itted themselves to the dangers of the deep, ng in the care and protection of a kind lence. After having been driven by the where e'er they listeth, and after having enced all the miseries consequent upon r and thirst for more than a week, if our ry serves us correctly, during which time of the poor fellows died raving maniacs, at length were discovered by the pirate
, and by a freak of the captain were taken ard and relief administered unto them.
is course of proceeding the captain was ined by a fancied resemblance in Lieut. D. e friend of his earlier and innocent days,
ich the cords of his memory were touched.
brings us to the scenes described in our last, eeds no recapitulation from us,—it is fresh minds of all.

e chapter immediately preceding the one hed this week, and following the one given last, is descriptive of an abortive attack upon the brigantine by the crews of the ican frigate and schooner. It also makes quainted with another character—Hanni-e negro, whom Lieut. D. recognized as an ve of one of his uncles. Hannibal's mas-ving died, he was sold to a sugar planter ng in Louisiana, from whom he made his and finally joined the pirates. He had a sad dog during his day. He was placed el over the room in which Mr. D. and his is were confined. By a few promises of reand the offer of protection from his Louisi-master, Hannibal was induced to undertake ect the escape of the prisoners from the pi-

We will now let the author speak for lf.

J. W. W.

THE ESCAPE.

e appointed time at length came for the rance of old Hannibal, yet moment after nt, and hour after hour passed, and he not. I knew not what to think. Could ve betrayed us to the pirates? The suspi-though opposed to all my knowledge of his cter, grew stronger as the tide rose, and he id not make his appearance. The threat pirates dwelt in my memory. If not res-before morning, we should meet an igno-us death, and that, too, without hope of
e. The blood chilled at my heart when I ved our situation. My companions sat si-around the room, some unquietly gazing e door, as if our executioners were already g; some moodily looking at the patch of discernible through the casement, at which d when conversing with the negro, and all ously watching to catch the slightest sound might betoken the approach of our expect-liverer. But save the sluggish ripple of the s in the lagoon, or the rustle of the heavy e of the mango, we could distinguish no-
.

length it was three o'clock. Hope was t gone. For more than an hour I had stood e the window, cautiously screened from ob-tion from without, though able to discern pproach af any one desirous of addressing the casement, but now, worn out with ning, and hopeless of succor at this late
I was about retiring when I heard a low er outside.

"Hark dere—massa—old Hannibal here at ast," said a well known voice under the window.

So painfully acute was the hearing of my companions that every man started to his feet at once. I beckoned to them to remain quiet, while I answered the negro.

"Is every thing ready? How shall we escape?"

"Must git out of dis window old Hannibal suspec—he hab bring dis rope to slide down wid —will massa make him fast?"

Few words were said until the whole of our company had silently reached the ground, when turning to our guide, I asked him in a whisper, whither we were bound?

"Dis way—massa—" said he, looking up a moment at the now obscured moon, and then leading us through a thick grove of mango trees.
We followed breathlessly, fearful at every step lest we should be detected by the sentinels posted at intervals around the huts, which we could just see, dark and shadowy to the right, while the delicate tracery of the brig was painted fainter than a spider's web, upon the dusky background. But happily there was no alarm.

"Me been waiting for de moon to go behind him cloud all dis time, but him berry much like my old wife I hab long time ago—for he always hab his own way, ha! ha!—but we now 'scape dem dam pirates, and please God me neber hab any ting to do wid dem again."

Our road lay through an almost impenetrable thicket, and though our flesh was often sadly lacerated by the thorns, we pushed on with the consciousness that life was before and death behind us, old Hannibal keeping up his loquacity, and forcing many a loud laugh from us as we got farther and farther from the pirate's haunt. At length we reached the shore, after an hour's hard struggle, during which we had come about three miles. The negro had selected it as the most easy point of embarkation, knowing, moreover, that a barge was always kept secreted there in a thick grove near the shore. With light hearts we sprang in. I took the helm. The men seized the oars, and with a hearty, though involuntary cheer, we shot out into the bay.

Never shall I forget my sensations when we rounded the cape at the foot of the estuary, and in the full, unclouded light of the moon, beheld the frigate lying to in the offing, while the schooner was discernible a short distance on her thither quarter, looking like some fairy barque, half seen in the shadowy light. We were free.
There was the flag of my country, our danger and privations were over, and a few moments more would place us, unfettered, on the deck of the avenging ship. The excitement of my own mind was shared by the men, and the barge shot along beneath their sturdy arms with a velocity rivalling the elevation of their feelings. We were soon under the quarter of the frigate.

"Boat ahoy!" came sailing on the breeze from the frigate.

"Prisoners escaped from the pirates," I shouted back, scarcely knowing what kind of an answer to make.

"Come to under the quarter," answered the voice, and directly afterward, by the tap of the drum, and the rattling of musketry, borne faintly to us across the night, we learned that the mariners were mustered on deck. A few vigorous strokes brought us to the side of the man-of-war.
I was on deck almost as soon as we touched.—
Captain Henley would have followed me, but a marine ordered him back into the boat; and I noticed that several men stood ready with shot to heave into the barge in case of a stratagem.
I stepped forward.

"These precautions are scarcely necessary for us, I hope," I began with a smile, turning to the officer of the deck.

"By Jove," interrupted the person addressed, springing forward and grasping my hand, which he shook till it ached again—"by Jove, is that you, Danforth?"

"I believe so, Jackson," said I, "if I have any knowledge in my own personal identity."

"But where in the deuce did you come from—not from those cursed bucaniers?"

"Yes—but here is a whole crew of escaped prisoners in my barge—let them be taken on board, and I'll tell my tale at leisure—it's a long and strange one."

"It must be, by the tongs of St. Dunstan," answered the lieutenant, as we walked aft together.

I will not detail the surprise of the commodore, or my late officer, Captain Drew, or of the whole ward-room mess at my adventures, since the parting of the two schooners in that fearful squall.

They had news almost as strange, however, to tell me, and it was that peace had been declared.
They were now on a return cruize to the United States, when falling in with the piratical brig, they had determined to follow and ferret out her retreat. The repulse, on the preceding evening, had only inflamed the squadron, and an attack was contemplated, by a much larger force, on the ensuing night.

"You have just returned upon us, and so unexpectedly that you are entitled," said the old commodore, as he, with Captain Drew, the English officer and myself, sat at breakfast in his cabin, "to some repose. However, if you would prefer a brush against these rascals, your post as lieutenant of the Storm, will give you the command of a boat in the contemplated attack. We have not yet assigned the separate commands, and your coming will not interfere with any one," and he looked me full in the face.

I thought a moment of the pirate captain's hospitality to myself personally, but recollecting that I might, perhaps, be of service to him in case we were victorious, and feeling a strange interest to learn something of his history, I determined to go.

"Just as I thought," answered the commodore, when I had signified my choice, "and now, gentlemen, let us visit Mr. Sands—poor fellow, he is sadly wounded," and with these words he led the way to the couch of the sick lieutenant.

During the day, however, the plan of attack was altered, the commodore determined to begin it early in the evening. For this purpose our party was divided into two parts, one destined to pull up the streights, and the other to land at the point where we had embarked, and following the same path by which we had escaped, to surprise the pirates. In order, however, to drive in the look-outs, who were plainly visible reconnoitering from the cape of the estuary, it was determined that the whole party should set out at sunset together, when, after having effected this primary purpose, the two divisions should separate.

The sun was just sinking behind the low, sandy island, when we left the little squadron with three hearty cheers, and pulling rapidly for the outer cape soon saw the light skiff of the look-out scudding away up the bay like a sea-gull on the wing. In a short time it disappeared in the streight, when, lying to on our oars to receive our final orders, and then silently bidding adieu to our comrades, the two boats destined for the surprising party, one of which was under my command, shot rapidly across the estuary.

Evening had closed in before we lost sight of the coast, and the shadowy outline of the little squadron formed a prominent background as, entering a thick grove upon our right, we began our silent march. Each man was ordered to reconnoitre his arms, when we proceeded at a rapid pace.

"Hist," said Lieutenant ——— to me, as we approached, undetected, after an hour's march, the grove of trees into which Hannibal had first plunged on the night before, "hist—was that a man's voice?"

We listened eagerly for a moment, but could distinguish nothing. All was still. The stars glimmered faintly through the thick mango leaves, and by their light I could see the determined faces of our brave fellows, as they stood motionless in the shadowing twilight. A light breeze rustled through the leaves overhead, while the hum of an insect was occasionally heard. Now and then the dull splash of the neighboring surf came borne on the night breeze to the ear. But all else was still. Well was it that the bucan-iers dreamed not of the ambuscade so nigh them, or we might have been sacrificed to their fury before our companions could come up. We had expected them at this very moment, but some unavoidable delay had detained them. Our situation was perilous in the last degree. To advance unassisted to the attack would be certain ruin, while to wait for our comrades was little less dangerous. There was no alternative, however. The order was passed in a whisper down the line, and each man involuntarily feeling his weapon, we paused under that leafy canopy to await the expected attack from the streights.

"Hark!—there they go—but how the deuce can the fighting be in that quarter?" said my superior to me, as a sharp firing was heard upon our right.

"They are carrying the battery," said I, as the conviction flashed upon me, that a desperate stand had been made by a strong party there, who were now contending with our colleagues.

"What shall we do?" whispered the lieutenant to me, "by G—, I shall hardly be able to keep myself in and obey orders, much less the men."

"We must do it though—keep cool here," said
I, to my own crew, "wait till the order is given —keep cool."

The men stood for nearly five minutes impatiently chafing at their restraint, fingering their weapons as if they could scarcely keep themselves from rushing forth from their covert and joining in the melee. At the end of that time, however, the firing ceased below—a few straggling shots only followed—then a cheer rung out lustily from the frigate's boat, and in another instant the defeated pirates were heard rushing pell-mell through the underwood toward us.—
Their path lay directly across our hiding place—a moment's delay would bring them upon us.—
Farther concealment was impossible. We determined to take advantage therefore of our position, and by charging them in time to convert their flight into a rout.

"Ready—to your places men—all ready."

A low muttered "aye, aye, sir," passed growling along our line of sea-dogs; and in another moment a band of about fifty pirates came marching swiftly, but steadily right across our front.
The starlight just betraying their frowning countenances, bloody garments and ghastly weapons, revealed to us the desperate character of their late contest; but if any other evidence had been wanting, it would have been afforded in the presence of large numbers of wounded men, supported, and even carried by their comrades. It was a breathless instant when they emerged into the light, a short distance ahead of us. The leaders rapidly traversed our front. But scarcely had one half of their followers passed when the lieutenant shouted,

"Charge—follow me," and like an avalanche, our little band swept down upon the flanks of the foe. Never was a rout so complete. Pierced in the centre, taken completely by surprise, burdened with their wounded companions, dispirited by their late defeat, the pirates made scarcely any resistance, but broke and fled, our whole party pursuing them at the top of our speed, and cheering lustily as they drove them before them. The slaughter was terrible. After a short time a few of the most desperate attempted to rally; but they might as well have made the endeavor at the cannon's mouth. Our men gave no quarter, as none was asked. Onward we pushed, over fallen timber, through tangled morasses, along the wide arcades of the forest, with an enthusiasm only equalled by the terror of our foes. At length we reached the end of the grove, and burst upon the encampment.

I have forgot to mention that with the exception of a few huts, there were no habitations whatever around. A kind of fort, however, stood near the shore. This would afford a shelter to the pirates, and thither they all rushed madly, our brave fellows pursuing them as rapidly in the rear. I had but time to see, at a short glance, that our boats were already opening their fire on the brigantine. We had, therefore, nothing to contend with but the routed pirates, now reduced to half their number, and those of their companions who might be within the fort.—
These thoughts had just flashed through my mind, when a volley came rattling on our rear from the fort.

"On—on—dash up my brave fellows and enter pell-mell with the scoundrels," I shouted.

And on we went. Already we were mingled with the flying foe. The door was gained. Those within rallied around it, to favor the entrance of their friends. I dashed forward. Taffrail was close behind, and several powerful fellows around.
At this, a huge, brawny, black-haired freebooter sprang out of the entrance and levelled a blunderbuss. Even the bravest shrank aghast. A bold, daring topman before me paused a moment, however, like a tiger, to eye his foe, and then sprang upon the throat of his antagonist. As if by mutual consent all paused to gaze upon the contest. It was fierce and desperate. Now one and now the other had the advantage. The blunderbuss went off in the struggle, leaving its contents in the earth at the feet of the combatants. At length the pirate seemed to prevail, for slowly bearing, with his huge strength, his antagonist to the ground, he had drawn a large knife from his sheath and was about plunging it into the side of the topman, when I sprang forward, and with a blow of my cutlass disabled his arm. At that very instant a pirate plunged his dagger into the topman's bosom. His hold relaxed—his jaw fell back—he rolled over a ghastly spectacle at my feet. The wounded freebooter sprang to his feet, and drew a pistol from his girdle. Both of mine had been already discharged in the melee, and I thought my last minute had come; but just as he had raised it to fire, a flash streamed before my eyes, and my huge antagonist reeled to the earth, shot dead by the pistol of old Taffrail.

"I thought I might want the old barker," coolly said the quarter-master, "give it to 'em, boys—on, press on—press on."

The dead man was an awful spectacle. The blow of my cutlass had completely severed the right arm, and the blood was spouting from the arteries like the jets of a fountain; while a single black spot at the side of his eye, from which oozed the thick gore, told where the bullet had entered. The expression of his face—oh! God
—I think I see it now, so awful, awful, awful.

But it was no time to gaze idly on the fallen.
The shouts of the combatants; the shrieks of the wounded; the clashing of cutlasses; the explosion of fire arm; the curses of the infuriated freebooters, and the sharp rattling of grape shot, heard at fitful intervals, rising over the din from our comrades attacking the brigantine, drove every thing from the mind, except the instinct of self-preservation. It was a desperate conflict.
Now the pirates yielded in the doorway, and now our brave fellows swayed sullenly backward.
All distinction of party was lost. It became a struggle of personal prowess, and the fight was maintained hand to hand, and foot to foot. At length I saw signs of yielding in the enemy.—
All this could not have occupied ten minutes.

"Forward—once more, my brave lads—forward
—huzza for the stars and stripes," I shouted, dashing furiously into the midst of the dense crowd, blocking up the doorway.

"Forward—-forward-—huzza for old Marblehead," roared a sturdy fellow, pressing after me, supported by my brother lieutenant, and the whole body of our men.

The charge was decisive. Clearing every thing before us, we pierced the crowd in two, and after a desperate struggle, rushed into the port pell-mell, with our antagonists. The contest was soon terminated. In less than a quarter of an hour we were in undisturbed possession of the fort, having bound the few remaining pirates who had not been killed or wounded in the melee.

It was not till this moment that I could find time to look at the situation of our comrades on the lagoon, but when I did I saw that they had been some minutes in possession of the brigantine, and that the American ensign was now fluttering from the gaff; while the thick bank of smoke floating lazily down to leeward, along the surface of the sluggish lagoon, shewed how fierce had been the cannonade on the part of the pirates. But nothing could resist successfully the resolution of our men. They had carried her decks amid a storm of grape shot, which sank one of our boats, and mowed down almost a third of these brave fellows. The slaughter had been terrible. Oh! bitterly had their butchery been avenged on the bucaniers. Scarcely a man of them was left alive.

I was listening to these details from a midship-man, about a half an hour after the victory, when a messenger arrived from the brigantine, requesting my immediate presence there, as the leader of the freebooters was dying, and requested to see me. Amid the hurry and excitement of the struggle, I had altogether forgotten this singular individual. But I now hastened to obey his summons. I learned, in answer to my hasty inquiries, that he had been mortally wounded in the side at an early period of the fight, and that the momentary indecision, consequent upon his fall, by affording our men a successful opportunity to board, had really caused the capture of his vessel.

The dying man was lying extended on the deck, his head reposing on a shattered gun carriage, when I mounted the side of the brigantine.
His brow was damp and pallid, and a settled expression of agony was on his features. His eyes were closed. His mouth was rigidly compressed, as if he was struggling to endure his pain without complaint. At times, however, its corners would work convulsively, and a rapid twitch shoot across his countenance. His throat and breast were bare, and until within a moment, a rough, though kind-hearted sailor, had been engaged in bathing them in vinegar. The respiration of the dying man was short and quick, heaving his fine chest up convulsively, and often slightly parting his mouth, despite its rigid compression; while occasionally the fingers of his right hand worked involuntarily, as if the agony of the sufferer was insupportable. As I approached him, he seemed to recognize me, for opening his eyes faintly, he gazed languidly on me. I knew not how to open the conference. I paused irresolutely.

"You have come—at—last," said the dying man, speaking between his teeth, and with difficulty, "the game is—is—up."

As I knew not what to say I sat down by his side, and taking the cup from the sailor, began to bathe the forehead of the dying man.

"I—I wanted—to tell you—that I do not blame you for this attack," said he, "it was done in self-defence—for—my—men—had resolved to ha—ng you. I could not have prevented it—besides—your oath to the service," and here his voice strengthened, "left you no alternative, and as a man of honor you were bound to put down my gang of—of—it must be said—pirates."

"Captain," said I, interrupting him, "I beg you to think no more of this. You are dying—you know your situation as well as I do—have you no preparation to make for that awful event?"

The dying man turned his fast glazing eye upon me, and while a smile of scorn, if scorn that can be called which partook as much of agony as of contempt, he said almost fiercely,

"Talk not to me of preparation—have I lived to die a death like this, with the hope of preparing for it now? No," said he energetically, half rising upon one arm, while, for a moment, all its old fire flashed from his eye—"prate to boys and women of another world. I believe it not—I never believed it; there is no such thing; yet it is a fearful venture," continued he, abstractedly, in a lower tone, faintly attempting to lift his hand to his brow, "and who knows but, after all, my mother may have been right when she took me on her knee and taught me to say my prayers. I have n't remembered them for years. Oh! God, little did she think I should ever die thus.
But it is better," he said, after a momentary pause—"have I not saved my body from ignomi ny? But I am wandering—what was I saying?" he added, abruptly, turning toward me, with an eye, in which delirium was already gleaming.

"I am dying, am I?" he broke out again fiercely, "and they talk to me, me of mercy, when my hand is red with the blood of innocence, and my heart is blacker than that of a fiend. Oh!
God, what will become of me?—where is Charlotte?" he continued in a softer tone. It was evident that his senses wandered. "She was to have been mine, but she deserted the younger for the older son—she has won a barony. Ah! but I was revenged."

We gazed mutely at each other's faces, while by these broken words, the awful revelation of the dying man's guilt was going on. He continued.

"How her face haunts me! I—I, the murderer. Oh! God, keep her away—she is beckoning me—she is dragging me down with her—away, away—I will not, I cannot die," continued he, half starting up again, and gazing wildly around him.

I laid my hand gently on his arm. He looked me full in the face a moment, and a vague consciousness of the truth appeared to struggle with his fevered fancies. If so, it passed like a sun cloud from the troubled firmament. He was once more in the power of the wild fancies playing in his brain. But this time the scene was altered.
He was in the tumult of the battle.

"Ho! there," he shouted, in a voice that thrilled every bosom, "fling out the black flag and bid them defiance. They have outlawed me—I will give them a return. Call all hands—to quarters —to quarters—away there, boarders—follow me," and raising his arm from his side, as if to wave a sword on high, he ejaculated in broken accents, growing fainter and fainter, as life ebbed away,
"on—ward—on—wa—ard—on—on—o—o—n," and with a low, tremulous cadence; a death-agony flitting across his face; a convulsive quivering of his body, his head fell back, his arm dropped rigid at his side, and with all his errors, misfortunes and crimes, the outlawed leader passed to his last account.

Save the broken fragments of his history, revealed in that terrible delirium, I never learned any thing certainly of his life. Years afterwards, however, I was told of some matters in the private history of a noble English family, which gave some corroboration to the wild declaration of the dying man, and led me to suspect that the younger son of Lord ———, an officer in the Royal Navy, who had suddenly disappeared when arrested on the charge of murdering his brother's wife, and whose subsequent career was lost to his family, was no other than the pirate leader. It was said, though of this I never obtained any positive confirmation, that the young officer had been betrothed to a beautiful cousin, before entering upon a cruize in the early part of the French Revolution, and that, upon his return, and finding her married to his wealthier brother, he had murdered her in a fit of mingled jealousy and rage. Whether it was so or not God only knows. Those who might have thrown light upon the subject were either in their graves, or protected from intrusive inquiries by near relationship to the unfortunate parties. But there is a day coming when this, with many another dread secret, shall appear in the eyes of all.

Philadelphia, August 20th, 1840.

COMMUNICATION.

For the Western Recorder.

EARLY RISING.

BY JAMES M. FULTON.

A great many of our choice delights are suffered to escape from our lying a-bed late in the morning. The early breath of the rising day is exhilerating to our spirits and strengthening to our constitutions. Besides these excellent effects, we loose all that is associated with them, of that which is charming and that which is beautiful. By early rising we are enabled to trace nature back to her secret springs, and thus furnish an unexhaustible source of materials for mental rumination, which is as necessary to a perpetuity of the strength and energy of the mind as exercise is to the body.

We rise by day-light, and casting our eyes towards the east we see the golden glow of the morning enlarging and spreading and brightening until "the powerful king of day" bursts in all his light, warmth, animation and glory upon the inhabitants of the earth. With this is associated those cheering sounds and scenes which never fail to give delight. The crowing cock, the drumming of pheasants, the soothing sound of distant or adjacent streams, winding along in slow and silent grandeur, like powerful armies raised in the four quarters of the globe, destined to one common rendezvous, commence and continue their march in the centre of the deep valley or along the base of the mighty mountain, until rushing to a focus they embogue their contents into the still mightier ocean. But there are scenes that, though less grand, are nevertheless more delicate and more beautiful. The leaves of the trees are all over glistening with the dew of the morning. The shrubs of the garden and the grass of the meadow being covered with dew, reflect the golden tints imparted by the rays of the sun, and sparkle with beauty and corruscate with lustre. The sun-flower, that king of garden flowers, stands like a monarch overlooking his subjects, his head proudly bedecked with a garland, and his person gorgeously decorated with wide spread flowers. Again, the pink, the queen, is all for beauty and delicacy that the sun-flower is for majesty and might. Between these two extremes let imagination fill up the space, or the elegant descriptions of a Hervey help or even surpass imagination itself. We cast our eyes abroad to the woodland, gradually sloping from the low ground upward, till it rises into a considerable elevation. (I marked something of the kind in Jackson township, in this county, while amongst what are called the "Balled Hills.")— Tree after tree plants itself along the hill sides until as the hill assumes the form of a cone, upon the very highest peak stands one tree taller from its elevation than all the rest. Who can help moralizing while beholding these exhibitions of nature? Is it not thus in life? Though many strive for the highest elevation, yet but few reach, few come near it, and perhaps one alone of a nation or a country at a time, is permitted, of all the competitors, to reach the very pinnacle of fame. While around on the circles of the hill of fame, like the trees on the rounding knoll, one after another is crowding up to get as near the top as possible. I had like to have forgotten to observe the fact that every body that has travelled around those hills knows, and that is, that the tree alluded to is in itself of very diminutive stature, though overtopping all the other trees on every side of the hill. From its position it derives all its all consequence, all its notoriety. If it stood at the foot of the eminence no one, if he regarded it at all, would pay much attention to it, further than to observe it was a scrub.

Thus it is with many aristocrats and monarchs who derive all their consequence from the circumstance of their birth and position. Were they born at the bottom of the hill they would have remained mere pigmies in society. Had the large fine acorns which produced the trees around the foot or even on the sides of this eminence, been planted in this elevation their pointed tops would have soared toward the heaven and penetrated the clouds. So also there are many amongst the humble poor whose physical powers have been well developed from the laborious manner in which they have been raised, and had they had an opportunity their mental powers might have blessed the world and astonished mankind. While it is well known that the descendants of hereditary monarchies have been marked by the most pitiable imbecility, and often with idiocy itself.

How to Kick a Man with Impunity.—Two gentlemen were walking together in Paris. "I will engage," said the one to the other, "to give the man before us a kicking, and yet he shall not be angry." He did as he had undertaken to do; the man turned round and looked astonished. "I beg your pardon," said the kicker; "I took you for the Duke de la Tremouille." The duke was very handsome; the kicked man very plain; he was gratified by the mistake under which he believed he had suffered, shook himself, smiled, bowed, and went on his way.

Regal Rights Explained.—"Jemmy," said a most facetious father to an inquisitive little fellow, who persisted in calling Victoria's husband King of England—"I tell you Prince Albert is no more King of England than I am master of my own family! We are alike, my son; it is only by right of our wives that one is King and the other master."

'Oh, mother,' said a little child, 'Mr S. does love aunt Lucy—he sits by her, he whispers to her, and he hugs her.' 'Why, Edward, your aunt don't suffer that, does she?' 'Suffer that, yes, mother, she loves it.'

WESTERN RECORDER.

ZANESVILLE:

WEDNESDAY,.....SEPTEMBER 23, 1840.

From Br. Jonathan of Sept. 12.

THE FLORIDA WAR.

As the struggle continues, we verily believe the Indians think that they have been the victors, and that they are now pressing their advantages over the conquered people of the United States. The daring attack upon one of the Florida keys, the news of which was last week received, has even been exceeded by the reckless courage of a party of Indians, about one hundred in number, who have carried the war into Georgia. The people in the southern counties of that State had deserted their fortifications, and ceased their defences; considering their participation in the Indian war to have ceased long ago.

During the last of August, the Indians suddenly and unexpectedly made their appearance in Camden county, murdering a part of Mr. D. Green's family, and burning his house on the Suwanee River. Mr. Green's wife was killed, and his daughter wounded, but not mortally. In assisting such of his family as had escaped the Indian rifles, to get out of the burning house, Mr. Green's leg was broken by a fallen timber. In the same neighborhood eleven houses were burned. Among the scattered murders were those of Joseph Howell's wife and two children, and Absalom Cossey's children—six in number, who resided on one of the prongs of the Missouri River. Whether this latter batch of murders was done by the same party or another, is not known. The principal attack, and the one which is best described in the letters before us, was made on a deserted United States Post, as described in the following letter from Jefferson, dated July 24th:

The Indians are again on a vist to Camden county, murdering and plundering our frontier settlers, burning their dwellings and destroying their crops. On Wednesday evening, Fort Moniac, a deserted United States Post, to which several neighboring families of whites consisting of five men and 25 women and children, had moved for mutual safety was attacked, and four of its occupants killed; namely, a Mrs. Patrick and a Mr. Davis and two of his children. Mr. P. informs me, that the attack was made about dark. At the fire of the first gun, Mrs. P., who was standing by his side, fell dead; a general discharge from the savages was immediately after given, which killed Davis and his two children. All of the whites occupied, and were at the time collected in a central building of the post, and the savages were thus enabled to approach within gun shot, under cover of the outer buildings which they fired in secrecy and safety. It appears that the whites, though apprised of the vicinity of the Indians, were completely surprised, having taken none of those precautionary measures to prevent it, which common prudence would have suggested. It was impossible, says my informant, to state the number of Indians. Twenty were counted by him, marching off in Indian file, from one of the fires at the time of their leaving: but from the number of shots fired and their yells, he thinks their number must have been much larger.

The settlers were falling back, in great consternation, from the frontiers to Centreville, the capital of Camden county; and the Indians of course burned and destroyed their houses, and killed the stock left behind on the plantations.—Volunteer companies were forming, and pursuit was already commenced after the savages; but in all probability before their trials could be taken, the Indians were safely back among the everglades of Florida. We know not whether to be most surprised at the daring of the Indians, or at the supine indifference of the whites, which could tempt them thus to put themselves, unguarded, in the way of such a treacherous and implacable foe.

A Painful Scene.—A painful scene which occurred in Boston on Friday last, is related in the Times of that city, as follows:

An elegant and accomplished woman, the wife or one of most wealthy and respectable merchants in the city, was seen passing up Washington street, about one o'clock, P. M., leading two small and beautiful little girls by the hand, so deeply intoxicated that she reeled from one side of the walk to the other, and could scarcely stand upright. It was a bright and beautiful day, and half the town were abroad. The little girls that the lady held by the hand, were her own children. The poor things looked up at their unfortunate mother, apparently wondering why she acted so strangely, and as she reeled away from them, on either side, clung still tighter to the hand they clasped, and followed her, in her erratic course, as well as they were able. Hundreds of persons stopped and gazed for several minutes, upon the scene, with hearts overflowing with pity.

The Times further states that this lady, and several others, are in the daily habit of meeting at certain places in that city, kept by females, ostensibly for other purposes, where they are supplied with intoxicating liquors, cordials and wines, and that several cases like that mentioned above, have recently occurred, which have carried shame and distress into the bosoms of happy and respectable families.

The Funeral of the Maidens.—Death is not so coldly regarded in the country as in the city. When friends are bereaved of friends, universal sympathy is awakened, and the office of all acquaintances is to offer consolation to the afflicted. If the death has been attended by any unusual circumstances, the celebration of the funeral ceremonies becomes a public duty. The Portland Argus says of the funeral of the five young ladies recently drowned in the harbor of that city:

Yesterday afternoon, the five young ladies who were drowned on Tuesday, were entombed. Two of them from the residence of their parents, and three (Mr. Isley's daughters and Julia Plumer) from the residence of their grand father, Mr. David Pettengill. A very large concourse of people, assembled to witness the melancholy obsequies of the three that were to be interred together. The funeral services were performed by Rev. Dr. Nichols, of the 1st Unitarian Church.—The coffins were conveyed to the tomb on three hearses, (a sight seldom seen in our city) and were followed by carriages containing the relatives, and then by nearly three hundred people in couples, mostly those in the morning of life.—Thousands also lined the streets on either side, and accompanied the procession to the graves; where as many more were waiting to receive it. The spacious burying yard was as it were, covered with spectators. A sadness pervaded the faces of all, at the melancholy sight they had come to witness. As the tomb closed over the mortal remains of those maidens, who, less than forty-eight hours before bid as fair for a long life as any of the thousands who lingered at their tomb, —how forcibly came to mind that oft illustrated truth—Boast not thyself of to-morrow, for ye know not what a day may bring forth.

Destructive Fire in Baltimore.—The Baltimore American of Wednesday says:

Early on Tuesday morning a fire was discovered in the rear of the premises owned and occupied by Mr. John Fitzpatrick as livery stables, on Lombard street, about midway between Frederick street and Centre Market Space; and such was the rapidity with which the flames progressed, that before the firemen could perform any effectual service it was evident that the whole would be destroyed. A number of horses were rescued by the prompt exertions of Mr. Fitzpatrick and his assistants, notwithstanding the flames were crackling by their sides. The destruction of this gentleman's property will not be less probably than $4500, on which there is an insurance in the Georgia Fire and Marine Company to the amount of about $2000.

From these premises the fire extended to a back building attached to the house of Mr. R. Collier on the east, which was destroyed, but on which there was a full insurance. The tavern occupied by Mr. Kennedy, and owned by Mr. Simeon Alden, sustained considerable injury in the rear and roof.

The chair factory of Mr. B. T. Daley on the east was also considerably damaged, and stock to the amount of about $300 destroyed, on which there was no insurance. The building is owned by Mr. Jacob Daley, and is insured.

We regret to learn that a young man named Sparkling, in the employ of Mr. Daley, was considerably injured by being struck with a brick, when the wall of the stable fell.

The opinion that the fire was the work of an incendiary seems universal in the vicinity. It will be remembered that there have been within a short time past two attempts to fire these or immediately adjoining premises, which proved unsuccessful. The incendiary has at length, however, accomplished his purpose.

A Shocking Death.—The Troy Mail relates a shocking death as having recently occured in that city. A young Irish girl, who resided with George Vail, Esq. was heating some alcohol, when it took fire and was thrown upon her clothes, which were at once in flames. Her cries brought members of the family to her relief, but in her agony she resisted their attempts to extinguish the flames, although they, in their humane efforts, were severely burned themselves. The fire, after all, was not wholly extinguished, until a gentleman who was passing, rushed into the house, and with his penknife separated the burning fragments from her body. She was horribly burnt, chest and limbs being crisped with the flames, rendering her sufferings excruciating, almost beyond endurance. She survided only a few hours, although every aid which surgical skill could render was bestowed upon her.

United States Bank.—At the July term of the District Court for the city and county of Philadelphia, suits were entered against the United States Bank on bills and post notes, protested for nonpayment in specie, to the amount of one million eight hundred and fifty-seven thousand one hundred dollars. The Court on that occasion, decided that the bank was bound to pay twelve per cent. interest on its dishonored bills, according to its charter, and not six per cent. according to the act legalizing suspension.—Uupon these judgments the bank has taken out writs of error, and given in each case security to double the amount.

Bears are getting quite impudent in Piscataque county, Me. They walk out of the woods, eat as much corn as they like and then retire satisfied.

The D'Hauteville Case.—This case was again resumed before the Philadelphia Court of Sessions, on Saturday the 5th instant. Wm. R. Reed, Esq., proposed to offer a letter from the parents of respondent to the relator, as evidence. The consul for respondent at first protested against it, and afterwards powerfully objected to its admission. All the counsel engaged in the matter spoke in regard to its admission, and consequently the morning slipped by without any thing else being done. The case was to come up again on Monday.—New York paper.

The D'Hauteville Case.—This case is again before the Philadelphia Court of Sessions. An addition has been presented by the counsel of M. D'Hauteville, to the "amended return" made a few weeks since. Of the character of this paper the Philadelphia Inquirer, says:

"The paper read was a very able and eloquent production, and only equalled by that which it was intended to answer. Perhaps no case ever brought before our courts contained as much matter exceedingly interesting in its character, and eloquent in the form of its presentation as this. It is interesting—not because it gratifies the mere vulgar curiosity of those whose education and standing in society should render them less liable to such disagreeable scenes—but because it conveys a lesson—not to be mistaken— to all who assume the sacred ties of marriage, how necessary it is to yield each other's failings, and to look with a lenient eye on human fallibility. We are still further persuaded from what we have now heard, that the whole difficulty between the husband and wife arose from total incompatibility of temper and feeling.

The D'Hauteville case, says the Philadelphia Gazette of Wednesday, is still continued in the Court of General Sessions. The discussion which has been going on in relation to the introduction of a letter by the relator has resulted in the decision of the Court that it should be admitted. It was this morning read, as also several others of like tenor. The lawyers are likely to make the most of this capital chance for professional 'pickings.'

Latest from Texas.—The schooner Yew Tree, from Galveston, arrived at New Orleans on the 30th ult., bringing the following important intelligence.—The news was brought directly from Austin to Galveston, as is contained in a communication from General Houston, to the Hon. B. Archer, Secretary of war. This letter is dated on Plumb Creek, five miles west of Goods, August 12. The General says:

"I arrived on yesterday evening, and found Capt. Caldwell, encamped on Plumb Creek, with about a 100 men. This morning I was requested to take the command, which I did, and organized them into companies. About 6 o'clock A. M. the spies reported that the Indians were approaching. I crossed the trail about three miles, and passed down on the West side; on arriving near the trail I was joined by Col. Burleson with about 100 men. I immediately formed into two lines, the right commanded by Col. Burleson, and the left commanded by Capt. Caldwell, with a reserve command by Major Hardiman, with Capt. Ward's company.

"On advancing near the Indians they formed for action, with a front of woods on their right, (which they occupied) their lines extending near a quarter of a mile into the prairie. I dismounted my men, and a handsome fire was opened—the Indian Chiefs curveting around in splendid style, on front and flank, finely mounted, and dressed in all the slpendor of Camanche warfare; at this time several Indians fell from their horses, and we had three or four men wounded. Finding that the Indians were disposed to keep at a distance, and that a large body were assembled in the woods, I ordered Col. Burleson, with the right wing, to move around the point of woods, and Capt. Caldwell, with the left wing, to charge into the woods, which movements were executed in gallant style.

"The Indians did not stand the charge, and fled at all points; from that time there was a warm and spirited pursuit for 15 miles; the Indians scattered, mostly abandoning their horses and taking to thickets. Upwards of 40 Indians were killed—two prisoners (a squaw and a child) taken; we have taken upwards of 200 horses and mules, many of them heavily packed with the plunder of Linnville and the lower country. We have lost one killed and seven wounded—one mortally.

"I cannot speak too highly of the Colorado, Guadalupe and Lavacca militia, assembled so hastily together, and without organization. I was assisted by Major Izod, Col. Bell, Capt. Howard, and Captain Neill, as volunteer aids, all of whom rendered essential service. On to-morrow I contemplate embodying as many men as I can, and if we have a sufficient number of good horses, pursue the Indians, in the hopes that we may overtake them before they reach the mountains."

The following is an extract of a letter from an officer on board the U. S. frigate Potomac, dated Rio Janeiro, July 3, 1840.

"You will, I am sure, be glad to hear that of a crew and officers, amounting to 279, about 230 have voluntary stopped their grog? and I have strong hopes that before the cruise expires the number will be increased."

Important from Mexico.—By the New Orleans papers of this morning, we have dates from the city of Mexico to the 28th, bringing a confirmation of the intelligence of the cessation of hostilities in that capital. An armistic had been concluded between the parties, in which the Centralists agree to restore the constitution of 1824. Gen. Urrea, the Federalist commander resigned his commission and left the city, as soon as the armistice was concluded; and it was suspected that he was making for the province of Tamaulipas, to awaken, in that quarter, an insurgent spirit. The President, Bustamente, on the conclusion of hostilities, repaired in procession to the cathedral, where a Te Deum was chanted. Meanwhile, Canalos, an active Federalist General, was by no means idle, but was pressing upon Mexico with a heavy force. Gen. Arista with 1000 cavalry was expected in the city to oppose him.

On the 28th of July, Bustamente issued a proclamation, congratulating the republic on the close of the disturbances, and assigned as the reason that more forcible measures were not taken to put down the rebellion, that they would have caused the loss of too much "Mexican blood." Of course he declares that the Government is all the firmer established for this emeute.—Br Jonathan.

To Young Gentlemen and Young Ladies.—Be not in haste to marry, nor engage your affections where there is no probability of return. It is not what you think of them that determines your choice. but what they think of you. Endeavor, if you would escape the lingering torment, and the gnawing of the worm that never dies, to find out this, and abide the issue. If a woman does not love you of her own accord—that is, from involuntary impressions, nothing you can say or do, or suffer for her sake, can make her, but will set her face the more against you. Study first impressions above all things; for every thing depends upon them, in love especially. Women are armed by nature and education with the power of resisting the importunies of men, and they use this power according to their discretion. They enforce it to the utmost rigour of the law against those whom they do not like, and relax their extreme severity proportionably in favor of those they do like, and who in general care but little about them.

Anecdote of Old Age.—One of the census takers employed in Cincinnati, has found in his progress a man who tells him that his grandmother, who died since last census, at the age of 107, within four or five years of her death had her sight restored in a very remarkable degree, an entire and ample head of hair and a full set of teeth renewed to her, all of which remained to the day of her death. "In this case the gentleman remarks, 'the vis animi must have co-existed to a remarkable degree, for she was able to walk two miles to church until within two weeks of her death. It may be added that up to the day of her death there appeared to be a perceptible failure of the power of life. Her residence was in Greene county. My informant is a man of strict veracity and says that witnesses enough can be found to satisfy the most incredulous of the truth of this story." Thus far he has not found a centenarian."—Lexington Observer.

A Seasonable Paragraph.—To Preserve Corn for Boiling.—That delicacy for the table, "roasting ears," or more properly speaking, green corn, for boiling may be had the year round, (as we are told in the Southern Cultivator,) by pursuing the following method, namely:

Pluck the corn when fit for eating, strip down the shuck so as to remove the silk, and then replace it—pack it away in a barrel, and pour on strong pickle such as used for meat, with a weight to keep it down, and you will have it preserved.—Parboil, and then boil again, and it will be at all times as perfectly fresh and sweet as when taken from the stalk.

Baltimore appears to be infested with incendiaries. An unsuccessful attempt was made on Wednesday night to fire the lumber yard of Messrs. Creamer & Son. We think that there must be some mistake in these stories of incendiarism.—They always prevail when a city is afflicted by an unusual number of fires.—And yet, the arrests and convictions of incendiaries are few and far between.—The crime is one of the blackest dye, and when detected, should be punished with the utmost rigour of the law. A deliberate incendiary must, be a malignant spirit.

Public Land Sales.—To Emigrants.—The Wheeling Gazette states that a sale of 70,000 acres of the fine lands on the Wabash and Erie canal, between Fort Wayne and Logansport, Indiana, is advertised by the Commissioners for October 5th. A part of these lands will be offered at $3, a part $5, and a few choice lots at $7 per acre, as the minimum prices. The terms of payment, one-fourth at the sale; one-fourth in 12 months, and the residue in ten years from sale. The canal is now in operation for 90 miles, and will be completed to Lake Erie during next year.

France has not had so good a tactician for ages on her throne as Louis Phillippe. He knows the French love military glory, and he yields to it. His stroke of policy in aiding to bring home the remains of Napoleon was a political card.

Summary of Elections.—The Journal of Commerce gives as the result of the recent elections held in Indiana, Illinois, Missouri, Louisiana, Alabama, Kentucky, North Carolina and Vermont, a gross Whig majority of twenty-five thousand four hundred and seventy-eight, and a Whig gain since 1836 of eighteen thousand two hundred and sixty-three. In the State Legislatures the Whigs have gained one hundred and fifty-one members; and in the Congressional representation one member. Mr. Van Buren's majority of the popular vote, of the whole country, except South Carolina, was, in 1836, twenty-five thousand four hundred and thirteen.

We hope to Imitate that Example.—A foreign paper states that a short time ago an inhabitant of the village of St. Dunnet, in the Creuse, desired one of his sons, who is seventy-nine years of age, to have the horses put to the plough, and went into a field with it, accompanied by his family. He then held the plough, and when he worked for some time, said, taking off his hat, "My children, let us return thanks to God. Tell your friends that your ancestor, after his hundredth year, ploughed, the field which gives you subsistence. I yesterday reached my hundredth year."

Death of a Veteran.—The Lexington, Ky. Observer of the 27th ult. comes to us in mourning for the death of Capt. John Fowler of that place, who died on the 22d ult. in the 85th year of his age. He was buried on the following Sunday, the military companies, the masonic lodges, the hose and fire companies, and the citizens generally following the body to the grave. Capt. Fowler was a soldier of the revolution, and a member of Congress for a number of years.

The Journeymen house carpenters of St. Louis, have struck for higer wages. They get $1 75, but want $2 a day.

FOREIGN NEWS.

From Bicknell's Reporter.

IMPORTANT FROM FRANCE—INSURRECTION AT BOULOGNE—PANIC IN PARIS.

By the arrival at New York of the packet ship England, we have foreign advices two days later. We are indebted to the New York Commercial for a postscript, and to the New York Sun for an extra, both containing the foreign news. We have also our own regular files of London and Liverpool papers to the latest dates.

New causes of excitement have sprung up in France. Louis Napolen has made another silly and unsuccessful attempt at insurrection. We annex particulars.

The treaty of alliance has been ratified by Prussia. The London Times of the 6th states that this ratification has produced great excitement and several failures in Paris. The funds have fallen considerably. The insurrection in Syria had been checked. The price of corn had risen in Marseilles, in consequence of an apprehended war.

The duty on wheat is reduced to 13s. 8d. per quarter, and on flour to 8s. 2½d. per barrel. There had been but few sales of wheat and flour in bond for the 3 days ending Aug 7. The sales of free wheat that had been made were at a decline of 2 a 3d per 70 pounds, and free flour was 1s. per barrel cheaper. United States flour was quoted 36 a 37s. for sweet and 34 a 35s. for sour.

The Bombay Gazette of June 5, states that 3000 camels, escorted by 80 infantry and 40 horse, under the command of Lieutenant Clarke, of the irregular horse, were returning to Llenree from Kahan, an outpost on the hills, when they were attacked by about 3000 men. Lieutenant Clarke was killed, and most of his detachment cut to pieces.

The Arabs had made rather a savage attack upon Aden, but they were repulsed with much slaughter.

London, August 6, 1840.

[To the Editors of the N. Y. Sun.]

By the fine packet ship England, Capt. Waite, of the old line, which sails from Liverpool tomorrow morning, I send you this letter.

Since the departure of the Royal mail steamer Acadia, on the 4th inst. an over land mail from India has been received, bringing papers to June 22d, but the news is not of much importance.

The threatening aspect of a war between England and France has in a great degree passed away, and the general opinion in England is, that there will be no war; still, France is in a high state of excitement, and the French press and the French Minister, M. Thiers, seem determined to keep up the excitement. The ordinances, which ordered a levy of additional soldiers and sailors, and the commission of five more sail of the line, caused a great excitement in London, and had some effect on the Funds, but the more shrewd and calculating believe it to be only a part of that system of French bravado, which usually ends in mere empty declamation and threats.

M. Thiers is in rather an awkward situation; he has been rash and intemperate in filling the government journals with his own opinions on the affairs of the East, and the conduct of England in signing the treaty; he has insulted Lord Palmerston and excited all France; he has caused a panic in the money market, and now, after a little sober reflection, he finds that he was too hasty in taking such rash steps, and is alarmed at his own position; how he will back out from his present critical situation, time alone can determine.

At two o'clock this day the Morning Post and Times published a second edition of their respective papers, announcing the following intelligence by an "extraordinary express" from Paris:

"Paris—Wednesday.—A perfect panic was occasioned to-day by a report that the ratification of the treaty of alliance by Prussia had been received. Numerous failures had occurred on the Bourse."

Attempted Insurrection in France.

From the third edition of the Morning Post of Thursday.

We have just received by a special courier the following important intelligence of an event which appears to have taken place late last night in France—

Boulogne, Thursday morning, Aug. 6, Seven o'clock.

Last night a steamer arrived off Boulogne, and landed within 3 miles of here about 100 men, generals and colonels, dressed in uniform. Some of them went to the barracks and cried "Vive Louis Napoleon," and distributed money among the mob. This morning one of the generals and a colonel, dressed in grand uniform, were arrested On board the steamer there are some horses. It is reported that Louis Napoleon also landed. All is quiet at present; all the military under arms. The drums are beating to call out the National Guards. No more of the insurgents have been arrested.

"It is said, that Louis Napoleon has also landed.

Boulogne-sur-mer, Aug. 6.

This morning one of those mad attempts at revolution which have characterised the French since the first and ever memorable July, disturbed the inhabitants of this peaceful town from its slumbers. The facts, as I have collected them, are as follows:

The City of Edinburgh steamer, belonging to the Commercial Steam Navigation Company, was hired by Prince Louis Napoleon, ostensibly for an excursion of pleasure along the British coast, for fourteen days. In this he embarked with fifty-six followers, eight horses, and two carriages in the Thames on Wednesday last: this morning, about two o'clock, they reached the coast of France, off Wimiroux, about three miles from Boulonge. The surprise of captain and crew may be imagined to see the whole of his passengers come on deck, not in the peaceful garb of citizens, but en militaire, some as lancers, some as general officers, some as private soldiers, with an oil skin covering on their hats, with the number of 40 painted in front, that being the regiment which at Strasburg, had formerly identified itself so seriously in the cause of Louis Napoleon.

Their object was soon made evident. The ship's boat was lowered, and the whole company landed in three trips.—Before the prince left the vessel, he ordered the captain to cruize off the coast, but to keep close in to Boulogne, and have a boat ready manned to come off for them should they signalise to that effect. Among those landed I have been able to collect the names of General Montholon, Colonel Vaudrey, Colonel Parquin and Colonel Delaborde.

When all had landed they marched into the town by the Place Narvarin, Rue des Carreux, Rue Simoncau, into the Grande Rue, shouting—"Vive l' Empereur," the prince carrying his hat on the point of his sword, and waving it in the air. From the Grande Rue they made their way by the Rue de la Lampe to the Caserne, and roused the small body of troops of the line (I believe only one company) that perform duty here. The soldiers, awakened, and seeing themselves surrounded by general officers, knew not what to make of the scene. They were, however, soon made to comprehend that a revolution was on foot, that Louis Philippe was dethroned, that all France was roused in favor of their emperor, Louis Napoleon, and that they must arm to march forthwith upon Paris. As some were preparing to obey, their captain, who had been awakened by the noise, rushed in among them, and restored their wavering loyalty by shouting, 'Vive le Roi.' High words and a scuffle ensued between him and Prince Louis, when the latter drew a pistol and fired; unfortunately the ball shattered the under jaw of a poor soldier who was endeavoring to separate them, and the whole party, finding that the soldiers were lukewarm, that the officers were faithful, that nothing was to be done there, precipitately quitted the Caserne, and retired to the port.

By this time the town was roused, the authorities were on foot, the drums were beating to arms, and the National Guards pouring out in all directions. The proclamations, one of which I enclose, with a decree, had been lavishly distributed along every street through which they passed, and money given to those who had followed them. These soon declared what the object was, and the necessary directions were given by the Sous-Prefet to attack the disturbers of the peace.—Within two hours, the greater part were either prisoners in the citadel, shot, or dispersed. They made no stand after leaving the Caserne. Some made their way with the Eagle to the Napoleon column, some with the prince hastened to the sea-side, and signalled for a boat from the steamer. Unfortunately for them, too many got into into it, and it upset. The prince with three or four others swam for the steamer, and had a narrow escape of being drowned.

During their absence, however, affairs had changed on board the steamer. M. Pollet, the harbor-master, by order of the mayor, had proceeded with a dozen custom house officers in a boat, and taken possession of it; it was fortunate for the prince they did so, for in returning into the harbor they found him almost exhausted clinging to the buoy, about the eighth of a mile from the shore. He was taken on board, and with him Col. Vaudrey. In escaping from the shore they had narrowly avoided being shot; several balls passed close to the prince, and several of his followers were wounded, and sunk to rise no more. The report is, that six have been found; one poor doctor, who surrendered, was shot by a National Guard.

E RECORDER.

ZANESVILLE.

SDAY, ... SEPTEMBER 23, 1840.

itor is again at his post.

gret that the communication of Br. , and the report of the committee which his matters, came to hand so late that ave to defer them until our next.

racted meeting will be held at the d chapel, commencing on to-morrow (Thursday) at early candle-lighting.— and laymen of adjoining circuits are to attend.

y subscriber living in the north west this State, among the swamps, who or- discontinuance of his paper because of times, complains that the treasury bills rd upon the purse as the musquito bills the hide. But it seems he wishes to ard times off his own shoulders without whom else it may fall.

ev. E. Woodward presented to the late h Conference a claim of 760 dollars for rendered the church. A motion was 'receive his document and lay it on the d that a check be given on the man in n for his pay." A division of the mo- g called for, the first part prevailed, but decided the second out of order.

has been a number of communications l in our absence, which we directed opened until our return; we shall not o get through with them for three or four We did not return until the outer form umber was worked off, and most of the n hand for the inner form, so that we ommence the publication of these com- ons until our next.

llowing note from our old friend, M Cincinnati, came to hand during our

CINCINNATI, SEPT. 8, 1840.

Springer: I wish only to say a few words. Lyon, our eldest daughter, died 26th Ju- had the dropsy, and lay down, went to never awoke.

ar companion in tribulation now lies he house, and will be buried to-morrow tock. She died last night at 11, P. M. in the depth of affliction, uly sympathise with our afflicted brother quence of his bereavements. These are itions we all have to endure sooner or d when surrounded by them need the sympathy of our friends. Mrs. L.'s im- disease was that of Typhus Fever. We y to learn that she died in hope. She y friends in the church, especially among otry, who have so frequently partaken of tality, who will regret to learn her fate.

M. LYON.

te conference commenced its session in ville, Ohio, on the 8th inst. and closed 6th, to meet in Allegheny city, Pa., on Tuesday in Sep. next. It was numerously ll, and its business harmoniously conduct- ver before were our prospects in this Dis- re encouraging. A large number of cit- nong whom were some of the most intel- laily attended the deliberations of the ce. The churches were all open for the y of our ministry. Our Episcopal st brethren treated us kindly, especially her in charge, Br. Babcock, who deport- lf like a gentleman and a christian to- e members of the conference. Br. Stock- n Philadelphia, was present, and preach- st of the churches in the place, and his gave considerable interest to the occa- We will not attempt to give any account ansactions of the conference, as extracts minutes, embracing the substance of its will be forwarded for publication.

PRICES CURRENT.

ADELPHIA, SEPT. 15.—REMARKS— iness of the week along our wharves has heavy, yet there has been a steady and increase, according to the wants of the community. The imports of most arti- foreign produce have found a ready mar- l of Domestic Products, a reference to s under each appropriate head will shew Great Staples are selling at fair average The inland business is as large as ought been expected, and with which we are hear our wholesale dealers are perfectly , both as to the amount and terms of the ICAN FABRICS—The fall demands keep factors doing something with the jobbing at about the old prices. Competition and se have brought our manufactures to the state of perfection in texture and de- hich will always give them a preference in ntry.

O—There has been some export demand West Indies; but at stationary prices. this week 1005 bbls., 575 kegs.

EE—Is steady, and prices firm and look- the stocks generally light. A cargo of yet landed, arrived yesterday; sales in ts of Rio at 11 cents, Laguyra 10¼a10¾c. ags of St. Domingo prime at 10½ per lb.

ER—Sheathing in suits at 25 cts.—Old in demand at 17½ cts. per lb.

—The light receipts and small stocks have a further advance. Sales of No. 1 Mac- t $14 25 a 14 50; No. 2, $11 50; No. 0 per bbl.; loose Codfish, by retail from t 3½ per cwt.

R & MEAL—The market has been rather ed for Flour to-day, previously sales were o some extent at $5 13½, but 5 25 is now emanded by some factors, and some sales at this advance for Pennsylvania fresh In Broad street sales have been made at the Depot, and 5 12½ delivered. Rye at 3 12½. Pennsylvania Corn Meal in bbls. 2 87½, Brandywine in hhds.—sales of 350 hhds. at 15 00; 3 25 per bbl. The receipts of flour are very light, and will not probably more than meet the demand until seeding time is over. Cleared this week, 5000 bbls. and half bbls. flour; 305 hhds., 2400 bbls. Corn Meal; Rye Flour 305 bbls.

IRON—50 tons Pennsylvania pig, at 28 50, not of established established brands; bar Iron, sales confined to the wants of manufacturers at former prices.

LEAD—The stock is very small in first hands —since the late advance the operations have been trifling; 250 pigs at 5½ cash; but the moderate stock on hand is generally held at 5¼ a 5½.

MOLASSES—There is very little in importers' hands of any kind. Sales of Santa Cruiz (Cuba) at 32 cents; Trinidad 27 cents.

PROVISIONS—Bacon and Pork is on the rise; sales of mess pork made at 17 50, now held at 18 00; Hams, 11 a 12 cts. per lb.; Sides 9½ a 10 cts.; Shoulders, 7 a 8 cts. Lard No. 1, 11 a 12 cents.

RICE—Sales at 4½ cents—No stock in market.

SALT—All the receipts of this week were sold to arrive, at about last quotations. The fall trade has caused some activity in the business.

SUGARS—The light stocks have limited operations. Of a cargo of New Orleans, 82 hhds. were taken by the trade at 7 75; 300 bbls. Brazils, common, $8¾; Cuba, boxes $7¾ a 8½ for brown. The stock of all kinds very light.

TEAS—Sales to a moderate extent have been made at late prices, but the public sales in New York of fresh cargoes have drawn the attention of dealers from this market at present.

EXCHANGES—Domestic—Boston, 3¼ a 3½ per cent. prem.; New York, 3¼ a 3½ per cent. prem.; Baltimore, 1 a 1½ per cent. prem.; Richmond, ½ per cent. dis.; North Carolina, 1¼ a 1½ per cent. dis.; Charleston, 1 per cent. prem.; Savannah, 2½ per cent. dis.; Augusta, 4 per cent. dis.; Mobile, 2½ per cent. dis.; New Orleans, 1½ a 1¾ per cent. dis.; Cincinnati, 3¾ a 4¼ per cent. dis.; Louisville, 4 a 4¼ per cent. dis.; Pittsburgh, ½ a ¾ per cent. dis.

CATTLE MARKET—The market is well supplied and prices stationary. Arrived, 746 head fat cattle—nearly all sold at 5 50 a 6 50, and a few at 7 00. Cows and Calves—152 at market, which were sold at 18 00 a 30 00; a few superior bro't 35 00 a 38 00. Hogs—427 head sold at 5 50 a 6 25. Sheep—large supply; sales at 1 50 a 3 25 for prime.—Bicknell.

CONFERENCE.

OHIO CONFERENCE.

Extracts from the Minutes of the twelfth session of the Ohio Annual Conference of the Methodist Protestant Church, held at Cincinnati, commencing August 25 and ending September 1, 1840.

LIST OF MINISTERIAL MEMBERS.

Jonathan Flood,	John Guest,
Adjet M'Guire,	Andrew Williams,*
Nicholas Snethen,	David H. Stephens,
Robert Dobbins,	David Crall,
Benson Goldsbury,	Wm. A. Cartwright,
David Hannah,	Sanford Euans,
Ancel H. Bassett,	John H. Thomas,
Christopher Wamsley,*	Joseph Parke,
Alnon C. Barnes,	Patterson Smith,*
Isaac Hunt,	Reuben M. Dalbey.*

—*Absentees.

DELEGATES.

Twin Creek circuit, Ebenezer Stibbens, Peter Shriner.
Eagle Creek circuit, Wm. M. Barrett, E. Newton.
Rehoboth circuit, J. R. Johnson,
Finley circuit, James Swaney,
Cincinnati station, James Foster, Green G. Moore,
Miami circuit, Luke Fish,
Highland circuit, William Hughey,
Broad Ridge circuit, J. H. Robinson, William H. Sipple,
Xenia circuit, Obed Waln,
Cincinnati circuit, James Stagg,
Washington circuit, David S. Craig,
Springfield station, Wm. Steel,
Union circuit, Joseph Ford,
Conference Steward, William Q. Hodgson.

ADMITTED TO THE ITINERANCY THIS YEAR.

Ministers.	Probationers.
R. T. Boyd, (by certif.)	Jon. M. Flood,
Jacob Varner,	Oliver P. Stephens,
J. M. Young, J. Clemmons, T. Fall — re-adv'd.	Reuben Rose, Joshua Devore, ELECTED TO ORDERS AT THIS CONFERENCE.

Elders.	Deacons.
E. Newton,*	Green G. Moore,*
J. H. Thomas,*	Isaac Atkinson,
E. Stibbens,*	William H. Sipple,*
J. Swaney,*	William Williams,*
J. Clemmons,*	John S. Craig,*
R. O. Linthicum,
Christian Fall,	Ordained at this Conference.*
William Daniel,

NUMBERS IN SOCIETY.

Cincinnati station,	468	Finley "	161
Springfield "	82	Lima "	208
Cincinnati circuit,	124	Miami "	159
Eagle Creek "	261	Twin Creek "	81
Highland "	239	Broad Ridge "	105
Washington "	246	Ruddle's Mills "	60
Xenia "	230
Rehoboth "	150	Total, ...	2911
Union "	346

Appointments for the Itinerant Ministers and Preachers for the ensuing year.

A. H. BASSETT, PRESIDENT.

Cincinnati Station, A. C. Barnes, N. Snethen, Sup. Ast.
Cincinnati Circuit, R. T. Boyd.
Eagle Creek circuit, S. Euans, I. Edwards, C. Wesley, Sup. Ast.
Highland circuit, R. Rose.
Washington circuit, John Clemmons.
Xenia & Rehoboth circuits, R. Dobbins. O. P. Stephens.
Twin Creek circuit, Jon. Flood, R. M. Dalbey, J. H. Thomas, Sup Ast.
Springfield circuit, David Crall,
Union circuit, Is. Hunt,
Miami circuit, J. M. Flood, J. Parke,
Lima circuit, J. M. Young, U. M'Kinnon, Sup. Ast.
Finley circuit, John Guest,
Broad Ridge circuit, Wm. Williams, P. Smith, Sup. Ast.
Ruddle's Mills circuit, J. G. Lamper,
Greenville mission, T. Fall,
Wood county mission, S. W Thornton,
Conference missionary, A. M'Guire,
Left in the hands of the President, D. Hannah, Wm. A. Cartwright, J. Varner, J. Devore, Without an appointment this year, B. Goldsbury, Transferred to the unstationed list, A. Williams, Deceased, James Rose, Transferred to the Indiana Conference, D. H. Stephens and W. W. Paul.

List of unstationed Ministers and Preachers as far as reported to conference.

Cincinnati station, J. Haughton, G. Bailey, Wm. B. Evans, G. G. Moore, M. Robinson, Br. Welch, Cincinnati circuit, J. Ward, J. D. Langdon,
Eagle Creek circuit, Daniel Inskeep, E. Newton, J. Vandament,
Highland circuit, W. Hughey, A. M'Ginnis, Br. Price,
Washington circuit, J. Dalbey, Sr., B. Ryan, A. G. Keys, S. Johnson, J. Atkinson, D. S. Craig, D. Jewet, E. Rowan, R. Jewet, C. Little,
Xenia and Rehoboth circuits, A. Jones and S. Murphy,
Springfield circuit, O. E. Hundley, E. M. Forshee,
Union circuit, Wm. Hamilton, Joshua Inskeep, A. Davis, John Inskeep, V. Thomas, H. Burdick, J. I. Baker,
Finley circuit, James Swaney,
Lima circuit, E. Kearns, A. T. Morrison, A. Basey,
Miami circuit, D. Moore, W. Medearis, J. Stephens, T. Forshee, J. Carey,
Twin Creek circuit, C. Fall, E. Stibbens, S. J. Mummey,
Broad Ridge circuit, J. Robinson, W. Daniel, J Jones, R. O. Linthicum, W. H. Sipple, Br. Strawbridge.

The Stationing Committee were R. Dobbins, A. M'Guire, Wm. Hughey, J. Foster, A. H. Bassett.

The Standing District Committee are A. C. Barnes, R. T. Boyd, Wm. B. Evans, J. Foster, J. Stagg, N. Hubbert.

On motion, Br. Boyd, Resolved, That the thanks of this conference be given to the citizens of Cincinnati, for their hospitality in entertaining the ministers and lay delegates, during its session.

Whereas, The discipline of the M. P. Church authorises and provides for the appointment of a Conference Missionary, to be under the direction of the President, apparently making no provision for his support, Therefore, on motion, Br. Thomas,

Resolved, That the officiary of the circuits, &c., where the Conference Missionary may be called to labor, be respectfully requested, on protracted meeting occasions, &c., to take up a collection, in whole or in part to be appropriated for his use.

On motion, Br. Foster, Resolved, That this conference earnestly request the delegation present, to use every means in their power, that the delegates to the next Annual Conference come prepared to report what each circuit or station will give for the support of the gospel the ensuing year.

On motion, Br. Bassett, Resolved, That it be the duty of all the members of conference at next session, to come prepared to remain in attendance, if possible, until the final adjournment.

Whereas, we are convinced of the importance of a public journal in the West, devoted to the interests of the Methodist Protestant Church, Therefore, on motion, Br. Moore,

Resolved, That we heartily approve of the Western Recorder, and do cheerfully pledge our continued efforts to extend its patronage within the bounds of our labors, and that the Secretary be instructed to forward a copy of this resolution to the editor of said paper.

On motion, Br. Crall, Resolved, That the next session of this conference be opened with a suitable sermon, under the direction of the President.

On motion, Br. Moore, Resolved, That the President be requested to make provision that an appropriate address be delivered during next session, for the benefit of the junior preachers, on the matter and manner of preaching.

The next session of our conference is appointed to be held at Springfield, Clark county, Ohio, commencing on the last Tuesday in August, A. D. 1841.

D. CRALL, Secretary, } Publishing
A. H. BASSETT, } committee.

☞The Editor of the Methodist Protestant will confer upon the Secretary a favor by publishing the above, as though officially communicated direct.

PITTSBURGH CONFERENCE.

The seventh Annual Conference of the Methodist Protestant Church, for the Pittsburgh District commenced its session in Steubenville, Ohio, on Tuesday, the 8th of Sept., 1840, and closed on Wednesday, the 16th.

An introductory sermon was delivered by Br. Geo. Brown, President. The religious condition of the District is as prosperous as at any former period in our history. Considerable revivals of religion have taken place, and many promising converts to Christianity have been added to the church. Much important business was transacted, and great peace and harmony prevailed.

Stationing committee—Z. Ragan, G. Brown, Geo. Hughes, ministers; B. Connell, E. W. Stevens, laymen.

The following are the appointments for the ensuing year:

Z. RAGAN, President.

Pittsburgh station, George Brown,
Allegheny " John Burns, Asa Shinn,
Pittsburgh circuit, John Clarke, A. W. Porter,
Clearfield. Wm. McCullough, one to be supplied,
Union, James Robison, F. A. Davis,
Brownsville, John Clarke, sr.
Middletown, Thos. J. Addis, T. Cullin,
Clarksburgh, R. Simonton, N. Burgess,
Weston, S. Clawson; D. Gibbons, sup. ass't.
Suttonsville, Henry T. Lawson,
Greenbrier, D. Helmick, one to be supplied,
Monongahela, J. Hopwood, J. Fordyce,
Washington, J. B. Shearer,
Ohio, J. Herbert, J. Cowl,
Steubenville station, J. Dalbey; D. B. Dorsey, sup. ass't.
Wellsville, to be supplied,
New Lisbon, John Beatty,
Mahoning circuit, Wm. Turner,
Youngstown, P. Inskeep, F. Stevens,
Grand River, A. K. Earl,
Cleveland, R. Bamford,
Granger, Levi M. Cochran,
Sandusky, John Mercer,
Bucyrus, S. Bloomer,
Wayne, A. W. Russell,
Mt. Vernon, C. Caddy, J. B. Roberts,
Newark, Israel Thrap,
Zanesville, Wm. Munhall, D. Kinney,
Zanesville station, Thomas Fairchild,
Lancaster, Washington Maynard,
Pennsville circuit, D. Y. Ostrom,
Georgetown, George Claney, one to be supplied,
Jackson, Moses Scott,
Pisgah, Cornelius Woodruff,
Cambridge, William Marshall,
Coshocton, Wm. L. Baldwin, L. Linder,
Adamsville, Thomas Foster,
Deersville, J. Browning, M. N. Warren,
Mt. Pleasant, R. Richardson, W. Ross,
Pleasant Hill, Wm. McConnell,
Woodsfield, Geo. Waddle,
Mill Creek, T. Pinnell,
Tyler, W. G. Williams,
Farmington, J. M. Piper,
Ligonier, W. W. Tipton,
Marshall, J. Allen,
Bear Creek Mission, G. Lanham,
Scioto, to be supplied,
Washington, John Guysinger,
Jackson, to be supplied,
Franklin, B. Wescott,
New Garden, C. C. Chapman,
Adrian, to be supplied,
Warsaw, " "
William Reeves, Conference Missionary,
George Hughes, Literary Agent,
C. Springer, editor.

Wm. Armstrong, James Heath, Jacob Myers, superannuated.

John Wilson, John Huntsman, W. B. Dunlevy, left without appointments at their own request.

James E. Wilson, R. Patterson, Sam'l. Hazlett, B. Wilson, to be employed by the President.

J. R. Tallentire, W. Ellis, E. Sturman, transferred to the unstationed list.

The next Annual Conference to be held in Allegheny city, commencing the 1st Tuesday in September, 1841.

The balance of the minutes will be transcribed and forwarded for publication, in a few days.

GEO. HUGHES,
J. DALBEY,
D. B. DORSEY,
Committee for publication.

Steubenville, Ohio, September 18, 1840.

COMMUNICATION.

For the Western Recorder.

PARTY SPIRIT—POLITICAL EXCITEMENT, &C.

Perhaps, at no former period of our political history, has the monster, party spirit, stalked with such triumphant strides through our land, and made such havoc of human life, and social comfort and happiness, as at the present time. Never, perhaps, before, did political excitement rise so high, or so generally prevail throughout the length and breadth of our extended country. Never before, were the blasting influence and effects of the blighting Sirocco—political excitement—so palpably manifest—so sensibly felt—and so extensively experienced, as at this moment. With giant strides, and with a giant's strength does the monster, party spirit, march on with accelerating speed and accumulating power, making desolation, ruin, blasted hopes, departed, remembered happiness, mark his course. Religious communities once prosperous and peaceful, unluckily permitted his intrusions within their sacred precincts, and divisions, enmities and contentions were the consequences. Neighborhoods where charity, peace and friendship prevailed, yielded obedience to the dictates of the monster, and the only consolation remaining to them, is the remembrance of what they were and what they are—of what they lost by political excitement and party spirit.—Man, as the dictation of party spirit, meets his brother man in furious contention, and even, ever and anon, in deadly conflict, and crowd "the valley of their pilgrimage with the monuments of contention and strife."

Political excitement, when prevailing to the extent it now does, is as certainly fatal to human happiness, as is the Bohon Upas to human life. It as certainly produces enmity, where friendship before existed,—jealousy, where unlimited confidence reigned—hatred oftentimes instead of love and affection, and alienation instead of attachment;—these are results consequent upon political excitement, as certainly, as that cause produces effect.

And have the devastations of the monster, party spirit, not been sufficiently extensive and manifest, to induce a united effort to check his operations? Is it not time to lay obstructions in the path of the destroyer of our happiness? Can any argument be necessary to show the evil effects of political excitement upon our social comfort and happiness? I trow not, when it is so well known that but little friendly intercourse exists between the members of the two great political parties of the day.

Each party endeavors to out-do the other, in getting up conventions, and meetings, and having the greatest number to attend them;—and invariably, disputes innumerable, loud and fierce, arise as to the relative or aggregate numbers in attendance. Thus questions of veracity arise, between gentlemen formerly friends, which terminate in making inveterate enemies of them.

These numerous meetings, harangues and conventions, besides their pernicious influence on the people, in taking them from their business and employments, engender strife, and disputation, and a pugnacious spirit, and are only so many bacchanalian revelries and hurrahs, leading to idleness, extravagance and dissipation.—Their demoralizing influence is so palpable, and must be seen by every observing mind, that argument on that point is unnecessary.

The system of "electioneering" and "treating" on the part of candidates for public office, prevailing throughout the country, has an equally pernicious influence, and has tended very much to make us a nation of drunkards. All correct thinking men, of all parties, will make an effort to correct public opinion on this subject, and endeavor to prevent the success of men aspiring to office, who are willing to be successful at the expense of the well-being of their fellowman. Frown, patriots!—frown indignantly upon all the aspirants to office—pseudo patriots, who are willing to corrupt and demoralize the people, in order that they may use them in the accomplishment of their selfish—nefarious—designs. Let the lovers of our country and our race, indignantly reject the claims and pretensions to office, of all such as pay our intelligence, patriotism and integrity no higher compliment than to suppose we can be purchased, once a year, by a draught of some inebriating beverage. Let these demagogues know that we place a higher value upon the right of suffrage—the inestimable right of freemen. Let them know, if they sow to the wind, they must reap the whirlwind.

And what are the causes and remedies of the political excitement of the times?

That it is the interest of designing, selfish demagogues, to have the political elements in agitation, there can be no doubt, and the fact is equally palpable that they contribute not a little to set those elements in motion. Those men have ulterior designs to effect, which they could not so readily accomplish in a calm, when men think, reason and reflect, as they could when the elements are in commotion; hence the necessity of "taking the stump," of "raising an excitement," and riding into office in a storm. These men are more successful in a tornado than in a calm, AND THEY KNOW IT. Guiding the whirlwind and directing the storm, is the delight of demagogues, when their barque rides safely, and if it founders or strands, they have no freight on board. Little care these men of the pernicious consequences to community, in the deterioration of the public morals, by reason of their conduct and practices.

Political excitement is undoubtedly increased by the numerous public harangues of the great and distinguished men of the country, as well as by the temper and character of the periodical political press. The practice of publicly addressing the people on exciting topics, or "stumping it" in common parlance, is not now-a-days, confined to the candidates for a seat in a legislative body, State or National, but even candidates for President and Vice President of the United States, are perambulating the country, haranguing the people on the exciting topics of the day—mounting, for that purpose, stumps, store-boxes, scaffolds and stagings!!!

This practice did not prevail in the better days of our republic. Washington, Jefferson and Madison did not "stump it" for the Presidency; nor did John Adams, Thomas Jefferson and George Clinton, for the Vice Presidency.

As long as this practice prevails, political excitement will continue, and the voice of the sovereign people can only bid it cease. When public opinion no longer tolerates the practice of "stumping," and when the public taste no longer tolerates the violence, ill temper, and personal slang, and abuse, which now characterize the political press of the country—then will we have a return of the halcyon days of the republic.

PATASKALA.

ITEMS.

Flour at Alexandria, D. C., on the 10th, 5 00.

Mosley Clapp has obtained over $900 damages from the town of Orange, from being injured by having been thrown over a steep descent from a wagon, there being no railing at the side of the road. Towns must rail up.

A country brother says—"We will ensure all our readers, who remit us what they owe in a month, to sleep well of nights."

A political scribe says of an opponent—"He is 10,000 miles beneath contempt.

The German population of Cincinnati, Ohio, is estimated at 12,000.

GOING INTO BUSINESS ON BORROWED CAPITAL.—A jour. printer who is rather hard up at present, says he intends to open a grocery, provided any one will lend him a crow bar.

"RAYTHER" IN DEBT.—A person named Owen Moore once left his tradesmen somewhat unceremoniously on which occasion a wag wrote—

"Owen Moore has run away,
Owin' more than he can pay."

Mr. George Kirk, father of Rev. Edward N. Kirk, the popular preacher who was lately here, died at Albany, on Wednesday morning, in the 81st year of his age.—Philadelphia paper.

Gov. McNutt of Mississippi has appointed four editors as Commissioners to examine the banks of that State.

Salem, Mass., has a population of 15,051, and Washington Irving says "she has some of the handsomest girls in the world." We second the motion.

THE MONEY MARKET.—We are able to state that the fall trade, although not great, or even as active as usual in ordinary seasons, continues very tolerable, and may be described as particularly sound—that is to say, the number of merchants from the West, although not large, embraces many of the very best houses—men of unquestioned standing and means, and who moreover, are very liberally provided with cash. Thus, the cash sales of this season are likely to be better than usual, and the general trade wholesome to a very gratifying extent.—Bicknell.

Flour at Wilmington, Del., on the 8th, $5.

At auction on the 8th inst., on Norfolk, twenty shares of stock of the Farmers' Bank of Virginia sold at 98 3-8, and ten shares of Exchange Bank at par, ($100.)

The annual election for members of the Legislature takes place in New Jersey October 13th and 14th. This election is of the more importance because upon the Legislature now to be elected devolve the choice, not only of a Governor, but of a U. S. Senator. Members of Congress and Electors of President, are to be chosen on the 3d and 4th of November.

It is stated that all the towing on the Fifteen Mile Level on the Delaware and Raritan canal between Trenton and Kingston, has been lately done by a locomotive, instead of horses as formerly.

The following paragraph from the New York Planet possesses interest and importance for many:—"Foreign debtors, who have an impression that they can visit this State without being arrested for debt, are informed that fifty or sixty arrests have been made during the last week by process issued out of the courts of the United States."

The bilious fever prevails in the neighborhoood of Snowhill, Md.

Oak wood is selling in Philadelphia at $5 25 a $5 50 per cord. In Baltimore it is selling at $3 75 a $4.

A new bank called the "Farmers' and Millers' Bank," hast just gone into operation at Hagerstown Md.,

Forty-three deaths occurred at Washington, during the month of August.

Several persons were recently murdered by the Indians, in the vicinity of Tallahassee.

The Ledger man says—"We would rather marry a woman who storms like a whirlwind, than a sulky one." Some of the girls think he's free both ways, for he don't try any kind, though he says he "reverences beauty."

A political orator, a little deficient in the upper story, told a friend the other day, "My last speech was so rapturously applauded that for half an hour I could'nt hear myself speak."

The leather and shoe business of Massachusets amounts to more than a million of dollars, annually.

It is said that while the trade went on, not less than 30,000 chests of opium were smoked up by the Chinese annually. The passion, while it increases the use of the poison to a species of insanity, destroys body and mind, and because they won't take it, England is carrying on a devastating war against them.

Forty eight thousand, four hundred and ninety-two passengers have arrived at New York from foreign countries, from the first of January last, to the first instant—which is three hundred and forty more than arrived during the whole of last year, and nearly double the number who arrived in all of 1838.

The New Orleans Bee states that four white abolitionists have been arrested in the parish of Lafayette, La., charged with having instigated the recent revolt of the slaves.

A SPEEDY AND PROFITABLE VOYAGE.—Mr. Hatch informs us that the ship Hector arrived at New Bedford, from the Pacific, last evening, with a cargo of twenty-seven hundred barrels of oil—haing been out only twenty-six months!—The cargo is worth about eighty thousand dollars.—Bost. Tran.

Business Department.

RECEIVED PAY FOR RECORDER.

Of T. Oliver for Joseph Best,	$2 00
Of D. C. Carson, for James Briant, 2,50, David Straley, 1,00, S. Chaffant, 1,00—50 cts. subject to his order,	5 00
Of John Fordyce, for Dan. R. Furtney, 2,00, Samuel Kemble, 2,50, J. Fordyce, 2,00, 2d vol, Abner Fordyce, 2,00, 2d vol.—50 cents subject to his order,	9 00
Of O. White, for William Camp,	2 00
Of J. Barner, for D. Clarke, W. Rogers, S. Shipp and J. Shipp, all 2d vol.	8 00
Of D. H. Stephens, for John Stevens and Thomas McKinney,	4 00
Of A. Edwards, for himself and S. Preston, second volume,	4 00
Of A. Smith, for himself and W. M. Dunnington,	4 00
Of C. A. Canfield, for W. Ross,	2 00
Of J. A. Mills, for G. Johnson,	3 00
Of G. Kesling, for Mrs. H. Miller, Lebanon, Ohio,	1 00
Of D. Y. Ostrom, for J. Mayhew and W. Pettit,	4 00
O. is due us one dollar and fifty cents.

Received of A. H. Bassett, Agent.

From J. Swaney, for E. Anderson,	1st vol.	2 00
" SW Thornton, for S. Thornton,	1st vol.	2 00
" Wm. Williams, for H. Dobson,	1st vol.	2 00
" " " W. Daniel,	2d vol.	2 00
" R. Dobbins, for Is. Constant,	2d vol.	2 00
" " " J. A. Holley,	2d vol.	2 00
" " " Wm. Knox,	2d vol.	2 00
" A. M'Guire, for J. Rockhill,	2d vol.	2 00
" Is. Hunt, for John Inskeep,	1st vol.	2 00
" " " P. Inskeep,	1st vol.	2 00
" " " Margaret Spain,	1st vol.	2 00
" A. H. Bassett, for M. Bennett,	2d vol.	2 00
" " " J. Hobson,	2d vol.	2 00
" " " J. H. Robinson,	2 vol.	2 00
" " " Peter Shriner,	2 vol.	1 00
" " " J. G. Evans,	2d vol.	2 00

LETTERS RECEIVED.

J. M. Fulton, D. C. Carson, Samuel Roberts, John Fordyce, John Beatty, O. White, 1 sub.; R. S. Ford, W. Hager, P. M. Connellsville, Pa., J. Barner, D. H. Stephens, A. Edwards, A. Smith, C. A. Canfield, J. A. Mills, R. Dobbins, J. Dalbey, G. L. Drane, J. H. Thomas, R. Shearer, D. J. Garwood, P. Smith, J. Williams, P. Inskeep, D. Gist, S. Hunt, J. Clarke, D. Y. Ostrom, L. Garrett, N. Snethen, T. Oliver, M. Lyon, G. Kesling, T. H. Stockton, Geo. Hughes & others.

Br. D. H. Stephens sends us one dollar for Br. Stockton, designed, as we understand it, for A. H. Trumbo, Donalsville, Clarke, Ohio, to whom he is requested to send his paper; also, to D. H. Stephens above, to Mt. Tabor, Monroe, Ia., who will act as agent; we can recommend Br. S. as a prompt and efficient agent.

There was some citizen of Steubenville who paid us for the Recorder on Tuesday night at the door of the meeting house, in the presence of Br. Dalbey, whose name we have forgotten, as we had not the convenience at that time of making a memorandum. We should be glad to have his name.

Could Br. Stockton send a specimen number of his paper to Isaac Smucker, Newark, Licking, Ohio?

Br. Carson, we have no David Straley on our list—we have C. Straley; which should be credited?

MISCELLANEOUS.

CAKES AND WINE.—The following interesting passage is an extract from the reply of Mr. Halsted, one of the Representative from New Jersey, to the ladies of that State on the presentation of a Whig banner on the 23d ult. We copy it for the edification of our lady readers solely:

At the present Whig Convention held at Worcester, in the State of Massachusetts, the lady of honest John Davis, the present worthy and able Senator from that State, sent word to the committee of arrangements that she had nine beds, in which she could accommodate nine Whig delegates, or, if they were good natured men, eighteen; and she invited 40 or 50 of the delegates to dine with her. Having made all preparations for her invited guests, she repaired to the Convention to hear the Whig orators.

After the speaking was over, she hurried home for the purpose of receiving her expected company; but she had scarcely reached her house before the sound of martial music saluted her ear. She approached the window, and there she saw drawn up before her door a band of 150 or 200 men, who sent a deputation to her to say that they would do themselves the honor of taking dinner with her. At this unexpected annunciation her woman's heart at first sank within her, but immediately the good old genuine Whig spirit, which is always equal to any emergency, (particularly when it has a dash of Bunker Hill blood in it,) rallied, and by its recuperative energy at once restored her to her wonted composure. And what do you think she said? "Gentlemen," said she, "the string of my door is never pulled in. You are welcome to partake with me my log cabin fare. Walk in, gentlemen."

They did walk in, and she at once set about enlarging her tables and replenishing her board with provisions for this accession of unexpected guests; and with that admirable management which is characteristic of Yankee as well as Jersey matrons, she was soon able to accommodate the whole of her guests, expected and unexpected, for they ate and were filled. How many baskets of fragments there was left, I did not learn; but, I suppose, at least enough to supply all the poor in the neighborhood for a week to come. In her letter to her husband, this Bay State Whig matron says "that the wine and water, beer and hard cider, flowed in streams, and the way that honest John Davis' wife's cake disappeared was a caution."

When Honest John received this letter, describing in those true and graphic colors which a woman's pen alone can give to such a scene, he was sitting in the Senate Chamber and as he read it, "the big round tears coursed one another down his manly cheek;" and as he wiped them away, he said to himself, "What a fool I am to be so affected." After he had perused the letter he handed it to Mr. WEBSTER, saying, "There Webster, you say you take pleasure in reading my wife's letters, read that." Webster took the letter, and, as he read, honest John watched the workings of his noble features, and he soon saw the tear glistening in his large black eye, and then rolling down the bronzed cheek of this intellectual giant, and honest John said to himself, "Well I'm not so great a fool neither." When Webster had finished reading, he drew a long breath, grasped the hand of Honest John, and said, "Sir, it is the finest letter I ever read in my life."

WASHINGTON.—On the 4th day of December, 1783, eight days after the evacuation of the city of N. York, by the British troops under the command of Sir Guy Carleton, an interesting scene took place in that city. It was the parting of our beloved, revered and ever honored Washington, with the officers of his army—that ragged band of patriots, who so short a time before had proclaimed liberty from the cannon's mouth at White Plains, Monmouth and Yorktown. Calling for a glass of wine, he thus addressed them: "With a heart full of love and gratitude, I now take leave of you. I most devoutly wish that your latter days be as prosperous and happy, as your former have been glorious and honorable." Gen. Knox, being nearest turned to him with tears rolling down his cheeks. Washington then grasped his hand, and kissed him. He did the same to every other officer, and also to some private gentlemen who were present. The whole company were in tears. When Washington left the apartment, and passed through the corps of light infantry, on his way to Whitehall, the others followed in mute and mournful procession, till he embarked in his barge for Powle's Hook. As soon as he had got on board, he turned towards his friends, took off his hat, and waved a silent adieu.—What a scene! the bold undaunted battler, for a nation's freedom—the stern and inflexible leader of an armed host, whose gigantic soul neither danger nor death could intimidate—weeping tears, and kissing with woman's weakness, the faithful and oft tried companions of his woes and of his glories.

Women are formed for attachment.—Their gratitude is unimpeachable. Their love is an unceasing fountain of delight to the man who has once attained, and knows how to deserve it. But that very keenness of sensibility, which, if well cultivated would prove the source of your highest enjoyment, may grow to bitterness and wormwood if you fail to attend to it, or abuse it.

A STRONG REBUKE.—The New York Signal says, that one of the crew of the Arabian ship Sultanee, now in New York, a Musselman of course, being on shore, was inveighled by some sailors into a bar room, where he was with difficulty persuaded to take a glass of wine, in direct violation of the precepts of the Koran.—The effects were instantaneous. He returned to the deck of the "Sultanee," dancing about and capering like a madman. His companions soon suspected the cause of this unwonted conduct, and a grave old Musselman, with a beard long and grisly as king Lear's, seizing the delinquent by the turban, exclaimed in Arabic—as translated by the Captain—"Wretch! if you go on at this rate, you will soon be as low and degraded as a Christian."

There are always two parties in the case of bargains—the gainer and the loser. And while the one is delighted with the advantage he has obtained, he thinks nothing of the necessities which may have forced the party to accept the highest offer. But few buyers of bargains, think or care about taking this view of the subject.

An Irishman, having been told that the price of bread had been lowered, exclaimed, "This is the first time I ever rejoiced at the fall of my best friend."

LADIES' DEPARTMENT

THOU CAN'ST NOT FORGET ME.

Thou can'st not forget me, for memory will fling,
Her light o'er oblivion's dark sea:
And wherever thou roamest a something will cling
To thy bosom that whispers of me;
Tho' the cords of thy spirit I now may not sweep,
Of thy touch they'll retain a soft thrill,
Like the low under tone of the mournful voiced deep,
When the wind that hath swept it is still.

The love that is kept in the beauty of trust,
Cannot pass like the foam from the seas,
Or a mark that the finger hath traced in the dust,
When 'tis swept by the breath of the breeze;
They tell me, my love, thou wilt calmly resign,
Yet I know, e'en while listening to them,
Thou wilt sigh for the heart that was linked unto thine,
As a rose-bud is linked on its stem.

Thou can'st not forget me, too long hast thou flung
Thy spirit's soft pinion o'er mine;
Too deep was the promise that round MY lips clung
As they softly responded to THINE:
In the hush of the twilight, besides the blue skies,
My presence will mantle thy soul,
And a feeling of softness will rush to thine eyes,
Too deep for thy manhood's control.

Thou may'st roam to thine own ilse of beauty and fame,
Far, far from the land of the free,
Yet each wind that floats round thee will murmur the name,
That is softer than music to thee:
And when round thee darkly misfortunes shall crowd,
Thou'lt think, like the beautiful form
Of the rain-bow that arches the thick tempest cloud,
My love would have brightened the storm.

Thou can'st not forget me, the passions that dwelt,
In the depths of thy soul could not die,
With the memory of all thou hast murmur'd and felt,
In thy bosom, I will slumbering lie:
Thou may'st turn to another and wish to forget,
But the wish will not bring thee repose,
For ah! thou wilt find that the thorn of regret,
Will be linked with the sweets of the rose.

A PICTURE OF HOME INFLUENCE.

BY MRS. FOLLEN.

"Dear Edward!" said his wife, "you have something on your mind; your brow looks troubled; what is it?"

"Only anxiety about business, Amy. How often have I wished that I had not been bred a merchant! But my mother said that it was a favorite wish of my father, that I should be an accomplished merchant."

"I have sometimes wished so too," answered his wife; "and then again I remembered that the very evils which belong to your profession may be turned into good. He that has it in his power to do wrong with impunity, though he gains by it, yet chooses the right, by which he loses, is the most eloquent preacher of righteousness."

"Very true, Amy; but sometimes this is indeed cutting off the right hand, and plucking out the right eye; and then thinking always about money and bargains has such a contracting influence upon one's mind!"

"But how often, Edward, have I heard you say that no man has such wide and various connexions with the human race, as a well educated, upright, and active merchant. Every part of the world sends him its tribute of knowledge, as well as of riches. He sees men under all aspects; and while he may, with a certain degree of security, indulge in dishonesty, and be the enemy of his fellow men, perhaps no man can be so true, and self-sacrificing, and efficient a philanthropist, as a Christian merchant."

"It is not always so easy as you may imagine, for a merchant to act as remembering that he is under the great Taskmaster's eye."

"Not for all, or some men; but for you, Edward, the difficulty would be to act otherwise. When I think of your profession, Edward, it gives me pleasure to notice that merchants in general, as they acquire property more easily, are most disposed to spend it liberally."

"Yes," said Edward, as his eye kindled at the thought; "the greater proportion of our public benefactors have been merchants. Their money has given eyes to the blind, and ears to the deaf, health to the sick, and peace and comfort to the forsaken; it feeds and instructs the ignorant poor; it sends the glad tidings of salvation to the unbeliever and the penitent; it takes little children in its arms, and blesses them. But all this glorious power supposes wealth, Amy."

"And you, dear Edward, are rich enough to enjoy this highest of all privileges; to be the dispenser of good to others. You have cause only for thankfulness. But the poor, the unsuccesful merchant, who has not the means of educating his children, whose spirits are broken down by failures, and whose temper is soured by what he considers the injustice or dishonesty of others, perhaps, even of his own friends; he is the man who, perhaps, may be excused for finding fault with his profession. My heart aches for him."

Edward started up, and walked hastily backward and forward through the room, as if he had been seized with some sudden and intolerable pain.

"What is the matter?" said his wife. "Are you ill?"

"Oh, nothing; nothing of consequence," said Edward. "I happened to think of something rather unpleasant then. It is late now, I believe, and my head aches."

They retired for the night. The next day, Edward looked depressed and thoughtful, and as if he had passed a sleepless night. Amy was troubled by his silence. This was the first cloud that had rested on her husband's brow since they were married.

"He has," she said to herself, "he has always confided every thing to me. He will not tell me what it is that hangs so heavily upon his spirits. He will never shut me out from his sorrows, any more than his joys."

She thought, when he returned from the counting house for the day, that he looked more free and happy, though he was still silent and thoughtful.

"Come and sit by me, Amy," said Edward to her, when they were alone in the evening.

Amy sat down by her husband.

"Do you not enjoy, Amy, our handsome house, and pictures, and carriage, &c?"

"Surely, Edward; I take great pleasure in these things. But why do you ask?"

"And you love to have money enough to give to those who want it?"

"Why, what a question, Edward! You know I value this power more than I can tell."

"And can you voluntarily resign all these luxuries, Amy?"

"Why should I voluntarily resign them, Edward? What makes you so enigmatical? Tell me what you mean."

"Suppose that all the money which enables us to indulge ourselves in these luxuries, is not truly our own; what would you have me do, Amy?"

"Is it you, Edward, that asks me whether I would be dishonest?"

"But suppose, according to the law of the land, and the customs of society, and the tacit consent of those most interested, this property was secured to you?"

"When I am satisfied," said Amy, "that I can plead the law of the land, the customs of society, and the opinion of the world before the judgment-seat of God, as an excuse for violating that higher law, which He has written on my heart, when I have placed the opinion of the world in the scales against my own self-respect, and found it weightiest, then, Edward, I might hesitate. But why ask me such questions? Why do you not speak plainly?"

"I will, Amy," answered her husband. "When I failed in business before our marriage, I made a settlement with my creditors, by which I paid them seventy-five cents on a dollar. They knew that I paid them all I had, and signed a release from all further claims. Of late, my mind has been troubled about those debts, for such I consider them. A few days since, one of my creditors brought his son to me, a fine fellow, and asked me to take him into my store. He mentioned, in course of conversation, that he had intended to send his son to college, for the boy had a thirst for learning; that he was, in fact, fitted to enter; but that he found he was too poor. 'If,' said the father, 'by denying myself everything but the necessaries of life, I could feed my boy's mind, I would thankfully do it; but I cannot honestly indulge myself even in this luxury.' I felt smitten to the heart. When I failed I owed that man 12,000. I paid him but nine. I now, of course, owe him three, and the interest upon it. That sum would enable him to give his son the advantages which he so much desires. I have been thinking over the whole subject, and studying it fairly. Dymond's Essay would satisfy me, if I were not convinced before of what is right."

"And you will of course do it, Edward, there can be no doubt?"

"I knew you would say so, Amy; but you must think it over calmly. You know upon the subject of property, as well as of other things we have no mine and thine; as we have one interest, and duty, so we have equal rights. I cannot take this step without your full approbation and consent."

"Is that all that has troubled you for these few days past?" said Amy, as she looked into her husband's face, with an expression of joyful relief.

"All," said Edward.

"And why not speak to me at first about it? Why not let me share every trouble as it rises?"

"O, Amy I felt it only on your account. I hated to deprive you of all these luxuries. You know with what delight I see you doing good, real good, with money."

"Never again, Edward, do me the injustice to suppose that I prefer the lower virtue of charity to the higher one of justice."

PERNICIOUS INFLUENCE OF SILENT GRIEF.—A young lady connected with a family of rank, and possessing great accomplishments had formed, unknown to her parents a secret attachment for a young gentleman who often visited the house. When it was discovered he was requested to abandon all notions of the lady, and it was the determination of her relations to refuse all alliance with him. Both parties took it much to heart. The lady suffered from a severe attack of nervous disorder, which terminated in suicidal mania. She endeavored to jump out of the window, and would have done so had she not been most carefully watched. Her symptoms were most distressing. The mind appeared to be weighed to the ground by an accumulation of misery and wretchedness, which she was unabled to shake off: "Oh! could I be but happy!" she would exclaim. "Will no one come to my relief? What can I do?" She would walk about the room occasionally giving utterance to expressions similar to those just quoted. More than once she observed that could she cry, she felt assured her mind would be relieved; but not a tear could she shed. After a fearful struggle for some time, one evening, as she was retiring to rest, she burst into a flood of tears. The effect was most beneficial; from that moment she began to recover. The copious lachrymal secretion had the effect of relieving the cerebral congestion, and in this way the brain was restored to the performance of its healthy functions.—The anatomy of suicide.

YOUTHFUL SORROW.—It is a terrible thing when youth—the time of sport and enjoyment, the period which nature has set apart for acquiring knowledge, and power, and expansion, and for tasting all the multitude of sweet and magnificent things which crowd the creation, in their first freshness and with the zest of novelty—is clouded with storms or drenched with tears. It is not so terrible by any means when the mere ills of fortune afflict us; for they are light things to the buoyancy of youth, and are soon thrown off by the heart which has not learned the foresight of fresh sorrows. The body habituates itself more easily to anything than the mind, and privations twice or thrice endured are privations no longer. But it is a terrible thing, indeed, when—in those warm days of youth when the heart is all affection, the mind longing for thrilling sympathies, the soul eager to love and be loved—the faults, the vices, or the circumstances of others cut us off from those sweet natural ties with which nature, as with a wreath of flowers, has garlanded our early days; when we have either lost and regret, or known but to condemn, the kindred whose veins flew with the same blood as our own, or the parents who gave us being.

AGRICULTURAL.

From the Western Farmer.

APPLICATION OF MANURES.—Judging from the different practices of farmers, and from the conflicting opinions given by them in the various periodical papers published in all parts of the world, there seems to be a great diversity of ideas and usages on the subject and best mode of application of manures. As this is a very important point in good husbandry, time and labor cannot be considered lost in endeavoring to discover as correctly as possible, the most suitable general way of performing with the greatest effect on the land and crops this most essential operation. It appears to us there is often among farmers too strong a disposition to push their favorite theories into excess in description as well as practice. For instance, here is one farmer advocates the burying manure very deep, another considers it is best on the surface only, and a third recommends its being completely covered.

The argument of the first seems to be this, that by spreading on your strongest manure, and putting it in your deepest furrows, a succession of crops will average one third more than your shallow system; that it is a fact well known to practical and scientific farmers, that a grain of wheat, when planted in a mellow soil, will strike its roots three feet downward; the roots of oats eighteen inches; the beet, parsnip and carrot fourteen inches, and clover and the fine grasses much farther: that under the furrow fermentation is gradual, and as the season advances, as the heat increases, so increases the process of decomposition: the gases rise and mingle with the soil, and become the food for plants, when most wanted to ripen the seed or mature the vegetable: that the gases always ascend, that the sun and atmosphere have influence upon the soil, to as great a depth as it freezes in winter, or thaws in the spring, that this influence is upward and not downward, and that manure is seldom buried by the plough, or washed by the rains beyond that influence.

There are now many very eminent farmers in Maryland who advise the second manner of application of manures on the surface of the ground, amongst whom is Mr. Garnett, who says:—

I began penning my cattle late in the spring, and continued it until frost, in pens of the same size, moved at regular intervals of time, and containing the same number of cattle during the whole period. These pens were alternately ploughed, and left unploughed, until the following spring, when all were planted in corn, immediately followed by wheat. The superiority of both crops on all the pens which had remained unploughed for so many months after the cattle had manured them, was just as distinctly marked as if the dividing fences had continued standing; it was too plain to admit even of the slightest doubt. A near neighbor, a young farmer, had made the same experiment on a somewhat different soil, the year before, but with results precisely the same. Similar trials I myself have seen and made by others with dry straw, alternately ploughed in as soon as spread, and left on the surface until the next spring. In every case the last method proved best, as far as the following crop would prove it. The same experiment has been made by myself and others of my acquaintance, with manure from the horse stables and winter farm pens, consisting of much unrotted corn offal; and without a solitary exception, either seen by me, or heard of, the surface application, after the corn was planted, produced most manifestly, the best crop. Upon these numerous, concurrent, and undeniable facts, my opinion has been founded, that it is best to apply manures on the surface of lands; and "I guess," (as brother Jonathan would say,) that it is not likely to change, unless, indeed, I should hear a still greater number, equally well authenticated, on the opposite side; although I must say, that up to the present time I have not heard a solitary one. True it is, that I have read many ingenious, fine spun arguments in opposition to the opinion which I hold in common with numerous other agriculturists, but no proofs whatever have accompanied them, and therefore I must remain an infidel, until they are sustained and corroborated, by such facts as should always be deemed indispensable to establish any practice whatever, in any of the various branches of husbandry. All these results undeniably prove that the surface application was best, although the kinds of manure differed considerably. And what have we in opposition, any facts whatever? Not one; and only the conjecture, that the evaporation from the surface spread manure must carry off the greater and best portion of the food of plants therein contained. But that such evaporation cannot thus act, seems to me to be unquestionably proved by every fact I have mentioned; for, if it did, then the land of summer cow-pens ploughed up as soon as removed, would, in every case, have produced better crops than that of the unploughed, instead of doing it in none. Similar results, too, must have followed in the other cases I have stated, although I have never seen nor heard of their doing it in any.

To be concluded.

William Green,

CLOCK AND WATCH REPAIRER, SILVERSMITH, AND JEWELLER,

CAN be found at his shop on Main street Putnam, a few doors north of J. C. Guthrie's store, where he will do his best to accommodate customers. He keeps on hand an assortment of spectacles, watch trimmings, pencils, &c.

As far as we have tried Mr. GREEN as a watch repairer he has given us good satisfaction.—ED.
April 22, 1840. 35tf.

Stray Mare.

STRAYED from the subscriber living in Hopewell township, Muskingum county, O., on the 20th of June last, a light SORREL MARE, about 14 or 15 hands high, with a small blaze in the forehead and one white foot; no shoes on when she left. Any person returning said mare or giving information to the subcriber where she can be found, will be liberally compensated for his trouble.

NAAMAN R. GRANT.
Hopewell tp., Musk., O., July 8, 1840. 46

Dissolution.

THE partnership heretojore existing between the subscribers in the PUTNAM FOUNDRY, under the firm of HARTLEY & ANDERSON, was this day dissolved by mutual consent.

The Putnam Foundry will hereafter be conducted by J. J. Anderson & Co.

LEVI HARTLEY,
JACOB J. ANDERSON.
Putnam, Jan. 1, 1840. (Jan. 29 : 23.)

Notice.

ALL persons indebted to the late firm of Hartley & Anderson, are earnestly requested to call at the Foundry and make settlement, as the change of owners makes this step absolutely necessary. We ask the attention of all persons concerned, to this notice.

J. J ANDERSON & Co.
Putnam, Jan. 1, 1840. (Jan. 29 : 23.)

Dissolution.

THE partnership heretofore existing between S. B. Johnson and J. M. Kirkpatrick, under the firm of S. B. Johnson & Co. was dissolved by mutual consent, on Thursday 19th inst.

S. B. JOHNSON,
J. M. KIRKPATRICK.
Zanesville, March 31, 1840. 32tf

The New World.

The Largest, Cheapest, Handsomest and most Comprehensive Newspaper in the United States.

EDITED BY
PARK BENJAMIN AND EPES SARGENT.

WITH multiplied resources for rendering the New World more valuable than ever as a compendious newspaper and repository of elegant literature, we enter upon the second volume (folio) on the 24th of October, dressed in a beautiful garb of new type, cast expressly for the purpose. It will therefore be a fitting time to commence new subscriptions, as well as for the renewal of those which may then expire.

During the first year of the existence of the New World, it has acquired a reputation and circulation superior to that of any weekly paper in the country; and has furnished to its subscribers, during that period, (besides all the current news of the day, domestic and foreign) new and valuable works by Talfourd, D'Israeli, Thomas Moore, Miss Mitford, Mrs. Jameson, Charles Dickens, Ainsworth, Knowles, Bulwer, Marryat and others—works, which in London could not be purchased for fifty times the amount of the subscription price of the New World. In addition to works of interest by these eminent authors, it has contained the cream of the periodical literature of the day, as well as original articles from the pens of some of the most popular writers of America, among whom we may mention Miss Sedgwick, Orville Dewey, Professor Longfellow, the author of "Yankee Notions," Simms, Street, &c., &c.

In politics we shall, as hitherto, maintain an armed neutrality. Our columns will as hitherto be unobjectionable in a moral point of view. In criticism we shall, in justice to the public, maintain a perfect independence, even though we incur the vengeance of all the dunces. We shall, in conclusion, earnestly strive to render our sheet not only worthy of the unparalleled favor it has experienced, but of a continually extending circulation. While we continue to furnish with all possible promptitude the most attractive literature of the day, we shall, as our means enlarge, afford that compensation to native authors, which may induce them to make the New World the medium for presenting to the public their best productions. Our excellent London correspondence will be continued, and due attention will be paid to the commercial, agricultural and news departments of our paper.

A QUARTO EDITION

Of sixteen large pages was commenced on the sixth of June last, in order to meet the wishes of a large number of subscribers, by giving them its rich and varied contents in a suitable form for binding. This we have done without having enhanced the price, so that new subscribers, as well as others on the renewal of previous subscriptions, can take their choice between the Quarto and Folio form. ☞But a few sets of the Quarto from No. 1, now remain on hand in the office, and we shall, therefore, not be able long to supply them.

TERMS—Three Dollars a year in advance for either edition; or Five Dollars for two copies. In all cases letters must be free, or post-paid, or they will remain dead in the post-office.

☞All Postmasters who will act for us as our authorized Agents, and may retain 25 per cent. on the subscription price, (Three Dollars) for commissions, if remitted in New York or eastern money; or 50 cents on each, if in notes of other solvent banks, which may be at a discount here.

Letters relative to the editorial department must be addressed to Park Benjamin and Epes Sargent, Editors: those relative to the business department, to J. WINCHESTER, Publisher, No. 30, Ann street, New York.
September 16, 1840. 3t

S. C. Haver,

IN the flourishing town of Putnam has on hand 40 or 50 SADDLES ready for sale, of different qualities, comprising nearly all the varieties in fashion in our Buckeye State.

A good assortment of Bridles and Martingales: Riding and driving Whips: between 100 and 200 Carriage and heavy draft Collars, which will compare and wear with any others made here or elsewhere.

Also, fine York, Dearborn, heavy team and common Farming Harness. A lot of first rate Carriage and Buggy Harness, (brass and silver plated.)

Trunks, vallises, saddle-bags, and double colored wagon whips, varying in quality and price to suit purchasers.

The only recommendation he now offers for his work, is the testimony and long experience of his old customers and friends. He is still anxious to please and accommodate those who may call on him, and hopes to share so much of the public patronage as his attention to his business shall merit.

Putnam, April 29, 1840. 28tf

Glass Manufactory.

THE subscriber having dissolved his connection with the former company, has taken the GLASS WORKS below town under his own management.

WINDOW GLASS, double and single, of all sizes, and of superior quality will be kept constantly on hand for sale on reasonable terms. The experience of the proprietor, in the manufacture of the article, will insure all made to be of the best quality. Call and see.

S. B. JOHNSON.
Zanesville, Ohio, May 6, 1840. 37

O. WHITE, BOOK BINDER, No. 1 Main Street, Zanesville, Ohio.
January 15, 1840. 21tf

THE

WESTERN RECORDER

IS PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY.

☞The office of the Recorder is five and a half miles west of Zanesville.

TERMS.

1. The WESTERN RECORDER will be published weekly, on an imperial sheet, at $2 00 per annum, in advance: $2 50 at the end of three months; $3 00 at the end of the year.

2. No discontinuances will be allowed, except at the discretion of the publisher, until all arrearages are paid.

3. To all ministers having regular pastoral charges, who do any thing at all for the paper if they will direct us where, a copy shall be sent gratis; any other who forward to us $10 for new subscribers, shall have six copies sent to any address he may give.

4. All letters designed for the paper, must be directed to "C. Springer, Meadow Farm, Muskingum, Ohio."

5. A failure to notify a discontinuance before the expiration of the subscription year, will be considered a new engagement.

CHARACTER.—The pages of the WESTERN RECORDER will be open to discussion on all moral questions;—it will give articles on Literature, Mechanics, Agriculture,—an abstract of Religious and Political intelligence, and whatever may be interesting and instructive to families in general. A portion of its columns will be open to Advertisements and Prices Current—another portion to sustain the interests of the Methodist Protestant Church in the West. These two latter objects will not likely occupy more than one page.

The RECORDER will take a firm stand against Clerical Supremacy.

On the 21st, inst. I forwarded my note to

THE WESTERN RECORDER.

S SPRINGER, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.
WO DOLLARS PER ANNUM IN ADVANCE.

Vol. 2.--No. 6. ZANESVILLE, OHIO, WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 30, 1840. Whole No. 58.

JOHN W. WHITE, PRINTER.
$2.50, IN THREE MONTHS; $3, END OF YEAR.

COMMUNICATIONS.

For the Western Recorder.

LAWDER IN REPLY TO REV. S. S. PARR.

IS IT WEAKNESS OR IS IT WICKEDNESS?

Editor: I find in your paper of the 9th at, a communication from the Rev. S. S. in answer to mine of the 12th of August, I wish to notice.

reply regret that it becomes my duty to a formal reply to a man whose memory is acherous as not to enable him to make a ent of facts just and true as they existed. nformed that Elder PARR is in the habit iting many of his sermons. Perhaps if he refer to his manuscript and compare it is communication to the Recorder he would to detect some slight mistakes,—or if he have no manuscript to assist his memory, s some of his friends, whose minds are less d with important matters, may have a erfect recollection of the past, and may, application, be able to prompt him.

er PARR says, that "in the article alluded arke was not quoted at all." True. The age of Dr. Clarke was not quoted. Dr. says, "Baptism is an ordinance of the Testament, whereby a person is immersed sprinkled with water." The author quoted er PARR, says: "Baptism is an ordinance New Testament, whereby a person is ersed in and covered with water." Hence, evident, that this cannot be produced as ning Dr. Clarke's authority upon the mode tism. Yet, as such, it was produced, the affirming that it contained his sentiments that subject. It was of this imposition the public mind—this dishonorable and stian mode of argument that I complained. o then, I would ask, is the author of this age? Whose views does it contain? The gives us to understand that it is the lan- of Butterworth and contains his authority. says he: "Butterworth was quoted." I r, no. It is not the language of Butter- . He says in his Concordance, with which Clarke has had nothing to do," baptism is dinance of the New Testament, instituted sus Christ, whereby a professed believer in is immersed in and covered with water, Now, Sir, it will require a man of more ty than Elder PARR possessess to identify finition given by him as that of Butter- ; nor can he, with all his twisting ingenuity, ile it to his views. For, while Butterworth baptism to be nothing less than the total sion of "a professed believer in Christ," thor quoted by the Elder holds the total sion of "a person" to be baptism opening ay for the administration of this ordinance ant subjects. In this, there is an evident rmity to Pedo-Baptists views, to which rworth had no less hostility than to sprink- pouring as the mode.

, if it be granted that the Elder quoted rworth, what is the consequence? Why, hat this ordinance may be administered to s,—Butterworth a Baptist minister, in nd, being judge. Will this be admitted Elder? Will he permit us to write this as a concession to the truth?

nd even he," says the Elder, "was not to prove immersion the only mode of m." Ah! indeed. And for what conceiv- urpose was he quoted? We were not con- ting whether the subject should be plunged or thrice backwards or forwards, with his o the East or to the West, in the church the river side, in the Muskingum river or Jordan. None of these things were in e. We debated, whether immersion were tial to the validity of the ordinance.— PARR assumed, of course, that immersion only mode, and quoted (he says,) Butter- . If not to prove this, for what purpose, was the quotation introduced?

says the Elder, "only to prove the meaning e words used to express that christian ordi- ." What is the plain inference to be from this assertion? Why, Sir, that the ning of the words used to express that ian ordinance" does not fix the mode in it is to be administered, Elder PARR him- being judge. Write this down—another ssion to the truth. Will Elder PARR's ren agree to this? Will they relinquish arguments drawn from the meaning of the and consent to make out their cause some way? Will Elder PARR himself consent ot from his printed sermon the grand conclu- drawn from the "overwhelming mass of evi- " (of which the above is a part) "that can doubt that to dip, immerse or bathe, e exclusive meanings of the words used in New Testament to express the ordinance of sm?

t will the Elder say, that he did not intend ote Dr. Clarke to prove immersion the only ? Will he say this? Yes, he has said it. the following: "In the article alluded to, Clarke was not quoted at all. The only n why Clarke was mentioned at all, was to the work whence the quotation was taken." nsistency! I could scarcely have believed ad I not seen it over the Elder's own signa-his printed sermon, proposing to prove not mersion the only mode of baptism, but the ning of the words used to express that chris- ordinance," he introduces his quotation these words, "Butterworth as improved by m Clarke." What the Elder may under- d by the word improved is certainly hard for o determine. But we charitably believe the Elder understands that word, and that he used it in the same sense in which Dr. Clarke used "improvements." By this word, Dr. Clarke evidently implied such an alteration in the work as made it accord with his own views.

I will reply to this by giving a statement cts.

Nothing short of this, certainly would have been any "considerable improvement" in the estimation of Clarke. Now, if the Elder has any other definable idea of the words improved and improvement, as used above, we wish him to instruct us. But I think it may be shown that he understood the word "improved," and used it in the sense just given.

Perhaps the Elder might, by an effort, wake up his recollection of the first sermon he delivered in this place on the subject of baptism. If he will but tax his memory, unfaithful as it may be, perhaps he may remember having introduced this same quotation, calling especial attention to it, and saying that he was not quoting Butterworth, but the authority of Dr. Clarke; that Clarke had revised and improved the work, and that he was accountable for all it contained. And farther, (for the purpose of giving the quotation more authority, that it might make the impression more deep and lasting,) that he pronounced a high and merited eulogy upon Dr. Clarke as one of the most profound and learned critics of his age.—And, perhaps, he may farther recollect having labored to establish his hearers in the opinion that the quotation from the Concordance contains the authority of Clarke, by giving a number of garbled quotations upon the same subject, from his Commentary. Now let the Elder make an effort—let him put his memory to pain for a moment, and if it should not bring forth one word of the above, let him ask his friends, and if they can but call up one or two words, it is possible that by the magic law of association, the whole discourse may spring anew, into being, before the mind, so that he may be able to thread out, at least, that part of it in which he gave the authority of Dr. Clarke.

In a short time after, I took occasion to answer, in a public discourse, the Elder's sermon. He was present. I stated that he had quoted Doctor Clarke as authority, and read the quotation as it stands in his published sermon. I remarked that in this the Elder had committed a fraud upon the public—that it was a base imposition. I then read from the true copy of the London edition of Clarke's Butterworth, when the Elder finding himself convicted before the public, rose up and requested the book. It was handed him, he examined it and acknowledged I had read it correctly, and then, addressing himself to the audience, pledged himself if it were not in his book as he quoted it, to renounce his faith in immersion. Stating further, that any gentleman might make the examination. Why did not the Elder here put in his disclaimer to the charge I brought against him of having quoted Dr. Clarke as authority? How easily he might have said that he knew it to be the language of Butterworth and quoted it as such, and not as the language of Clarke. But we heard not a syllable of all this. No, the facts were too fresh in the minds of the public. The traces drawn upon his own memory, if not upon his manuscript, had not faded and become so faint as to justify an assertion of this character, though it would at once, if true, have relieved him in a great degree from censure, and have prevented much of the subsequent debate.

On the Monday morning following, in company of two other gentlemen, I visited the Elder. He presented his book for examination. I compared the title page of his with the title page of my book, and found them in perfect agreement. There was not a dot's variation. I then turned to the definition of baptism, and found it "immersed in and covered with water," just as he had quoted it. I remarked that it was a most extraordinary fact—that I could not account for it—that it was impossible for me to say how two volumes, professing to be of the same edition of the same work, printed by the same persons, at the same time and place, and stereotyped at the same foundry, should have such a difference. He professed to understand it, and went to explain.

He stated that the volume in his possession was stereotyped and printed a true copy of the London edition. And that afterward, the publishers finding that the Pedo-Baptists would not patronize it because it favored baptist views, had the plate altered by removing the words, "and covered," and inserting the words, "or sprinkled." He said, moreover, that sometime after the change was made, a number of Baptist papers came out and complained of the imposition. I told the Elder that I should hold him bound to produce the proof of this. He then appealed to Elder Miles who corroborated his statements. I proposed that if he would produce the London edition of Clarke's Butterworth, we would be content. He said he should not trouble himself about it. I then stated the case thus: here are two books, each professing to be Butterworth's Concordance, revised by Clarke, and to contain his authority upon baptism, upon which subject they contradict each other. Now, said I, the question is, which is the genuine copy. This must be determined by the internal evidence of the book itself. From this evidence, I contended that my book was the genuine work, because it corresponded with the known sentiments and practice of Clarke, during the whole term of his ministerial life. Elder PARR resisted this argument, when I made an appeal to him in the following language: "you knew that Dr. Clarke was not authority for you." He replied, "I did not." So we separated, each contending that his own book contained the language and authority of Dr. Clarke. Now, Sir, if the Elder did not intend to quote Dr. Clarke as authority, why all this debate? Why did he not at once say, that "Clarke was not quoted at all—that Butterworth was quoted,—that the only reason why Clarke was mentioned at all, was to show the work whence the quotation was taken?" But nothing of all this was suggested. No, Sir, it is an after thought—a subsequent device to divert the controversy, and the public mind from the true original question. (See note at bottom.)

Butterworth's Concordance was altered by Clarke, and in the alteration he made it conform to his own views, as he had a right to do.—PARR to the contrary notwithstanding. After this the work became his own. He held himself accountable for and subscribed to all its doctrines. There is nothing in the work for which he held Butterworth alone accountable, except the definitions on page 4, which he tells us expressly are Butterworth's. All else it contains Clarke claims as his own, either originally or by adoption.

The great noise the Elder makes about "a forgery of the grossest character" committed by Clarke and his effort to conceal it, is mere wind intended to raise a dust by which to obscure the vision of his own people. By this means he may gull the ignorance of the unthinking, but I am persuaded there is too much intelligence, even among the Baptists themselves, to be thus imposed upon. I would suggest that it might be for the benefit of the Elder if he would break his old habit of mutilating the writings of other men, especially when he intends to convict them of forgery. In quoting the language of Clarke's preface to the Concordance, while he has given a part of the truth he has been careful to suppress a part. But as the Elder may not be very intimately acquainted with moral science, I would suggest that he examine Paley's Moral Philosophy, book 3, part 1, chap. 15; or Whalend's Moral Science, class 1, of duties to men, chap. 1, page 278.

"The truth is," says the Elder, "Clarke's work has never been altered." Now, Sir, I affirm upon the testimony of the publishers that it has been altered. And certainly we should have as much respect for their word as for that of Eld. PARR. But for what purpose was this alteration made, and for whose accommodation? The publishers say for the Baptists. Hear them:—"It was altered from this and an edition printed for the Baptists to and covered—they stating that such were the views of the original author, Butterworth." The Elder has himself admitted that the work published according to the English edition was altered, and that too, at the instance of the Baptists, to do justice to Butterworth. I answer, no; but to assist the immersion theory. Had our Baptist friends procured the alteration, inserting in the title page, "Butterworth's Concordance, as revised and improved by Dr. Adam Clarke, as revised and improved by Elder A——," there would be no cause of complaint; the thing would be perfectly understood. But then the Elder could no longer quote it as Dr. Clarke's authority, unless upon the old principle of concealing a part of the truth.

Yes, Sir, for the Baptists. "Decidedly incredible," says the Elder. "The idea that a denomination as intelligent and respectable as the Baptist would require a book to be altered for their especial benefit, is too foolish for any intelligent person to believe." That there are many amiable and worthy members of Baptist Churches none can be more ready to admit than the writer. We accredit to many of them great intelligence and respectability. But this cannot certainly be said of all. The most we can do is to apply it to the majority. For, if we affirm it of the whole, then certainly, of every part, ergo, Elder PARR being a part, must be intelligent and respectable.

"We see now what sectarianism will do. It will take a man's work after he is dead and so alter and mutilate it, that it is made to contradict itself and the entire life and practice of its author," and then palm it upon the world as genuine authority.

Now, Sir, I leave this unpleasant subject, hoping that I may never be under the necessity of replying to any thing from the pen of this Elder. From what has been said, your readers can form an opinion of him and of his communication. And, I doubt not, their good sense and general intelligence will suggest the epithet which should be applied to him who asserts what he has no reason to believe to be true.

Yours, respectfully, W. H. LAWDER.

ZANESVILLE, OHIO, SEP. 18, 1840.

We, the undersigned, hereby certify, that the facts stated in the above paragraph, are substantially true, we having been present at Mr. S. S. PARR's house and heard the conversation as it occurred.

A. BARTHOLOMEW,
THOMAS MOOREHEAD.

For the Western Recorder.

To the preachers and members of the Methodist Protestant Church, in the Western Conferences, (formerly the Ohio Annual Conference.)

The plan of the Ohio Annual Conference, held in Cincinnati, August, 1840, respecting the College property and debts, being submitted to you, I take leave to address you, through the medium of our paper, the Western Recorder, in my own individual name. I witnessed the origin, progress and failure of the Cokesbury College in the old church, and was present when Mr. Asbury received the news of its being burned, and heard his remarks upon the occasion. Not many among us, perhaps, can recollect so far back, even among those of my own age. The part I acted in our case, was that of a servant. I had no responsibility. I offer the advice of an old friend, only. Providence still favors us with a name, and an existence among the churches. We have a name to secure, or to loose. Justice has claims upon us, and we can be just. As a whole people, we are not bankrupt. Our failure in the College enterprize is matter of history. Let us furnish another item for history. Let the pen which records our failure, have to record that we were just, as a people; and then, whenever our history shall be read in the whole world, this shall be spoken of to our praise. Every body will say, that such a people deserved better success. Let us secure the good will of our contemporaries and of posterity, by this test of our public equity and public spirit. Nothing could have happened that will have raised our church reputation so high. Our God and father who loveth a cheerful giver, loveth also, cheerful justice.—What a spectacle for men and angels to behold! In this new and comparatively poor church, 2500 men stepping forward, willingly to pay the uttermost farthing! This being done, will it ever again be said, that we are incapable of self-government? Rather, will it not be the general belief, that such men are capable of any thing great and good. Let us deserve public confidence. Our friends, for whom we should do this thing, I am a witness, were generous and confiding to a failing; they not only regarded our word as being as good as our bond, but they intrusted their property, for our use, without our word. Let it never be said, that such confidence remains unrequitted. Let us be just to such noble generosity. Your affectionate brother,

NICHOLAS SNETHEN.

Cincinnati, September 1, 1840.

For the Western Recorder.

AN ADDRESS
TO THE MEMBERS OF THE OHIO CONFERENCE.
BY THE REV. N. SNETHEN.

The substance of a discourse delivered before the Ohio Annual Conference, Cincinnati, August 26, 1840.

Extract from the minutes of the Conference: Resolved, That Brs. Barnes and Foster be a committee to wait on Br. Snethen, to request him to furnish a copy of his discourse to the Conference, to be published in the Western Recorder.

Wherefore, laying aside all malice, and all guile, and hypocrisies, and envies, and all evil speaking; as new born babes desire the sincere milk of the word, that ye may grow thereby: if so be ye have tasted that the Lord is gracious. 1st Peter ii. 1, 2, 3.

The word which is translated again, new, or re, is Anoo, from above, in its primary meaning, born from above, generated, made or produced from above. To as many as received Him to them gave He power to become the sons of God, which were born of God. The same word is rendered become and born. Hence the terms, new birth, born again and regeneration; to be born from above, born of God, and born of the Spirit, and created anew in Christ Jesus, and in the text, new born babes. Newly converted persons are as new born babes; and also a newly formed or primitive church, commenced or formed upon the principle of a new birth, or regeneration, and not of revolution. The re-converted church must desire the sincere milk of the word, that it may grow thereby, in strength and numbers. We consider the new birth or regeneration, as a scripture doctrine, not as an epithet, or a term. As a doctrine, it is not a subject for rhetoric or imagination, but logic or argument. And we propose to make a point of it in opposition to revolution. We speak of the primitive church, meaning that it had a beginning, and was not a mere continuation of the legal or Jewish church. It was necessary for the Jews to be regenerated in order to enter into it. Christianity was not a revolution, or the result of a revolution of the Jewish church. The members of the Jewish church became the sons of God by receiving the Messiah, and by believing in His name. They were born of God—were adopted—to them gave He power to become the sons of God. But in the change from one social state or relation to another, commonly called a revolution, no personal change is implied, no conversion of heart or life. There are two classes or genuses of changes, under which all changes in society may be resolved and classed. All political national changes are commonly classed under the head of revolutions, and there may be religious changes of the same genus or species Among the Jews and the Gentiles there was a change of religion, or a religious change, when they became Christians. Was the change regeneration or revolutionary, in whole or in part? It was wholly regenerative. Old things passed away, and all things became new, and all things were of Christ Jesus. The influence or agency was from above, was spiritual, was of God. They were born of God, and were as new born babes in religious understanding and strength, and like them could not grow without appetite and nourishment, as new born babes desire the sincere milk of the word that ye may grow thereby.

The primitive Christians were babes in Christ. Can babes act the part of revolutionists? No one among us, I trust, is prepared to say that there is no difference in the two cases, but that what the scriptures call "born from above," or born again, is the same as religious revolution. It is the want of reflection, the habit of inattention, which we fear and wish to correct. Most of us, if not all, perhaps, have used the term regeneration, or its synonomas, so often without thinking of the distinction between it and revolution, that we do not consider whether our actions conform to the one or the other, and so in effect forget an important first principle. With the ideas already advanced in our minds, let us quote the memorable text, "except ye be converted and become as little children, ye shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven," (at all, not to say be greatest in it.) These words can have no reference to any revolution, either bloodless or bloody. But bloodless revolutions cannot be contemplated, in view of history, without a liability of bloodshed, considering the interests of unregenerate men it must involve. We regard the new birth, or regeneration, as a religious doctrine peculiar to the New Testament. The Lord Jesus Christ is its author and finisher. His apostles learned it of Him, and carried it into experience and practice. The law recognized Israelites after the flesh. A comparison between Christianity and Mahomedanism is a stronger illustration. We are all taught by history to regard the Prophet of Mecca and his religion, not as born of God, not as new born babes, not as desiring the sincere milk of the word, and growing thereby. Following history for our guide, must we not regard this religion as a revolution, and a bloody one too? This teacher taught his followers to fight. He led them in battle. He depended upon the sword for success, and conquered and retained more conquests than any warrior on record. Mahomedans revolutionize the religion as well as government in every country they conquered. Many examples might also be produced, of ancient and modern dates, of professors of Christianity revolutionizing religion, not regenerating the hearts of the people. The holy wars, so called, or crusades, are conducted upon the revolutionary principle.

Time would fail us to pass in review the Christian denominations, and to analyze the character of their procelyting operations in reference to our classifications. But evidences of the past are not wanting to prove that churches may begin with regeneration and end in revolution. We offer not these ideas to you as new, they may be found in the commentaries and sermons; but we repeat, it seems to us, that the point of distinction has not been kept steadily enough in view, even by learned writers. We wish you not to think or speak of regeneration, but in contrast with revolution, either in its genus or some of its species, or modes.

The history of religion is a history of its changes. How has religion been changed? How is it now changing? By regeneration or by revolution? The law of Moses remained in operation for thirty years after the day of Pentecost, and then the Jewish religious government was overthrown by the Romans, not by the Christians. Christianity was saved or preserved from the Being destroyed by the Jews, by the toleration or protection of the Roman government; and until near the death of Nero, and shortly before the destruction of Jerusalem, the Christians suffered no Roman persecution. To the death of the last of the apostles, we are certain, that all the changes produced by Christianity must be classed under the head of regeneration. When the power of the Jewish government was finally crushed, and the temple destroyed, no revolutionary designs could be charged to the account of the disciplies of Jesus. In the second centutury of the Christian era, the church, perhaps, was no longer regarded as a new born babe.

The extreme age of the apostle John, seems designed by Providence to complete the minority of the church. The fathers in the church are quoted to prove that at that early period baptism began to be regarded as regeneration. And if, indeed, it was so, we can imagine that the distinction between it and revolution, might have began to be overlooked. By degrees the two might have been blended. The religion of the empire is said to have been revolutionized by the Emperor Constantine. Is not this the true point at which certain claims to succession must terminate? Does the reformation, began by Luther or connected with his movements, come within the class of purely regenerative? It seems to us that the changes of those times bear the marks of mixed and complex causes, even when we can separate them from their war associations. No body will look for new births in the bloody battle fields of those perilous times. We deny not the reality any more than the sincerity of many of the professed conversions in newly formed churches, but these are no proof of a distinct and clear conception of the nature and consequences of the two systems. Cases of enthusiasm may be traced to misapprehensions on these points. But in the New Testament the smallest beginnings are assumed. The kingdom of heaven is likened unto the smallest of seeds, which grows to a size sufficient to shelter the fowls of the air in the branches; growth is not denied or concealed; on the contrary, provision is made for it. If the church grows not it must remain a dwarf. It has been born, and it must, by analogy, grow to maturity, not by a miracle, but by the sincere milk of the word. The mind must grow, and the food must be intellectual. Sugar is sweeter than milk, yet not so healthy and nourishing.

Human minds must be converted to the teachableness of little children. Inspired knowledge must be taught and learned. It is not immediately conveyed to the minds of new converts, but is now conveyed through the medium of a written copy. A truth once written remains the same, or is true forever. Teachers who succeed the inspired apostles are not inspired, but gracious teachers. The operations of grace are in their hearts, rather than in their minds. A written revelation is peculiarly suited to the plan or doctrine of regeneration as opposed to revolution. Upon the latter plan no conversion is necessary, save of the will to the new party; ignorance and error are no hinderance to an increase of members, nor their enthusiasm. The new armies of Musselmen conquered the oldest armies in the world, not by their greater knowledge, but their more intense enthusiasm. No combinations of matters selected from all the religious books and traditions in the world could have produced such a book as the New Testament. Its truths are of such a nature, that the mind, without the teachableness of a child cannot receive and understand its principles. The Jews, with the Old Testament, had other books called the traditions of the Elders, and the Gentiles had their mythologies. In these, were to be found authority, or justications, or excuse, for all their errors and vices. These books generated the prejudices of their education. Prejudices were so strong, that nothing short of an entire conviction of the mind to the authority of the new teacher sent from God, could irradicate them. In the early ages of christian history, we find that innumerable attempts were made to enter into the kingdom of heaven without complying with the Saviour's conditions. The mind is like a vessel when full of errors, it must be emptied in order to be filled with the truth. But though these converts had tasted that the Lord is gracious, or is the Christ, and so were like new born babes, yet, in all other respects, they were full grown men, and were subject to all the affections and propensities of adults.—Wherefore laying aside all malice, (Thalnos) bad or evil; and all guile, (Dolos) baif, deception and hypocrisies, and envies, and all evil speakings, desire the sincere milk of the word that ye may grow thereby.

How would the meaning differ, if we should say, all party spirit, or all the spirit of party politics? Are not these prohibited things so many characteristics of political party spirit, in the judgment of politicians themselves? Need we do more than to look over our party newspapers, to see an exemplification of all evil speakings. Do not all political partizans say all the evil they can of each other? Malevolent feelings, and guile, and hypocrisy, and envy, and evil speaking, were, perhaps, never carried to a greater extent than among the ancient Greek republics. The Greeks are indeed the masters and the models of all modern politicians in Europe and America in these arts. How many bloody revolutions, as well as bloodless ones, have been produced by evil speaking? There are party men now, as in other times, who, while they disclaim all resistance, personal and legal, fill the world with the most vehement declamations. There is nothing evil that they do not speak and write against those whom they oppose, and all under the name of moral suasion. No agency is so potent of revolution as evil speaking. Behold! says St. James, how great a matter a little fire kindleth. The tongue is an unruly member, it setteth on fire the course of nature, and is, itself, set on fire of hell. We shall do well to study the whole passage, as an argument against all evil speakings. Can a young preacher belong to a political party, made up of all sorts of men in the world, and of the oldest, most artful and most unscrupulous politicians, and yet be said to lay aside all kinds of evil speaking? How do bad passions, and guile, and hypocrisy, and envy manifest themselves? Not in actions only, but in words also. When Mr. Fletcher was travelling in France for his health, before its revolution, he wrote to his friends in England, "God will surely revolutionize this country," and he added by the means of the popular writers, among whom he enumerated Maribeau, who proved to be among the first great actors in the event. No body was regenerated in that great national and ecclesiastical convulsion. What could the new born babes, in a newly formed church, have done in such times as these, had they belonged, as champions of liberty to the revolutionary party? We know that if they had opposed the evil speaking of their party, the guillotine would soon have silenced them as traitors to the cause. We would not condemn a whole party for the acts of the few, but the few rule the whole party, and the higher party spirit runs, as a general rule, the greater the liability becomes to bring the worst in the party into the lead.

But our intention is not to preach against political parties, but is to point out to you, my young friends, as preachers in a new church, not yet grown beyond the ignorance and feebleness of infancy, the danger of these associations with old political parties. With old churches and old ministers, we have no concern. There are things which they may do, because they are old, that we may not do, because we are young. But I anticipate the danger, that this intended good of mine, may be evil spoken of. My position is identical and exclusive, viz: that young preachers of new and feeble churches, ought to lay aside all party politics, because they ought to conform to the text, in laying aside all therein enumerated. So great has been my fears, that I have never before, formally made this attempt. I make it now, among other reasons, because I conceive that Abolition, so called, has taken on the form of a political party, and that if it continues to exist and operate in that form, it will generate a predominant party spirit and enslave. All that St. Peter exhorts is to lay aside, because we are, relatively, as new born babes. As young men, and young christians, and young preachers, you will find it difficult, if not impossible, to sustain those party relations and cherish child-like desires for the sincere milk of the word. To join a party, without intending to imbibe its spirit, seems to be doubtful ground, even if we could maintain it. But experience proves, that none find so great a difficulty in maintaining it as the young. The inexperience and the susceptibility of youth, need not now, be expaciated upon. We merely caution you against the fond illusion, that we in our social youth, as a church, and you in your personal youth, as young men and young preachers, form exceptions to general rules and general truisms. In old party associations, must we not compensate for our non-age by our zeal? Old and long-practized politicians will not surely feel complacent under the admonitions of such young censors. The gray beards look to the youth to display the spirit of the party. Abolitionism has now become a third political party. Will you, my young friends, confide in it and carry it into the pulpit, because it is untried? The bare question ought to make us all pause. The party have not yet tested their own spirit; it is, therefore, no reflection upon their wisdom, to question their prescience.

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

For the Western Recorder.

MATTERS AND THINGS.

Pittsburgh Circuit.—Next Sabbath will close my labors with this beloved people, for the present conference year, and I close them with a glad and thankful heart. God has given us a peaceful and a prosperous year. My labors did not fully commence on the circuit until November, when I found my charge to consist as follows: Bakerstown, forty-three members; Sharpsburgh, 14; and Braddock's fields, 26—in all, 77 members. At present, it consists as follows: Bakerstown, two classes, containing seventy-six members; Sharpsburgh, three classes, containing one hundred and one members; Braddock's fields, one class of thirty-four members—in all, 211,—giving an increase of 134 members; and though we regard this increase as great cause of thankfulness and encouragement—yet, it is not the greatest. There is a zeal, a brotherly kindness, and a liberality pervading the societies which sweetens their fellowship and gives effect to all their endeavors for success. A church, in more perfect harmony, I never knew. Nor is this procured by hiding the truth, or letting great moral questions alone; but, rather by a candid and conscientious search for the truth, and a disposition to purify their souls, through obeying it unto unfeigned love of the brethren.

Our Camp-Meeting was one of the most orderly and interesting I ever witnessed. Such, also, is the testimony of other brethren who have been in the habit of attending camp-meetings for some twenty or thirty years. The number of conversions I have no means of ascertaining correctly, but have reason to believe that it exceeded fifty.

A Preacher Fallen.—Mr. Hervey, an Englishman, of talents rather above mediocracy, by profession, connected with the Primitive Methodist society, had settled near Sharpsburgh—preached regularly and had formed a society, and secured much of public confidence, and was generally regarded as a very pious and useful man. But, alas! like many other professors, he would not see the evil and danger of tasting, touching, handling or meddling with intoxicating drinks. Sometime early in the summer, the citizens were amazed at seeing him ride into the village too drunk to sit steady on his horse. From this on, he gave himself up to bacchanalian revelry, and a few weeks since, came to a violent death in a most desperate drunken frolic.

Suicide.—A few mornings past, as I was returning from market, I met the intelligence, that a man had just hung himself in a piece of woods a little back from my house. I hastened to the spot, and to my utter consternation, found a young man with whom I had been acquainted from his boyhood, of very amiable disposition and correct habits, rather given to melancholy, hanging by a rope which he evidently had fixed with his own hands round his neck and to the bending branch of a sapling—a frightful corpse! How much the doctrine of unconditional election and reprobation had to do in producing the state of mind which led to this fatal result, I cannot say; but that it had something to do, circumstances forbid my doubting.

The Discussion.—I wish it to be distinctly understood, that I have not, neither do I intend to enter into a controversy of words, on the subject of slavery. The positions I have assumed in the articles which have been assailed, are as follow:

1. Slavery, as it exists in this country, is a great moral evil, injurious in its influence, both upon the civil and religious interests of the country.

2. The traffic and use of intoxicating liquors is of similar character.

3. These evils ought to be abolished without delay.

4. It is not only the right, but the imperious duty of the church, her ministers and her periodicals, to exert all their influence for the abolition of these evils.

If the editor or any of the correspondents of Recorder, should see proper to controvert these positions, and bring any thing like reason or argument to bear against them, we will be ready to sustain them. But, I feel time to be too precious, to be wasted in contest with phantoms and bug-bears, brought up to fright me from them, or excite the impression, with careless observers, that they are surrounded with dangers. Permit me, however, to say, Mr. Editor, that upon your suggestion, made in the remarks appended to my note of explanation, a few numbers back, I have reflected a little, in view of discovering what you consider so manifestly uncourteous, in the note referred to, but I cannot see it, except as created by your strange definition of the term "endorse," which I had used to convey the idea, that the editor had strengthened the value or credit of J. Smith's essays, by referring to them as meeting with the general approbation of his readers; but the editor defines the term to mean dictation.* Well, we went quarrel about it,—people can look at the article and then at their dictionaries.

J. Clarke.

Allegheny, Pa, September 4, 1840.

*We have defined, it seems by the above, the term "endorse," to "mean dictation." What a sagacious critic our friend must! He is capable of perceiving a man's meaning, it seems, far better than he is himself, and to determine that he meant a different thing from what he expressed. But as great a dunder-pate as he seems to suppose we are, grant us the privilege of interpretation that our enlightened friend has taken, to make out this critic, and we could prove, from scripture, that there is no God, or any nonsense that might be called for to get one out of a scrape.—Editor.

RELIGIOUS INTELLIGENCE.

Ohio, Sept. 6, 1840.

Dear Brother: On the Friday before the second Sunday in August commenced a protracted meeting at Pt. William, Ohio, in which we were favored with the outpouring of the spirit of God. The meeting continued until the next Tuesday following with very great excitement; many were enabled to rejoice in the Lord. Thro' the course of the meeting seventeen gave us their hand to go with us to the heavenly kingdom. You recollect reporting a letter in the Recorder written to you by me of a meeting we held in the same place last Christmas, which lasted several days, in which thirty-five or six joined the church. The whole number taken in at that place thro' the year is between fifty and sixty.

On the Friday before the third Sunday in August commenced our camp-meeting, six miles west of Wilmington, as advertised in the Recorder. This was one of the best meetings I ever enjoyed in the M. P. Church. The power of the Lord was among the people, and convictions and conversions were many. Baptism was administered to a number, both adults and children, at which time there was a class of the best kind of feelings. The meeting broke up the following Tuesday. Through the course of the meeting forty-five joined the church. I understand that several have since joined, which amounts to more than fifty as the fruits of that meeting.

Robt. Dobbins.

We have just received a long letter from Patterson Smith, supernumary assistant of Broadridge circuit, Kentucky, dated August 25, 1840. Why this communication was so long reaching us we know not; to publish the whole of it at this distance from its date might seem some out of place, yet we cannot let pass without noticing some of the interesting particulars it contains. It states that Br. Williams, their preacher, is pious and useful; that though young and inexperienced in the work of the ministry, his reservedness, and promptness to his ministerial duties, has rendered him a more useful laborer among them, than ever so eminent talents without these could possibly do.

He states that the circuit is improving in piety and increasing in membership, a number having been converted and added thereto this year. One instance he relates is particularly encouraging to all who are similarly situated. A brother McDaniel, near Grant's Lick, had been a Protestant Methodist for nine years; standing alone, with no society of his own church nearer than 12 miles. But he remained firm to his principles, trusting in God. But during the past year a protracted meeting was held at his house, when a church was formed of sixteen members, all from the world but four. Who, after this, need dispair?

FOREIGN NEWS.

FROM ENGLAND.

FIFTEEN DAYS LATER.

The British Queen steamship has reached New York in 14 day's passsage. We have London dates to 1st Sept. Her news is important. The Herald sends us extras. There is now (it is thought) every prospect of a war. Mehemet Ali has positively refused to comply with the request of the four powers. All over France and England there is the utmost activity in preparing the army and navy for war.

All the nations of Europe are preparing for war on a grand scale. And yet they all say, "it is all for peace."

The defeat of the Russians in Circassia is fully confirmed.

M. Thiers has been accused for stock-jobbing on a grand scale. The examination of Louis Napoleon still continues.—He is to be tried in October. Louis Phillippe had a narrow escape from shipwreck on the 16th ult., in going from the Chateau d'Eu to Boulonge. The captain of the English steamer Edinburgh Castle is released. The downfall of the Thier's ministry is expected. The Spanish ministry has fallen. There has been an insurrection in Spain. Leopold has left England to try to pacify Louis Phillippe. The French army and navy has been largely increased. The French papers are more mild. The English people and goverment keep cool.

Mr. and Mrs. Wood, the singers, and an Italian opera troupe, have arrived.—Lord Falkland, Governor General of Nova Scotia, is in the Britannia steamship at Halifax. The British Queen was seized for smuggling, while in England, but was not prevented from departing, it appears. Wallack was well received at the Haymarket. The Independence arrived out in 22 days. The Money Market was heavy, with a downward tendency. Consols left off on the evening of the 31st, at 91—this a small decline. Cotton in Liverpool is selling largely at moderate but steady prices; say for Upland from 5d. to 6d.; for Mobile from 5d. to 6d.; and for New Orleans 5d. to 7d. Manufacturers are very dull. The harvest will be very good.

M. Guizot, the French Ambassador, has returned to London.

The Pacha of Egypt has 180,000 men in the field, ready to fight. A Russian army is moving down to attack his son Ibrahim Pacha, in the plains of Syria.

A malignant yellow fever has broken out at Sierra Leone.

Another iron steamboat has been launched for the Niger expedition.

It is said that Ibrahim Pacha is about to march on Constantinople.

There was a dreadful storm at Liverpool and along the coast, on the 16th ult. Much damage was done.

There have been several distructive fires in London, which have destroyed property to an immense amount.

The fires in London were at Hore's wharf, near London Docks; at Feas' Saw mills, Bermondsey; at Eastmount Terrace, Whitechapel; and at Winsland's in Bloomsbury.

Southey, the poet, has gone crazy.

Admiral Lalande has been recalled from the command of the French fleet in Egypt. The English and Austrian fleets, with ten Russian sail of the line, have sailed to make a demonstration against the Egyptian fleet at Alexandria.

ARRIVAL OF THE BRITANNIA.

STILL LATER FROM EUROPE.

By the Britannia at Boston, we have London dates to the 3d, and Liverpool to the 4th of September. The news is not particularly important, but nevertheless possesses considerable interest. As it is only three days later, we have condensed it as much as possible.

The Britannia left Liverpool at 3 o'clk on the afternoon of the 4th, and was about thirteen days and a half from dock to dock. She lost five hours "below," and eleven at Halifax, which would make her actual running time but twelve days and a half. This is the second time the Britannia has beaten the Queen, so saith the Boston Daily Times, Extra. She, the Britannia, brought out over 20,000 letters, 86 passengers to Halifax, and 76 to Boston.

The Great Western arrived at Bristol on the night of the 31st, in thirteen days and a half from New York.

THE WAR QUESTION.

An extra from the Boston Atlas states that a letter from Constantinople, dated the 12th of August, contains interesting details of the preparations made to chastise the Pacha. On the 11th ultimo a note signed by the ministers of the four powers was delivered to the Porte in answer to a circular which had been addressed to them by the Minister of Foreign Affairs, requesting to be informed of the nature of the ulterior measures in contemplation should Mehemet Ali refuse to comply with the conditions imposed upon him by the convention of London. This reply is said to have been extremely vague and unsatisfactory,—a circumstance to be referred, no doubt, to the fact, that the coercing powers have hardly made up their minds as to the precise nature of the plan of operations it may be necessary to adopt. At all events, it seems clear from this interchange of notes, that no definite course has been preconcerted between the Porte and his allies for the punishment of its refractory vassal. The Turks, however, appear to be preparing for a formidable campaign. Forty vessels have been chartered to convey troops and stores to the Syrian coast, and two ships of war and three frigates, the miserable remnant of Turkish fleet, are proceeding under the direction of a British officer, Capt. Walker, with a regiment of infantry and ten mounted guns on board, in the same direction, and have been joined by two Austrian frigates, under the command of Admiral Bandiera. It is also rumoured that 12 Russian ships of the line are expected in the Mediterranean from Cronstadt. Until they arrive the whole brunt of the armed intervention will devolve, so far as its maritime operations are concerned, on the British fleet, now reinforced to 15 sail of the line, and on its way to Alexandria. The French fleet, under Admiral Hugon, is still anchored in two divisions at Vouria.

The military preparations are progressing on a less extended scale, 35,000 Turkish troops are concentrated at Constantinople, and 15,000 Austrian troops, are, it is said, on their way to the coast of Syria. The Porte is forming a camp at Kutayeh, and 8000 troops have recently proceeded from Europe, to reinforce the arms of Asia Minor. The choice of this rendezvous would lead to the inference, that defensive operations in the event of Ibrahim's advance are alone contemplated.

The Journal des Debats takes for granted that the blockade will be purely a military one, and will not in any respect interfere with the operations of commerce, its chief object being to prevent the Pacha from communicating by sea with his army in Syria. The army of Ibrahim may, however, be subsisted in Syria without convoys from Alexandria, and were not such the case the route of the desert would be still open for the conveyance to Syria of supplies. As, however, it is on the coast of Syria that Ibrahim chiefly depends, a blockade could hardly fail to prove efficient.

Notwithstanding the "loud alarums" from the East, a London paper of the 3d instant states that the Continental news received that day, was considered favorable, and that the apprehensions of a war with France were every where subsiding, and people were beginning to wonder how they could have been led into such a delusion; and that the more the subject of the treaty of the 15th of July was discussed, the more evident it became that France had no just cause of complaint, in which opinion her statesmen themselves would soon coincide.

The Paris papers of the 1st instant contains nothing new on the subject of the Eastern questions. No intelligence had reached Paris since the receipt of the telegraphic despatch from Toulon, announcing the rejection by the Pacha of the proposals for the four powers. With the exception of the ultra-radical and legitimist journals, the Parisian press is almost unanimous in calculating upon a pacific arrangement of the differences which have arisen between France and the four European powers.

TUMULTS IN FRANCE.

The Journal des Debats speaks of tumultuous groups which formed on the Boulevard St Martin, on Tuesday night, uttering revolutionary cries and seeking to procure and hoist a red flag. These symptoms followed a large dinner of French Reformers, nearly 5000, which took place in a field belonging to M. Gay, at Chatillon, near Paris. After dinner they marched in procession into Paris, and in several places got into collision with the police.

A DREADFUL SCENE IN SPAIN.

Horrible accounts are given of the execution of one hundred and twenty Carlist and a woman! who formed part of the Carlist garrison of fort del Collado. The butchery began on the 12th of August, with the shooting of twenty-seven officers and the woman, who had served as a spy.

But the great attraction of this horrible scene was the famous Peinado, who to the last moment preserved a coolness and resolution almost superhuman. When the priest approached to prepare him for death he repulsed him with rudeness, saying, "It was such as you that have caused the loss of Spain. Had there been no monks, I should not have been here." He then called for a bottle of brandy, and having drunk two or three glasses, he threw the rest at the heads of those around him, saying 'Now am ready. Let them take care they do not miss me.'—He delivered to a soldier the handerchief he held, and knelt down, uttering to the last moment maledictions against those who were the cause of his death. One of his brothers, and about sixty more soldiers, were shot the day after. The Diaro of Valencia announces that Don Marios Bancos, Governor of the fort, three corporals and twenty-seven soldiers, part of the prisoners taken at Collado, were shot at Chelva on the 13th and 14th inst.

The only plea in justification of this cruelty is that the prisoners had been guilty of great excesses, plundering travellers, and acting more like brigands than soldiers.

Latest from China.—Canton papers to the 26th April had been received in England by the Aden steamer. They state:

"In the event of the English attacking the Bogue, it is the intention of Governor Lin to destroy the suburbs of Canton, and to put the city itself in a state of defence. The city is surrounded by a wall, turretted at irregular intervals, of ten feet high, without ditches or any other works of defence. The population of the suburbs is larger than that within the walls, and compromises the most industrious portion of the inhabitants. All its foreign trade, manufactories, and warehouses, are in the suburbs, circumstances which render this rumour extremely improbable. The notion of sacrificing one-half the population of Canton, on the supposition that by so doing, the safety of the other half may be secured, is even too absurd for the barbarous obstinacy of the Chinese. An edict has been issued by the Canton authorities, forbidding any ship to enter the Bogue whose papers have not been previously forwarded to Canton, and a formal permission to proceed to Whampoa received in return. The dreaded commissioners had not arrived. Private advices by the Aden state that the consignees of American vessels remaining in port had given notice that they would bring no more tea for transhipment. They designed to complete the cargoes of their vessels, and then wind up their affairs. Freights varied from £6 to £8, and even £9 per ton. The exports of tea from China to Great Britain during the year, have been estimated at from 25 to 30 millions of pounds."

As much tea had been brought to Macao as would load all the ships waiting for cargoes.

DOMESTIC NEWS.

Mail Robber Arrested.—On the night of the 10th of March last the mail going east from this place was robbed about three miles out and the canvass bag containing the South-western letter-packages taken out of the large leathern bag.—Charles Bostwick, the driver, stated that as he was ascending the hill at the deep cut a man caught the leaders and turned them in against the bank while another man sprung upon the box by his side and held a pistol leveled at his breast—that the first man left the leaders and opened the coach and dragged out the mail—that these men were black or had their faces blacked—that so soon as they left him he whipped up his team and galloped to Vienna. The day after at Bostwick's instance one of the citizens of the village was arrested but on examination discharged. From then until within a few days since the robbery has remained a mystery. On Tuesday, Bostwick, who has continued to drive the same team, was arrested on the charge of having himself committed the robbery. After examination, he was committed to jail. It appeared in the investigation before the magistrate, that Bostwick was regarded by the Stage company as the robber. A strict watch was therefore kept upon all his movements.

Two or three months ago, the Post Office Department put J. C. Fricker, an old eastern acquaintance and fellow driver of Bostwick, on the trail. Fricker employed himself as guard on the stage line between this place and Zanesville, and was thrown into close connection with Bostwick. He managed his business with such tact, as to gain the unlimited confidence of the driver, who acknowledged the robbery, and disclosed the manner of it. A partnership between Bostwick and Fricker, was the result of this confidence—the capital to be furnished by the former out of mail spoils, while the latter being unsuspected was to be the active partner in getting the stolen money in circulation—the proceeds of the speculation to be equally divided.

Of this contract, and all of the stages of the negotiation, Fricker kept his employer advised. Things had so matured, that on Tuesday night Fricker received the whole sum stolen from the mail, (more than eighteen thousand dollars,) at the house where Bostwick lived in Vienna. This he brought to Springfield, and when Bostwick came into the village, he was arrested as above stated.—Republic.

Twenty Thousand Dollars Stolen.—A New Orleans paper of the 1st ult. says a package of 20,000 dollars of the Union Bank of Louisiana, entrusted by Mr. Dumartrait, cashier of the Branch at St. Martinsville, to the captain of the Arabian, to be delivered to the branch at Plaquemine, was stolen from the boat during her passage between the two places.

Manumission.—The Baltimore American relates another case in which the laws of Maryland have operated to the release of a slave. A negro girl, the property of Mr. Shaw, of Virginia, petitioned the court for her freedom, showing cause of action, in that her master had brought her from the State of Virginia, and offered her for sale in the city of Baltimore. The counsel for the petitioner succeeded in establishing their proof, and his Honor, Judge Brice, gave a decision, accompanied with some remarks in point, in favor thereof.

To those who haul Fanny's Carriage.—Mr. Walsh, (former editor of the National Gazette) in a letter to the National Intelligencer, says the Parisians amuse themselves with "the republican idolatry to Fanny Elssler;" the legitimist writers continue to treat the New York accounts of her triumphs as evidence of republican folly; and most of the others have it that the Americans, like the British, are sorry judges of dancing, whatever may be their ecstacies and prodigalities.

If they had said, that a portion of Americans as well as British make great fools of themselves, in regard to almost all foreigners, and especially towards all dancers and singers in particular—the French critics would certainly have told an additional truth, however much it might go to our own mortification.

The Business World.—Money is still abundant in New York, and business is somewhat more active. The Express says,—"The Banks are as destitute of good paper to discount as ever, which is not to be wondered at when unquestionable paper is discounted in the street at 5 and 6 per cent. per annum. As capitalists cannot employ their means in discounting notes there is more seeking for investments in western stocks, and Ohio, Indiana, and Illinois are improving—Corporation bonds are also better. Exchanges on the South are becoming more favorable, and on Foreign countries decidedly so. As the cotton crops come in, it is anticipated that the rates on New Orleans particularly will approximate very near to par. As the trade of the city revives and as the season advances it may be reasonably expected that there will be more demand for money."—Bicknell.

The Norris Engines.—A High Compliment to American Genius.—We alluded a short time since to an order received by Mr. Norris, of this city, from the Emperor of Russia, for 200 engines. We have since letters from the highest authority in Europe, which speak of the engines manufactured by our townsman in the warmest terms of praise. One from Captain Moorsom, the engineer of the Birmingham and Gloucester Company, contains the following unequivocal testimony: "I wish the ability of Mr. Norris were better appreciated than it appears to be at present. The Philadelphia engine, although of ordinary size, is doing more work by 40 per cent. than any engine of any size, that I have been able to hear of in England." This is indeed high praise, and while it cannot but afford much gratification to Mr. Norris, is also calculated to stir with feelings of just pride, every American bosom. The U. S. Government should, in our view, demonstrate in some formal and complimentary manner, the appreciation in which they hold the genius, skill and ingenuity of an individual, who has contributed so greatly to the elevation of the American name.—Bicknell.

MORE ROGUES.

Extract of a letter to the Editor, dated

West Phil. Scott Co. Mo., Sept. 2, 1840.

Dear Sir:—About three weeks since, two fellows from Tennessee (as they said) passed this place, apparently with their saddle-bags crowded with counterfeit money—purporting to be of "Farmer's Bank of Virginia." They purchased a horse, and were about to pay for it, in this kind of paper, when it was handed to me for inspection—say $140 of it. I instantly discovered it to be all counterfeit, and ordered them to bring in their saddle-bags for examination, in order to see how much more they had—when they took to their heels through a corn field and made their escape, and we have not heard of them since. One of them took his saddle bags with him; the other, having a horse, left horse, saddle, saddle-bags and all. But we found no money of any kind in his saddle-bags.

I send you one of the notes we got from them, that you may describe it in your "Detector," as I do not find any of this description mentioned by you. They had your Detector along with them, and seem to have governed themselves accordingly, by dating them at different times; some of them I have in my possession; are dated May 3d, June 8, June 4, July 4th, May 4th, and May 9th.—They vary as much in numbers as in dates; say No. 4180, 4180, 5191, 4141, 3134, 4183, 5190, 4132, 4184, 5188, 3178, 3157, 3181, 3172, all $10 Letter A.—ib.

Biographical Sketch of Fanny Elssler.—The Boston Post says, that Fisher's biography of this extraordinary danseuse will doubtless prove acceptable to the admirers of the poetry of motion, and the artistes who produce it. Miss Fanny was born, it seems (if there is no misprint in the date,) in 1818, and is now twenty-two years old. She was not intended for the stage, but having become intimate with a dancer at the theatre, she was dazzled by her splendid dresses, and was anxious to visit the scene of their exhibition.—Her father was a crabbed old man, and, like crabbed old men of our day, would not let her go. We suppose that he swore, and she cried, until at last she was told to go to ruin if she liked; but as our author has it: "At length, moved by the tender entreaties of the lovely suppliant, he gave his reluctant consent to her visiting the opera once." That "once," in its results, gave to the world "La belle Elssler." Once embarked in her theatrical career, her progress was rapid. She was a winged Psyche the night Taglioni made her debut in Vienna, and at twelve years of age sustained the principal part in the ballet "La Fee." She next visited the Neapolitan theatres with marked success, and shortly afterwards returned to Vienna, where young Napoleon fell in love with her. It was on this account that she removed to Berlin, and pleased the king so much, that a pension of $3000 was offered her to remain and dance for eight years. This she rejected. In 1834, she visited London, and there and at Paris, she created a great excitement, and received numerous offers of marriage from nobles and men of fortune. Some anecdotes are next related of her generosity, which is highly commendable, and of tact, which must be of great advantage to her. A short time since, she felt an inclination to visit this country, which she has gratified. She entered New York without an engagement, but soon made her own bargain with the managers. Her career since has, we all know, been eminently successful, for we are told by good authority that she has already amassed over $60,000, since her arrival, besides being hauled by men-donkeys instead of jackasses! How much did John Wesley amass to give away in charity in a life time, devoted to the best good of his fellow men?

A Resumption Movement in Philadelphia.—Our readers will remember that we some weeks since stated our conviction that the U. S. Bank would not be able to resume specie payments without the assistance of the other Banks—that those Banks would not and could not resume without her, and that hence measures would be adopted to afford that assistance, and thus enable all the banks of Philadelphia, to resume together. These views have since been confirmed to a very considerable extent. We learn that an arrangement is now in progress between the U. S. Bank and several of the other Banks of this city, which cannot fail to be attended with salutary consequences. The Philadelphia Bank has offered to loan the U. S. Bank $1,000,000—the Bank of Pennsylvania has made a similar offer—and it is believed that the Farmers' and Mechanic' Bank will follow the example. The U. S. Bank is indebted to each of the others, both in bank notes held by them and balances. The plan is, for the smaller banks to return notes payable on demand, to the extent of $1,000,000 each, and to receive in exchange post notes, payable in a year, or longer, if necessary. This will, of course, reduce the liabilities of the U. S. Bank, and greatly assist her in the resumption of specie payments. It is believed that the other Banks of Philadelphia will also participate in this generous work, and thus assist in bringing about a condition of things so earnestly desired by all who wish well to the business and character of Philadelphia.—Bicknell.

The Springfield Poison Case.—The trial of Mrs. Eliza Norton, at Springfield, Mass., for the murder of James P. Stanton, by administering arsenic to him, was concluded on Saturday, the Jury being unable to agree. The deceased was a boarder with Mrs. Norton, (who was a widow) and had evidently paid her some attentions. At length he purchased a house for himself, and engaged to be married to a young lady in the neighborhood, which was to take place immediately, when he sickened and died in two or three days. Suspicions were excited, and his stomach examined, and found to contain arsenic. It was in evidence that Mrs. N. had personally purchased arsenic just previous to the death—and her own son was on the stand, and testified that he also had purchased arsenic by order of his mother. All which, on the part of the prisoner, it was contended, was to kill rats. She had repeatedly said, that Stanton would never marry the girl to whom he was engaged, and frequently scolded him for stopping there so much when he went to and from his shop. She also insisted from the commencement of his illness that he would not recover. Mrs. N. is a woman nearly 50 years of age; Stanton is about 30. He died in November last. The evidence on the trial bore very hard against the prisoner. If she did commit the crime, the deed was prompted by the demon jealousy, in consequence of the deceased transferring his affections from her to her rival.

A Somnambulist.—A man residing at Homesburg, named Fetters, on Saturday night, while in his sleep, walked out of the dormant window of his house and fell to the ground, but sustained little injury from the fall.

IE RECORDER.

ZANESVILLE.

ESDAY, ... SEPTEMBER 30, 1840.

rost on Tuesday and Wednesday, the 23d inst. nipped the corn fodder in this Charleston Mercury of the 19th instant rice crop will be an average one. The crop had been injured with the worm and weather.

our return from conference we have erself so behind hand with our business, cannot give our editorial department ention we should like. We will be able o do better.

ittsburgh Conference adopted the peti- e Legislature of Ohio which we publish- t as to the distance trespassers should from places of worship, which they placed instead of two miles. Those who have will please alter them accordingly, be- circulate them.

STICS OF THE PITTSBURGH CONFERENCE OF P. CHURCH.—The minutes of the late ce held at Steubenville show that there his District 78 travelling preachers, 114 ned preachers, 8759 members, making in —Increase last year, 1878. But for the emigration from this District west the would have been far greater.

—An anti-slavery convention from differ- of Ohio, was held in Hamilton county st instant, to consider the propriety of g the third political party; 170 dele- re in attendance. They decided by a of three in favor of nominating an elec- ket in favor of Birney and Earl. Dr. f the Philanthropist, wrote in opposi- olitical organization, but he has turned rset and came over in favor of the third party.

PRICES CURRENT.

ADELPHIA, SEPT. 22.—REMARKS— val of a number of vessels from foreign s week, has caused a little more ac- ng the wharves, but the sales from first ve been light in leading articles of for- duce. The news from Europe by the ip British Queen, is not of that decid- cter to cause any material change for the home products.

—The intelligence from England to the nt is considered favorable for their crops , but of wheat it is probable there will ciency, and that a moderate demand will oughout the year for supplies from this at about the present rates. Sales of rly in the week were made at $5¼, but ntly about 2000 bbls. have been sold at t which price it is now firm.—Bicknell.

CONFERENCE.

SBURGH CONFERENCE.

RESOLUTIONS.

mmittee appointed to confer with Br. ckton, on sundry subjects, for the action nference, beg leave to report the three , with the preambles and resolutions viz:

THE CONVENTON.

reas, the Maryland Annual Conference session, recommended the call of a con- for that District, to meet in Baltimore, t Tuesday of next November, for the pro- f the spiritual interests of the church: ereas, said conference recommended to conferences in the connexion, the hold- nilar conventions at the same time: ereas, the time thus named will occur so r the rise of this conference, as to ren- nconvenient for our societies to send resentatives to such a convention, even e deemed otherwise expedient to recom- And, whereas, this conference, not- ding this difficulty, is deeply impressed ense of the importance of the objects our Maryland brethren, and anxious in their accomplishment, as far as prac- Therefore, olved, That it be recommended to all intendents and assistants belonging to ference to collect appropriate intelli- the use of the Baltimore Convention.

olved, That in order to make such in- e the more effective, it be recommended it in the form of answers to the follow- ions:

IETIES.—When organized? Where?— y members, ministers and laymen, at low many now? What peculiarities of or custom?

PERTY.—Chapels—how many? Where When? Size and material? Cost and ?arsonages—How many? Where? &c. ds—Cost? Lots? Sales? &c.

CATION.—Children's classes—Number? ganized? Where? Plans? Results? Schools—Where formed? When?— ? Scholars? Libraries? Ministerial on—Character? Candidates? Effects? LICATIONS.—To what extent encoura- ans for circulation? Probable influ-

EVOLENCE.—What done for Missionary? Sunday School? Temperance? Tract? red institutions? What the sentiments, d means of the churches in these con-

ORTUNITIES FOR USEFULNESS.—Where? Of what character? What needed to them? Why not improved? Probable nces?

CESS.—Where? When? Character?

LURES.—Where? When? How? Ef-hat will the circuit, station, class, or in- member give, annually or otherwise, to and sustain a Foreign Mission? What t Home Mission?

10. What to establish a strictly religious and energetic Book Concern? What to extend the circulation of the Church periodicals?

11. What to establish a College? What to establish a School for candidates for the ministry? What for any object of individual interest?

12. What other statistics or facts can the societies or members furnish, for the Baltimore Convention, that will be useful in illustrating our history, condition or prospects?

3. Resolved, That it be recommended to the superintendents and assistants, to forward the intelligence thus collected to Thomas H. Stockton, Philadelphia, by the 25th of October.

4. Resolved, That this conference would be pleased by the voluntary attendance of any of the ministers or laymen, within this District, who may be interested in the objects of the Baltimore Convention, and disposed to take part in their promotion.

5. Resolved, That it be recommended to our sister conferences or their executive officers, to unite in this good work, by adopting measures for the collection of intelligence for the use of the Baltimore Convention.

6. Resolved, That the editors of all the periodicals of our connexion be requested to give the foregoing preamble and resolutions prompt insertion in their respective journals.

THE CHURCH IN PHILADELPHIA.

Whereas, this conference is persuaded of the importance of the enterprize in which our Philadelphia brethren are now engaged. Therefore, Resolved,

1. That this conference recommend to the societies in this District, to assist the society in Philadelphia, in the erection of its house of worship.

2. That this conference recommend that simultaneous collections be made for this purpose by all the societies in the District.

3. That the last Sabbath in October be the day recommended for this effort.

4. That the collections thus made be forwarded as soon as practicable, to T. H. Stockton, Philadelphia.

5. That the foregoing preamble and resolutions be published in the Western Recorder.

"THE CHRISTIAN WORLD."

The committee recommend the adoption of the following resolutions, relative to this periodical, viz:

1. Resolved, That it be recommended to all our superintendents to act as agents, and to explain the objects of "The Christian World," and to impress its importance upon the minds of all the members and friends of our church, as well as upon those of other churches.

2. Resolved, That Br. Thomas H. Stockton now have an opportunity of receiving names of the members of this conference, as subscribers.

3. Resolved, That the roll of ministers be called for the purpose of ascertaining who among them will act as agents for the "Christian World."

4. Resolved, That it be recommended to the agents to send names and money as soon as possible, that it may be known how many copies to print.

5. Resolved, That these resolutions be published in the church periodicals.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

D. B. DORSEY,
C. SPRINGER,
A. SHINN,
JOHN BURNS,
Z. RAGAN,
J. BEATTY,
Committee.

For the Western Recorder.

Dear Br. Springer: I requested Br. Dorsey, of the publishing committee, to see that the report of the committee, with which I had the honor and pleasure of consulting, in relation to the Baltimore Convention, the Philadelphia Society and the "Christian World," should be forwarded as soon as possible, for insertion in the "Recorder." I have all confidence that this will be done. Meantime, I solicit the favor of submitting a few observations to our ministers and members, not only in this District, but throughout the connexion.

1. THE CONVENTION.—The action of the Pittsburch Conference, in my opinion, may be most usefully imitated by the whole church. Let every minister and preacher among us, make the proposed inquires, and send the result, either to Philadelphia, by the 25th of October, as recommended, or to Baltimore, by the first Tuesday in November. The benefits of such intelligence are beyond calculation. If any of our friends in other Districts, can attend the convention, as delegates or visiters, it is to be hoped they will do so. The time is now short. If our editors and preachers will promote the project, promptly, it will doubtless prove a great blessing.

2. THE PHILADELPHIA SOCIETY.—Hitherto, I have made no general appeal for help, in the erection of the house of worship, for this society. Now, the action of your conference, so full of brotherly kindness, induces me to offer a few words of this character. I respectfully, but very earnestly request, therefore, that every Methodist Protestant Society in the United States, will take part in the simultaneous collections of the last Sabbath in October, for our help. Perhaps all know what a sad failure once occurred there; and what a promising prospect is now open, and how certainly the cause may be established by means of one good house, & how much it will cost to build such a house, and all the other circumstances of the case that are important. All ought to know, too, that the society has bound itself, by formal resolutions, to make up, if it succeed, all the money that shall be collected abroad, to constitute a permanent fund, to be lent, as occasion shall require, to other societies in similar want. Who will not cheerfully and liberally help, in this condition of things? Who would not aid, if the Philadelphia society alone should be profited? Who will not, if a hundred or a thousand other societies may be? I cannot do more, now, than thus repeat my entreaty, that every society in our connexion will enter into the system of simultaneous collections. So may all well close the first ten years of our social existence.

3. THE CHRISTIAN WORLD.—This, I am aware, may be regarded as more of a personal matter. Yet, may it also be otherwise regarded, as the action of your conference demonstrates. I received the names of fifty-one of the ministers and preachers as agents. Some of their associates were not present when the roll was called for this purpose. I hope, however, that they will act with equal zeal. My design now, is to inform all these kind brethren, that I have knowledge of the new location of very few of them. It will be necessary for each one to inform me, by letter, that I may know how to have the paper directed. It may be well to suggest, that perhaps each one can forward at least five names, with five dollars, at the same time. It may be, also, that brethren of the other conferences will imitate this example. I am happy to add, that so far, the work has met the warmest reception. I trust it will be quickly and firmly established, and become eminently useful. The friends of its principles and plan can make it so with little trouble.

In great haste,

T. H. STOCKTON.

Pittsburgh, September 17, 1840.

ITEMS.

NEW COUNTERFEITS.—FARMERS' BANK OF CANTON, OHIO.—2's spurious—Vignette two female figures standing, the one bearing a sheaf of wheat under her arm. The bills are made payable to J. Hand, and dated in 1839, signed Lewis Fogle, Cashier, Jno. Harris, President The impression is feint, but the engraving is tolerably good, purporting to be by Durand, Wright & Co This bank has not issued any notes under 5's since 1834, and no small notes are signed by Lewis Fogle, Cashier.—Bicknell.

The packet ship Monongahela of this port recently took in a freight of wheat and oats for Liverpool.—Phil. paper.

The Western Savings Fund, Baltimore has stopped payment.

"We have seen a letter from Columbus, Georgia," says an exchange paper, "which states that the banks of that State will resume specie payments on the first of next month."

We are informed that eighty-five persons joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, at the camp-meeting recently held near Donegal, in this county. And at the camp-meeting lately held by the "United Brethren in Christ," in the vicinity of this borough, about thirty persons were received into fellowship.—Mt. Pleasant, Pa., Register.

Mr. Reynolds P. Starke, of Trenton, Ky., was shot dead from an ambuscade near that place on the morning of the 20th ultimo. No clue had been obtained of the murderer.

The New York banks are said to be nearly filled with specie, and that they find it difficult to make use of more than one half of their means.

It is estimated that the equestrian statue of Washington, projected by the Philadelphians, will cost $50,000 when completed. The base of the pedestal is designed to be constructed of New England granite, and thirteen steps, emblematical of the first Confederated States, of Pennsylvania marble. The embellishments on the pedestal will illustrate four of the most prominent scenes in the life of Washington. It will be an honor to the public spirit and patriotism of the city of Penn.

It not unfrequently happens in society that the more pleased a man is with himself, the less pleasing he becomes to others.

Flour in New York five dollars, and five dollars and twelve cents.

E. J. Sylvester has been arrested in New York for selling lottery tickets.

Sheep in the United States, 15,000,000.

The steamer Arcadia arrived at Halifax from Boston on Tuesday the 3d instant, and proceeded on her passage to Liverpool the same day, with 85 passengers.

The Flour Mills in the vicinity of Troy, turn out 150,000 barrels per year.

There are three deaf and dumb persons in Cincinnati—and 98 adults who can neither read nor write.

The city of Cincinnati has a population of 32,479.

Nine young persons were poisned in N. York a day or two ago, by eating some cheese. They are all likely to recover.

A young lady named Sarah Neale, was accidentally shot in the arm, in Baltimore, a day or two ago, with a loaded gun which her brother had carelessly left in the room.

The extensive glue factory at Williamsburgh, Long Island, belonging to Alderman Cooper, of New York, was destroyed by fire on the 14th instant.

It is estimated that the Boston Fair will clear twenty-five thousand dollars in aid of the Bunker Hill Monument.

The Rev. Dr. Whittingham was consecrated in Baltimore on Thursday, as Protestant Episcopal Bishop of Maryland.

The circulation of the London newspapers, has increased 47 per cent. since the reduction of the stamp duty.

Flour is selling at Wilmington, Del., at five dollars.

The Thames tunnel is now complete to the banks of the river, and will be opened, it is said, in the course of three or four months.

The Arabs have destroyed property under the walls of Algiers, worth two hundred thousand francs.

The Arabs lately surprised a body of French soldiers, and slaughtered from one hundred and twenty to 140.

It is said that white neckcloths are alone fashionable at the Court of Queen Victoria. She has also recommended the abolition of mustachios.

Seven boys, three young men, and a female were lately drowned by the upsetting of a boat in the river Lea, England.

Gen. Hamilton was, at the last dates, still at the Hague, on the eve, it is said, of concluding a treaty with the government of the Netherlands for the recognition of the new republic.

Rev. Mr. Brainard, in a public lecture, says—"Fanny Elssler's divinity lies in her heels."

The breeding of canary birds is getting to be a business; for the Journal of Commerce tells us that a Yankeee sold $1100 worth out of a wagon, in one day—and then went home whistling.

The producers of society—farmers, mechanics and laborers—are the men who add to the real wealth of the country. When they are well paid, you may say a nation has genuine prosperity.

If some of our youth knew how hard it is to get a living in what are called "the learned professions," they would'nt make such a rush to get into them.

True politeness never stands on foolish ceremony.

If you love your grand-children, or expect to have any, file your newspapers.

The Globe of Saturday evening says: "Chas. Bostwick, the robber of the mail near Springfield, Ohio, last winter, has just been arrested at that place, and about $18.000 of his ill-gotten plunder recovered from him."

This mail robbing appears to be the most unprofitable kind of robbing, as the rogues very rarely escape but for a time.

MURDER FROM RUM.—In Mount Vernon, N. H., an intemperate man named Thomas, known as Doctor Thomas, plunged a knife into the abdomen of Mr. Charles Small, of New Boston, from the effects of which he soon expired. The deceased was to have been married in a few days.

Miss Fly, of Massachusetts, has recovered 365 dollars of Mr. Frost, for a breach of marriage promise. He courted her one year, and the jury allowed one dollar per day for the time.

THE AIMLESS.—It is dreadful to live without an aim—to be a wanderer without a purpose—hoping nothing from the future, and not daring to dwell on the past.

TAKING THE VEIL.—The ceremony of taking the white veil was performed at Baltimore, in the church attached to the Carmelite Nunnery. The young lady who thus voluntarily severed herself from the world is Miss Julia Wilcox, of the city of New York. This is the fifth ceremony of the kind which has taken place within the last nine months.

DEATH BY LIGHTNING.—We learn that Robertson Tarver, of this county, was instantly killed by lightning while standing in the door of his dwelling on Thursday last, during the fall of a shower of rain. There were other members of his family in the house at the time, who, we believe, escaped uninjured.—Augusta Chronicle and Sentinel, Aug. 24.

MR. LEVIS.—It is believed that the ex-cashier has again absconded.

A rogue named Jesse Heely, was recently arrested at Buffalo, in whose trunk was found a large quantity of bills on the Phœnix Bank of Phillipsburg, Vermont, in sheets, and without being filled up. A twenty also, on the Tradesmen's Bank of New York, was found, wanting the signatures. Accompanying these bills were ample implements for carrying on the counterfeiting and black leg business.—He was committed.—Bicknell.

Mr. Norris of Philadelphia, has made an arrangement with the agent of the Emperor of Russia, to furnish him 200 Locomotive engines, for $1,400,000.—Forty are to be delivered each year.—They are principally to run upon the Rail Road between St. Petersburg and Moscow.

"ANOTHER REVOLUTIONARY HERO GONE."—Married at Mahon, Nova Scotia, on the 15th ult., Mr. Reuben Young, a life-guard of Gen. Washington in the revolutionary war, aged 82 years, to Miss Sarah Reineff aged 25.

THE LONDON MONEY MARKET.—A letter from London dated Sept. 3d, says:—"Money here is plentiful enough, but still commands from 6 to 10 per cent. for long transferable securities. There is more than usual caution exercised in making investments; our political horizon is clouded just now, and until there is a pacific solution of the eastern question, capitalists will be very shy of locking up their funds.

The weather is again becoming unfavorable, but I trust on the whole we shall well together a fair average crop.

Our Cotton market is pretty steady, but I doubt much, if present prices will be sustained.

The expenses up to January last, on the Girard College, amount to the colossal sum of $1,272,712,45, and the College reported by the architect to be about two-thirds completed.—Hartford Review.

Yes, and what is the worst of it, not an orphan has yet received any benefit from the millions of dollars which Stephen Girard bequeathed. There must be some change of arrangements. The public have decreed it.—Phil. Cour.

Solon enacted that children who did not maintain their parents in old age, when in want, should be branded with infamy, and lose the privilege of citizens; he, however, excepted from this rule, those children whom their parents had taught no trade, nor provided with other means of procuring a livelihood.

Franklin adds—"He who has a trade has an estate." Unfortunately for the age, we have in our large cities too many would be genteel, who have no other estate than a large quantity of soap locks hanging down, obviously to hide the length of their ears!—ib.

FRANCE AND THE OTHER POWERS.—Our private letters, as well as all the leading journals of Paris and London, inculcate the impression that there will be no war between France and England. And yet, the excitement in both capitals, was quite extraordinary—the prospect of peace considered. As already stated, a number of the English residents in Paris had quitted that city in alarm. M. Guizot, the French Minister, had left London, and the Duc de Broglic was talked of in Paris, as a special Messenger to Great Britain. It is stated on the other hand, that the absence of M. Guizot would only be temporary, and that the storm which threatened, would soon pass away.

"No man can fulfil his duty, and enjoy all the happiness intended for him, without a family. The pleasures and affections—even the responsibilities, restraints, and cares which they produce, all tend to develope and balance his character, to enlarge his mind, and to keep his heart in a medium point of enjoyment most favorable to health, content, and honor.—An old bachelor is almost sure to have some inaccurate notion or loose principle, which the reflection consequent on a family protects a husband and father from."

EDWARD C. DELAVAN.—We have received the report of the trial of E. C. Delavan, for an alleged libel. The suit was brought by John Taylor, a Brewer of Albany, for certain publications in the Temperance Recorder, which declared that impure water was used by brewers. It appeared in evidence that water was taken from a pond which was supplied from the wash of the ground, and not from springs. Dead dogs, and cats, were cast into it. It received the wash from several other dead animals. It likewise received the wash of a glue factory, and of several sewers. The pond seldom contained pure water. From seven hogsheads of water taken from this pond, the filth was several inches, from three to ten, in depth after settling. After a patient hearing of the evidence, the Jury retired, and, after a consultation of about an hour, agreed upon their verdict, which was, FOR THE DEFENDANT WITH COSTS.

This report should be in the hands of all. Two dollars remitted, post paid, to J Marsh, Clinton Hall, New York, or E. H. Pease, Albany, will secure 100 copies.—Baptist Register.

TEMPERANCE AMONG CATHOLICS.—The Catholics in many places in the United States, are taking the Total Abstinence pledge en masse. Perhaps there is not a religious society that has done so little comparatively in the temperance cause as the Catholic. From their present efforts we are encouraged to hope that their diligence may atone in some degree for former negligence. There is a broad field before them. And if they succeed in driving intemperance from their church, they will be more fortunate than some others, and will be more entitled to the praise of working miracles, than they are for many of which they boast.—ib.

The New York Express states that a daring robbery was committed on Thursday afternoon upon one of the clerks at the Astor House. He left there about two o'clock with $1400 in his possession, to convey to one of the banks. As he was passing through Chambers street, he was suddenly attacked by some one, dragged into an alley, and the whole of the money taken from him, with which they escaped, before he could give the alarm. The perpetrators are suspected.

We learn with pleasure that Mr. Norris, the celebrated engine manufacturer of this city, hast just received an order from Frankfort on the Oder, in Germany, for fifteen of his best locomotives. This is indeed gratifying, and tells well for American ingenuity abroad—Phil. paper.

Adverting to the foreign news, the N. York Commercial remarks—"The present aspect of matters is undoubtedly threatening—more so than it has yet been at any time since these misunderstandings began—but we do not believe that France will join the Pacha in the resistance which he threatens, and without the aid of France he must and will submit."

A well-dressed man was arrested in London for attempting to force his way to the Queen. He stated that he was no other person than George the Fourth; that he had built the palace, and the Queen was his wife. He was going to take her to heaven in a balloon, and he intended to get a lot of Roman soldiers and a company of the Blues to escort him. The officers were to blow trumpets and wear wigs.

AMERICAN MANUFACTURES AND AMERICAN ENTERPRIZE.—A vessel recently left this port for Valparaiso and the west coast of Mexico. Her cargo is valued at one hundred and fifty thousand dollars, and the greater part of it consists of American Domestics, to the extent of near twenty thousand pieces of goods. The superior texture and durability of our manufactures are now well known, and are fast driving out of foreign markets the tinsel goods of Europe, where there is a fair competition offered.—Bicknell.

THE STAGE AND THE PULPIT.—The unusual attention which appears to be paid to theatricals in Philadelphia, at the present time, has induced one of our clergyman, the Rev. Mr. Brainard, to deliver an Address upon the subject.—He denounces theatres in no very measured terms, and adduces powerful arguments in support of its general tone.—Doubtless, many elevated sentiments, many beautiful images of poetry, and many thrilling productions of mind, are embodied in the dramas of Shakspeare and other eminent writers. If these beauties and merit were alone brought forward on the stage, there would be less cause for censure. But when, as is frequently the case, the legitimate drama does not prove attractive, all sorts of trash and folly are brought forward, and sometimes the worst passions are excited, and the most atrocious sentiments are uttered.—Thus in a recent instance, at one of our theatres, an act of picking a pocket—a burglary—and a murder—were all represented upon the stage. The story of Jack Sheppard, a most noterious burglar and highway-man, has also been dramatised, and his feats of roguery are converted into acts of heroism, while the whole tenor of the piece, is said to be calculated to excite sympathy in his favor. Representations of this kind, therefore, are fraught with the most deplorable consequences, especially to the young and inexperienced. No wonder that the friends of good morals should under such circumstances, express alarm, and by denouncing, endeavor to counteract the bad effects of theatrical exhibitions. Mr. Brainard, in the course of the remarks first referred to, argues thus:

The first objection which I shall urge against theatrical amusements, is their waste of time.

This is an argument better estimated at the close of life than in its progress. However anxious some may be to kill time in the days of health and prosperity, they learn to appreciate its value as its last hours plume their wings for flight.

It is the practice in theatres to open at 7 or 8 o'clock, P. M. and to close at 11 or 12 o'clock. Here are four hours occupied at evening to the excitements of play.

It is the nature of theatrical amusements to create a desire for repetition.—The thrilling excitement which they create and sustain, originates a disrelish for more sober recreations; and hence when one has become accustomed to such amusements at the theatre, he is dissatisfied with an evening spent out of the theatre. The variety of entertainment provided, and the puffs of the press, tend to fix the habit of constant attendance. Our youth, then, are invited and urged to occupy four hours of each day—one fourth part of their waking hours—in mere amusement.

I speak not now of the lessons of immorality which they acqure, or of the baleful associations which they form; it is enough to condemn these amusements that they rob, without compensation, our youth of that time which constitutes their day of probation.

Four hours of the evening devoted to laughing at comic buffoonery or weeping luxuriously at catastrophies of mock tragedy!

Employ this time in business, and with the blessing of God it is transmuted into the means of present competence and future wealth.

Employ it in useful reading or in attendance at Lyceums and public lectures, and it accumulates a treasure of useful knowledge to be the cheerer of solitude—the means of respectability and usefulness—the ornament of wealth and the refuge of adversity.

Occupy these wasted hours in the family circle in cheerful converse, and in united efforts to promote social felicity, and they would render home a spot verdant and beautiful in the desert of the world.

Occupy these hours in seeking out and relieving the sorrows of the poor, the sick, the homeless stranger, and in binding up the heart crushed under life's woe's, and you light up many a gloomy dwelling with renewed hope and peace; you rekindle warmth on the cold hearth of the orphan and make the heart of the widow sitting desolate and solitary to sing for joy.—Bicknell.

Business Department.

Our correspondents will have to bear with us, and they shall all be attended to in time.

In consequence of a press of communications, &c., we will omit the receipts of moneys at the Pittsburgh Conference until next week.

We are printing a few extra numbers of the minutes; if our agents will be so good as to solicit subscribers to take them up immediately, we will no doubt be accommodated all round.

Henry Dobson, of Madison county, Ia., says he paid a Br. Williams for the first volume of the Recorder. We have not received it. Will Br. Bassett see to this matter?

S. Worcester, Brownsville, Pa., complains he does not get his paper regularly. It is put up with the Brownsville papers, and of course must go with them.

Puff! Puff! Puff!!

CHEAP!

CHEAPER THAN EVER! GREAT BARGAINS!

New York at your door!

SELLING OFF AT COST!

WE so heartily despise the "gull-catching" system that we seldom advertise at all. We however give our friends and the public notice that we have just received a fine stock of

FALL AND WINTER

GOODS.

We don't profess to have brought "New York to your doors," nor to undersell every body else, nor to be "selling off at cost," nor to be "closing up," and all that sort of things,—but we do say, that our goods are cheap enough to satisfy any reasonable person, even in these "hard times."

A. A. GUTHRIE & Co.

Putnam, Ohio, September 30, 1840. 3w58

MISCELLANEOUS.

COTTON IN BRITISH INDIA.

THE SOUTH.

It is strange that so little attention is bestowed by the presses of the South, upon the mighty experiment which is now agitated by certain British philanthropists and statesmen, in relation to the culvation of cotton in India. We have already alluded to the subject once or twice, have shown that agents have been engaged in Mississippi, to proceed to India and assist the undertaking, that the measure is warmly and earnestly urged by British writers of unquestioned ability, that several pamphlets have been published upon the subject, that the two objects aimed at are—first, the improvement of the general condition of British India, and the conversion of an idle and ignorant population into one of industry and comparative intelligence; and secondly, an attack upon the cotton interests of the United States, as much, however, with a view to philantrophy as to commerce. We say that it is strange that our Southern journalists pay so little attention to this vast undertaking. Are we to understand, that being wholly indifferent to the matter, they desire to be considered as treating it with contempt? Is the scheme looked upon as idle and impracticable! Or do they believe that it will be impossible for British India to compete under any circumstances, with the Southern and cotton growing States of this Union. These are questions which we should like to see answered by our friends of the Charleston Courier or the Charleston Mercury. The manufacturers of the North are looking on with no little anxiety, especially as it is broadly affirmed in some quarters, that the requirements of the government will speedily demand either a direct tax or a new tariff. The North is thoroughly devoted to the Union, and will ever be found willing to sacrifice liberally of her own interests, in keeping together the various members of this confederacy. But unless we greatly mistake, the time is not far distant, when the South will be willing to confer with the North on more than one important question, if not to depend materially upon the manufacturers of this section of the Union, for the consumption of a very large portion of their principle staple. Our attention has been drawn to the subject just now, by the perusal of the following extract of a letter to William Lloyd Garrison, of Massechusetts. It will be seen that the writer exults at this India experiment, on anti-slavery grounds. He also states some facts which cannot but possess interest, as well for the friends as the foes of abolition.—It must be remembered, however, that Garrison to suit his own views is apt to depart from and exaggerate facts.

"Our friends here in England, are most deeply engaged in the investigation of the India question. Thompson is swallowed up in it. You will see by the pamphlets, (a large stock of which are sent with his and Miss Pease's contribution to the Ladies Fair,) that it has the most direct bearing on American slavery. It seems from the testimony of India stockholders, India Governors, English cotton and sugar merchants, that labor in India is less than two pence per day; and sugar may be placed in the English market at eighteen pounds sterling per ton—while the American and West India is selling at £42. Such is the testimony of the rich Fleming of Glasgow. Cotton also, can be afforded at three pennies a pound, while ours sells at nine pence.

"A host of philanthropists are marshalled to claim for India the liberty to Work—for, it seems an oppressive land tax grinds them to the dust. Yet notwithstanding this, the prices are as stated above. It is whispered also that several capitalists are embarking largely in the cotton trade in the East Indies. The first ship that enters a British harbor, freighted with the results of such investments, bears with her the death warrant of slavery in the United States."

"They tell us of Eastern magic, which changed gold into slate stones in your very hand. Perhaps we can unseal from their imprisonment, some of those genii of the East, like the fisherman in the fairy tale, and before their march Mr. Clay will find his $1200,000,000 of property in man changed to dust in his very grasp.

"It is not only the abolitionists who are anxious in regard to India at present.—English statesmen, here and in the East, are aware that oppression has driven her iron so deep into starved and plundered Hindostan, that there may be reaction any moment. One of the Governors observed, he should not be suprised "to wake any morning, and find the bubble burst;"—and I heard Sir Robert Peel assert, in the House of Commons, that the state of India was such as to authorize an increase of the military force. Thus every thing seems to conspire to aid the movement of our friends—by directing public attention to the subject, by encouraging India produce and freeing it from excessive taxation. And the national heart is stirred by the prospect of being freed from dependence on foreigners, for the great staple of their manufactories. God grant the plan may succeed; and then that large class of men, upon whom moral influence is thrown away, will find Anti-Slavery staring from their legers. We can hold our conventions in deserted counting houses and our society need publish only the price current."—Bicknell.

Eleven thousand papers are published in the United States, and thirteen thousand in the civilized world.

A SCENE IN THE GREAT WESTERN.—The following is an extract from the journal of the Rev. Mr. Colver, of Boston, during a recent passage in the Great Western to England. Great complaints, and well grounded, are made of our steamers as floating grog-shops, and they will continue to be so until every passenger purchases his own wine. One of the captains of the London packets remarked to us a few days since that while he furnished wine to all the passengers, he usually laid in 108 dozen for a passage; but since every passenger pays for what he uses, three dozen suffices. We hope our countrymen will persevere in the demand, until the present system is set aside.—Journal of the Am. Tem. Union.

"Yesterday at dinner table good Brother Stuart read a paper, well drawn up by Brother Norton, suggesting to the boat proprietors, the expediency of furnishing liquors hereafter only to those who shall call and pay for them; as the constant presence of such tempting beverages, without charge, induces a free and destructive use of intoxicating drinks, and imposes a tax of at least $20 upon every total abstinence passenger, who is thus unwillingly accessory to the intemperance and ruin of his fellow travellers. He had read but a small part when he was hissed and hooted down by the clamorous multitude. The Captain, to his credit, requested silence till the gentleman shoud finish the reading, which he did with occasional interruptions; immediately after which, toasts, and songs, and huzzas made the spacious saloon ring as with bacchanalian voices, while the wine was gorged greedily. A large proportion of the passengers are merchants. But we have several British officers, and about a dozen ladies, only two ministers. Probably three fourths of the number of passengers, excepting the ladies, use cards freely, and a number gamble for money openly. I have seen £6 won in a few minutes. We had a very quiet dinner hour, or rather hours, to-day, and less wine was drank than I have witnessed before on the passage.—I think, therefore, our paper has done some good notwithstanding its rude and blackguardy reception. I engaged quite a number of the most violent opponents in discussing the subject in groups on deck, I think made some of them sensible of their ungentlemanly conduct, and propriety of our course. As we bore the insult calmly, and treated them kindly, I won a number to my support, (and those of the better class,) so that they took the laboring oar in my defence. The result is favorable."

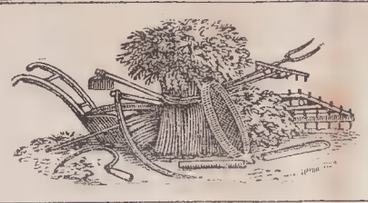
A NEW SECT IN ENGLAND.—An American lady in England, whose correspondence is published in the Christian Register, writes as follows:

Among the seceders from the Church of England, a sect has lately sprung up calling themselves the Providence Society. I have not been at any of their meetings, but I happen to know some of their results: in one instance, in Exeter, the son of a lord has given up his patrimony for the benefit of his poor companions, and his taste directs him to keep a boarding house, in which all the furniture is of the most humble kind; articles which in genteel houses are of mahogany or rose wood, here are made of deal, and all things else correspond. No persons are admitted but those who belong to the Providence Society, and their rank or station is not a matter of inquiry. One young lady whose family I know, has lately thrown her beautiful drawings, albums, &c., into the sea; given up all elegant pursuits and married quite a common person. The young ladies who have become converts, are said to be known by their slovenly, dirty appearance; for, as they admit no distinction or rank, and have not learned to be notable, they appear in a most pitiable condition. I hope they have some good points about which I have not been informed. It seems rather extraordinary, that such unpromising pretensions, should make converts chiefly among the rich and the gentry of the land.

GUILT OF LICENTIOUS WRITERS.—The wickedness of a loose or profane author, in his writings, is more attrocious than that of the giddy libertine, or drunken ravisher, not only because it extends its effects wider, (as a pestilence which taints the air is more destructive that poison infused in a draught,) but because it is committed in cool deliberation. By the instantaneous violence of desire, a good man may sometimes be surprised, before reflection come to his rescue; when the appetites have strengthened their influence by habit, they are not easily resisted or suppressed; but for the frigid villany of studious lewdness, for the calm malignity of labored impiety, what apology can be invented? What punishment can be adequate to the crime of him who retires to solitude for the refinement of debauchery; who tortures his fancy and ransacks his memory, that he may leave the world less virtuous than he found it; that he may intercept the hopes of the rising generation and spread snares for the soul with more dexterity?—Dr. Johnson.

FOUR LIVES LOST.—On the 23 ult. at Apalachicola, Florida, 4 persons were drowned in attempting to pass from St. George's island to a pilot boat lying in in the river. Their names were Mrs. Sabia Roane, wife of Wm. P. Roane; Mrs. Susan Lewis, a widow, and a boy about five years of age, and charles Ross, a pilot. They were in a leaky boat, which filled and sunk.

AGRICULTURAL.



From the Western Farmer.

APPLICATION OF MANURES.

[Concluded.]

My belief, founded on the facts already stated, is, that all the fertilizing substances of manures are soluble in water, and will remain uninjured themselves, and useless to plants until the solution begins, whether they be deposited on or under the earth's surface. I also believe, that this solution is caused by every fall of rain, and is immediately absorbed by the subjacent soil, which absorption results from two causes; first, the principle of gravity, and secondly, the stronger attraction of the earth than that of the atmosphere, for every substance in solution which constitutes the food of plants. Moreover, that the earth never parts with this food when thus absorbed, to any thing but the plants themselves; for it is their peculiar aliment, and not that of the atmosphere, whose existence, for aught we know to the contrary, is entirely independent of it, although its agency seems essential to the health and vigor of all plants. If this were not the fact; if, (for example,) the earth did give the greatest and best portion of this food to the atmosphere; or, if it escaped from surface spread manure, before gravity and attraction could impart it to the earth, then the evaporation which is supposed to be the medium of conveyance, and which is known to be constantly going on from the soil, would, in process of time, certainly render it barren, even without any cultivation whatever. Yet neither total nor partial barrenness is ever known to be produced by any other cause than incessant culture without manure. That evaporation does take off something from manure while in a moist state, is proved by the offensive smell which constantly exhales from it until it is entirely dry. This smell is excited by a gas which is said by some, to contain the most valuable portion of food of plants. But admit the fact, where is the proof of this portion being lost? I say there is none. On the contrary, we have what I think a conclusive reason for believing, that this food is immediately given by the atmosphere to the tops of plants, as more suitable to them than their roots. My reason for this belief is, the result of the following experiment which I have known to be repeated several times. All the bark was taken off from around the body of certain young trees, in a ring about three inches wide, for the purpose, in the first case which I saw, of ascertaining whether this process would not kill the tree. But to the surprise of us all, not more than a year or two elapsed, before that part of the body above the ring became obviously larger than the part below, and this difference in size increased every year afterwards, as I have frequent opportunities of noticing.

Another reason why I believe that manures act better, if spread on the surface of land than when buried under it in the customary manner, is, that in the first case, the rain water carries the dissolved substances no deeper than the roots of most of our cultivated plants always grow, unless they are forced out of their natural course; and there these substances remain fast held by the earth's chemical affinity, until the strongest attraction of the spongioles by the roots begins to act upon them. But in the second case, that is, where manure is ploughed under as soon as spread, all the food of plants contained therein, being placed quite as deep as their spongioles naturally grow, and this too, before the rains begin to dissolve it, the subsequent solutions caused thereby, necessarily sink still deeper, and generally beyond the reach of the plants, for whose nourishment they are designed. In no other way can I account for the long noticed and invariable superiority of crops produced by surface spread manure, to those produced by that which was ploughed in. To me there appears to be but this alternative, either to deny the facts already stated, which I myself have often witnessed, or to explain them, (if we must theorize on the subject at all,) in some such way as the one which I have just offered to your subscribers, and to such others of our brethren as may choose to examine it. Permit me further to add, that on this subject nature herself seems to offer us a useful lesson, if we were not too wise in our own conceits to be taught by such an instructress; for I know not a single exception to her practice of depositing on the earth's surface, all the putrescent substances of every nature and kind, which appears designed to preserve her fecundity.

In close connection with this subject, there is one other matter on which I will take the liberty to express an opinion, although your subscriber has not asked for it. This is, in regard to the best state in which manure can be applied. So far as my own experience enables me to judge, an experience confirmed by that of many others in whose practical knowledge of the subject I have great confidence, I believe that the fresher it is, the better; for in such state, so much less will suffice, than in any more advanced stage of putrefaction, that time, labor, and value are all saved in the application, while none of the alleged "burning," ascribed to the manure being "too hot," ever occurs, if the quantity used be lessened in proportion to its freshness. This injury to plants, if I mistake not, is always caused by excess in the quantity and not by the quality of the manure we apply to them, although the two things are often confounded, and thereby contribute to the perpetuation of error in regard to the nature and operation of all fertilizing substances. There is not, I believe, an agriculturist of any experience in our country, who has not had frequent opportunities of witnessing numerous facts to prove the correctness of these opinions. Two or three years, at most, would have been amply sufficient to establish the most beneficial practice, if all those whose special interest it is to ascertain it, would have dilligently and and impartially resorted to comparative experiments, accurately and assiduously made for the purpose, rather than to speculating and theorizing about, it. But it never can be too late to make such experiments. Let me therefore, most earnestly, but respectfully recommend to your subscriber who has done me the honor to ask my opinion, as well as to all others who still have doubts on the subject, forthwith to commence making trials of the different methods of applying manures, and also of the different states in which it is applied.

The third and last method of applying manures is to cover them up entirely, but shallow. This is the most common practice in tillage crops. By so doing, it would seem, (at any rate until further facts are known on this subject to determine us either to cover them up deep, or place them completely on the top of the ground) that we steer clear on the one hand of putting them too far beyond the reach of the roots of plants, and on the other of allowing the dissipation of their elastic or gaseous matter upon the ground, to be lost in the air.

With respect to the state in which manures should be applied, whether fermented or unfermented, or only in part decayed or in part fresh, a great deal will depend upon whether the immediate effect be absolutely requisite, as in raising turnips, in which case rotted dung must be used, (care being taken in preparing it, to prevent its heat from rising high, or any of it from escaping, either in a liquid or a gasous state, by covering it well in the heap,) or whether the effect is intended only to be gradually drawn out during the season and in a succession of after crops—when the decomposition goes on as slowly as possible, and all the elements of the substances of which recent dung is composed are retained in the soil as they are set free, in which last case fresh manure is the best. Mr. Coke, perhaps the best farmer in England, "has entirely given up the system formerly adopted on his farm, of applying rotted dung, and he asserts that his crops have been since as good as they ever were, and his manure goes nearly twice as far." It is a general principle in chemistry, that in all cases of decomposition, substances combine much more readily at the moment of their disengagement than after they have been perfectly formed; and in fermentation beneath the soil, the fluid matter produced is applied instantly, even whilst it is warm, to the organs of the plant, and consequently is more likely to be efficient than in manure that has gone through the process, and of which all the principles have entered into new combinations. But whether we apply manures fresh, or but slightly decomposed (which should not in our opinion, be allowed to proceed far,) we think, until futher light is thrown upon this important subject by decisive experiments, that we shall proceed more safely by covering with the plough, or at any rate with the harrow or hoe, as much as possible, all the manures which we may throw on tillage lands.

Upwards of 300 Federal troops in Mexico, recently perished of fever.

For the Western Recorder.

NO IMPOSTOR!

Mr. Springer—Dear Sir: I have seen in your paper bearing date August 5th. 1840, an advertisement which declares Augustus Stevens, of Wellsville, to be an impostor, such as wearing the garb of a Methodist preacher, and soliciting a young lady for marriage. The charge is most positively denied, and the contrary can be proven by more than a score of witnesses. Will you be so benevolent as to publish my reply to that charge, with the testimony that follows and confer a favor on suffering innocence?

AUGUSTUS STEVENS.

The State of Ohio, Wood county, ss.

Before me, Henry A. Harns, a justice of the peace in and for the county and state aforesaid, this day came David A. Roswell, who after being duly sworn, deposeth and saith, that on or about the 5 th or 6th day of June last, he was travelling in company with Chester Denwiddie through parts of Crawford and Seneca counties, to Lower Sandusky, when they were overtaken by a man who said his name was S evens, that he resided in Wellsville, Ohio. We had rode in company some three or four miles when there came on a heavy rain, we called at a house in the south east part of Seneca county, which I am told was a Mr. Weaver's; when Mr. Stevens stepped in the house a young woman came up to him and called him Mr. Rathburn, to which he, Stevens, replied, madam I think you are mistaken; she said she was not, that she knew him and had heard him preach often; said he was a Reform Methodist preacher, to which Mr. Stevens most positively declared that his name was not Rathburn, neither was he a Reform preacher; told her that he lived in Wellsville, O. As soon as the rain was over we all three left the house, and Mr. Stevens went with us nearly to Lower Sandusky. DAVID A. ROSWELL.

Sworn and subscribed to before me, this 3d day of September, 1840.

H. A. HARNS, [L. S.]

Justice of the Peace in and for Troy township, Wood county, Ohio.

The State of Ohio, Wood county, ss.

I, John Webb, Clerk of the Court of Common Pleas, within and for said county, do hereby certify, that H. A. Harns before whom the foregoing deposition appear to have been taken was at that time an acting Justice of the Peace within and for said county, duly commissioned and qualified to act as such, to all whose official acts full faith and credit are, and of right ought to be given; in testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the seal of said court at Perrysburgh, this 4th day of September, A. D. 1840. JOHN WEBB, Clerk.

We, the undersigned, do hereby certify that the foregoing is a correct and true copy taken from the original depositions, which is now present in the hands of the said Stevens. WILLIAM CUNNING, Sept. 12, 1840. JOHN CUNNING.

Lower Sandusky, Ohio, Sept. 7, 1840.

I do hereby certify that Augustus Stevens came to my house on the 6th of June last, and was in company with me until he returned to his father's. And then I went in company with him to his father's.

JACOB QUINN.

Sandusky township, Crawford county, O.,

We, the undersigned, do hereby certify that we actually know, to our own knowledge, that Augustus Stevens only staid one night out of his father's house during his visit here, in the month of June last, except when he went to Lower Sandusky, and that was on or about the 5th or 6th of the said month. He came here on the first of June, and left for home about the twentieth. As witness our hands,

AMOS STEVENS, Sr.
JOHN CUNNING,
AMOS STEVENS, Jr.

We, the undersigned, do hereby certify that the young lady to whom Mr. Stevens should have paid his respects, has, and does positively say, that she never saw him until in the month of June last, and that she never saw him but three times altogether; and she farther states that she was much mistaken in taking him for Mr. Rathburn.

JOHN CUNNING,
AMOS STEVENS, Jr.

Mr. Augustus Stevens has lived for the last six years nearly all his time within seven miles of Mr. Weaver's, and the young lady's father. In testimony whereof we have set our hands this 12th day of September, 1840.

AMOS STEVENS, Sr.
JOHN CUNNING,
AMOS STEVENS, Jr.

For further information inquire of John Davis, Robt. Johnston, J. E. Murrell, R. P. Cunn ing, John E. Ruth, Ruth Sliffer.

William Green,

CLOCK AND WATCH REPAIRER, SILVERSMITH, AND JEWELLER,

CAN be found at his shop on Main street Putnam, a few doors north of J. C. Guthrie's store, where he will do his best to accommodate customers. He keeps on hand an assortment of spectacles, watch trimmings, pencils, &c.

As far as we have tried Mr. GREEN as a watch repairer he has given us good satisfaction.—ED.
April 22, 1840. 35tf.

Stray Mare.

STRAYED from the subscriber living in Hopewell township, Muskingum county, O., on the 20th of June last, a light SORREL MARE, about 14 or 15 hands high, with a small blaze in the forehead and one white foot; no shoes on when she left. Any person returning said mare or giving information to the subcriber where she can be found, will be liberally compensated for his trouble.

NAAMAN R. GRANT.
Hopewell tp., Musk., O., July 8, 1840. 46

Dissolution.

THE partnership heretofore existing between the subscribers in the PUTNAM FOUNDRY, under the firm of HARTLEY & ANDERSON, was this day dissolved by mutual consent.

The Putnam Foundry will hereafter be conducted by J. J. Anderson & Co.

LEVI HARTLEY,
JACOB J. ANDERSON.
Putnam, Jan. 1, 1840. (Jan. 29: 23.)

Notice.

ALL persons indebted to the late firm of Hartley & Anderson, are earnestly requested to call at the Foundry and make settlement, as the change of owners makes this step absolutely necessary. We ask the attention of all persons concerned, to this notice.

J. J ANDERSON & Co.
Putnam, Jan. 1, 1840. (Jan. 29: 23.)

Dissolution.

THE partnership heretofore existing between S. B. Johnson and J. M. Kirkpatrick, under the firm of S. B. Johnson & Co. was dissolved by mutual consent, on Thursday 19th inst.

S. B. JOHNSON,
J. M. KIRKPATRICK.
Zanesville, March 31, 1840. 32tf

The New World.

The Largest, Cheapest, Handsomest and most Comprehensive Newspaper in the United States.

EDITED BY
PARK BENJAMIN AND EPES SARGENT.

WITH multiplied resources for rendering the New World more valuable than ever as a compendious newspaper and repository of elegant literature, we enter upon the second volume (folio) on the 24th of October, dressed in a beautiful garb of new type, cast expressly for the purpose. It will therefore be a fitting time to commence new subscriptions, as well as for the renewal of those which may then expire.

During the first year of the existence of the New World, it has acquired a reputation and circulation superior to that of any weekly paper in the country; and has furnished to its subscribers, during that period, (besides all the current news of the day, domestic and foreign) new and valuable works by Talfourd, D'Israeli, Thomas Moore, Miss Mitford, Mrs. Jameson, Charles Dickens, Ainsworth, Knowles, Bulwer, Marryat and others—works, which in London could not be purchased for fifty times the amount of the subscription price of the New World. In addition to works of interest by these eminent authors, it has contained the cream of the periodical literature of the day, as well as original articles from the pens of some of the most popular writers of America, among whom we may mention Miss Sedgwick, Orville Dewey, Professor Longfellow, the author of "Yankee Notions," Simms, Street, &c., &c.

In politics we shall, as hitherto, maintain an armed neutrality. Our columns will as hitherto be unobjectionable in a moral point of view. In criticism we shall, in justice to the public, maintain a perfect independence, even though we incur the vengeance of all the dunces. We shall, in conclusion, earnestly strive to render our sheet not only worthy of the unparallelled favor it has experienced, but of a continually extending circulation. While we continue to furnish with all possible promptitude the most attractive literature of the day, we shall, as our means enlarge, afford that compensation to native authors, which may induce them to make the New World the medium for presenting to the public their best productions. Our excellent London correspondence will be continued, and due attention will be paid to the commercial, agricultural and news departments of our paper.

A QUARTO EDITION

Of sixteen large pages was commenced on the sixth of June last, in order to meet the wishes of a large number of subscribers, by giving them its rich and varied contents in a suitable form for binding. This we have done without having enhanced the price, so that new subscribers, and others on the renewal of previous subscriptions, can take their choice between the Quarto and Folio form. ☞But a few sets of the Quarto from No. 1, now remain on hand in the office, and we shall, therefore, not be able long to supply them.

TERMS—Three Dollars a year in advance for either edition; or Five Dollars for two copies. In all cases letters must be free, or post-paid, or they will remain dead in the post-office.

☞All Postmasters who will act for us as our authorized Agents, and may retain 25 per cent. on the subscription price, (Three Dollars) for commissions, if remitted in New York or eastern money; or 50 cents on each, if in notes of other solvent banks, which may be at a discount here.

Letters relative to the editorial department must be addressed to Park Benjamin and Epes Sargent, Editors: those relative to the business department, to J. WINCHESTER, Publisher, No. 30, Ann street, New York.
September 16, 1840. 3t

S. C. Haver,

IN the flourishing town of Putnam has on hand 40 or 50 SADDLES ready for sale, of different qualities, comprising nearly all the varieties in fashion in our Buckeye State.

A good assortment of Bridles and Martingales: Riding and driving Whips: between 150 and 200 Carriage and heavy draft Collars, which will compare and wear with any others made here or elsewhere.

Also, fine York, Dearborn, heavy team and common Farming Harness. A lot of first rate Carriage and Buggy Harness, (brass and silver plated.)

Trunks, vallises, saddle-bags, and double covered wagon whips, varying in quality and price to suit purchasers.

The only recommendation he now offers for his work, is the testimony and long experience of his old customers and friends. He is still anxious to please and accommodate those who may call on him, and hopes to share so much of the public patronage as his attention to his business shall merit.

Putnam, April 29, 1840. 28tf

Glass Manufactory.

THE subscriber having dissolved his connexion with the former company, has taken the GLASS WORKS below town under his own management.

WINDOW GLASS, double and single, assizes, and of superior quality will be kept constantly on hand for sale on reasonable terms.—The experience of the proprietor, in the manufacture of the article, will insure all made to be of the best quality. Call and see.

S. B. JOHNSON.
Zanesville, Ohio, May 6, 1840. 37

O. WHITE, BOOK BINDER, No. 10 Main Street, Zanesville, Ohio.
January 15, 1840. 21tf

THE

WESTERN RECORDER

IS PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY.

☞The office of the Recorder is five and a half miles west of Zanesville.

TERMS.

1. The WESTERN RECORDER will be published weekly, on an imperial sheet, at $2 00 per annum, in advance: $2 50 at the end of three months; $3 00 at the end of the year.

2. No discontinuances will be allowed, except at the discretion of the publisher, until all arrearages are paid.

3. To all ministers having regular pastoral charges, who do any thing at all for the paper, if they will direct us where, a copy shall be sent gratis; any other who forward to us $10 (for new subscribers, shall have six copies sent to any address he may give.

4. All letters designed for the paper, must be directed to "C. Springer, Meadow Farm, Muskingum, Ohio."

5. A failure to notify a discontinuance before the expiration of the subscription year, will be considered a new engagement.

CHARACTER.—The pages of the WESTERN RECORDER will be open to discussion on all moral questions;—it will give articles on Literature, Mechanics, Agriculture,—an abstract of Religious and Political intelligence, and whatever may be interesting and instructive to families in general. A portion of its columns will be open to Advertisements and Prices Current—another portion to sustain the interests of the Methodist Protestant Church in the West.—These two latter objects will not likely occupy more than one page.

The RECORDER will take a firm stand against Clerical Supremacy.

THE WESTERN RECORDER.

RINGER, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.
DOLLARS PER ANNUM IN ADVANCE.

Vol. 2.--No. 7. ZANESVILLE, OHIO, WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 7, 1840. Whole No. 59.

JOHN W. WHITE, PRINTER.
$2.50, IN THREE MONTHS; $3, END OF YEAR.

MMUNICATIONS.

For the Western Recorder.

AN ADDRESS

MEMBERS OF THE OHIO CONFERENCE.

BY THE REV. N. SNETHEN.

tance of a discourse delivered before the o Annual Conference, Cincinnati, August 26, 1840.

fore, laying aside all malice, and all guile, crisies, and envies, and all evil speaking; rn babes desire the sincere milk of the t ye may grow thereby: if so be ye have t the Lord is gracious. 1st Peter ii. 1, no cause to doubt the integrity of any ist whom I do know. And all with nave conversed, have spurned the idea ation. Some of my best friends are ists and moral suasionists; and yet, so uaded have I been of the existence of e of a political party, that I did not oin the society. This one thing, which feared, has come to pass. One other fear, and that is, the existence of the a revolutionary conscience. May this alsified—be demonstrated by time and nave been needless. I have ventured, to coin this term, revolutionary con- I seem to perceive it in embryo—in s, "Slavery is a moral evil." That is, cience of an abolitionist will authorize him to abolish slavery as a moral evil. Every where. All over the world.—not this right? I have you and your young brethren, in my eye. This is d, I believe, from all that I can learn , assumed by all our young preachers entered the list as abolitionists. Now, think, and say, and write, not only ery is a moral evil, but that all political or despotism is a moral evil, and that ry is a moral evil. And yet, my con- will not authorize or allow me to abolish tyranny nor idolatry as moral evils, all world, by revolution; and so my con- differs from the consciences of certain ns, and from the consciences of Mahom- When I can reconcile it to my con- not to revolutionize idolatry, and so t, it is not because I hold it to be a tural or political evil, much less no evil or I hold it to be a moral evil. I come re you, my brethren, both old and young, ference, for the first time. For, as I the first time, introduce party politics, be worse than useless not to go to what ve the root of the matter. Shall every among us who believes that slavery is evil become an abolition third political an? And if there be others, shall they political party men, in one or the other olitical parties? These questions, you re not before the time, for the time is What, if I should say, dear brethren, ave thought upon these subjects more u all? It would not follow, that I have truer or even truly. All must turn upon h of the premises. I profess to have a ting conscience. How do I come by it? neratory principles. The consciences of llow our principle, or take on their modes. uld the Apostles and the primitive chris- ave lived in the midst of the slavery, and , and idolatry of the Roman empire; and d so little about either. Some say that did not exist; others say, that it was not evil. We say, the primitive christians new born babes, who laid aside all poli- rty spirit, and desired the sincere milk of d, that they might grow thereby. Give it for our sincerity, and you will admit therein, are right. The littleness of mitive church was a consequence of the rth. It depended for its growth upon its e for the sincere milk of the word, and a t supply of that. Votes and voting con- body, and no young convert can grow by In our country if, as preachers, we see o vote, our votes must be counted. And rother preachers, we vote in opposition to ther, we can do so without giving just f offence or hindering our usefulness.— embers of the primitive church, except St. nd a very few others who were Roman s, could not vote at all, and even the citizens had no control over the govern- No political parties of course could een formed, except to overthrow the gov- t. We differ in opinion with certain , as we consider the "fullness of time," the time of the greatest, but of the least tion, and so suited to the new born babes. ews never would have suffered these to d to grow if the Romans had not protected No imperial edict was issued to put ans to death, until after the burning of in the latter part of Nero's reign, and before the destruction of Jerusalem.— ence thus signified, that the imperial gov- t was safer for the new born church of , than the consular government, or the nwealth would have been. The Jews, tolerated, were always impatient under vincial government, and availed them- of every opportunity and means to pre- throw off the Roman yoke, and finally the desperate attempt which ended in uin. Most of the first christians being y birth, all their propensities to political strife must have been in favor of the holy nd temple. The Saviour first and the les next, cautioned them against all poli- associations for this purpose, lest they be involved in the common ruin. Chris- y was not a conquering religion, it was not condition to conquer, and it could have gained nothing by conquest. The sons of Abraham and the sons of Circumcission; that is, those who were born of the will of the flesh or of blood, might hope to gain by conquest and revolution; but not the sons of God, who were born from above—born of the spirit. Suppose that Vespacian had written to Nero, that there was among the Nazarenes, or christians, a political party in favor of emancipation or abolition, or of the liberty of the Jews, would not the Emperor have immediately issued an edict to exterminate them? The violence of the political parties among the Jews during the seige of Jerusalem, according to Josephus and Tacitus, was most frightful, and did more to hasten their overthrow than the valor of the beseigers. A kingdom divided against itself cannot stand.

[CONTINUED.]

Small as we are in numbers our union in any one political party is now impossible. And our political division, without speaking evil of each other, no less so, our greatest forbearance, is required to allow each other to vote, individually, in our own way. With the utmost increase of brotherly love, it will be a work of time to unite us, and to keep us as one. But let the all exciting spirit of abolition, transformed into political party spirit, come among us, and how will it divide, to destroy! How will it separate chief friends! What limits can be set to the malice, and guile, and hypocrisy, and envy and evil speaking it will create among us! As babes in Christ our growth must cease under its influence, for it will destroy our desire or appetite for the sincere or guileless (Adolon) baitless milk of the word. And if we should cease to grow, in our present diminutive size, we might as well cease to live. It is not "the coming to nothing" that we have so much to fear, as a weakly, sickly, dwarfish existence. The history of religion abounds in such examples, and not a few exist in the present times. A young church, like a young child, cannot long cease to grow, and then begin to grow again. The solicitude of the apostles for the growth of the primitive church is manifest in all their epistles. Among all our dangers, no one, to us, has seemed greater, than the danger from the idea which has prevailed among us, that so soon as we assume a separate church character, we are on a par with the oldest and best established churches, or confounding independence with equality in condition. The identity of a child is as entire as that of a full grown person; but how unequal the conditions. Religious liberty is not the same as religious equality. The former does involve the latter. Exclude the association of growth from children and their being ceases to be desirable. What room, and what hope is there for growth in giant beginners and beginnings? And what ground is there for sympathy, if they fail in their attempts? Herod seeks the young child's life. Does the new born Messiah encounter the old king? Not so. He must have time to grow. The oldest, and greatest, and wisest of the sons of Abraham must be born of God. And the Gentles must become fellow heirs with them. Neither of the races had any experience in this relation. National pride and prejudice opposed their mutual union. Every thing had to be learned anew. We too, in our new church fellowship, have old prejudices and pride of opinion to encounter. Are we then prepared, before we have tested the strength of our new attachments, to take our station side by side with veteran churchmen in fierce political party combat? On a small scale we have had some humiliating experience, being compelled with shame, by the inconsistency or insubordination of our brethren, to take the lowest seat. The small must become great. The ignorant must become wise. And the weak must become strong before they can become equals with the great, and the wise, and the strong. While we are as children we must think, and speak, and act like children. The good will and the good hope of the churches in our behalf, can only be won and secured by our growth.

Of the real merits of the abolition question in its present mode we are not called upon to give an opinion. The subject came into action since the birth of our church. We could not have anticipated it, and of course could not have provided for it, or its consequences. It found us in our feeblest infancy. It has rapidly assumed a political aspect and bearing, in that division in its ranks nearest to us. Have we not the right to claim the neutrality of new born babes, and to advise you my young friends to keep out of harm's way? The oldest and most wary politicians often complain of their temptations to speak unadvisedly with their lips, wherefore laying aside all evil speakings. Bring not these great national and constitutional questions into the pulpit and church. Envyings stick close to them; and who can stand before political envy? A political party without ambition, must be a party without spirit,—a dead party. If party spirit be not generated by ambition, it must generate it or die. The patriotism and philanthropy which can only act under party excitement, can never sublimate into spiritual religion, even in the hearts of the aged; and in the breasts of the young it is like a wild fire. The spirit of political parties is a master spirit. It exacts prompt and passive obedience. Woe to those whom it denounces as half-hearted. The young ministers of a new born church, in an old political party or party of old politicians, are exposed to the contagion of evil communications, with the smallest amount of experience and skill to counteract it. In the success of the party they have the least to gain, and in its defeat the most to loose. Behold! I send you forth as lambs among wolves; be ye therefore as wise as serpents, and harmless as doves. Does not harmlessness require us to lay aside, avoid, not unite with, all malice, and guile, or all parties in which they are allowed? Be not partakers of other men's sins. In these parties the noviciates can have no choice or selection of the company they may have to keep. The weakest must yield to the attraction or influence of the strongest, when they are in a condition to be attracted.

But when we have laid aside all these, our virtues are still but negative. In abstaining from persons or things we grow not thereby.—There are two conditions of spiritual as well as natural infant growth, viz: appetite and suitable nourishment. The new born babes must have a desire or appetite for milk, and must have milk in order to a healthy growth. The germe of spiritual life or grace, can no more expand into a body without nourishment and assimulation than the germe of spiritual life. Those who are born from above may starve without the sincere milk of the word. This is the great law of religious life. It cannot be perpetuated by condiments or stimulents alone, it requires pabulum. The power of digestion and assimulation generally fails with the loss of appetite. The primary desire of the spiritual mind is for the (To logicon adolon gala,) for logic rather than rhetoric, for truth rather than poetry or fiction and fancy. It is not safe to beguile or over stimulate the minds of young converts by foreign mixtures with the word. Increase in size is not thus produced. The vices we are directed to lay aside, may be transferred by and through the teacher, in combination with the word, so as to affect the learner's mind and heart. All these maxims apply to new churches and societies, as we have said, as well as individuals. The number of new beginners add nothing to the common stock of their experience. But new churches may be strong or powerful under a skilful leader, upon the revolutionary principle. But upon the regenerative principle, desire for the milk of the word is implied or included in the life of the new born christians. This is St. Paul's idea. I have not fed you with meat, for hitherto, ye were not able to bear it. And he enlarges upon the same idea, in the epistle to the Hebrews. Besides the fears of being misunderstood, which we have already expressed, we have had and still have others, respecting the misapprehension and misapplication of what we propose to say about the strong meat of doctrine. We have said that young preachers of new religious denominations ought not to join political parties. And we may be understood to say or to mean, that nobody ought to join them, for many persons are in the habit of thinking, that young preachers, so circumstanced, ought to do every thing which is done by old ministers in established churches. And when we say that difficult and controverted subjects ought not to be preached in new churches, many persons will think that we mean that they ought not to be preached at all, for many persons make no distinction between new churches and old ones. And others believe that truth can never do any harm under any circumstances, meaning of course, what they believe to be the truth may be safely spoken at all times and to all persons. Did St. Peter mean, by the sincere milk of the word, every truth or all kinds of truth? We cannot so understand him. They were to desire this milk of the word as babes.—They were not surely to be fed with other words. This sincere milk of the word was to produce or promote growth, "that ye may grow by it."

It seems to us that it will be proper, and, indeed, is a duty we owe to our young preachers, on this occasion to introduce in the presence of the conference, Br. Shinn's book. Until now we have been silent respecting it. Every member of this conference, I trust, is sufficiently acquainted with the long and intimate friendship between Br. Shinn and myself, to preclude suspicion of any unkind feeling in my heart towards him. I regard the publication of Br. Shinn's book as untimely. It seems to me that as new born babes we shall not be apt to grow thereby, as it has already become a subject of controversy among us, and of some unkind feelings. My friend has repeated so often and so earnestly his opinion that truth can do no harm, and knowing, as I well do, the high confidence and affection in him, common among us, I anticipate no little surprize at my expression of a difference of opinion on this very point. I mean not to give any opinion of my friend's book. I am not prepared to do it, and have not time to sustain it. But if I believed its contents to be all true, upon my own hypothesis, I might still say that its publication is untimely. Opinions of it are various and opposite among us, and around us, and no explanation of his, or defence, for a length of time to come, is likely to harmonize these opinions. He is now occupying two of our papers with his defence; others will be apt to reply. Shall we all desire this discussion as sincere milk? Will it make us grow? Will there be no envyings, no evil speakings? The book, we are told, contains strong meat. We need sweet and pure milk. We are so young, so feeble, and our desires even for milk, are so weak, we seem to need much nursing. Br. Shinn's book is said to be opposed by others. But it was welcomed, in this city, by the Universalists or Restorationists. So the matter seems to rest at present.

My departed friend and brother Elliott, in his life time, lectured upon the literal fulfilment of the prophecies, and the actual reign of Christ upon earth and in Jerusalem, literally sitting upon the throne of His father David on Mount Zion, and so uniting church and state under His own universal sovereignty, as a demonstration of the truth of the doctrine of final restoration. We have read the substance, we believe, of all that has been written in support of this literal fulfilment of the prophecies. But it proves to be too strong meat for us to swallow. It is well known that the Jewish rulers procured the crucifixion of Jesus because He would not do this very thing. Would not a literal reign of Christ prove that they were right in principle? Even a primary or delegated head of the church upon earth, must needs unite church and state. All those interpreters and lecturers whom we have read or heard, have these embassadors of the kings of the earth at the court of king Jesus on Mount Zion. All the apparatus of civil government is put in operation on this universal plan. Strong meat my young friends. Is it not too strong to make new born babes grow? In the half century of our experience and observation, Methodist babes seem to us not to have grown thereby. We do not advise you to feed our young church with it. What you may do or how you may preach, if you live to see the M. P. Church come in the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the fullness of the stature of Christ;—no more children tossed to and fro, and carried about with every wind of doctrine, you will probably know better than we can now tell you. Whatever may come to pass after the great and final day of judgment, we leave, and we advise you to leave with our dead and living friends and brethren; and to give all diligence to aid our new converts, who must all stand with us before the judgment seat of Christ to give an account for the deeds done in the body, in making their calling and election sure. Our common friend, we do not suppose, meant his book as milk for babes, but rather seems to have assumed that we are of full age. While we appreciate, in his advice how to read his book, his sincerity, we do not repeat it. Had he cautioned a certain class of his readers to suspend their faith for so long a time, it would have been more consonant to our views of human nature. "Drowning men catch at straws." The propensity of the human heart to seize upon every idea beyond the judgment, as gospel, instead of the gospel on this side of the judgment. The germe of Br. Shinn's present book was in his book on Salvation. That book, we are informed, did much good in the old church. Can a book then, with the same leading idea, do good in an old church and not in a new one? Can strong meat make a good dinner for adults, and yet injure children?

My estimable friend seemed disposed to ridicule the idea of infinite demerit in sin, and infinite merit in redemption, as though there could be more than one infinite. But in the old church the passage seems to have attracted little attention, and we heard no criticism upon it. He is now a minister of a new church, and his former friends suspect it of Universalism. So do circumstances alter cases. Charity covers nothing now. A passing thought on the word infinite, for the sake of our young fellow laborers, as a subject for reflection. The primary meaning seems to be without end; endless, from in, negation, and finis, end; and so may answer to im negation for in, and mortal without immortality, never dies or ends, lives forever. Immortal souls have an endless life, live forever. How differs the infinite soul of man from this meaning? The soul had a beginning, but has no end. One has said it is a picture of God's own eternity. May we not say that the effects of sin upon an immortal soul may last or remain forever, without violating the meaning of words? We have seen the effects of sin upon human bodies as long as they lived. Where my friend says he did not intend or mean so, or so, I believe him, having full confidence in his integrity. It is the timing of the publication in which I differ with him in judgment. Such, in my apprehension, is the relative condition of the public mind, that it may do harm, if it is not defended; and its defence may do harm. I give no place to the idea that he alone is responsible, and that he can suffer alone. He is a member of our body, and if one member suffer, all the members must suffer with it.

The book revives all the old notions and opinions upon the subject of future rewards and punishments, one of the most excitable of all subjects; and neither the author nor his friends can prevent it. Life and immortality were brought into (a new and different) light by the gospel. According to the prevailing opinion among ancient teachers of systems, the human soul is an excerpt from the Diety, or the soul of the world, and contracts impurity in the body for which it is furnished, and purified by transmigrating through other bodies. When it is re-absorbed into the the Deity and loses its ideal consciousness; and if it be not purified it is annihilated or destroyed. Before the gospel, this plan of purification and destruction existed under many modes, more or less varied. The idea of the pre-existence and transmigration of souls existed among the Jews. The question, "Master, who did sin, this (blim) man or his parent?" implied it. It obtained among the Babylonians, the Egyptians, the Persians, the Greeks and Romans. And is still the prevailing belief among the Brachmins of eastern Asia, and the Chinese Bronszes, &c. At the present time the priests are believed to have control over these transmigrations, to prescribe the penances of the living, and to set bounds to the punishments of the dead.

[TO BE CONCLUDED.]

For the Western Recorder.

It is success that closes all in life;—
Success makes fools admir'd, makes villians honest,
All the proud virtue of the vaunting world
Fawns on success and power, howe'er acquired."

The term PIONEER is defined, "one whose business is to level the road, throw up works, or sink mines in military operations." But the phrase is now used, in application to adventurers, or the first settlers of a new country—and to those who introduce the gospel into new regions. "Men of enterprize are pioneers—they fall the trees, plough up the land and scatter the seed, while others generally reap the harvest"—some fatten on the spoils of others; like vultures which gorge themselves on the slain of the battle field—ambitious of "success and power howe'er acquired."

The winter of 1779—80, was long remembered by the pioneers of the West as "the hard winter"—for such it was in reality—many had emigrated in the fall, among whom was the family of the writer—no houses to shelter them—compelled to dwell in camps, till cabins could be reared—corn could scarcely be obtained at any price—and if obtained in small quantities, no mills to prepare it for bread—and many lived without bread until they raised it the following season—wild meat without salt was the main, and almost only dependence—deep snow covered the ground till March. The father of the writer died, and left a widowed mother and eight children, to bear the hardships, and endure the sufferings and dangers, of a wilderness infested with ferocious savages and wild beasts. This, to a woman reared in the lap of plenty, near Philadelphia, was a trial, of which none can form an adequate idea. The spring of 1780 opened, and vegetation sprang up, to cheer the dreary scene—a ground pea, as a substitute for bread, was sought with avidity, by almost famished women and children—roasted and eaten as a precious morsel. The cane was to be cleared away—the heavy timber to be felled, &c. to prepare for a crop, by those enfeebled by want of bread, and wasting disease produced by subsisting on wild meat without salt. But more appalling dangers awaited these pioneers—prowling savages sallied forth from their lurking places to spread dismay—the fields were cleared, and the crop cultivated at their peril—pent up in forts or stations, in a state of almost perpetual alarm—the attack on Bryants station, and "the Blue-lick defeat," where fell many brave men, excited a spirit of despondency—serious thoughts were entertained by some, of retracing their steps to the old settlements—but a howling wilderness lay in the way—the revolutionary war still raged—the epithet Whig or Tory, were but the signal for destruction. If these were times, to 'try men's souls'—how was it with timid females, whose husbands had died, or fallen victims to savage ferocity? A brother of the writer, about ten years old, went out to catch a horse, and was heard of no more—another brother about 16 years, went out on a hunting party with two men—the men were killed, and he taken prisoner, by the Shuanee Indians, who after an absence of eighteen months, made his escape, and returned home, to comfort a disconsolate mother, who was piously trusting in God. Many of those adventurous pioneers, profited but little by the hazardous enterprize. They indeed braved danger—suffered privation—endured hardships—felled the trees—ploughed up the land—sowed the seed—builded houses, &c.—but when the storm of war was over—and peace and plenty ensued—those artful vultures, who "fatten upon the spoils of others,"—dispossessed them of their hard earned homes, and with the voraciousness, and relentlessness, of insatiable avarice, reaped the harvest. To the disgrace of man, made in the image of God—there are those, and not a few, who fatten upon the spoils, and profit by the misfortunes of others—and not only "a vaunting world," but religious sectaries—and professed Christians, and the Reverend clergy—"Fawn on success and power, howe'er acquired." And how many of the unfortunate worthy, have to endure, not only contemptuous neglect, but the harsh reproaches of those, who because a man is unfortunate, are too ready to accuse him of dishonesty, to brand him with ignominy—thus robbing him of the only treasure which an evil fortune may have left him—his good name? L. GARRETT.

Nashville, Tenn. Aug. 29, 1840.

For the Western Recorder.

Mr. Editor: In your paper of Aug. 12th I find a communication from James O. Harris, of Eaton, Ohio, and I am aware there are persons weak enough to be mislead by any thing in the shape of an argument, in support of immersion, as a mode of baptism. This arises from a fixed principle in human nature to walk by sight rather than by faith and to choose the most ostentacious and imposing form of every religious ceremony. I think it well enough to show the weakness and absurdity of Mr. Harris's imaginary immersion of Jesus Christ and about one million of his followers, without the application of one drop of water or any other means for a substitute.

In the first place he objects to the priesthood of John the Baptist and to the idea of his being a Jew. He says "there is not one word of his being a Jewish priest under the law." Luke tells us in chap. 1: 5, that his father was a priest of the course of Abia and his mother was of the daughters of Aaron. Therefore, if John was not a Jewish priest neither were the Levites, the sons of Aaron, for he was one of them. A priest is one called of God to minister in holy things, and the term Jewish only designates the nation to which he belonged, and Christ and not John was the end of the ritual law.

But says Mr. H. he was the voice of one crying in the wilderness. "I think the voice of the Jewish priest never was heard in the wilderness." The Bible informs us that the Jewish priesthood was instituted and the priests thereof offered sacrifices forty years in the wilderness. But Mr. H. thinks the account false, I suppose, and has he yet to learn that the scene of John's ministry was a moral and not a natural wilderness?

Mr. H. would palm upon us the silent shame and speechless confusion of a few hypocritical scribes and pharisees for "Divine testimony" that John's baptism was a perfectly new institution which the Jews rejected as an heathenish affair contrary to their law. The Bible however contradicts the Divine testimony of these poor dumb hypocrites, and tells that the Jews so universally received John's baptism that all Judea and Jerusalem and all the region round about were baptised of him in Jordan, and Josephus, a Jew, tells us his priesthood and ministry were so popular with the Jews that Herod trembled on his throne, lest the Jews should dethrone him in order to place John in his stead to reign over them as a king, and to prevent it cast John into prison and supposes the Divine vengeance fell on Herod for this persecution of a pious servant of the most High God.

In reference to the baptism of Christ Mr. Harris is equally unhappy. Having rejected what he himself calls the "baptising" his body in blood and water on the cross, he proceeds to the imaginary immersion in suffering as an only refuge from a plain literal baptism of the body of our beloved Redeemer in the fountain opened in the house of David, for the washing away of sin and uncleanness, but whether the Divinity the soul or body of Christ or altogether is immersed in this pool of suffering no hint is given. One thing we know, if suffering is baptism and our sins are washed away in baptism, we are all perfectly sure of heaven who have to pass through the suffering of life and the agonizing pangs of death. Mr. H. says "according to Luke this (viz. Baptism) took place in his being straitened or pained" and refers to Luke 12: 50.—Let us substitute the word filthy for straitened and try Mr. H's. mode of grammatical construction in the meantime we will call baptism washing. I have a washing wherewith to be washed and how filthy I am till I am washed. Now Mr. H's. construction of Luke is "in being straitened I am baptised;" the same rule makes me say in the above sentence, "in being filthy I am washed," or by my suffering I am baptised, and by my filthiness I am washed. This is a most unfortunate garbling of the common sense of language. In another place he tells us the bread and wine are the emblems of Christ's sufferings. Now if his sufferings are his baptism, the Holy sacrament was instituted to perpetuate the memory of Christ's baptism on earth, and on this plan what are we baptised for?

Mr. Harris next undertakes to make it appear that the Israelites were immersed in the Red Sea, at the same time he is exceeding careful to remove all idea of the spray from the cloud or the sea sprinkling them. This, in his estimation, would be very unfortunate. "But David in the 77th Psalm says "the clouds poured out water on them." Nothing could have been more carefully guarded against by Moses in his account, than the idea of an immersion having taken place in the baptism of the Israelites. Four times in the same chapter he tells us the land on which they passed through the sea was dry, and in this the miracle of their salvation solely and entirely consisted. The Egyptians were immersed, but their immersion is no where called baptism by any inspired writer. The Israelites were only sprinkled with water standing on dry ground, were scripturally baptised; the idea of the congealed walls of the sea on either side and the cloud passing in the element above their heads, being an immersion is too ridiculous to merit even a passing notice. No man will ever offer such an argument unless in defence of some pre-conceived opinion, and not even then unless driven to it from a lack of all rational evidence to support a favorite dogma. If this was immersion I have yet to learn the meaning of that term.—On this mode of argument it would mean anything or nothing, so we were kept out of the water and not a drop suffered to be sprinkled on our bodies. We might always be considered immersed by mountains and skies or clouds that rolled in the heavens above us. On this plan we are all continually passing through baptism by immersion, if immersion always means baptism, and being in the neighborhood of an object is tantamount to be immersed in it. Let every one that believes it best, be immersed in water, but do not contradict the word of God and deny the plainest truths recorded in the Bible.—Mr. H. from the fact of the Greeks practicing immersion, hesitates not to say that the apostles always understood baptism to be immersion; the Greeks always baptize their infants, therefore infant baptism was the apostolic practice. Will he admit his own argument? Will it answer his purpose? Nay, verily, he would not give a fig for it, and if a man will offer an argument let him give some hint from the author of our holy religion to support his notion of things, or be at peace and let a christian community be content to obey the commands of God.

JOHN WILLAMS.

Morgantown, Ia., Sep. 2, 1840.

WESTERN RECORDER.

ZANESVILLE:

WEDNESDAY, ... OCTOBER 7, 1840.

We learn from the following article from the Philadelphia Saturday Courier that wooden pavements, so highly spoken of by the press, a few years since, are not likely to answer the purpose.

PAVING STREETS WITH WOOD.—The condition of the wooden pavement in Walnut street, opposite the exchange, is getting worse and worse. The authorities should look to it.—Inquirer.

The authorities have looked to it, and would months since have paved the square with pebbles, but for the wish of the owners and occupiers of property on both sides. They desired that the plan for paving with wood, introduced from Europe by Mr. Fisher, of New York, should be adopted, and their request was complied with. Meantime, we know that the Chairman of the Paving Committee has grown weary of the delay, and entertains the thought of putting down the stone.—U. S. Gazette.

In this city, within four years, we have had four distinct pieces of road paved with wooden blocks. They have been generally sawed about nine inches in length, and placed upright. Close by our office we have the first specimen of wood paving which took place in this city. It is the piece above alluded to by the Inquirer. It runs along the south of the Exchange, and is now worse than the grid-iron roads of Passadumkeag. Some of the blocks are so badly decayed, that there is great danger, in driving over the road, that horses will get into the holes, stumble and break the carriage in pieces, or kill those who are riding. And yet, if we recollect correctly, this road has not been laid over two years.

It certainly would be a great comfort to a great city, if wooden pavements could be made to answer. But, we must confess, with the examples we have thus far seen, we fear they will not. A stone road will last a quarter of a century.—Besides, a stone road, although a noisy one, is a means of protecting the health of a town. For instance, before Philadelphia was paved with stone, the city was subject to diseases, especially produced by miasmatic influences. Since it has been paved with stone, it has been the most healthy city in the world. This is shown by actual bills of mortality. That portion of New Orleans which has been paved with stone, has rendered the districts where it has been accomplished far more healthy. But, there is every reason to believe that a great city, covered over with wooden blocks, would be subject to miasmatic influences, which would greatly endanger its general health.

It is proper to say, in this connection, that many persons have contended that wood paving may be made to answer, if the blocks shall first be submitted to the process of "Kianising"—a process which is thus described by our brother of the Boston Gazette.

It consists in saturating it with a solution of corrosive sublimate, prepared for that purpose and placed in a tank. We learn with pleasure that the process is not very expensive and that it has been made use of, not only for a part of the second track of the Boston and Worcester Rail-Road; but also, for a portion of the sleepers of the New-Bedford and Taunton Rail-Road.

We have been informed, that kianised timber has been found, in England, inaccessible to rot, having been subjected to very severe tests in some of her Majesty's Dock Yards, to test the efficacy of this process.

We see from the following article that members of the Methodist Episcopal Church are still having an eye to the rights of the white as well as the colored man. The question of lay-representation will never cease to agitate that church as long as it is withheld.

From the National Anti-Slavery Standard.

METHODIST ANTI-SLAVERY CONVENTION.

Mr. Editor—I am pleased to witness a disposition on the part of the Methodist Abolitionists to bring the great question of "rights" before the public. Having myself, for a number of years, been a member of that communion, I feel a deep interest in all that relates to her prosperity.

I recently observed in "Zion's Watchman" a "call" for a "National Anti-Slavery Convention," to be held in the city of New York, on the 6th of October next. Having had the honor of being a member of two or three Methodist Conventions, and not being abundantly pleased with the "management" of either of them, I have a great solicitude to understand the plan of operation proposed to be perused at the contemplated meeting.

My objections to the former Conventions were, that they were too much "managed;" that the ministry assumed the entire control of them, and throughout the meetings seemed to have but one object in view—the preservation of their own rights—and were very ready to direct the engines of the laity to the attainment of that object, while not a measure, of any importance, for the defence or security of the "rights of the laity," has been brought forward. I do not by these remarks wish to excite distrust or jealousy of the ministry, for many of them are set for the "defence of the truth," and are honestly engaged in the work of reform. But I simply refer to the past (in view of the proposed Convention) for "what has been may be again," and I am "more than ever convinced" of the fallacy of the laity of the church ever receiving from the ministry their just and equal rights and privileges, until they not only assert, but evince a determination to maintain them. Why has the anti-slavery cause progressed so slowly in the Methodist Episcopal Church? Simply because the tremendous power that controls her destiny did not will it. Hence its crushing influence has been brought to bear upon all who dissented from that will. The despotic features of Episcopal Methodism (and what is there in her government which is not despotic) has been developed to a fearful extent. The "rights" of her laity have been utterly annihilated, and her "chief ministers" have pursued with fell purpose, from conference to conference, those of their own privileged order, whose advocacy of the "bondman's" wrong had rendered them obnoxious to their displeasure.

The annihilation of the rights of the laity, results in the annihilation of all rights. The ministry of the Methodist Episcopal Church have concentrated all power in their own hands, which power is used as best subserves the interest of her chief ministers, as those have experienced who have dared to dissent from them upon the question of slavery.—Hence those of our ministering brethren, who gave at least tacit consent to this robbery of the laity, are alarmed at the danger that surrounds themselves. The "poisoned chalice" has visited their own lips. "Gags" and "excisions" have been apportioned them. Hence the long and loud cry which has reverberated through our land for a gathering of "Methodists." I rejoice at these manifestations, but I also wish to understand distinctly what are the specific objects aimed at in that rallying; all should be open and frank. What was the result of former meetings? echo answers, what! The time was consumed in devising ways and means, which when devised were perfectly futile, to protect themselves! That they should have liberty to think, to speak, to act; that they, when in conference assembled, might have the right to utter forth their deep denunciations of slavery, that they might attend conventions, and there express their detestation of southern oppression. But when and where has the first movement been made to burst the bands which bind down six hundred thousand of their lay brethren? When and where was the mighty effort put forth to enfranchise them? It has not yet been made, and brethren, if you go not up to the Convention prepared to do that work yourselves, it would not be done.

Brethren, will you, can you, in any possible contingency, aid in perpetuating that system of outrage, Methodist Episcopacy? I hope not. I know you love Methodism, and her doctrines are worthy your love. But there is a world wide difference between her doctrines and her government. The one commends itself to every man's judgment; the other is the tyrant's first born, and should be the execration of every friend of civil and religious liberty. It will perhaps be said by those whose abolitionism is of that mongrel cast which can trample on humanity, in the person of the laity; that this has nothing to do with anti-slavery. I answer, it is time then that it had.—And, my brethren, let me assure you if this opportunity passes by unimproved, the day of your redemption is further removed than ever.

UTICA CONVENTION.

P. S. I noticed In a recent Watchman, an approval of the "call" for the Convention, signed by one who has outraged the rights of the laity, within the past year, more than any other man in the connection, and all that "the dignity of the conference" might be sustained. Pray tell me what he wants of a Convention?.

THE YOUNG MAN'S COURSE.—I saw him first at the social party. He took but a single glass of wine, and that in compliance with the request of a fair young lady with whom he conversed.

I saw him next when he supposed he was unseen, taking a glass to satisfy the slight desire formed by sordid indulgence. He thought there was no danger.

I saw him again, with some of his own age meeting at night to spend a short time in convivial pleasure. He said it was only innocent amusement.

I met him next reeling in the street—a confused stare was on his countenance, and words of blasphemy on his tongue. Shame was gone.

I saw him yet once more—he was pale, cold, and motionless, and was carried by his friends to his last resting place. In the small procession that followed, every head was cast down with grief and shame—and two aged frames seemed to shake with uncommon anguish. His father's gray hairs were going to the grave with sorrow. His mother wept to think she had ever given being to such a child.

I thought of his future state. I opened the Bible and read, "Drunkards shall not enter the kingdom of heaven."

A SHORT HINT FOR OUR YOUNG FRIENDS.—Remember that a slight fault, detected in time, and guarded against with the utmost vigilance, will result to your credit and honor, and make the next difficulty more easy to overcome. The young dislike very much to have their wrong actions exposed to view. They would rather utter a falsehood than be detected. But blessed is that youth, whose mind has been tempered in religion's holy fount! he knows the value of a friend, who can spread to the eye the corruptions of his nature, and point him to a safe and easy remedy.

REPORT OF MESSRS. FEATHERSTONHAUGH AND MUDGE.—Two of the British magazines for September, Blackwood's and Frazer's, contain articles upon the question of the North-Eastern boundary, in which they assume that the report of Messrs. Featherstonhaugh and Mudge is a correct and ingenuous document. As we are disposed to think otherwise, we will assign a few reasons for our opinion.

In the first place, from our knowledge of Mr. Featherstonhaugh, who has the credit of having drawn up the report, we would not place the slightest reliance upon any statements that he might make—believing that even if he had the disposition to speak the truth, he has neither the capacity nor the science requisite to fulfil the important task assigned to him by Lord Palmerston, with fidelity and precision. When we first knew this Mr. Featherstonhaugh, he rejoiced in the title of United States Geologist—a title which he must have assumed of his own authority and accord, as it is unknown to our laws. He flourished about at Washington for a season or two under this profession, but seemed to be generally regarded as a harmles quack.

Failing in his attempts to get into the U. S. Treasury crib, Mr. Featherstonhaugh appears to have returned to his native country, and succeeded in humbugging Lord Palmerston. The result of his mission has been a report, in which he of course repudiates the claims of Maine to the disputed boundary, and sides with the interests of his employers. The second article in the treaty of 1783, upon the true construction of which the whole controversy hangs, is as follows:

"Artitle 2. And that all disputes which might arise in future on the subject of the boundaries of the said United States may be prevented, it is hereby agreed and declared that the following are, and shall be, their boundaries: viz. from the North-West angle of Nova Scotia, viz. that angle which is formed by a line drawn due north from the source of the St. Croix river to the Highlands, along the said Highlands which divide those rivers that empty themselves into the river St. Lawrence from those which fall into the Atlantic Ocean, to the North-Westernmost head of the Connecticut river; thence down along," &c. &c.

In regard to this, the British Commissioners report as follows:

"We report," say they, at the conclusion of their labors, "that we have found a line of highlands, agreeing with the language of the 2d article of the treaty 1783, extending from the north-westernmost head of the Connecticut river to the sources of the Chaudiere, and passing from thence in a north-easterly direction, south of the Roostue, to the Bay of Chaleurs. We further report, that there does not exist, in the disputed territory, any other line of highlands, which is in accordance with the 2d article of the treaty of 1783; and that the line which is claimed on the part of the United States, as the line of the higlands of the treaty of 1783, does not pass nearer than from 40 or 50 miles of the north-westernmost head of the Connecticut river, and therefore has no pretension to be put forward as the line intended by the treaty of 1783."

The pretence of Mr. Featherstonhaugh is, therefore, that he has found a new line of highlands, which corresponds more exactly with the terms of the treaty than those claimed by the United States. And yet, while he attempts to deny the existence of the highlands claimed as our boundary, he speaks of them as an "elevated country along the crest of which * * various hills, with occasional peaks are seen, much separated from each other, but once probably were united in a continuous, irregular curved line, tending northeasterly to southeasterly to southwesterly."

The plea that the St. John is not a river of "those, which flow into the Atlantic Ocean," will not do, inasmuch as the commissioners claim that the St. Croix, which flows into Passamaquaddy Bay, and the Penobscot, which flows into Penobscot Bay, are nevertheless "rivers" which in the treaty sense, "fall into the Atlantic Ocean."

We trust that the American Commissioners, who are now engaged in surveying the disputed territory will give us a fair, ingenuous and scientific report, unbiased by party prejudices and hopes. Indeed from the character of the gentlemen composing the Commission, we are assured that our wishes upon this point will be abundantly fulfilled.—N. World.

NEW DEFINITIONS ADAPTED TO THE TIMES.—Rich Relations—Distant acquaintances; like the great bear in the Museum, to be looked at and admired, but not approached.

Acccomplishments—An eternal squalling at the pianno; never speaking what you think, or acting as you truly feel.

Independence—Speaking your mind freely, where it cannot possibly hurt your interests.

Courage—Kicking a superannuated dog, or horsewhipping a lame medicant.

Modesty at table—Eating every thing off the platter, except the last piece.

High-minded politician—One who stoops to nothing below the fattest office.

Weak-minded—Neglecting a fine opportunity to cheat your neighbor.

Free-thinker—One who has the courage to dispute plain matters of fact.

The Detroit Advertiser states on the authority of a letter from England, that the political convicts from Canada, in Van Dieman's Land, will ere long be pardoned, and permitted to return home.

BTRNING OF THE ST. CHARLES HOTEL AT NEW ORLEANS.—This magnificent hotel was burnt to the ground, on the morning of the 10th ultimo. It was an immense brick building, covered with white stucco, and the largest hotel in the United States, not even excepting the Astor House.—Apart from the ground, the building cost nearly $500,000, and belonged to the New Orleans Exchange and Banking Company. It was insured for $260,000, of which $55,000 is in this city, $10,000 in Hartford, and the remainder in the South. For some time the house has been badly conducted, but arrangements had been entered into with those princely caterers, Messrs. Mudge & Watriss of the Astor House to keep it hereafter, and they having engaged a hundred servants to send out by a packet, which will sail in a few days. The hotel will doublessly be immediately rebuilt, as, when well conducted, the old one paid a large interest. It is supposed that the fire was the work of an incendiary.

The True American of the 12th says, that the building is only partially destroyed, and that the loss will be no more than $20,000. It gives the firemen great for their exertions, and adds that it is reduced to an absolute certainty that the fire was the work of an incendiary.—N. York paper.

MUSIC IN THE FAMILY.—By Mrs. Sigourney.—An excellent clergyman, possessing much knowledge of human nature, instructed his large family of daughters in the ordinary practice of music. They were all observed to be amiable and happy. A friend inquired if there was any secret in his mode of education. He replied "when any thing disturbs their temper, I say to them, sing; and if I hear them speaking against any person, I call them to sing to me, and they sing away all causes of discontent, and every disposition to scandal." Such a use of this accomplishment, might seem to fit a family for the company of angels. Young voices around the domestic altar, breathing sacred music, at the hour of morning and evening devotion, are a sweet and touching accomplishment.

REV. MR. NEWTON AT HOME.—The Wesleyan Conference commenced its sittings, according to appointment, in Brunswick chapel, Newcastle-upon-Tyne.—The Rev. Robert Newton, lately returned from his visit to America, where he went as a delegate from the British Conference to the American, was elected as president by a very large majority.—The place of secretary was filled up by the election of the Rev. Dr. Hannah to that office. The Wesleyan connection, so far as reports have been made, is in a state of great peace in all its departments; and it is expected that the actual increase of members to the society, during the last year, will not be less that 20,000, including about 6000 reported as the increase on the Mission stations.

AN OBITUARY.—The following notice, cut from the New Orleans Picayune, is undoubtedly from the pen of "Phaxma." It could not be improved:

Died, early yesterday morning, the 3d ultimo, in the seventy-third year of her age, Mrs. Catherine Field. She needs no obituary. In the hearts of children and grandchildren the memory of a fond mother's love is enshrined, to expire only when they follow her to that long home from whence no traveller returns. The first orison she breathes in heaven will not be that our tears may be checked, but that our hearts may be chastened, and the lesson of wisdom received into our souls. Farewell, Mother! There are no tears in heaven, but give us, who are still lingering in the trial place, your prayers, your prayers.

A CHAPTER OF ACCIDENTS AT BRIDGETON.—The reporter of the United States Gazette states that at a late Camp Meeting, in the usually quiet town of Bridgeton, N. J., a melee took place, in which Richard S. Bacon, a young man lately married, and of a quiet disposition, who had nothing whatever to do with the dispute, had his skull fractured by a blow, and was taken up for dead; but medical aid was procured, and seven pieces were taken from the skull on the following day. After this his reason, which had been alienated, returned, and he is now doing as well as can be expected. Three blacks are in prison on charges connected with this business.

THE RUINS OF A NOBLE MIND.—Southey, the Poet Laureate, who has probably accomplished as much intellectual labor as any man of his years, is, we are pained to learn from the following paragraph, suffering under a mental eclipse:

Rumors have for a considerable time been current respecting the health of Dr. Southey. Delicacy no longer requires the withholding of the melancholy fact, which will give the greatest grief to every lover of literature, that, through over much intellectual labor, Dr. Southey's fine mind has been so much prostrated and shattered that it is very unlikely that he will ever again appear before the world as a writer.

TEMPERANCE IN ENGLAND.—The London Globe says "the march of temperance is apparently progressive. There is not a publican who does not loudly proclaim of the falling off of business, although all sorts of attractions in the way of singing and music are enlisted in the temptations to the enjoyment of the social cup. The value of licensed victuallers' has fallen off immensely.

MORE INDIAN OUTRAGES.—The Tallahasse Flordian says:

"We have just learned that on Thursday morning last, the Indians attacked the house of Mr. Marshall, in Gadsden county. There was no person in the house at the time; but they fired on the overseer, who was at the barn. He made his escape, and the Indians set fire to the house. The overseer saw four Indians. Mr. Marshall's house was situated some five or six miles below Davis', on the Chattahoochie road."

On the 7th inst. the house of Mr. James Dorsey, about two miles from Chattahoochie, was plundered and burnt by Indians.

On the 4th inst. Capt. Beall of the U. S. Dragoons captured four Indian warriors.

On the 8th Lieut. Hanson left his post at Wacahoota with 30 men, on a scout, and soon after received a heavy fire from upwards of 100 Indians lying in ambush. One of his men was killed and four wounded.

TIME always mitigates, if it does not wholly efface those mortifications which are inflicted upon us by caprice or unkindness; though if its power were estimated by the acuteness of our feelings under their first impressions, we should say their remembrance would live for ever. Happily, also every mind has been gifted with its own peculiar antidote to sorrow. The quick and irritable soon exhaust their suffering in violence, while the patient lose its bitterness in fortitude and resignation.

FOREIGN NEWS.

From Bicknell's Reporter of Sep. 29.

EIGHT DAYS LATER FROM ENGLAND.

ARRIVAL OF THE GREAT WESTERN.

The punctual steamship, the Great Western, arrived at New York yesterday at 3½ P. M., after a passage of 15 days. She brings 60 passengers, and important intelligence.

Extract of a letter to the editor of the Pennsylvania Inquirer, dated

New York Bay, Sunday, Sep. 27.

I write you a few hasty lines to say that considerable depression and alarm are felt in the money markets of both London and Paris, owing to increased apprehensions in relation to a war between England and France; and active preparations are certainly in progress, and particularly in the naval arsenals. The probability, however, is, that the whole affair will be ultimately settled without an appeal to arms, unless some untoward collission should occur in the East.

Disturbances have taken place in Paris, but they were not of a very serious character, and were soon suppressed by the troops. The idle portion of the population of that metropolts are evidently in an uneasy and excited state—ready instruments of any bold and factious leader.

The English are leaving Paris as fast as possible, and by their absence, the Parisians will lose an immense expenditure of ready money. American stocks and securities naturally participate in the depression of the London Market—indeed, something like a panic prevails upon 'Change. Mr. Jaudon has returned by this vessel.

We are indebted to the N. Y. Herald for late London papers.

The N. Y. Herald states that the Great Western has a valuable cargo of dry goods, silks and woollens. Also, that the first division of the British fleet, consisting of 15 vessels of war, has left Singapore for Canton, to commence attacks.

Cotton was down to one-eigth of a penny.

Great preparations are making in the naval departments in England, for the expected war.

There has been an insurrection in Paris, but it was soon put down.

The news is very important. The funds at London are falling with alarming celerity. The British Three per cents. are as low as 87 5-8, and those of France are down to 75, with every probability of a farther retreat before the end of the current week. Investment was out of the question, and, as the sellers were numerous and on the increase, a much greater decline expected.

London, Friday night, Sep. 11.

My last despatch to you announced an increased bad feeling of the French people towards England, for having been a party to the late quadruple treaty. During the present week, this feeling has evidently increased, and several causes have occurred to heighten it to such a degree as seems to threaten the approach of war.

Commodore Napier, in command of a portion of the British fleet, arrived at Beyrout in Syria, from which place he issued the following proclamatory letter:

Copy of a letter to N. Moorse, Esq., her majesty's Consul at Beyrout.

Sir—I beg you will communicate to the consuls of the different powers, and the British merchants at Beyrout, that Great Britain, Russia, Austria and Prussia, have decided that Syria is to be restored to the Porte. I have demanded that the Turkish troops be put under my protection, and that the arms be restored to the inhabitants of Lebanon. I trust the Governor will not provoke hostilities; if he does, the responsibility of uselessly shedding blood must be on his own head. I have the honor to be, yours, &c.,

CHARLES NAPIER, Commodore.

INSURRECTION IN PARIS.

On Monday and Tuesday of this w a riotous movement of a most alarm nature occurred in Paris, however, troops soon succeed in its suppres and all is now tranquil. I send you accounts.

Symptoms of revolt were percep at an early hour in that very formid quarter "the terrible Faubourg St. toine," but down to this moment the have not been able to raise a regular ricade, and without one they can rais resistance to the troops. They m several attempts, however, to const "works" by overturning omnibuses other vehicles, but the troops were on alert and immediately defeated them, king several prisoners.

The rappel was beaten in all the rondisements, and by four o'clock a la detachment from each ligion marche the menaced district. The intended orters, intimidated by this immense s of means, crossed the river. I am infor and proceeded for that district equ "renewed" in the fastes of the first volution,—the Faubourg St. Marc where they expect to find a kindred rit alive.

It is more than probable that the m sures taken by government for repr ing any emeute will be successful, but aspect of the city is more menacing t at any period since the revolution 1830. The whole working populatio either involved in this affair or predi sed to enter into it. Excitement arlarm are universal. In many part the town the shops are already clo The streets and windows are filled w "curious." Under my windows, wh face a certain public building, are cavalry videttes of the National Guar

I make this observation, because part of the intended programme of insurgents is said to be to fire all theatres, manufactories, and other pu buildings, and make a Moscow of Pa This is however, too atrocious to be c ited, and would be impracticable. fine, there may be some disturbance, there is no danger of any general in rection, at least I hope so.

CHINA.

Departure of the Division of the F for China, under the Commodore, fi Singapore.—On Sunday afternoon, 30th May, her majesty's ships Welle Cruiser, and Algerine, troopship Rat snake, and the Hon. Company's steam Atalanta, with sixteen sail of transp vessels, got under weigh for China, p senting a fine and animating specta as they steered out of the roads in th divisions, with one of her majesty's sh at the head of each. They were foll ed next day by the steamers, the Qu and the Madagascar, into the forme which the staff from the Marion, wh had been damaged, had been transferr Of the two ships of war remaining in roads, the Conway will, we understa move forward in the course of the da the Larne waiting to take on the Ap mail, which may be almost expected da to arrive from Calcutta, by the stea Enterprise. No day has been fixed for the departure of the rest of the tra ports.

MARKETS.

London, Sept. 11.—We understand t a packet is off Liverpool, which advi one day later from New York.

Our accounts from the Continent a of a more pacific tenor this morning, a especially those from Belgium, whi express a confident opinion in the ma tenance of peace, and cite in support the view taken, the fact of orders havi been issued from head quarters to all of the prolongation of the leaves of a sence granted to different officers and p vates, where such is desired or shown be necessary.

The Ducth papers of Wednesday mo ing, only just arrived, notice a good de of unsteadiness and fluctuation in t funds at Amsterdam, up to the close business on the previous day.

The recent news from China does n appear to have operated injuriously the tea market, the public sales now progress going off steadily, and at pric fully equal to those realized at the la auctions.

LONDON CORN EXCHANGE.

Sept. 11.—We have had fine weath during the whole of the week, which much wanted for securing the northe harvest. The supply of English Whe has been moderate since Monday, a that day's prices have been realized.

INSURRECTION IN SPAIN.

The Madrid journals of the 1st ins have arrived. They state that in cons quence of the new ministers, everybod expected a revolutionary movement, a they had not been deceived.

AUSTRIA.

The Austrian Army.—The Germa Journal of Frankfort has the followin from Vienna: "It is announced that th government have called into service portion of the 2d and 3d battalion of th Landwehr. The 38,000 recruits grante by the Hungarian Diet will make th army complete. These are not hostil demonstrations, but they show that th government is ready for any event."

PRUSSIA.

The Alsace of Strasburg says, the since the rumors of war have prevailed desertions from the German troops hav become much more frequent than at an period since 1830. It asserts that, at th end of last month, a whole squadron o Prussian cavalry, with arms and baggag (?) came over the frontier to the Frenc fortress of Thoinville, having deserte their own corps.

HE RECORDER.

ZANESVILLE.

NESDAY, ... OCTOBER 7, 1840.

Weather.—For some time it had been nd drizzly; but on Saturday last it clear- cool with a return of frost, and it appears ent to be settled and promises fair for bu-

IDENT.—A letter from Wellsville, Ohio, that Mr. E. Shepherd, of that place, had n recently blown off by the untimely dis- of a cannon. It is thought he will not .

NE Elections.—Mr. Kent, the Whig can- for Governor, is supposed to be elected s opponent, Mr. Fairfield, from 250 to 350 But it is said the exact majority cannot wn until the polls are opened and count- January next. The Whigs claim a large ty in both branches of the Legislature, out of eight members of Congress.

John Fralick, of Crawford county, Ohio, "I have been reading your paper for a r of months and find it a very interesting ical, and have came to the conclusion to t for one year on trial, and herewith send o dollars." &c. This brother, we presume, en reading a borrowed paper, but he here to the conclusion that he would patronize pport the press which had the power to st him, and would not depend in future on ighbor's generosity alone for his reading. s the spirit we like to see manifested.— r, follow this example.

VERSALISM.—We have noticed in the pa- veral renunciations, recently, of Univer- , on the part of clergymen. When in nville, Ohio, a few weeks since, we saw a drom the Rev. B. W. Johnson, who was for- minister in the M. P. Church, but had at- himself to the Universalians, and was ing for them. The letter stated, in sub- that he had became satisfied it was wrong ch those doctrines; that he found, on he Universalists did not suit him, nor he that he had left his congregation and was Madison, Ia.; that he felt like trying to to the church, &c. Br. Johnson is a man ectable talents, and if he could renounce entiments we would welcome him back to rch.—The letter, above, was a private let- he person who shewed it to us, was not ed in relation to this reference to it; so there be any thing wrong in this notice it fault.

REIGN News.—Such is the improvement of tion, by the powerful agent, steam, that ivals from Europe begin to be nearly as reg- those from the eastern cities. For some st the intelligence from the old world shews urope is in a state of considerable excite- one arrival talks of war,—the next for It will be seen from our foreign news of that the war cloud is darkening. We t of opinion, however, that there will be neral war on the Eastern Continent. This is predicated on two leading considera- 1st. There are too many alive yet, who onsiderable to do in the counsels of the hat recollect the miseries and desolations by the wars of Bonaparte. 2dly. There nning to be a considerable amount of pub- nion throughout christendom, against de- national difficulties by an appeal to the but which prefers to have them decided ociation, or reference to a friendly power. oets of this day do not sing the praise of erers, or national butchers, in as high notes y did in the "days of other times." In e of these powerful influences it will be fficult for the war horses to get under way.

CTIONEERING.—This practice has never be- mmanded so much of public attention.— dates, from those for the Presidency down, ambulating the country and delivering es from one to three hours long. Every ent is resorted to that could have any cy to call the people together, so that nds are frequently assembled to hear these s. But we are not of the opinion that olitical information is imparted to the mind by these electioneering speeches. statements of facts are so contradictory, ey throw so much sophistry around their , that the great mass of the people are lost fog.

we are satisfied that these vast assemblies, together by political excitement, have a rious influence upon the public morals.— ve seen companies of boys, from fourteen teen years of age, whose habits were not med, drawn from fifty to one hundred miles me, who were for days cast upon places of resort, where they were brought in con- ften, with wicked and worthless fellows, example could not fail to seduce many of to ruin. The whole tends to dissipation enciousness of mind.

there is one thing we have noticed, which er a compliment on our institutions.— g the immense masses, of all parties, drawn er under the highest state of political ex- nt, and freely discussing the matters at between them, there are but few riots or ls.

STRESSING Event.—A very sudden , says the Baltimore American, oc- d at the City Hotel, on Friday last, nder circumstances peculiar affect- A Mr. W. R. Chaplain, a native of achusetts, and recently a resident of ssippi, was married on Friday morn- o Miss Murdock, of Philadelphia. e dinner table he suffered a slight of vertigo, and retired to his room, t was renewed with such violence as se his death a short time afterwards. thstanding medical aid was promptly nistered.

COMMUNICATION.

New Lisbon, O., Sept. 24, 1840.

Br. Springer: Please do me the favor to publish the following appointments:

Youngstown circuit,	- - - October	4
Grand River "	- - - - "	11
Farmington "	- - - - "	18
Mahoning "	- - - - "	25
Wellsville station,	- - - Novem.	1
New Lisbon "	- - - - "	8
Monongahela circuit,	- - - "	15
Clarksburgh "	- - - "	22
Suttonsville "	- - - "	29
Weston "	- - - Decem.	6
Middletown "	- - - - "	13
Brownsville "	- - - - "	20
Union "	- - - - "	27

Yours, truly,

Z. Ragan.

CONFERENCE.

PITTSBURGH CONFERENCE.

Extracts from the Minutes of the seventh Annual Conference of the Methodist Protestant Church, for the Pittsburgh District.

(Continued from the fourth page.)

A Plan to relieve the Literary Institution

OF THE

METHODIST PROTESTANT CHURCH.

Whereas, the Methodist Protestant Church, of the Ohio and Pittsburgh Districts, for the purpose of establishing a Literary Institution, in the year 1836, purchased the farm of two hundred and fifty acres of land, known as the "Mount Pleasant Farm," situated about two miles north of Lawrenceburgh, in Indiana; the purchase money whereof, with other debts incurred and now due from said Methodist Protestant Church, amount to twelve thousand five hundred dollars: that the purchase money now due is a lien on said farm;—that John Haughton and William Disney, acting as Trustees for said Methodist Protestant Church, are personally liable for the payment of all the debts of said Institution.

Now in order to pay said debts, and release said Trustees from their liabilities, the said M. P. Church have released all their interest in the real estate aforesaid, to the said Haughton and Disney, who have heretofore held the legal title thereof, for the sole use of such subscribers as shall take up the stock, and donors, as specified in the following plan, for the purpose of liquidating the debts of said Literary Institution, on the plan here proposed, viz:

PLAN.

The beneficial and equitable interest of said real estate shall be and is hereby divided into two thousand five hundred shares of five dollars each, equal in all to twelve thousand five hundred dollars.

That each subscriber shall be a part owner or said premises in proportion to the stock by him subscribed and paid for; Provided, he pays all he is required to pay by the terms of this plan.

If any subscriber at any time shall refuse to pay up the balance that may be due on his stock subscription, that the money so by him then already paid shall be considered a donation to said Methodist Protestant Church, for the purpose of liquidating the debt of said Literary Institution generally, and may be so applied accordingly.

The subscriber shall pay one dollar on each share subscribed, at the time of subscribing, and one dollar on each share so by him subscribed, on each succeeding ninety-one days, until his whole stock be paid up; Provided, it shall be, by Daniel H. Horn, Harvey Hall, and Shadford Easton, or a majority of them, Trustees, or their successors in office, thought necessary, and the subscribers shall be called on to pay the same.

Unless stock to the amount of eleven thousand dollars shall be subscribed, and the sum of two thousand two hundred dollars shall be paid in, no subscriber shall be bound by his subscription; but the money so by him paid, shall be refunded to him, within ninety days after the next Annual Conference.

Daniel H. Horn, H. Hall and Shadford Easton, are hereby named, appointed and vested Trustees, with full power to fill any vacancies that may occur in their board, and to direct the paying out of the money so raised on this plan.

The holders of a majority of the stock may at any time direct a sale of said premises, provided the premises shall sell for a sum sufficient to pay all the debts of said Institution, then unpaid.

The several stockholders shall have one vote for each share of stock, so by them held.

If after the debts of said Literary Institution are all paid, said property still remains on hand, unsold, the holders of a majority of the stock, may dispose of the property, and divide the proceeds among the stockholders and donators, as hereinafter provided, or may dispose of the whole property by donation to the Methodist Protestant Church, as they may in their judgment and liberality think proper.

All sums hereafter donated, shall be applied in payment of debts of the Literary Institution in the same manner, as money paid in on stock subscription.

If on sale of said property, a sum of money shall be procured, more than sufficient to pay the debts of said Literary Institution, then unpaid, the surplus over and above paying the said debts, shall be divided among the stockholders and donators, in proportion to the stock subscribed, and the sum so donated.

1. Resolved, This conference, acting for and on the behalf of the Methodist Protestant Church of the Ohio District, do hereby release, relinquish and convey to John Haughton and William Disney, and their heirs and assigns, all the interest and claim in and to said real estate of the Literary Institutinn of the said M. P. Church. To have and to hold the said property and interest therein for the sole benefit and use of such stockholders as may subscribe for the stock under the plan now proposed, for the purpose of liquidating the debts of said Institution.

2. Resolved, That Br. Green G. Moore be, and is hereby appointed an agent to obtain subscriptions of stock, and receive money thereon, and receive donations, and pay the same to the aforesaid Trustees.

3. Resolved, That it shall be the duty of the superintendent of each circuit and station, to obtain subscriptions for said stock, and receive the money thereon accordingly, and forthwith or as soon as convenient, transmit the same to the said agent at Cincinnati.

[to be continued.]

ITEMS.

The mail from Baltimore, when it makes an uninterrupted trip, reaches Peoria, Illinois, in nine days. This is the most rapid transmission that has ever been effected on the route, which is by way of Wheeling.

The Grand Jury have found true bills against the swindler, Brooks, alias, J. D. E. Quantrell, Edwin Pitcher, Geo. Pitcher and others, for a conspiracy and attempt to fraud.

The D'Hautville case, or, as it is called, the "doubtful case," is still continued from day to day.—Phil. paper.

The case of the merchant of Philadelphia, who failed many years ago, and a few weeks since paid off all his debts, amounting to $50,000, is alluded to with great pleasure in various parts of the country.

A Philadelphia paper says, a boat containing six boys, which had put off from Coates street wharf, on Sunday afternoon, was upset in the Schuylkill river, and four of the number were drowned.

An attempt was made recently, in Turkey, to shoot the Sultan. Two bullets passed through the cloak he wore.

"Down Below."—There is a coal mine worked at Monkswearmouth, England, 535 yards below the surface of the earth. Probably this is the greatest depth at which mining operations have ever been carried.

Only a Nible.—David Fish, a canal collector in Ohio, has put off with $300 belonging to the State. He received his appointment just three months ago.

The Post Master General has rescinded his prohibitory order in relation to the transmission of newspapers.

A man named Conklin has been arrested in New York, on a charge of forgery, for interlining the words "or order" in a note to make it negotiable.

Dr. Detrould, of N. Y., has performed, with entire success, an operation to cure squinting in a grown person.

Prince Albert reached the age of twenty-one on the 26th of August, which event was duly celebrated in London. The morning was ushered in by the ringing of bells, and in the evening many of the club houses and other buildings presented a very splendid appearance from the illuminations

S. Hower, charged with killing a man by the name of Eisenhower, at Danville, Pa., has been found guilty of murder in second degree, and sentenced to 2 years' confinement in the Eastern Penitentiary.

Prince Louis Napoleon, who has become somewhat notorious by his late insurrectionary attempt in France, is son of Louis, the ex-king of Holland, and Hortense Beauharnais, daughter of the Empress Josephine. He was born in 1810. He formerly attempted to excite disaffection in Strasburg.

The British are trading to China, under the Danish flag. American ships leave with full cargoes.

Edmund Dickerson cut his foot at Snow-hill, Md., and bled to death! Mr. Powell was, at the same town, drowned.

F. H. Knapp, the President of the Baltimore Savings Institution, has been arrested in Albany, and taken back to Baltimore. He is charged with fraud and conspiracy.

Business with Cuba.—To show the extent of the business of Cuba, the following fact, derived from our custom house returns, will suffice. In 1839, the imports from Cuba to the United States exceed 12,500,000 dollars; an amount greater by one quarter than all our imports from Russia, Prussia, Spain, Portugal, Mexico, Peru and Chili united.

They are Passing Away.—Capt. Isaac Conklin, a patriot of the Revolution, departed this life at Poughkeepsie, New York, on Saturday, aged eighty-nine. He was at West Point and Saratoga, and continued in the service until the close of the war. He was buried with military honors.

Most Inhuman.—A man named Flannelly had so abused his wife in Norfolk, that she left him, and was working as a servant in a respectable family, when he entered and with a large knife stabbed her so that her entrails protruded through the wound. The monster is in prison.

"Shelling Out."—A machine has been invented in Maryland, by which the farmers there have shucked (husked) and shelled their corn at the rate of 40 bushels per hour!

It is said that there are in Hindostan seventy-five millions of women who can neither read nor write, and 30,000,000 of these are British subjects.

The Cesarian operation was recently performed for the second time in England. Both mother and child were doing well. The surgeon was Dr. Whitehead.

Seventy-six millions of extraordinary notes in credit have been ordered in France, in contemplation of war.

By stranger's hands thy dying eyes were closed,
By stranger's hands thy decent limbs composed,
By stranger's hands thy humble grave adorned,
By stranger's honored and by strangers mourned."

Fire at Natchez.—A fire occurred at Natchez on the 9th ultimo, in one of the outbuildings of a beautiful mansion. There were in the kitchen two servants, a girl and a boy, and both were destroyed—the boy was in a sick bed and was found a crisped cinder—the girl was taken out alive, horribly burnt, but died in a few hours in the most excruciating agony and pain.

Important Decison.—The New Orleans Bulletin of September 11, reports an interesting case relative to the bequest of property to aliens in Louisiana. By the laws of Louisiana, property can only be devised to residents in other countries, when the laws of those countries will permit residents of Louisiana to receive bequests in the same way.

Dr. Leuret, of France has published a work, in which he says, that "moral means only will cure insanity."

A case of attempted suicide of a new variety is recorded in the Boston Democrat. A man named Joseph Ford jumped from a stage in one of the streets, and cut his throat with a knife, and was only prevented from killing himself instantly, by the interference of the driver. He was taken to the hospital and it is thought will recover.

Jamaica.—The Island of Jamaica continues to suffer from the severe drought, but is, notwithstanding, unusually healthy for the season.

The mail steamboat Bass exploded her boiler near Mobile on the fourteenth. A negro fell overboard and was drowned, but no one else was hurt.

Lewis, the peculator of the Schuylkill Bank had, it is said, again run away from the city of Philadelphia.

Heavy Lift.—Goods to the value of five thousand dollars were stolen from the store of Messrs. Miller & Hallowell, Philadelphia, between Saturday night and Monday morning.

Shocking Accident.—The Providence Herald states that a female employed in the Blackstone mill, Mendon, Mass., was killed on Monday morning, by her apron accidentally coming in contact with the upright shaft of the mill. She was literally torn in fragments.

By the last accounts, the interior of Alabama was in a very unhealthy state.

Mexico, by all accounts, is in a miserable state, want, ruin and turbulence being the order of the day, in most places. She is in but a sorry condition to make her threatened attack on the Texians.

New Buildings.—A New York paper says, it is stated that there are nearly 1100 buildings erecting in that city, and about four hundred in Brooklyn.

The army worm must be a truly formidable scourge to the planter at the South. It is said to sweep off 100 acres in a night, leaving neither leaves nor boles of cotton on the stalk. There is no possible way of arresting the march of the legion.

The Banks of New Orleans.—A letter from New Orleans of a late date says: "Most of our banks show a strong disposition for a resumption of specie payments, and there is much probability of their doing so ere long. In either case, I think we will go down to par, or close to it, the same as last year. Cotton is coming in very freely to the extent of 1000 bales a day, and we look for an active business ere long. Texas money is down to 16 cents."

Philadelphia, Sept. 29.—Flour has been dull since the last English advices; the export demand is limited. We hear of no sales of fresh Pennsylvania under $5 25, but a small decline is looked for.—Bicknell.

The Buffalo Journal says:—"We have had reports of an injunction against the Bank of Sandusky, but they were premature. The Bank claims by virtue of its charter, that small bills or even Post notes may be issued without a violation, until 1843. This the commissioners deny and formed upon it their application for an injunction. The application was denied."

Flour was selling at Detroit at $3 50 per barrel, and potatoes at 10 cents per bushel.

An Elopement.—A letter to the New York Commercial from Canada, mentions the elopement of Miss Beckwith, from the Hotel Dieu, the celebrated Convent at Montreal. It is added that no one attempts to charge upon the character or conduct of Miss B. the slightest imputation of any thing approaching immorality.

High Constable Smith passed on to Baltimore a day or two ago, with Alexander Merritt, accused of being an accomplice in the recent robbery of the U. S. Mail, between Baltimore and Hagerstown. He was taken before the District Court for examination, and was subsequently conducted to prison.—Philadelphia paper.

The number of emigrants arrived at Quebec this season, up to the 12th ult. was 21,217. Increase over last year, 14,273.

A man named Chana has been committed to jail in Baltimore, for marrying his step-daughter.

Joseph Bonaparte has written an historical poem, entitled "Napoleon," which is shortly to appear in Paris.

The Harrisburgh Reporter states that the Union Canal company has commenced widening locks, &c., on its branch from Pinegrove to the Water House, with a view of enlarging the navigation to Middletown next year, to accommodate the canal trade of the Swatara region.

It is stated the ex-king of Holland had purchased £100,000 worth of diamonds out of his royal savings, which diamonds fell into the hands of the present king of Holland. He had just given young Louis £40,000 indemnity for these jewels; and this sum served for the Boulogne expedition.

Without O'Connell and his friends, it is stated that the Melborne Ministry would be in a minority of 20 or 30 on every important question.

The London Morning Chonicle intimates that the eastern question will probably be settled by a new Congress in which France will participate.

There are three theatres open in New York—two Museums and Niblo's Garden. Also, a gallery of Italian paintings, a Diorama from Paris, the Panorama of Rome, and the Atlantic Garden.

Mr. Walsh thinks a war between England and France improbable to the last degree.

Newark, New Jersey, contains a population of 17,292.

It is stated in the Philadelphia National Gazette, that Samuel Jaudon, Esq., will come out to this country on a visit, on the next voyage of the Great Western.

The progress of the Temperance Reform is as rapid as ever in Ireland. Our late accounts are of the most cheering character, The converts were increasing in number, while the violators of the pledge were few and far between.

A young man named Frederick Lush, convicted of forgery, was sentenced on Saturday by Judge Barton to one year's confinement in the county prison. His brother has confessed that he forged the check and gave it to Frederick to pass. Alexander Cosgrove, an old convict, convicted of robbery, was sentenced to imprisonment in the penitentiary for four years.

The Presidency.—It was frankly stated by J. Q. Adams, is one of his Congressional speeches, that the four years during which he occupied the Presidential chair, were the most unhappy four years of his life.

The D'Hautville Case.—The Philadelphia Ledger of Friday says: This never ending, still beginning, matter was again resumed yesterday afternoon.

Drs. Meigs and Chambers were examin in regard to the constitution of the child in question. According to their opinion it would be highly detrimental to the health of the infant, if taken away from its mother and subjected to the climate of Switzerland. The court sat to a late hour, and some time after candle light.

Honor to the Ladies on New England.—We learn from the Boston Courier that authority has been given by the Treasurer of the late Monumental Fair, to say that sufficient progress has been made in the settlement of the various accounts to authorize the belief that the net proceeds will not fall short of twenty-five thousand dollars. The monument will now go up. Whoever lives three years will witness its completion. Again we say, honor to the ladies of New England, not forgetting those of Brooklyn.

Nearly all of Aux Cayes Destroyed.—Capt. Smith, of the schooner James Fisher, arrived at Baltimore from Port au Prince, whence he sailed on the third ultimo, reports that information was received at that place a few days previous to his sailing, of a destructive fire having occurred at Aux Cayes, which burned nearly the whole town. Preparations were making by the people of Port au Prince to render every assistance in their power to relieve the sufferings of their unfortunate brethren.

The Lexington.—On the 16th ultimo, the body of another of the sufferers by the burning of the Lexington, was picked up on the beach at Wading River, L. I. It was that of a large sized person, and probably had lain there three or four days; it was taken up and decently interred in the burial place. There were found on the body a silver patent lever watch, and a pair of boots, inside of which was written, E. B. Gleason, and stamped Harrington & Fisk, Boston, No. 25,981,—the former supposed to be the owner's, and the latter the makers' names. Farther information may be obtained at 22 Broadway.

Business Department.

Puff! Puff! Puff!!

CHEAP!

CHEAPER THAN EVER! GREAT BARGAINS!

New York at your door!

SELLING OFF AT COST!

WE so heartily despise the "gull-catching" system that we seldom advertise at all. We however give our friends and the public notice that we have just received a fine stock of

FALL AND WINTER GOODS.

We don't profess to have brought "New York to your doors," nor to undersell every body else, nor to be "selling off at cost," nor to be "closing up," and all that sort of things,—but we do say, that our goods are cheap enough to satisfy any reasonable person, even in these "hard times."

A. A. Guthrie & Co.

Putnam, Ohio, September 30, 1840. 3w58

Br. Dotson will find the money he referred to credited in this number.

As we have been able to procure some parchment, Br. Ragan may expect the parchments soon.

We do not wish to charge Br. John Fordyce for his paper while he travels. What he has paid will be subject to his order.

Br. S. Morrison, of Freeport, Ia. is informed, that, as he has forwarded several subscribers we will not enact the odd dollar from him. It shall either be subject to his order, or placed to his credit on the 3d volume.

Br. R. Richardson paid us $2 for R. Hanly, whose post office he gave us at either Leesburgh or Frankler, Ohio; but we cannot find it at either of these, nor elsewhere, on our book.—Will Br. R. inform us immediately about this name?

Some person at conference, paid us $2 for "T. Snyder & Randall," without giving the post office. There are no such names in connection upon our book, but we have a Thomas Snyder, at Hubbard, Ohio, and have credited him. We should like to be informed if this be correct.

Br. John Fordyce in his letter of the 26th of August, forwarded us $2 for A. Fordyce, at Kirby's; Br. Hopwood, at conference, paid us $2 more for the same person, and having previously received two dollars, which make, in all, six dollars, while C. Fordyce, at the same office, is not credited with any thing. We think there is some mistake in this matter. Will Br. J. Fordyce inform us?

We received $2 from a citizen of Steubenville, in the presence of Br. Dalbey, at the door of the conference on Tuesday evening. Not having the convenience of making a memorandum of it, at the time, we have forgotten the name. If when the person sees his name omitted in the following list of receipts he will give it to Br. D he will inform us and due credit be given.

Moneys received at the Steubenville Conference for the Western Recorder.

From W. Munhall, for W. Fleming, 2 vol.		$2 00
" W. Powell, for James Miller,		2 00
" " for Wm. Powell, 2 vol.		2 00
" " for Tho. Barnes, 2 vol.		2 00
" " for Allen Hall, 1 vol.		2 00
" " for F. Pierpoint, 1 vol.		2 00
" M. M. Laughlin, 2 vol		2 00
" J. Clarke, for R. Atkinson, 1 vol.		1 00
" J. G. Barr, ballance on 1 vol.		1 00
" Z. Ragan, for A. Powers,		2 00
" " for I. Hastings,		2 00
" " for E. Jones,		2 00
" J. Beatty, for W. Fitzsimmons, 2 vol.		2 00
" S. Clawson, for Geo. Cookman, 1 vol.		2 00
" " for R. Dobson, 1 vol.		2 00
" " for J. Statcher, 1 vol.		2 75
" G. Hughes, for Mrs. Rogers, 2 vol		2 00
" B. Longsworth, for John Bear, 1 vol.		2 50
" " for J. Hardin, 1 vol.		2 50
" " for W. Hastings, 1 vol.		2 50
" D. Kinney, for H. Stimmel, 1 vol.		2 75
" T. J. Addis, for D. Powell, 1 vol.		2 50
" M. Scott, for B. Robey, 1 vol.		2 00
" " for John Lamb, 1 vol.		2 00
" " for D. Yantes, 1 vol.		1 00
" " for J. W. Longsworth, 1 vol.		2 00
" " for E. McGregor, 1 vol.		2 00
" " for George Castle, 1 vol.		2 00
" " for L. Cook, 2 vol.		2 00
" " for Thomas Parks, 2 vol.		2 00
" " for I. Castle, 2 vol.		2 00
" " for C. Longsworth, 2 vol.		2 00
" R. Bamford, for J. Shallenberger, 1 vol.		2 00
" " for M. Alger,		1 25
" " for Alvin Swann, 2 vol.		2 00
" R. Richardson, for W. Riley, 1 vol.		2 00
" " for H. Foster, 1 vol.		2 00
" " for R. Hanley, 1 vol.		2 00
" " for H. Belknap, 2 vol.		2 00
" B. Connell, for George Hood, 1 vol.		2 00
" A. K. Earl, for W. Alexander,		50
" " for R. Chappell, 1 vol.		2 50
" " for D. Rowland, 1&2 vol.
	2 50 1st vol. & 1 00	3 50
" " for D. Bagley, 2 vol.		2 00
" " for R. Herrick,		2 00
" A. B. Sperry, 1 vol.		2 00
" J. Hopwood, for Widow Smith, 2 vol.		2 00
" " for A. Fordyce, 2 vol.		2 00
" " for J. Barns, 2 vol.		2 25
" " for A. Shriver, 1 vol.		2 50
" " for D. Donley,		2 50
" " for John Rogers, on account,		25
" " for T. S. Kirkpatrick,		2 00
" Jno. Clarke, for J. Cook,		2 00
" " for R. Lee, 2 vol.		2 00
" " for James Clarke, 2 vol.		2 00
" Dr. James Harrop, 2 vol.		2 00
" R. Simonton, for E. Bruen, 2 vol.		2 00
" " for J. J. Kenedy, 1 vol.		50
" W. Maynard, for N. Lapelly, 1 vol.		2 09
" John Troth, 2 vol.		2 00
" W. L. Baldwin, for R. Smith, 1 vol.		2 00
" " for B. Dotson,		1 00
" " for R. Isherwood,		1 00
" W. Reeves, for C. Russell, 2 vol.		2 00
" " for H. Fenkill, 2 vol.		2 00
" " for J. Hankins, 2 vol.		2 00
" " for P. Kimmel, 1 vol.		2 00
" " for W. B. Miller, 1 vol.		2 00
" " for J. Frazure, 2 vol.		50
" " for Francis Scott, 2 vol.		2 00
" J. A. Dohrman, 2 vol.		2 00
" J. Stout, 2 vol.		2 00
" W. S. Thorn, 2 vol.		2 00
" M. N. Warren, for A. Furgerson,		2 00
" J. Huntsman, for Ann McMasters,		2 00
" " for George Dixon,		4 00
" " for I. Waddle,		2 00
" " for Wm. Rice,		2 00
" H. T. Lawson, for Mrs. Haymond, 1&2		5 00
" " for S. Skidmore,		2 50
" " for Wm. Morrison,		2 00
" " for J. M. Shields,		1 00
" " for J. P. Hosely,		2 50
" H. Heberling, 2 vol.		2 00
" John Herbert, for S. Bushfield,		2 00
" " for J. Hardy, 2 vol.		2 00
" " for J. Bell, 2 vol.		2 00
" " for Ann Wells, 2 vol.		2 00
" " for J. Swearingen, 1 vol.		2 00
" Geo. Clancy, for D. Lucas, 1 vol.		2 00
" " for J D Callaughan, 1 vol.		2 00
" " for I. Pierce, 2 vol.		2 00
" " for I. V. Barton, 2 vol.		2 00
" " for Mary Russell, 2 vol.		2 00
" " for M. Wheeler 2 vol.		2 00
" " for J. Clancy (or Cheney) 1 & 2 vol.		4 00
" G. B. Hickox, 1 volume,		2 50
" C. C. Burt,		2 50
" J. Sears, 2 vol.		2 00
" J. Hukill, 2 vol.		2 00
" Thomas Thompson, 2 vol.		2 00
" Levi Hays, 2 vol.		2 00
" G. D. Williams, for D. L. Webster,		2 00
" " for S. Robertson, 6m.		1 00
" S. Hall, 1st and 2d volume,		4 00
" Jas. Wheeler, 2 vol.		2 00
" Jesse McGary, 2 vol.		2 00
" John Dickson, 2 vol.		1 00
" C. Caddy, for E. Fesler, 1 vol.		2 00
" " for Mrs. Pennington,		2 00
" E. Stevens, 2 for self, & 2 for C. Avery,		4 00
" T. Snider & Randall, 2 vol.		2 00
" J. Scott,		2 00
" J. Keath, 2 vol.		2 00
" G. Dowler, 2 vol.		2 00
" J. Vermillion, 1 vol.		2 00
" George Waddle, 1 vol.		2 00
" H. Patterson, 2 vol.		2 00
" J. Bartholemew, 1 volume,		2 00
" J. Mercer,		2 00
" J. Herbert, for D. Garner, 2 vol.		2 00
" " for D. Pierce,		2 00
" Hugh Scott, 1 vol.		2 00
" H. Marshall, 2 vol.		2 00
" J. Manly, 2 vol.		2 00
" J. Dalbey, for C. Craig, 2 vol.		2 00
" " for T. Oliver, 2 vol.		2 00
" " for S. Culmer, 2 vol.		2 00
" " for Wm. Renton, 2 vol.		2 00
" " for R. Maffitt, 2 vol.		2 00
" " for S. Johnson,		2 00
" " for W. Garrard, Jr.,		2 00
" " for A. Baker, 2 vol.		2 00
" " for John Scott, 2 vol.		2 00
" " for E. Black, 2 vol.		2 00
" I. Rush, 2 vol.		2 00
" B. McCracken, 2 vol.		2 00
" E. Lucas, 2 vol.		2 00
" Mrs. S. Letch, 2 vol.		2 00
" T. Freeman, 2d vol.		2 00
" J. Evans, for W. Davis, 2 vol.		2 00
" " for J. Smith, 2 vol.		2 00

MONEYS RECEIVED LAST WEEK.

From G. Vandenbark, for 2d volume,	$2,00
" O. White, for John Vandenbark,	2,00
" " for John A. Dutro,	3,00
" J. Burns, for A. Wightman,	2,00
" J. Fralick,	2,00
" S. Morrison,	5,00
" James George,	2,00

LETTERS RECEIVED.

G. Vandenbark, J. Wheeler, M. Winans, B. Dotson, N. B. Madera, W. Winans, J. Burns, 1 sub.; S. T. Tolbert, I. Smucker, J. Fralick, 1 sub.: C. Woodruff, Z. Ragan, S. Morrison, five subscribers; and "Timothy."

CONFERENCE.

PITTSBURGH CONFERENCE.

Extracts from the Minutes of the seventh Annual Conference of the Methodist Protestant Church, for the Pittsburgh District.

The conference was organized by appointing George Hughes, Secretary, and A. K. Earl and W. Marshall, assistant Secretaries.

Resolved, That a committee of three be appointed to draft a petition to the Legislature of Ohio, for the protection of camp-meetings and other religious meetings. Whereupon, C. Springer, John Beatty and E. W. Stevens were appointed said committee.

The committee made the following report, which was adopted:

To the Honorable, the Legislature of the State of Ohio:

The undersigned, citizens of the State of Ohio, respectfully represent, that they have witnessed, with extreme pain, the demoralizing influences growing out of the practices of certain huxters and pedlers, for their own personal interest, vending at camp and other religious meetings, throughout this State, ardent spirits, beer, cider, cakes, &c., to the great annoyance of the public worship of God, and to the extensive injury of the peace and good order of the community. The existing law, prohibiting the sale of intoxicating drinks within one mile of any place of religious worship, after more than TWENTY years' experience, is found to be totally inadequate to the object for which it was enacted. The process by which conviction is had is extremely difficult; besides, the owner of such property can usually procure some irresponsible person to sell for him. The only effectual way, therefore, in our opinion, to prevent this practice would be to forfeit the property offered for sale. There is no law prohibiting the sale of eatables, yet the victuallers are, in reality, the greatest disturbers of these public meetings, because they usually erect their booths and kindle their fires near the place of worship, which become an asylum for the drunken and profane, who will remain there, indulging in all kind of obscene language and disorderly conduct, to the great disturbance of the services of religion and injury of the public morals. Your memorialists would therefore respectfully suggest to your honorable body, the propriety of so amending the present law as to prevent the approach of trespassers nearer than three miles distance, and to contraband, not only all articles of intoxication, but, also, all goods, wares, or merchandize of any description, as the only and effectual way to prevent the abuses complained of.

Those interested in the proposed law, for the protection of religious worship, are a numerous and law-abiding class of the community. They have borne with these unconstitutional infractions of their rights until forbearance has ceased to be a virtue, and if longer persisted in, would degenerate into meanness; they are, therefore, moved to pray your honorable body to throw the shield of law around them, so as to protect them in future from these annoying and demoralizing practices. We respectfully refer your attention to the law of Pennsylvania on this subject, a copy of which shall accompany this petition. We believe this law is as perfect as human wisdom can devise, for the object contemplated. It is mild, yet efficient. The experience of many years has shown that it affords ample protection to religion, and yet it has not been made the instrument of oppression. It would be highly satisfactory to your petitioners if this law, without alteration, could be adopted in our Statute book.

As in duty bound your memorialists will ever pray.

Resolved, That it be made the duty of every travelling preacher in the State of Ohio, to obtain signatures to the above petition, and that the lay-members be requested to do the same.

Br. SHINN read an address to the conference, which was referred to the following named brethren, as a committee: G. Brown, C. Springer and J. Beatty.

The committee made the following report, which was unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That in the opinion of the Pittsburgh Annual Conference of the Methodist Protestant Church, our sister conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, in its session at Clarksburgh, was premature in expressing an official judgment, in relation to the doctrine of Br. SHINN'S book, before they had sufficient time for examination; and that this conference is not prepared, at this time, to act officially on the subject, but leave Br. SHINN, and all our ministers and members, to enjoy the liberty secured to them by the constitution of the United States, and the constitution of the Methodist Protestant Church.

Resolved, That this report be published in all the periodicals of the M. P. Church of the United States.

A letter from the Ohio Annual Conference was read, which, together with all other documents and verbal communications on the subject of the Literary institution, was referred to a committee.

The committee made the following report, which was adopted:

The committee to whom was referred the subject of the Literary Institution, beg leave to report:

I. That they have not been able to obtain from any source, a full statement of the receipts and expenditures of the Institution. All the information of an official nature, before them, is contained in a letter from Brs. D. Crall and A. H. Bassett, dated Cincinnati, September 1, 1840, which is, that "the only remaining property is the farm," and that "there are debt due, $12,500," that Brs. Haughton and Disney are immediately responsible for these debts, and that the Ohio Annual Conference of the M. P. Church are ultimately responsible, and its members in 1836—'37 are individually liable to be sued at law for the amount.

II. That the Ohio Annual Conference have relinquished their entire right, title, claim and and interest, in the Literary Institution, to John Haughton and W. Disney, their heirs, &c., for the use and behoof of stockholders, to be created upon a plan accompanying this report, and which has been submitted to the committee by Br. Moore, the agent of the Ohio Conference.

III. That in consideration of these premises, the committee recommend the adoption of the following resolutions:

1. Resolved, By the Pittsburgh Annual Conference of the Methodist Protestant Church, that it shall be the duty of the superintendent of each circuit and station, to obtain subscriptions for stock in the Literary Institution and receive the money thereon, and forthwith transmit the same to the agent of this conference, to be paid by order of the present Trustees, D. H. Horn, H. Hall and S. Easton, to such creditors of the Institution in this District as have loaned moneys to any of its agents, and who prefer their claims for such moneys to be refunded.

2. Resolved, That the said Trustees, last named, be, and they are hereby requested to order the agent appointed by this conference to pay over to the said creditors of the Institution in this District, the first moneys received by him from the several circuits and stations to the amount of their claims.

3. Resolved, That when the amount of such claims shall be liquidated, all the moneys collected and paid over to the agent of this District shall be transmitted to the said Trustees for the purpose of liquidating the other debts of the Institution: Provided, That the available means at the time of transmitting such moneys be adequate to the entire liquidation of the debts due on farm, &c., and that the agent shall have obtained official information of this fact before he transmits such moneys.

4. Resolved, That George Hughes be, and he is hereby appointed, general agent of this conference, for the purposes herein before specified; and that it shall be his duty to keep a faithful account of all the receipts and disbursements, and report the same to this conference at its next annual session.

5. Resolved, That the Trustees abovementioned are hereby requested to furnish the editor of the Western Recorder, all the information which they can obtain from the books of the Literary Institution, respecting the receipts and expenditures of moneys, from the time at which the farm was purchased, up to the present date; and that the editor be requested to publish the same, for the satisfaction and encouragement of our brethren and friends in this District.

6. Resolved, That in the event of the Trustees not concurring in the foregoing resolutions, relative to the payments of moneys collected in this District, it shall be the duty of the travelling agent of this conference to pay the moneys, when collected, as provided for in these resolutions, without an order from the Trustees, and take receipts for the same, which receipts shall be presented to the conference, at its next session, in connexion with his report.

7. Resolved, That a copy of this report be furnished by the Secretary for publication in the Recorder, and that Br. Springer be requested to publish, in connexion with it, the plan proposed by the Ohio Annual Conference.

8. Resolved, That our brethren and friends throughout the District be, and they are hereby affectionately solicited to make another effort to the amount of their abilities, for the establishment of a Literary Institution in the West, under the superintendence of the Methodist Protestant Church; and that the general agent and all the local agents are hereby instructed to read to the congregations the plan submitted by the Ohio Conference, for the purpose of stimulating them to renewed and increased effort, in the great and important cause of education.

Committee, { D. B. DORSEY, GEORGE BROWN, GEORGE HUGHES.

☞For plan see third page.

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

RESOLUTIONS.

The committee appointed to confer with Br. T. H. Stockton, on sundry subjects, for the action of this conference, beg leave to report the three following, with the preambles and resolutions annexed, viz:

THE CONVENTON.

Whereas, the Maryland Annual Conference at its last session, recommended the call of a convention, for that District, to meet in Baltimore, on the first Tuesday of next November, for the promotion of the spiritual interests of the church: And, whereas, said conference recommended to the other conferences in the connexion, the holding of similar conventions at the same time: And, whereas, the time thus named will occur so soon after the rise of this conference, as to render it inconvenient for our societies to send their representatives to such a convention, even if it were deemed otherwise expedient to recommend it: And, whereas, this conference, notwithstanding this difficulty, is deeply impressed with a sense of the importance of the objects sought by our Maryland brethren, and anxious to assist in their accomplishment, as far as practicable: Therefore,

1. Resolved, That it be recommended to all the superintendents and assistants belonging to this conference to collect appropriate intelligence for the use of the Baltimore Convention.

2. Resolved, That in order to make such intelligence the more effective, it be recommended to report it in the form of answers to the following questions:

1. SOCIETIES.—When organized? Where?—How many members, ministers and laymen, at first? How many now? What peculiarities of character or custom?

2. PROPERTY.—Chapels—how many? Where built? When? Size and material? Cost and debt? Parsonages—How many? Where? &c. Graveyards—Cost? Lots? Sales? &c.

3. EDUCATION.—Children's classes—Number? When organized? Where? Plans? Results? Sunday Schools—Where formed? When?—Teachers? Scholars? Libraries? Ministerial preparation—Character? Candidates? Effects?

4. PUBLICATIONS.—To what extent encouraged? Plans for circulation? Probable influence?

5. BENEVOLENCE.—What done for Missionary? Bible? Sunday School? Temperance? Tract? and kindred institutions? What the sentiments, wishes and means of the churches in these connexions.

6. OPPORTUNITIES FOR USEFULNESS.—Where? When? Of what character? What needed to improve them? Why not improved? Probable consequences?

7. SUCCESS.—Where? When? Character? Causes?

8. FAILURES.—Where? When? How? Effects?

9. What will the circuit, station, class, or individual member give, annually or otherwise, to establish and sustain a Foreign Mission? What to support Home Mission?

10. What to establish a strictly religious and energetic Book Concern? What to extend the circulation of the Church periodicals?

11. What to establish a College? What to establish a School for candidates for the ministry? What for any object of individual interest?

12. What other statistics or facts can the societies or members furnish, for the Baltimore Convention, that will be useful in illustrating our history, condition or prospects?

3. Resolved, That it be recommended to the superintendents and assistants, to forward the intelligence thus collected to Thomas H. Stockton, Philadelphia, by the 25th of October.

4. Resolved, That this conference would be pleased by the voluntary attendance of any of the ministers or laymen, within this District, who may be interested in the objects of the Baltimore Convention, and disposed to take part in their promotion.

5. Resolved, That it be recommended to our sister conferences or their executive officers, to unite in this good work, by adopting measures for the collection of intelligence for the use of the Baltimore Convention.

6. Resolved, That the editors of all the periodicals of our connexion be requested to give the foregoing preamble and resolutions prompt insertion in their respective journals.

THE CHURCH IN PHILADELPHIA.

Whereas, this conference is persuaded of the importance of the enterprize in which our Philadelphia brethren are now engaged. Therefore, Resolved,

1. That this conference recommend to the societies in this District, to assist the society in Philadelphia, in the erection of its house of worship.

2. That this conference recommend that simultaneous collections be made for this purpose by all the societies in the District.

3. That the last Sabbath in October be the day recommended for this effort.

4. That the collections thus made be forwarded as soon as practicable, to T. H. Stockton, Philadelphia.

5. That the foregoing preamble and resolutions be published in the Western Recorder.

"THE CHRISTIAN WORLD."

The committee recommend the adoption of the following resolutions, relative to this periodical, viz:

1. Resolved, That it be recommended to all our superintendents to act as agents, and to explain the objects of "The Christian World," and to impress its importance upon the minds of all the members and friends of our church, as well as upon those of other churches.

2. Resolved, That Br. Thomas H. Stockton now have an opportunity of receiving names of the members of this conference, as subscribers.

3. Resolved, That the roll of ministers be called for the purpose of ascertaining who among them will act as agents for the "Christian World."

4. Resolved, That it be recommended to the agents to send names and money as soon as possible, that it may be known how many copies to print.

5. Resolved, That these resolutions be published in the church periodicals.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

D. B. DORSEY,
C. SPRINGER,
A. SHINN,
JOHN BURNS,
Z. RAGAN,
J. BEATTY,
Committee.

OHIO CONFERENCE.

RESOLUTIONS OF THE OHIO ANNUAL CONFERENCE AT CINCINNATI.

1st. That colored persons making application for membership in any of the societies of the M. P. Church, within the limits of the Ohio District, shall be received under the same provisions specified in the constitution, art. 2d, Sec. 1st.

2d. The society or societies, thus receiving said colored persons shall have the privilege of recommending any persons of color, by them judged competent, for licence to exhort according to the rule in that case made and provided, and the quarterly conference, after proper trial shall have power to grant licence to preach, if, in their opinion, the person or persons, thus licenced to exhort are qualified according to the rule in that case made and provided.

3d. Whenever there shall be six or more colored persons thus received into a society, or class, as in the first resolutions, and it appearing that they are qualified to sustain themselves as a society or class, they shall have the privilege of organizing and of chosing a leader out of their own body.

4th. That whenever there shall be two or more societies, or classes thus formed and sufficiently contiguous to each other, such societies or classes may form a quarterly conference with the privilege of electing their own officers as in that case made and provided in the government and discipline of said Methodist Protestant Church.

5th. That when there shall be five or more circuits formed, as aforesaid, within the bounds of this, the Ohio Conference district, and these circuits thus formed be considered amply able in talent and numbers, they, the circuits, when thus formed shall have the privilege of organizing themselves into an Annual Conference district to be regulated by the constitution, and discipline of the M. P. Church, and enjoy all the rights and privileges as a conference which said constitution and discipline guarantees, with the exception of a representation in the General Conference of said M. P. Church.

Passed Aug. 31, 1840.

JOHN H. THOMAS.

MISCELLANEOUS.

FROM FLORIDA.—We find the following most amusing letter from an officer engaged in the cruel service in Florida, in the Army and Navy Chronicle. The picture he draws, though full of touches of humor, is sufficiently distressing. The ludicrous and the pathetic are blended in absurd harmony. Mr. Poinsett! Mr. Poinsett! when will this war end? It is a pity we could not have "a standing army of two hundred thousand men."—New World.

——, FLORIDA, July —, 1840.

It has rained ever since, and, including the 30th of June, excepting one day; and in Florida most truly is the saying good, "it never rains but it pours." It is my opinion that most all the Indians are drowned out of the everglades, and are now roaming about Middle Florida.—The war never can be ended until the savages are cut off from supplies; they will be joined by whites, and I only wonder that more do not join the marauders. There never was a better theatre for land piracy than poor Florida is now. If I had any influence I would advise that an appropriation be made for hemp, to hang a squad of pale-faces, who infest the country, much more to its detriment than a troop of red-skins. It would have a good effect to Ambristerize a few of them.

I verily believe that this war cannot be ended without at least 100,000 men in the field at once; and not then, without the most vigilant guard on the coast with armed steamers; for even were the Indians all gone, white men, especially Spaniards from the islands, would continually plunge into the woods, paint and dress as Indians, and plunder and kill. Should the war ever be ended, Florida will be a scene of arson, pillage and murder, for ten years after, unless it be put under martial law, and no white or black be allowed to go into the interior without a passport from some competent authority.

You don't know how provoking it is to sit down on a log in the rain, while the men are hauling your wagon and mules out of a swamp, and think of the proceedings of Congress, which you have read probably the day before: how Mr. So-and-so spent half a day in stating that he had been misrepresented in some newspaper. At such times I think to myself, "there is a man who gets eight dollars a day for talking; and here is a poor soldier who gets seven dollars a month for working like a beaver."—They give us but little credit at the North for our sufferings and privations here; no one out of Florida knows what they are.

Well, be it so. What are swamps to a member of Congress with a good comfortable fire to warm his feet by, before he jumps into bed? What are hammocks to a rotund alderman who employs four horses to haul him homeward? What are long, dreary marches, through torrents of rain, to an editor who wears cork soles to avoid the dew? Let every city sportsman who is caught out in a shower, hunting, think of us in the wet! Let every gentleman, subject to tan, when he forgets his umbrella, think of us in the pine woods under a Florida sun!—Let every visiter at Saratoga, when he quaffs his Congress water, think of us, drinking our solution of rotten limestone! and I reckon they will thank their stars they never listed. A week or a month is small potatoes, but when it comes to not only a year, but the plural, it is too much of a good thing. If Congress were compelled to hold their sessions in the everglades, and continue there until the war was ended, I will bet my old boots that they would pass a bill at one reading to raise a 100,000 men.

It is all a mistaken notion, this keeping regiments in Florida one year after another. New regiments are best; and the assurance of a biennial change would cheer us up. But now we are worn out and disheartened; and all our glorious anticipations consist in being sent out with broken down constitutions on sick leave, or finding a grave in the wilderness. Our troops are brave, possess fortitude, and laugh as much as any body—between chills. How wonderful is the composition of man! how amazing the effect of discipline! that with so brilliant a prospect ahead, they still maintain their ardor and their spirits.

Never was a regiment more unfit for a summer in Florida than the 6th: it is a regiment of victims. They have suffered severely from the day they won immortality at Okechobee, to this hour. A year or two of respite, out of Florida, is certainly its due.

TRUTH vs. ERROR.

"Truth, crushed to earth, will rise again,
The eternal years of God are here;
But Error, wounded writes in pain,
And dies amid her worshippers."

RUSSIA AND THE ROMAN CATHOLICS.—It is said that the Emperor of Russia has issued a proclamation confiscating the property of all those within his dominions who shall embrace the Popish faith or that have embraced it during the last twenty-five years. Already about two hundred priests have been exiled, who have declared their adhesion to the church of Rome.—The Autocrat does not pursue the right course to suppress the heresy. Temporal pains and penalties have but little influence in enlightening a man's conscience, and either the Catholic or Protestant who is manufactured by such means is scarcely worth the trouble. Were we admitted to the Emperor's cabinet council, if indeed he has such an appendage to his government, we would give him a hint that the very best possible way of keeping popery out of his dominions would be to reform thoroughly his Greek church, which certainly bears a strong family likeness to the church of Rome, and to pass from one to the other is very much like a visit of near relations.—Morning Star.

CHURCH AND STATE.—A subject well deserving the attention of the intelligent, may be found in the present progress of events in Europe. The government of several of the most powerful nations are directly employed modelling the religious systems prevalent among them, so as to employ these with greater efficiency as engines of state. The operations of the Prussian government in this respect are well known. Perhaps there is no country in which the king can more directly and powerfully effect the interest of the clergy than in this. He is virtually the head of the church. In Russia, the Autocrat is collecting the reigns of ecclesiastical supremacy in his own hands, obliging all his subjects to conform to the Greek Church, and that Church to acknowledge him in every way as the vicegerent of Jehovah; so far as the Russ is concerned.—N. Y. Baptist Adv.

INDOLENCE.—Indolence is a stream which flows slowly on, but yet undermines the foundation of every virtue. A vice of a more lively nature were a more desirable tyrant than this rust of the mind which gives a tincture of its nature to every action of one's life. It were as little hazard to be in a storm as to lie thus perpetually becalmed, and it is to no purpose to have within one the seeds of a thousand good qualities, if we want vigor and resolution necessary for exerting them. Death brings all persons back to an equality; and this image of it, this slumber of the mind leaves no difference between the greater genius and the meanest understanding. A faculty of doing things remarkably praiseworthy, thus concealed, is of no more benefit to the owner, than a heap of gold to the man who dare not use it.—Spectator.

SICKNESS IN EAST TENNESSEE.—The Chattanooga Gazette says it continues to rain almost constantly—not mere showers, as occasionally fell in other days, but to pour down for four hours, as if the very flood-gates of the skies were hoisted and all creation to be washed away. The Tennessee river fails to discharge its waters, so as to occupy its usual summer channel. Sickness prevails generally and seriously on all the water courses. Almost every family in this country so situated is suffering more or less with fevers. The distress is unparalleled for such healthy parts of Tennessee; and we are sorry to add it is getting worse in every neighborhood where it prevails. —Nashville Banner.

RESULT OF GAMBLING.—A check of 250 dollars was presented at the counter of the Farmer's Bank, Richmond, a few days ago, but was refused payment, as it proved a forgery. Upon inquiring into the facts of the case, it was ascertained that the check belonged to a gambler and had been received by him from a young man in payment for a gambling debt; furnishing another fearful warning to young men to guard, with a never ceasing vigilence, their every act through life, lest a single false step should blast their name forever.—North American.

William Green,

CLOCK AND WATCH REPAIRER, SILVERSMITH, AND JEWELLER,

CAN be found at his shop on Main street Putnam, a few doors north of J. C. Guthrie's store, where he will do his best to accommodate customers. He keeps on hand an assortment of spectacles, watch trimmings, pencils, &c.

As far as we have tried Mr. GREEN as a watch repairer he has given us good satisfaction.—ED.
April 22, 1840. 35tf.

Dissolution.

THE partnership heretojore existing between the subscribers in the PUTNAM FOUNDRY, under the firm of HARTLEY & ANDERSON, was this day dissolved by mutual consent.

The Putnam Foundry will hereafter be conducted by J. J. Anderson & Co.

LEVI HARTLEY,
JACOB J. ANDERSON.

Putnam, Jan. 1, 1840. (Jan. 29: 23.)

Notice.

ALL persons indebted to the late firm of Hartley & Anderson, are earnestly requested to call at the Foundry and make settlement, as the change of owners makes this step absolutely necessary. We ask the attention of all persons concerned, to this notice.

J. J. ANDERSON & Co.

Putnam, Jan. 1, 1840. (Jan. 29: 23.)

Dissolution.

THE partnership heretofore existing between S. B. Johnson and J. M. Kirkpatrick, under the firm of S. B. Johnson & Co. was dissolved by mutual consent, on Thursday 19th inst.

S. B. JOHNSON,
J. M. KIRKPATRICK.

Zanesville, March 31, 1840. 32tf

The New World.

The Largest, Cheapest, Handsomest and most Comprehensive Newspaper in the United States.

EDITED BY
PARK BENJAMIN AND EPES SARGENT.

WITH multiplied resources for rendering the New World more valuable than ever as a compendious newspaper and repository of elegant literature, we enter upon the second volume (folio) on the 24th of October, dressed in a beautiful garb of new type, cast expressly for the purpose. It will therefore be a fitting time to commence new subscriptions, as well as for the renewal of those which may then expire.

During the first year of the existence of the New World, it has acquired a reputation and circulation superior to that of any weekly paper in the country; and has furnished to its subscribers, during that period, (besides all the current news of the day, domestic and foreign) new and valuable works by Talfourd, D'Israeli, Thomas Moore, Miss Mitford, Mrs. Jameson, Charles Dickens, Ainsworth, Knowles, Bulwer, Marryat and others—works, which in London could not be purchased for fifty times the amount of the subscription price of the New World. In addition to works of interest by these eminent authors, it has contained the cream of the periodical literature of the day, as well as original articles from the pens of some of the most popular writers of America, among whom we may mention Miss Sedgwick, Orville Dewey, Professor Longfellow, the author of "Yankee Notions," Simms, Street, &c., &c.

In politics we shall, as hitherto, maintain an armed neutrality. Our columns will as hitherto be unobjectionable in a moral point of view. In criticism we shall, in justice to the public, maintain a perfect independence, even though we incur the vengeance of all the dunces. We shall, in conclusion, earnestly strive to render our sheet not only worthy of the unparalleled favor it has experienced, but of a continually extending circulation. While we continue to furnish with all possible promptitude the most attractive literature of the day, we shall, as our means enlarge, afford that compensation to native authors, which may induce them to make the New World the medium for presenting to the public their best productions. Our excellent London correspondence will be continued, and due attention will be paid to the commercial, agricultural and news departments of our paper.

A QUARTO EDITION

Of sixteen large pages was commenced on the sixth of June last, in order to meet the wishes of a large number of subscribers, by giving the its rich and varied contents in a suitable for for binding. This we have done without having enhanced the price, so that new subscribers, and others on the renewal of previous subscriptions can take their choice between the Quarto and Folio form. ☞But a few sets of the Quarto from No. 1, now remain on hand in the office and we shall, therefore, not be able long to supply them.

TERMS.—Three Dollars a year in advance for either edition; or Five Dollars for two copies. In all cases letters must be free, or post-paid, or they will remain dead in the post-office.

☞All Postmasters who will act for us as our authorized Agents, and may retain 25 per cent. on the subscription price, (Three Dollars) for commissions, if remitted in New York or eastern money; or 50 cents on each, if in notes of other solvent banks, which may be at a discount here.

Letters relative to the editorial department must be addressed to Park Benjamin and Epes Sargent, Editors: those relative to the business department, to J. WINCHESTER, Publisher, No. 30, Ann street, New York.

September 16, 1840. 3t

S. C. Haver,

IN the flourishing town of Putnam has on hand 40 or 50 SADDLES ready for sale, of different qualities, comprising nearly all the varieties in fashion in our Buckeye State.

A good assortment of Bridles and Martingales: Riding and driving Whips: between 100 and 200 Carriage and heavy draft Collars, which will compare and wear with any others made here or elsewhere.

Also, fine York, Dearborn, heavy team and common Farming Harness. A lot of first rate Carriage and Buggy Harness, (brass and silver plated.)

Trunks, vallises, saddle-bags, and double colored wagon whips, varying in quality and price to suit purchasers.

The only recommendation he now offers for his work, is the testimony and long experience of his old customers and friends. He is still anxious to please and accommodate those who may call on him, and hopes to share so much of the public patronage as his attention to his business shall merit.

Putnam, April 29, 1840. 28tf

Glass Manufactory.

THE subscriber having dissolved his connexion with the former company, has taken the GLASS WORKS below town under his own management.

WINDOW GLASS, double and single, assorted, and of superior quality will be kept constantly on hand for sale on reasonable terms.—The experience of the proprietor, in the manufacture of the article, will insure all made to be of the best quality. Call and see.

S. B. JOHNSON.

Zanesville, Ohio, May 6, 1840. 37

O. WHITE, BOOK BINDER, No. 10, Main Street, Zanesville, Ohio.
January 15, 1840. 21tf

THE

WESTERN RECORDER

IS PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY.

☞The office of the Recorder is five and a half miles west of Zanesville.

TERMS.

1. The WESTERN RECORDER will be published weekly, on an imperial sheet, at $2 00 per annum, in advance: $2 50 at the end of three months; $3 00 at the end of the year.

2. No discontinuances will be allowed, except at the discretion of the publisher, until all arrearages are paid.

3. To all ministers having regular pastoral charges, who do any thing at all for the paper, if they will direct us where, a copy shall be sent gratis; any other who forward to us $10 00 for new subscribers, shall have six copies sent to any address he may give.

4. All letters designed for the paper, must be directed to "C. Springer, Meadow Farm, Muskingum, Ohio."

5. A failure to notify a discontinuance before the expiration of the subscription year, will be considered a new engagement.

CHARACTER.—The pages of the WESTERN RECORDER will be open to discussion on all moral questions;—it will give articles on Literature, Mechanics, Agriculture,—an abstract of Religious and Political intelligence, and what ever may be interesting and instructive to families in general. A portion of its columns will be open to Advertisements and Prices Current —another portion to sustain the interests of the Methodist Protestant Church in the West.—These two latter objects will not likely occupy more than one page.

The RECORDER will take a firm stand against Clerical Supremacy.

THE WESTERN RECORDER.

RINGER, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER. | Vol. 2.--No. 8. | ZANESVILLE, OHIO, WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 14, 1840. | Whole No. 60. | JOHN W. WHITE, PRINTER.

DOLLARS PER ANNUM IN ADVANCE. | $2.50, IN THREE MONTHS; $3, END OF YEAR.

MMUNICATIONS.

For the Western Recorder.

AN ADDRESS

EMBERS OF THE OHIO CONFERENCE.

BY THE REV. N. SNETHEN.

tance of a discourse delivered before the o Annual Conference, Cincinnati, August 26, 1840.

ore, laying aside all malice, and all guile, crisies, and envies, and all evil speaking; rn babes desire the sincere milk of the t ye may grow thereby: if so be ye have t the Lord is gracious. 1st Peter ii. 1, sus, a Grecian, denied this whole system ls and punishments, and taught that d vice are their own rewarders in this Atheism and the mortality of the soul, dism) generally associated with Epicu- The Saducees are regarded as nearly as the Epicurians. "The traditions ders" whose authority among the Pha s paramount, savored of the fables of empsychosis. Such was the state of pop- ion when our Lord and Saviour began ic ministry, and these opinions contin- g the ministry of the Apostles among ons. Many among the Roman states- e Epicurians. Did our Lord repeat vailing doctrines of restoration, or de- ? This would have been nothing new. We have still many of the old books, ntain those matters. How vain mus pt have proved to reform the heart and hen who held those opinions, and lef ds in the undisturbed belief of them! Lord taught ending sin, and ending punishments, we are sure that He must ght a great deal more than modern Un- s profess to find in the gospel, to have those old associations. He taught tha shall be burned with unquenchable t the worm dieth not, and the fire is ched,—that the darkness, is outer dark- hat punishment is eternal, everlasting, hd ever. The day of judgment is a pe- ctrine of the New Testament. It is event—the last in the dispensation— g scene of revelation. We must all fore the judgment seat of Christ. You ell, dear young friends, in this suscept- e of your minds, to beware of the modi- which may be given to these scripture s of the final judgment, and future re- hd punishments, by the mythology of nt poets, and the speculations of an- losophers, those interpreters of the an- ests. These old doctrines began to be ically taught in the church in the sec- ury, by men who had been educated in chools, and professed to be converted by d. We have come to the conclusion, inds, that transmigration, as a punish- purifying process, and restoration in its odes, and the present purgatory doc- the Catholics, have a common basis.— a's book is the mere prompter of these they have no immediate reference to e have taken some pains to follow the of theories, and it seems to us that n have come to the end of punishment, been prone to take its duration into hands, and to generate priestcraft out We mean not to identify modern Uni- and indulgences But the teacher of er, when he gains the entire confidence arers, seems in effect, to do in general, teacher of the latter does in particu- duration of punishment among the of ending or finite punishment, seems tend to become shorter Do the teach- arned require that it should be shorter, he teachers indulge therein? May not tening process be carried to no punish- all? The case is worthy of serious ition. We cannot be too careful to all the possible modifications of priest- We have been led to conclude that it is for man to know the end of every thing, t he does not know, all must agree, he t to attempt to preach or teach. What what a strange doctrine must Christ, the nd the judgment seat of Christ, and we stand before the judgment seat of Christ, n to priests who judge, and people who ged by them. How awful the idea of t and only judge separating the sheep goats, and how dreadful the sound of the , depart from me ye cursed! No priest le, or to qualify, or to shorten the sys- unishment by penance or by doctrine. aren, never loose sight of the fact, that y be a doctrinal priestcraft, and a gen- fessional, as well as a personal one, in en can dispose of divine judgments un- excitements of their human interests. re are great and learned men who will s remain ignorant, if we would, that in ief, private creatures with private sin t, do not need an infinite redeemer; ory shows the tendency of their doctrine uce the character of redeeming merit to um, and finally to nothing. The Lord rist, in the hand of these doctors, has but as one of the merest of good men. w are to begin to be a Universalist or a an Church, we must begin at the lowest nd not at the highest point. The knowl- history will save us from all the descend- rience. If we do not begin at the low- t, we must needs fall down to it. We the same law amalgamate. Two church- t remain alike, and yet remain separ- ctrinal distinctions keep us separate se denominations, with which in govern- e might all agree. But government se- parated us and keeps us separated from the M. E. Church. Without lay representation between us, they would swallow us up in a day. On a descending stream or an incline plane all bodies find at last a lowest level as a common one.

[CONCLUDED.]

I anticipated the substance of Br. Shinn's book and its tendency, rather the tendency of the minds of some of its readers, but determined to enter into no controversy with it, as I have said from a conviction, as new born babes we are not able to bear such controversy as would divide us against ourselves; and so, instead of making us grow, might hasten our decline. The public mind, and indeed the public taste, will not bear controversies among babes. We ought not to regret this taste, but encourage and foster it. I advise the Ohio Conference, and I advise every young preacher in it to do as I have done, and as I propose still to do, viz: To let Br. Shinn's book be, and to let brotherly love continue towards Br. Shinn. If the book proves to be as true as the gospel, we can feed on it when we come to full age. Like dried and preserved meat it will not spoil by time. In the meanwhile, we shall need much milk of the simplest and purest kind to keep us healthy and growing. It has taken the old church nearly sixty years to grow to its present size. It was about ten years old when I became a member; that is about our age now. Upon what principles did we begin?—Those of regeneration or revolution? I had these questions in view in "The Identifier." Will any doctrine accord with these principles equally well, or with one as well as with the other? Observe. Politicians can quarrel, and the State, even in incipience, may prosper; for political quarrels are not so violent as religious ones, and States are not founded upon the the regenerative basis. The new birth or regeneration must begin in repentence, and repentence must begin in conviction, and conviction of the evil and danger of sin, must be stronger than the love or propensity of sin Sin, by the commandment, must become exceedingly sinful. To effect this, the curses and the terrors of a broken law must be brought to bear upon the conscience. The gospel too, as well as the law, has its sons of thunder. The terrors of God must make sinners afraid. Now, we know, that what the law saith it saith to them that are under the law. Every sinner is under a law to God. All the world, to be saved, must become guilty before God. When the gospel is so preached as to produce no conviction for sin, and no repentence for sin, we may be sure that the matter or manner of the preaching must be wrong. A preacher who is only armed with arguments or facts, and persuasives has not on the whole armor of God; he must be armed with the law, as with a sharp two edged sword. The word must be quick and powerful and sharper than a two edged sword itself, it is a discerner of the thoughts and intents of the breast. The power of law confers a fearless majesty upon the preacher of the word. In the name of the Lord, he proclaims, O! wicked man, thou shalt surely die. Woe to the wicked! The soul that sinneth it shall die. The preacher of the gospel is never more powerful and successful in warning men to flee the wrath to come, than when his soul is most filled with the sense of the love of God, and his heart melts into tenderness and sympathy for those who are obnoxious to the displeasure of God. Hell and damnation are awful words, but must not be kept back, and time must not be wasted in speculating about them.

Now, then, we are embassadors for Christ, we pray you, in Christ's stead, be ye reconciled unto God. All the successful preachers, my young friends, have made their preaching a terror to evil doers. I hate that prophet, for he never prophecies good concerning me. A young evangelist is mighty in the spirit to convince gainsayers. The young and tender conscience is peculiarly qualified to portray to the sinner's conscience, what an evil and bitter thing it is to sin against God. His words say they are mighty and powerful. The acuteness of the preacher's feelings penetrate most deeply the feelings of the hearer. The effect of a sentence, or even a word is sometimes like lightness.—When hearers can reason much under preaching, they do not feel much. And when preachers reason most, they too often feel less, or are apt to reason their feelings away. The greatest number of souls seem to have been awakened by the ministry of preachers under middle age, while they were fullest of fire. Cry aloud and spare not, that is, earnestly, faithfully. Restrain not the spirit's course in your hearts. Labor in spirit 'till Christ be formed in the heart the hope of glory. Feel until you can carry the feelings of your hearers along with you. We mean not, that you need not reason well, but that your arguments should be imbued with feeling or calculated to produce it. Imagination and speculation which terminate in themselves are unavailing in religion. When resorted to, they must be employed as means, not as ends. But it is to warn the humbled, the broken hearted and the contrite ones, that all the tenderest emotions of your hearts are to be called forth.—To the mourners in Zion you must appoint beauty for ashes, and the oil of joy for the spirit of heaviness. Your ministry is to clothe them with the garments of salvation. Say to them, O! thou afflicted and tossed with tempest, and not comforted, behold I will lay thy foundations. Ho! every one that thirsteth come ye to the waters. Behold! I bring you glad tidings, may be said, truly; when the promises are offered to those who are seeking the Lord while he may be found, and calling upon him while he is near. But the new born babes must be fed with the milk of the promises. Young converts need a great deal of encouragement. It is the privilege of those who have fled for refuge to any hold on the hope set before them, to have a strong consolation. There is nothing like the giving of the promises to the proper subjects of them in the very words which the Holy Ghost teacheth. Then, sublimest poetry cords with the feelings of the most simple minded. The prophecy of Isaiah is a treasure of promises. Young preachers should store their memories with promises, and should have a fund of them always ready to select from. The only danger is in their indiscriminate use. That which is holy should not be given to dogs. Those who live and walk by faith, must live and walk by promises. Promises are the primary and proper subjects of faith. Faith often comes by hearing the promises. A preacher who is poor in promises, will never greatly edify mixed congregations. There are promises for every state and condition,—for the young and the old,—for those who labor and those who suffer,—for sickness and health,—for the living and the dying. It is a most profitable exercise to write them out and class them. He who does so, prepares himself to become a son of consolation. Delightful work to pour the oil and the wine of the kingdom into troubled hearts.

"Comfort ye, comfort ye my people, saith your God; speak ye comfortable words unto Jerusalem." But the text shows you, dear yoke fellows, that the chosen people, the royal priesthood, the holy nation, in St. Peter's time, were as new born babes. And so, we have labored to convince you, is our Jerusalem. While you are to contend earnestly, even to controversy itself, for the faith once delivered to the saints; controversies upon "subjects of doubtful disputation" may prove unedifying to converts, who have to learn so many things to strengthen, establish and settle them in this faith. The proofs of facts which have come under our observation, of the exclusive and observing nature of opinions connected with what is called Universalism, in most of its modes, have made us wary of them. The hardened sinner, the sinner under first convictions, the deeply contrite heart, and the believer of a day old, all glowing in the first love, the luke warm and back-slider have but one portion of meat ministered to them. Can this be rightly dividing the word of truth, and giving to each a portion in due season? or is it not more like compassing sea and land to make one proselyte? You yourselves, perhaps, have seen examples of this kind among our own brethren. Not as though the theory is true, but as if it were the only truth; Or as though a truth of the remotest period and most difficult to be demonstrated, must supercede all truths of immediate experience and practice. If we did not know the contrary, we should be apt to think that an opinion of this kind would be as a truth, that a man might have to himself before God, that it might set quite easy in the mind; But in general, it is found that no faith is less apt to be dormant. Are not similar remarks applicable in part to those of our brethren who have embraced the opinion that immersion is regeneration? And who thus, with the exception of the form of baptism, having come round to the principle which Methodist doctrine set out to oppose, and so coalizing with Catholicism in the substance of the matter? Does it not behoove us all to look well lest the opinions and the forms may run away with the power of religion? We would not have you to expend your youthful strength in compassing sea or land to make proselytes to lay representation only. This may all be done upon the principle of revolution, and no body be born again. It would be better for all the friends in the old church to remain in it, than to come into a church in which the root of the matter is not. Convince yourselves, and convince every body, if you can, that representation changes no hearts. You must do this to preach successfully salvation by grace through faith. And if you preach not salvation so, you had better not preach at all. Woe unto us, not only if we preach not the gospel, but also, if we preach it wrong, or preach another gospel. When we shall have proved to every body that our church is regeneratory, not revolutionary, our old brethren will have to go with us, or take us with them, or they must be left behind.

The party spirit which is now running so high in the old fellowship is most instructive to us as well as portentous to themselves. Nothing that has happened has had so direct a tendency to evolve the two principles in the basis of this discourse. We have feared that it has not entered into the minds of these new champions of liberty to examine the bearing of their spirit upon the principle of regeneration. If the first Methodist missionaries in these States and the West Indies had began, as some are now ending, that is, with immediate abolition, and political abolition votings, they must have ended where they began, or have produced a revolution. This is self-evident. But if any one doubts it he may find the proofs of in the archives of missions. We come not, said Dr. Coke and his brethren to the planters, to revolutionize your slaves, but to regenerate them. They were successful. They fed these colored converts, who were under the yoke, as new born babes, with the sincere milk of the word, and they grew thereby. Brethren, our application is, that we must "begin at the beginning," and begin as beginners. Every thing must have a beginning, or time to begin. Inspiration might have been to the new apostles as old experience; but they had to feed and nurse the new church as new born babes. Every step in our mutual labors ought to be taken with mutual council. What we cannot do in concert we shall be apt to do in vain. We are troubled and even terrified at times, with the vein of contradictions running through our papers. These sounds are to us as rumors of internal wars. We are too young to bear these contradictions among ourselves. They that bite each other so have need to take heed lest they be destroyed one of another. As preachers, we must be as one if we mean to make the church as one body. We have no inspiration to heal divisions. And we are taught to know, that inspiration itself did not always heal them.

For the Western Recorder.

Mr. Editor: Mr. Lawder has again appeared in the columns of your paper, and it may be, that your readers will look for a reply from me, but when a man so far forgets all self respect as to descend to vulgar personalities and unfounded insinuations, the never failing resort of those who have nothing better to offer, he becomes too low to merit any notice.

The whole of Mr. Lawder's communication abounds with personalities of the most vulgar character and insinuations, as false as they are base. I have no doubt but he thought his cause required it, but mine is not so desperate.

It would have been far better for his reputation and for the cause of God, had he given proof instead of assertion, and something definite instead of insinuation; but to assert and insinuate is the course which a slanderer invariably pursues when he has not the honesty or moral courage to meet an opponent in an honorable way.

As it regards garbled extracts and misquotations, the books are all in my library and can be easily examined by any person who wishes to do so; and I pledge myself, on the word and honor of a gentleman and a christian, that if one garbled extract or misquotation can be found, I will publicly retract it, and till such time as this is done, I shall hold any man who makes such a charge, a wilful and malicious libeler. I have neither time nor incination to bandy epithets with Mr. Lavder, nor shall I do it. Religion has suffered enough already in this community from other causes, without its ministers turning blackguards and acting the part of street brawlers. If Mr. L's taste leads him that way, he is welcome to pursue it but he will do it without me.

I have no disposition to boast of my inteligence or respectability. If I possess them, it will doubtless be found out without my becoming the trumpeter of my own fame. If not, all my efforts will not induce an intelligent community, to award to me those qualities. On that subject, therefore, I have no anxiety.

When Mr. Lawder will show himself a gentleman, then, and not till then, will he receive any farther notice from me.

Yours, truly,

S. S. PARR.

Zanesville, Oct. 2. 1840.

For the Western Recorder.

"THE FAR WEST."

A half centuary ago, what was it? and where was it? A limited spot, designated by the name of Kentucky, and another called Cumberland, some two hundred miles distant south-west, of small dimensions, constituted the far West. The former was included in the State of Virginia, and the latter in that of North Carolina, but separated from these States by a dreary wilderness, infested with barberous savages and beasts of prey. Where were then the southern and western counties of Kentucky and Tennessee, now densely populated? Where were THEN the NOW populous States of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Missouri, Arkansas, Louisiana, Mississippi and Alabama? Where were then the Missouri Territory, Iowa and other regions, to which emigrants are now pressing as the "far West?" They existed but in embryo—human foresight could not have conjectured their ACTUAL existence, rapid growth, or immense resources, nor could mortal then have surveyed their boundaries. Half a century ago, what but the spirit of prophecy could have foretold the progress and extent of population and improvement in the far West? To have talked THEN of immense cotton regions, extensive grain and stock farms, steamboat navigation, large exports of cotton bales and other products of the soil, and of speedy returns of the necessaries and luxuries of life, would have been esteemed visionary, and as great a humbug as some now esteem the silk culture.

The tide of population, enterprise and improvement, as well as that of the gospel, has flowed westward—and each have had their pioneers. The first pioneers of the gospel in the far West, were of the Baptist order,—about the year 1783 a revival of religion commenced in Kentucky, under the labors of James Smith, Lewis, Elijah and Joseph Cragg, John Tanner, John Bailey and Joseph and Wm. Bledsoe, which spread to most of the newly formed settlements, and progressed finely until a strife arose about the doctrines of a general and limited atonement, which resulted in a division, one party styled the regular and the other the separate Baptists. This revival had spread a hallowing influence, which was long seen and felt,—the mother and eldest sister of the writer of these sketches, were among subjects of this work, who remained pious during life.

David Rice, a Presbyterian clergyman, became the pioneer of this order of christians about the year 1784 or 5,—he was an able minister, and his evangelical labors had a salutary influence. About the same time, Francis Clark, a Methodist local preacher from Virginia, settled in Kentucky, and commenced preaching.—Richard Strawbridge and Philip Embury, local preachers, were the pioneers of Methodism at New York and in Maryland —Francis Clark in Kentucky—perhaps Philip Gatch in Ohio, and Philip Taylor and Thomas Taylor at other important points. But LOCAL preachers, however useful as pioneers, and however weighty in the scale of ministerial character or talents, were never recognized in the M. E. Church as having a right to a voice in the laws by which themselves, and those for whom they labored, should be governed, or any hand in the administration of ecclesiastical affairs. They may have cleared the fields, broke up the land and sowed the seed,—but if they have been always local, became local from necessity, or have been located arbitrarily, others reap the harvest, enter into "other men's labors," "boast in another man's line of things, made ready to their hands," and not unfrequently, lord it over heads grown grey in the service! James Haw and Benjamin Ogden were the first itinerant pioneers of the Methodist order in the far West,—they were men of zeal and ardent piety, eminently successful in spreading the gospel and bringing sinners to God—they, however, became local, and favored the sentiments of James O'Kelly with regard to church government. This was deemed heresy enough—for the spirit and understrappings of Popish intolerance did not become extinct when Luther and the reformation succeeded. An honest difference of opinion, with regard to clerical prerogatives, has been deemed a crime sufficient to exclude from the pale of the visible church, and a sufficient reason why the services and sacrifices of useful pioneers and old servants should be cast into the shade and forgotten!—Since puffing has became fashionable, and facilities for eulogy common, the brief services and small achievements of some are magnified, and the long, hazzardous and useful toils of others, are unnoticed and unknown, on the page of partial and vaunting history. John Thobler (a worthy man) was a short time in Kentucky, crossed the Ohio and formed a society, and returned to the lap of ease, in Virginia—this event is chronicled—but Elisha Bowman, who formed the first circuit on the Miamias, is unnoticed—but he associated with William Buck, Jesse Head and Caleb W. Claud, when they complained of maltreatment, and evinced an unwillingness to succumb to lordly domination. Happy for laborious pioneers, and neglected worthies, that there is an impartial judge —that their reward is on high—and that they looked to the recompense of reward, which is far better than for their names and deeds to float on the chronicles of fame, or to be eulogised by those who "fawn on success and power," forgetful of unpretending piety and humble worth.

L. GARRETT.

Nashville, Tenn., Sept. 1, 1840.

For the Western Recorder.

DEATH OF REV. TIMOTHY FLINT.

Never has the Literature of the west, lost, by the destroyer DEATH, more, than in the recent decease of the highly gifted and venerable, Timothy Flint.

Mr. Flint was the author of many of the best literary productions, that have emanated from the western press, during the last twenty years; and his writings are all characterized by a tone of moral sentiment and piety, which renders them peculiarly acceptable to all who can properly appreciate the efforts of genius, which tend to the elevation of the affections, and the improvement of the mind and heart. He was a man of undoubted genius—unsurpassed descriptive powers —superior belles lettres scholarship—of an intellect of a high order, and habits of industry to bring into requisition all the resources of his great mind.

Mr. Flint was a native of Massachusetts, where he resided until within the last twenty years. He was a number of years, a preacher in the Congregationalist church, but during the latter years of his life he embraced the views of Dr. Priestly, and became the coadjutor of Dr. Channing in the promulgation of the Unitarian faith.

"Recollections of ten years residence in the Mississippi Valley" was first published in Cincinnati in 1827 by Mr. Flint, and was the first of his works, which issued from the western press. The history, geography, resources and wealth, of the great west, formed the subjects of Mr. Flints "Recollections," and gained for him a high reputation.

Mr. Flint also published, in 1833, a volume of a few hundred pages, entitled, "Lectures upon natural History, Geology, Chemistry, the Application of steam, and interesting discoveries in the Arts."

Another effort made by Mr. Flint in the field of Western Literature, was the establishment in Cincinnati, in 1827 of the Western Monthly Review; a literary magazine of 56 pages, which he continued to edit and publish for a number of years. It was a periodical, characterized by elegance, and beauty of composition, and style—by force and vigor,—and very considerably elevated the character of the periodical Literature of the West.

Mr. Flint's more elaborate productions, however, during his sojourn in the West, were of a different character, from those already noticed—it was another portion of the field of Literature he more assiduously cultivated. More of his time was employed in the production of romances or novels, and such as emanated from his mind and pen were of a character calculated to beautify and enrich that department of literature. His first work, in the way of romance, was "Francis Berrian" which has been much read and justly admired. The descriptive and didactic parts of "Francis Berrian" are most charming. "As a describer of nature Mr. Flint had few equals. Few can sketch out out with so masterly a hand the gorgeous scenery of our western solitudes. He had the heart and the eye of the poet, for the beauties of the mountain, the forest, and for the stream, and for the sublimities of the cataract, and the storm. There are few better things of the kind in the English language, than Mr. Flint's account of the valley of the Comanches, uniting, as it does, all the beauty of truth, with the wildness of romance, and can therefore be quoted as a specimen of felicitious description."

"Arthur Clenning," is the title of another work of fiction, written by Mr. Flint, and is regarded by eminent literary men, as a work of even more interest than "Francis Berrian." His last romance, on a large scale, is entitled the "Shoshonee Valley," in two volumes, and was published in Cincinnati in 1830. All who have eyes to see, imaginations to admire, or hearts to feel simple nature, will hold in high estimation the "Shoshonee Valley," and it should ever be told in justice to the memory of the lamented Flint, that whatever other demerit may attach to his works of fiction, they are at least free from the inculcation of a single sentiment that has not the purest moral tendency.

Mr. Flint resided during the last ten or more years, at Alexandria, on Red River, in the State of Louisiana, and though in feeble health, devoted his time to the superintendence of a literary institution, and occasionally employing a leisure hour in the preparation of an essay or story, with which the Souvenirs and Magazines have been enriched.

Mr. Flint, died at Salem, Massachusetts, far from his family and home, in August last, aged about sixty years. He left his residence, in May last, in very feeble health, expecting to derive benefit, and perhaps an entire restoration to health, from the bracing air of the North, but he was doomed to disappointment—to Death. Though he died far from his family and home, he was surrounded in death, by the friends of his youth, and closed his eyes on this nether world, and took his departure for the Spirit land, in the place of his birth, and in the midst of the friends of his childhood and youth!

Peace to his manes! S.

For the Western Recorder.

Br. Disciple: In the first number, volume 2d, of the Western Recorder, I find an attempt to answer three questions, submitted some time since, and published in a previous number. Permit me to inform you, that your answers are not satisfactory to me. My first question was: "When was the church of Christ established?" For answer, you refer me to Acts, 1st chapter, 14th and 15th verses. I cannot find the church spoken of in the passage referred to, much less to find out by it when it was established.

My second question was: "Does membership obtain in Christ's church by birthright? If not, what are the terms of admission?" The latter clause of this two-fold question, you have passed unnoticed. For an answer to the first clause, you refer me to Matthew, 12th chapter and 50th verse, after having answered it in the negative. In the passage of which you speak, we learn that the Saviour acknowledges relationship to those who do the will of his Father in heaven. Now, unless you inform us what the will of the Father is, you will fail to answer the question, as it is evident (if you have applied the passage correctly) that doing the Father's will is the condition on which admission is obtained.

My third question was: "Does God promise salvation to sinners without the precincts of Christ's church?" You cite me to Acts, 2d chapter and 21st verse, for an answer to this question. We will here insert it with your supplied words. "And it shall (positively) come to pass, that whosoever (no distinction) shall call on the name of the Lord, shall be saved." Now, it does appear to me that there is some distinction. I read in Matthew, 7th chapter and 21st verse, thus: "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven," &c. Again: James, 4th chapter and 3d verse, "Ye ask and receive not, because ye ask amiss," &c. From these passages, with others that might be noticed, there seems to be some "distinction."—Br. Disciple, will you please try it again, and be as explicit as possible? as a correct solution of those questions is a matter of importance in this age of contradictory teaching. TIMOTHY.

Br. Disciple: I find four questions so closely connected with your answers to mine, that I conclude you intended them for my notice.

Questions.—1st. Is God the moving cause of man's salvation? 2d. Is Christ the procuring cause of man's salvation? 3d. And the spirit of God the efficient cause? 4th. And faith the instrumental cause of man's salvation?

Answer.—As it regards the terms, "moving," "procuring," "efficient" and "instrumental," I do not find them used in connection with man's salvation in the holy oracles. I find in Eph. 2d chapter and 5th verse, salvation is ascribed to grace (favor.) In Rom. 5th chapter and 9th verse, justification (salvation) is ascribed to the blood of Christ, verse 10th, salvation is ascribed to the life of Christ. In Rom. 10th chapter and 13th verse, salvation is ascribed to (prayer) calling on the name of the Lord. In Acts, 16th chapter and 31st verse, salvation is ascribed to faith. In 1 Pet. 3d chapter and 21st verse, salvation is ascribed to baptism, and in 1 Cor. 15th chapter and 2d verse, the Corinthians are said to be saved by the gospel. The words alone and only not being found in those passages, I conclude that it takes all those things named by the Apostles to complete the sinner's present salvation from sin. Should I be wrong in my conclusions, Br. Disciple, will please "show unto me a more excellent way." TIMOTHY.

October 1, 1840.

RELIGIOUS INTELLIGENCE.

BEAR CREEK MISSION, FAYETTE, PA., Oct. 5, 1840.

Br. Springer: I have entered upon the field of labor assigned me by conference, and am endeavoring to do the best I can. My congregations are as large as could be expected, all things considered; for when I take into the account the distance many have to come to preaching, with the roughness of the country, I do not expect crowded houses. The few who attend seem very attentive to the words of truth. I was truly divertingly interested on yesterday after preaching. I believe before I had pronounced the benediction an old man, who had long wandered from Christ, whose head was as white as frost, rose up in the congregation and spoke aloud, "My old cabin door shall be open for you at any time." I pray God that while he opens his old cabin door, as he called it, for the reception of the followers of Christ, that his heart may be open for the reception of divine grace.

There is but little expectation of doing much here, until after the Presidential election, for the whole community seems to be carried away with political excitement.

I am yours in the bonds of Christ,

GABRIEL LANHAM.

FREEPORT, IA., SEPT 23, 1840.

Br. Springer: Having to write on business, let me inform the friends of religion, through your paper, that the Lord has not forgotten the day of small things. We held a camp-meeting on Sugar creek circuit, commencing on the 4th inst., at which much good appeared to be done.—All in attendance, with a few exceptions, seemed to feel the mighty influences of grace. EIGHT joined the church.

I have just returned from a two day meeting on the Brandywine, Hancock county. It was a comfortable season—THREE united with the church.—Our cause in this country is assuming a more interesting aspect. The question of church government had not been presented to the people, and our opponents represented that we were contending about nothing, and thus prejudiced the minds of the public against us. But I think if your paper was extensively read here, it would do much for our cause. An intelligent man who reads it, and who used to oppose us, says the Recorder has converted him. So I send you five new subscribers.

If you have not heard from the camp-meeting on Richwood circuit, I would inform you that their meeting was one of uncommon interest. Old preachers say they never saw a greater display of the power of divine grace. As I left before the meeting closed I am not informed as to the number who professed religion.

Yours, &c.

S. MORRISON, Sup. As.

WESTERN RECORDER.

ZANESVILLE:

WEDNESDAY, ... OCTOBER 14, 1840.

Our paper, we repeat it, is not dedicated to party politics. And though we have been alternately censured by both the parties for favoring their opponents, yet it is not our intention to subserve the interests of either, but to leave them to manage their own cases respectively.—Yet, as there is a number of our readers who take no other paper, and who might wish to know something about the facts which relate to the great question which is now exciting this nation in an unusual manner, we shall occasionally record some of the most prominent.—The following article, from the Brother Jonathan, a paper neutral in politics, on the subject of the Presidential contest, may be interesting to some of our readers. We give it without endorsing any thing which might be considered to savor of party:

PRESIDENTIAL ELECTION.

The near approach of the Presidential election has turned all eyes and ears to returns, and set all heads to calculating upon the indications afforded by elections, passed, and to come. Three months will put us all in possession of the whole result, but that three months must be to those interested, a period of suspense.—Under these circumstances we have tho't that a review of such State elections as have taken place, with the dates of elections to be held, will not be unacceptable to the reader.

Elections for State officers have been held in thirteen States, Connecticut, Rhode Island, Louisiana, Indiana, North Carolina, Kentucky, Vermont, Maine, Virginia, Illinois, Alabama, Missouri and New Hampshire. The nine first States have given Whig majorities, though in Louisiana the Whigs have lost ground in the vote for State officers, and have also lost one Representative in Congress—or failed to elect one upon whom they strongly calculated. In the four last States, the Van Buren men have carried the State elections. The nine first States throw ninety-six electoral votes, the four last twenty-three. Politicians, of course, can find consolation in all apparent defeats, and trace to local causes, what may appear to the general observer to be general results. With these nice distinctions we have no time to detail.

In three States, Louisiana, Vermont and Maine, elections have been held for Representatives to Congress. Those 3 return 16 Representatives, and, at present their delegations are equally divided—there being eight members of each party. By the recent elections the Whigs have gained from four to six members—there being one or two districts in Maine, in which there is probably no choice; and it may be several days before the result will be known with any degree of certainty. Of the States above mentioned as having given Whig majorities in their elections for State officers, six, viz: Connecticut, Rhode Island, Louisiana, North Carolina, Maine and Virginia, chose Van Buren electors in 1836. In all these six States, the Whigs claim that the State elections afford a sure indication of the Presidential vote. In three of them, the Van Buren men admit the indication; but in the other three, they deny that the results which have occurred in the local elections are a sure foreshadow of what will take place in the Presidential election.

The first Presidential elections will be held in Pennsylvania and Ohio, on the 30th of October; and the four last are held by Maryland on the 9th, Vermont and Delaware on the 10th, by North Carolina on the 19th of November, and by South Carolina, November 30. The State elections which are yet to occur previous to the Presidential election are, in Maryland and Georgia, on the first Monday in October, in South Carolina on the second Monday in October; and in Pennsylvania, Ohio, and New Jersey, on the second Tuesday in October. The States yet to hold State elections, previous to the Presidential election, are six in number, and, as none of these elections occur immediately, there may now be a lull in election din, for about a couple of weeks.

The election in Georgia is for nine Congressmen, (elected by general ticket) and members of the State Legislature. There is no election for Governor this year. In Ohio, the election is for Governor, 19 members of Congress, and members of the State Legislature; in Pennsylvania for members of Congress and of the State Legislature; in New Jersey for members of the Legislature, who elect the Governor. The Congressional election in New Jersey does not take place till November.

The Presidential elections takes place as follows:

In Pennsylvania and Ohio,	Oct. 30.
In N. Hampshire, Maine, Connecticut, New York, (three days in State) Virginia, Georgia, Mississippi, Kentucky, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Missouri, and Arkansas, ...	Nov. 2.
In New Jersey, (two days in State,) Louisiana, and Tennessee, ...	Nov. 3.
In Rhode Island, ...	Nov. 4.
In Massachusetts, Maryland, and Alabama, ...	Nov. 9.
In Vermont and Delaware,	Nov. 10.
In North Carolina, . . .	Nov. 19.

South Carolina chooses its electors by the Legislature, at or about November 30. The whole number of electoral votes is 294, of which 148 are necessary to a choice. All the States except South Carolina choose their electors by general ticket. Pennsylvania and Ohio, throw 51 votes; the November 2d batch 114; the November 3d, throw 28; Little Rhoda on the 4th, throws her 4 into the political hopper, and Massachusetts, Maryland, and Alabama, throw 31 on the 10th. When these are in, the election will be as good as decided, unless the candidates should happen to run so near neck and neck, that the remaining 40 votes are wanted to decide the election. All suspense will undoubtedly be removed by the last of November, and people will have a chance again to think and talk of something beside votes and elections.

It is matter of regret that the times of holding elections are so different in different States. The first great principle of popular elections may be defeated by this circumstance; twaddlers and fence men, are alone accommodated by it, as it gives them a chance continually to hop the twig, and keep with the majority; an ambition more general than creditable. There is a little hope, however, of any change in this particular; as it would require the exercise of more pains than people are willing to take, especially for a reform which would defeat rather than promote party objects.

ANOTHER PROOF OF THE DELUGE.—There is to be seen exhibited in the British Museum a block of carbonate of lime, found near one of the West India islands, containing the petrified remains of a female, aged about eighteen years, in almost perfect preservation. In the same block are to be seen the remains of the teeth of the lion. This, and the following interesting one, extracted from the Leeds' Intelligencer, will doubtless be "proofs much stronger than those of Holy Writ," to those infidel geologists who, because no traces of human fossils were to be found previous to these instances, considered the Mosaic account of the deluge as altogether erroneous and unworthy of philosophical credence:—

An Antediluvian Child.—A fossil child, between five and six months old, has been found in a quarry near Brussels. The bones were converted into silex, which struck fire with steel. The head, shoulders, and throat, and belly, were perfect, and the neck exhibited evident traces of muscles. A fossil cocoa nut, quite perfect, was found by the side of the child.

VILLAGE AND MONASTERY BURRIED IN RUINS.—A letter from St. Petersburgh, dated Aug. 25, states that news has been received from Teflis that at the end of June the whole of the upper part of the celebrated Mount Ararat, in Armenia, had sunk down. For some days before the phenomenon, a hallow noise was heard in the interior of the mountain, which was clearly perceived in all the neighborhood of the settlement on the extensive perpiphery of the mountains; it is said that a large village and an Armenian monastery, dependent on the celebrated misebzin, are buried with their inhabitants.

The Mayor of Trenton had offered a reward of five hundred dollars for the detection and conviction of the persons who recently set fire to the mills in that city.

A murderous attack was made last week, upon the person of William B. English, editor of the Daily Herald, by one Pelby, son to the manager of the National Theatre, for an article implicating the character of the performances at that theatre, stating that it was not a proper resort for ladies who value their reputation. We did not see the article, but believe it would hardly be possible to represent the place in a light sufficiently odious. It is a second or third rate catch-penny concern, and ought to be given up as the rendezvous of the abandoned and vicious. Our best theatres are sufficiently demoralzing—while a foreign girl, half naked, aid cutting up her antics, can make half olour theatre-going people mad. In such a state of things, certainly the press ought to be permitted to speak against places so low in the scale of moral degradation. The attack was perfectly dastardly on the editor of the Herald. Mr. English is a feeble, harmless man; he was inhumanly knocked down, and jumpedupon by the monster; his jaw dislocated, and some of his ribs broken; the blod gushed from his mouth, ears and nose, and for some time his life was held indoubt. Although several citizens were present, the monster was suffered to escape. We hope he will be caught and duly punished. We beg that gentlemen of the press will not be bullied out of their rights;—when such shall be the fact, farewell to our liberties. We are surprised to see so little said on the subject by our brother editors. We will not believe that it is because of the heavy bonus paid to them for theatrical advertisements. Gentlemen, this black-leg surveilance of the press will show you no mercy—if you succumb to it, will only 'eat you last.'—Boston Olive Branch.

THE SEASON.—We have not had the slightest frost this fall, as yet, (October 1st.) The earth is covered with green, and the trees with a verdant foliage—the atmosphere has the temperature of midsummer. The season has been most favorable to vegetation—the earth has brought forth most abundantly—the small grains are very excellent and plenty—the quantity of fruits are large and of superior quality—the crop of Indian corn is larger than we remember to have ever seen before. On the whole, divine Providence has in this country made a most generous provison for the wants of man;—with it, there is a very general revival of business. With such a state of things, if we complain, we are monsters of ingratitude.—ib.

We recently had the pleasure of a visit from Col. Richard A. Blunt, of Georgia. He says that the cause of Protestant Reform is rather prosperous in the State of Georgia:—and that nothing stands in the way of their entire success, but the want of a suitable number of efficient ministers to engage in the work. We believe the Protestant secession suffers more from this, than any other cause throughout the union. The hierarchy have the vested funds, and therefore, needy ministers cling to them.—ib.

Our readers have been apprised of the fact, that in the Canadas the main body of the Methodist E. Church had united with the Wesleyan Methodist Connection. A contest at Law has been for some time pending relative to the title to the Chapels. The result has, says the Christian Guardian, terminated in favor of the Wesleyans.—Fayetteville Luminary.

THE HEELS HAVE IT.—The Bostonians have paid a larger sum in the aggregate on premiums for boxes during the nights of Fanny Elssler's appearance at the Theatre, than the citizens of any other city in the Union. The heels, it would seem, have great attractions for the fashionables of the "Literary Emporium."

Frederick Fisher, penny-post, was arrested last week and taken before Alderman Boileau, on the oath of John Taylor, Esq., assistant post master of Kensington, charged with opening letters and taking money therefrom. He was committed for trial. Post office robbers seldom or never escape detection.—Phil. paper.

A Philadelphia paper says, one of the accomplices of the black fellow, recently arrested in Trenton, N. J., for firing the mill of Fish, Green & Co., has been taken in this city and conveyed to Trenton. He is a black also, and named John Jackson.

Wharton Craig, a son of Wm. Craig, Esq., of Philadelphia, was arrested last week for maliciously cutting and carving the seats in Washington Square with obscene devices, and bound over to answer the charge.

The Banks who are to assist the United States Bank to resume specie payments, by a loan of $3,000,000, are the Pennsylvania, North America, Philadelphia, Northern Liberties and Moyamensing.

The Postmaster has ordered an investigation, in order to remedy the many failures in the arrival of the southern mail. It is stated, that in sixty days, the northern mail failed twenty-two times in Charleston.

In England the personal property of an intestate leaving a widow and children is divisible as follows: one-third to the widow, and the remaining two-thirds among the children, both male and female.

AN EXTRAORDINARY CASE.—The Rev James Hughes, of Clare Morris' Ireland, furnishes the particulars of a most extraordinary case—that of a man named Bernard Cavanagh, who, according to report, had subsisted for three years and ten months in perfect health, without the aid of food of any kind whatever. The matter was tested by a public experiment, which lasted for six days and six nights, during which he abstained from all nourishment. The particulars are given in detail, and endorsed by a number of respectable witnesses, in a late number of the Dublin Evening Register. The experiment was managed by a committee of fifteen gentlemen, and Cavanagh was asked generally four times each day, sometimes oftener, in presence each time of many persons, Protestants and Roman Catholics, if he wanted any thing, or if he wished to go home. These were the only questions put to him. His answers each time, which are attested by twenty-six witnesses, Protestants and Catholics of respectability, were that he was content with his present state, that he wanted nothing, and that he would continue as he was as long as they wished. All his answers were clear, audible, concise, and very sensible. He seemed more vigorous and animated after than before the experment. His address to the people was rather rapid. Before and after his address his answers were slow, his countenance serene and placid, his looks fixed and determined. With regard to his habits through life, Mr. Hughes states that he was much given to prayer and fasting. On first proposing to his brother and sister the experiment of six days and six nights, they observed that he would as cheerfully consent to a month. Attached to the statement are several certificates, signed by a number of respectable persons—among them three or four clergymen—which corroborate the above facts in every particular. From one of these certificates we give the following extract:

"We were present when said Bernard Cavanagh, of his own free will, consented to the proposed trial and experiment, and even saying that he would stop in so long as they pleased; that each and every one of them minutely examined the feather bed, the pillows, bolster, bed clothes, a chair and a table in the room, to guard against any food being left in the room; that they examined his body clothes for the purpose, and that no food was or could be in the room unknown to them, except the biscuits and water already mentioned and agreed on; that each and every of them saw the biscuits and water agreed on placed in the room, the windows, chimney, and door secured in the manner above stated; the Protestant and Roman Catholic men placed outside the room door to watch; that each and every of them did after, from time to time in the course of the six days trial, generally six or seven together each time, visit the room door where they heard Rev. Mr. Hughes ask Bernard Cavanagh in a loud distinct voice if he wanted any thing, or if he wanted to go home; that his answer generally was, that he was content with his present state, and would stop there as long as they wished; that Bernard Cavanagh was apparently in good health on entering the room; that they were each and every of them present at the opening of the door after the expiration of the confinement of six days and six nights agreed to; that they saw said Bernard Cavanagh in the same apparent good health at that period as at the commencement of the confinement; that the biscuits and the water were not touched, but were in the same state after the confinement as before it; that the seals with which the windows, chimney and door were sealed, are the property of Richard Singleton, sub-inspector, John Lewin, head-constable, and John Kelly; that after the windows, chimney, and door had been sealed with them, they had been put into a tin box which was given Francis Crean, Esq. J. P.

The New York American states that the Banks of that city resumed specie payments upon five million five hundred thousand dollars of specie.

FOREIGN NEWS.

From the New York Sun—Extra.

ARRIVAL OF THE CALEDONIA AT BOSTON.

SEVEN DAYS LATER.

Sunday, October 4, 1840.

The third ship of the British Royal Mail line of Steamers for this port, the Caledonia, Capt. Richard Cleland, arrived yesterday morning at Boston, a little before 7 o'clock, bringing London dates to the evening of the 18th and Liverpool to the 19th—the day sailing.

The Caledonia has been 13 days and 14 hours from dock to dock. She lost 8 hours at Halifax, and 12 hours below, on account of the fog—having arrived below within five miles of the city at 6 o'clock the previous evening.

The steamer President arrived at Liverpool from New York, on the 17th, having made the voyage in 16 days. The Acadia arrived on the 13th, beating her by more than three days!

There is no later news from China, and affairs in Spain and Portugal appear to be more than usually quiet. The whole aspect of affairs was decidedly pacific at the last date.

The blockade of Alexander on the 1st ultimo, by Admiral Stopford. Several of the Pasha's vessels had been sequestered by the British naval authorities.

The Viceroy's fleet, Egyptian and Turkish, was drawn up in order of ... tle in the roads of Alexandria.

The prospects of a general war ... pretty much blown over. The Lon... Morning Herald of the 17th, gives ... an extraordinary express from Paris ... following statement, which may be de... nated, "important, if true." If the ... dy concession which Mehemet Ali ... made at the eleventh hour will satisfy ... four powers, now that matters have ... pushed to such an extremity, it seem... cleverly contrived scheme for brea... the old man's fall, without compromi... his dignity or pride.

The other morning papers are s... on the subject of the proposed arra... ment, and their correspondents at A... andria represent him as being inflex... at the expiration of the second ten d... notice. We sincerely hope, for the ... of humanity, and the preservation of ... the peace of Europe, that the Her... statement may be true, as it opens a ... for the pacific settlement of this ... question.

TREATY OF COMMERCE BETWEEN ENGL... AND FRANCE.

We are enabled to state that the Bri... and French Commissioners have brou... to a close their negotiations for a tr... of commerce between Great Britain ... France, and that it contains several c... ses highly favorable to British manu... tures. The very few points which ... be considered open are mere technic... ties, of no importance whatever, ... which cannot by possibility be made ... subject of any discussion affecting eit... the principle or the details of the tre... But for the unpleasant differences wh... have arisen on the Eastern question, ... treaty would have already received ... signature of M. Thiers. His motives ... not signing it under such circumstan... will be understood; but Mr. Porter rema... in Paris and there appears to be an ... derstanding that the treaty will be sig... the moment the political horizon sh... have brightened up. The announcem... of his signature will then be regarded ... strong indication of the resumption ... harmonious Intercourse between the ... nations.—Galignani's Messenger.

SYRIA.

Extract of a private letter, dated Lebanon, August 20, 1840:

Five English men-of-war & one steam... are at Beyrout, and have blockaded ... Port, and we hear that Sidon, with all ... seaports on the coast, if not so alrea... are immediately to be blockaded. T... steamer and two frigates are cruisi... about and seizing every vessel belong... to the Pasha which they can lay hold ... Five or six have already been captur... the last of which was quite a prize, ... ing on board two hundred Arnaeots, ... banians, one hundred Nizams, and eig... teen Mountaineers, captives, on their w... to Looman. The consuls of the ... Powers with their families have gone ... board the ships; and our consul sen... the merchants requesting them to le... likewise, but they have accompanied ... to the mountains where we hope to ... main in peace. The poor Fellaheen a... quite rejoiced at the prospect of bei... delivered from their bondage, yet th... seem as yet timid to rise again. T... Emir Beeshir outwardly opposes ... English, but it is the general opini... that he will join his people when he se... a stong force sent against him. If he do... continue on the other side, I fear he w... soon loose his head, as he is hated ... much as Mehemet Ali.

To him do the Druses attribute the ... last failure, and they look upon him ... being the cause of all the misery whi... reigns throughout Lebanon; many, ma... poor wretches have been torn from the... homes by his order, among whom a... many who took no part in the revoluti... but against whom he had some priva... grudge. You can little conceive ... scenes of misery which I have late... witnessed. I have visited every hou... in the small village in which we resid... and do not remember seeing one with... one, two, three and sometimes even s... sick inmates. It is the same through... the mountains. Some of these po... wretches have scarcely a rag to cove... their nakedness, and not a morsel of brea... to eat. A woman here was delivered ... twins on the road, and no sooner we... they born than she was obliged to tak... them up, and escape from the fury of th... barbarous Albanians.

Things are growing worse and worse ... and I just now hear that all the Chri... tians have left Beyrout, and that the Pa... sha's soldiers are plundering the house... as fast as they can, many of the Frank... are leaving the country, and I now fea... we shall be obliged to follow.

DUEL.

On Saturday the 12th of Septembe... Earl Cardigan fought a duel on Wimble... don Common, with a Mr. Harvey Tucket... in which the latter was seriously wounde... by a ball passing near the right hip bon... and transversely out of the spine. Ear... Cardigan was arrested and held to bail i... the sum of £1,600. Captain Douglass ... his second, was also held to bail in th... sum of £590, for a breach of the peace. ... The cause of the duel was a newspape... article written by Mr. Tuckett, signe... "An Old Soldier," and printed in th... Morning Chronicle, which Mr. Tucket... avowed, and the Earl pronounced, "false... slanderous, insulting and calumnious."

A heavy gale occurred at Liverpool on ... the 16th, and many packets which had ... gone out were obliged to put back.

The High Sheriff of Cheshire, game ... keeper, was murdered and robbed on the ... 10th, under the most revolting circum... stances.

HE RECORDER.

ZANESVILLE:

NESDAY, ... OCTOBER 14, 1840.

eat, in this town, is firm at 50 cents.

r, in Baltimore, the 10th inst., is quoted ford, at $5 12½; same date by Brother an, at New York, from 4 87½ to 5 37½.

TH.—We attended the funeral of Mrs. r, daughter of Benj. Hull, on the 7th inst., wnsville, Licking, Ohio.

WEATHER.—The weather has been, for ime past, remarkably warm, for the time of r, with occasional light showers of rain.

YLAND AND GEORGIA.—The elections in States have just been held for State officers. Whigs say they have carried both States e majorities.

OUTER FORM.—Just as our outer form epared for reading the proof, we were call- to attend the funeral of Mr. Rose's child, Goshen chapel, some six or seven miles t, and we had to submit that duty to the of our office. We hope our correspondents d it done to their satisfaction.

HIG MEETING.—The Whigs had a large g in this town on Saturday the 10th inst. sses were delivered by General Harrison, . Clarkson, of Cincinnati, Kelly, of Co- s, and Corwin, of Lebanon. The wagon- de a great deal of music for the audi-GHTON ACADEMY.—The Pittsburgh Con- passed a resolution favoring this institu- Will the publishing committee forward diately for publication? The institu- vants immediate assistance. If some will forward to us a copy of its charter, t of tuition, boarding, &c., we will endea- present its claims to the public.

NE ELECTIONS.—It is not admitted by the stration party that Kent is elected Gov- But they claim for their candidate, Mr. ld, a majority or plurality of several hun- otes. The Whig State Committee, how- ave issued their circular, in which they hat Kent has a majority of all the votes and that the Whigs have a majority in anches of the Legislature. We give the ents of both the parties, and leave the to believe as he thinks right.

FERENCE OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL H.—The Ohio Annual Conference, of the dist Episcopal Church, closed its business town, on Tuesday the 6th instant. We tand they had a pleasant and harmonious . Bishops Soule and Hedding presided. tended on Tuesday,—saw a number of fellow-laborers, and had a cordial shake with some of them. We could not doubt iendly feeling evinced by many of our old tances, but then we noticed but few of ere disposed to detain long in conversa- The mighty influence wielded in the im- e shade of the episcopacy, put them y on their guard and made them cautious y countenanced heretics. The nature of episcopacy—the influence it wields—the at it excites would not be credited by any who had not come in contact with it. But mer relations thereto has made us know it book.

MUSKINGUM COUNTY.

following table exhibits the majorities of eral townships of this county for Govern- y. Monroe township yet to be heard

	Corwin.	Shannon.
, ...		9
rock, . .	51
creek, . .	101
. . .	82
ell, . .	25
nd, . . .	74
n, ...		1
n, . . .	9
on, . . .	19
g, . . .	103
n, . . .	67
igum, . .	57
. . . . .		30
n, ...		4
nd, . .	37
field, . .	175
. . .	59
creek, . .	8
, . . .	35
ington, . .	68
, . . .	68
ille, . .	365
	1403	44
	44
win's majority,	1359

The above are not the official returns, error may have been committed in copy- m the township list.

entire Whig ticket for county officers is l. The Whigs claim the election of their essional candidate, but complete returns he District has not yet been received.

ELECTIONS.

election was held throughout the State of are, on Tuesday, for Inspectors of Elec- preparatory to the contest in November. stated that party lines were strictly and the present result may be considered ficative of the result of the contest in No- r.

ties.	Whig maj.	V. B. maj.
stle county, ...	237	99
ounty, ...	340
county, two towns,	133
	770
	99
ig majority, ...	671

Van Buren majority in the State, in 1838, fifty-four, now the Whig majority will not rly fall short of 800.—New World.

The destruction of property occasioned by the burning of Linville, Texas, by the Indians, is estimated at one hundred and thirty thousand dollars.

Lauriat made a successful balloon ascension at Brooklyn on Monday, accompanied by a young lady.

A newspaper published at Malta says, "We have recently had in the harbor of Valetta one of the oldest ships in existence. It was the Indus, a French vessel, built in India, in 1718, and therefore now 122 years old. The hull seems as if it would still last many years."

☞E. J. Sylvester, the agent in New York of the New Orleans Lottery, has been fined $150 for some of his transactions in that concern.

A MISNOMER.—A brig called the Temperance, arrived at Boston on Friday, from Rotterdam, having on board 140 pipes of gin and two chests of opium.

The "Albany," Capt. Jenkins, ran to Albany on Thursday from New York, in the unprecedented short time of eight hours and three-quarters,—being, decidedly, the quickest passage ever made.

A cabin passage may be obtained from London to New York for £12.

M. Sanson, the public executioner, died recently in Paris. It was his task in 1793 to blind Louis XVI. and lay his head on the guillotine. He was the third of the same name who has filled the same functions. He was a man of some property, well informed, fond of the arts, and passed the most of his leisure time at the piano.

The Councils of N. York have adopted a resolution to purchase a portrait of Achmet Ben Aman, the late Envoy from the Imaum of Muscat, painted by Mr. Mooney, at a price not exceeding five hundred dollars.

Miss Elizabeth Dougherty, a young lady of sixteen, died at Baltimore on Friday, in consequence of having accidentally swallowed poison.

Joseph Bonaparte has written an historical poem entitled "Napoleon," which is shortly to appear in Paris.

The New York Sun cautions the public against the notes of a pretended bank, called the Farmers' Bank of Sandstone.

It is said that the New York Mirror has been sold by General Morris to D. Fanshaw, Esq.

The accounts in relation to American Securities in London are highly favorable. U. S. Bank shares £14 10s. 0d.

American Flour at Liverpool, 34 and 35 shillings.

A man named George Barber, aged 35, was murdered in New York, at a miserable tenement in Front street, lately. He lived at the house of a man named Hennessy, and was knocked down and injured so severely that he died, by a man called John, not yet arrested.

BANKS OF THIS COUNTRY.—Increase of banks from 1820 to 1830,—twenty-two. Increase of capital, seven million nine hundred and eighty-one thousand six hundred and fifty-seven dollars.

Increase of banks from 1830 to 1837, three hundred and forty-eight. Increase of capital, two hundred and sixty-eight million, one hundred and twenty-eight thousand, nine hundred dollars.

Monsieur Vattemare has collected a list of more than two thousand newspapers, published in the United States. He has also obtained a specimen of each paper, and intends depositing the entire collection in the National Museum at Paris. He is of opinion that the newspapers of the United States exceed in number those of all Europe.

THE SISTERS OF CHARITY.—The Baltimore American states that a purchase had recently been made on behalf of the Sisters of Charity, of a piece of ground of about ten acres, lying on the Harford road, in the immediate suburbs of the city. The object of the purchase is to erect thereon two spacious buildings as hospitals for individuals, one to be appropriated for the use of male, and the other for female patients.

OPIUM SMOKERS.—A high civilian in the metropolis of Kerangse was denounced for having smoked opium. He at first denied the charge, was tortured, and then confessed. He was sentenced to be transported to Ele, in order to strike terror into evil doers of the same description. Several officers in Shautung have been delivered over to a court of justice on a similar charge. Soldiers belonging to the eight standards who were found inhaling the noxious vapor, have been banished to Chekeang.

In the Court of General Sessions, last week, young Lush pleaded guilty to forging the signature of W. C. Cardwell to a check of $40 32, on the Commercial Bank of Pennsylvania. Sentence deferred. He stated that he could make confessions calculated to implicate individuals in this city now bearing the character of respectability.—Phil. paper.

GREAT WEALTH FOR A DOCTOR.—The celebrated Dr. Graeff, who lately died at Hanover, (England,) left the enormous fortune of 3,600,000 Prussian dollars, equal 13 millions of francs, or more than half a million sterling, which he amassed almost entirely by his dishonorable profession, having begun life with a fortune of between 8000*l.* and 9000*l.* only.

The journeymen cabinet makers commenced the recent revolt in Paris.

ARRIVAL OF THE PRINCE DE JOINVILLE AT ST. HELENA.—The French frigate Artemise, under the command of the Prince de Joinville, has arrived at Helena, in 47 days passage from Cherboug, for the purpose of taking the ashes of Napoleon to France.

PLEASANT REMINISCENCES.—Two children of poor parents having been sent to a fashionable boarding school by a wealthy uncle, thus grieved over their destiny, "ah! this is not as it used to be, when he could go to the pot and eat beans with a ladle, and run out of doors and leave our shoes and stockings behind."

ROBERT BURN'S BIBLE.—The Montreal Herald of Tuesday last says: "We mentioned in yesterday's Herald that the Bible presented by the immortal Burns to his Highland Mary was purchased by a few of his countrymen in this city. They met on Monday evening, and agreed that the sacred relic should be transmitted to the Provost of Ayr, to be by him deposited in the Monument on the Banks of the Doon, as a humble, offering from Scotchmen in Montreal, at the shrine of Scotland's Bard."

FRENCH LANGUAGE.—When some one was expatiating on the merits of the French language to Mr. Canning, he exclaimed: "Why, what on earth, sir, can be expected of a language, which has but one word for liking and loving, and puts a fine woman and a leg of mutton on a par: J' aime Julie! j'aime un gigot!"

CAUTION TO SMOKERS.—The Ninawah Gazette, published at Peru, Illinois, relates a singular and fatal accident which happened to Mr. Michael Shannon in that village. He was looking around in a store room, with a pipe in his mouth; and in his search turned over an empty barrel which stood bottom up. Under the barrel was a keg of powder with the head out. A spark fell into the powder, and Mr. Shannon was so injured that he died during the day.

ULT. AND INST.—These terms frequently occur in newspapers, and although their meaning must be obvious, to most persons, yet some may not know their origin.—The first is a contraction of the Latin word ultimo, and signifies the last; as for instance, the 30th ult. is 30th September.

The second is a contraction of the word instant, an anglicized French word from the Latin instans, and signifies the present month. To many of our young readers, these explanations may be useful.

Zion's Herald.

The ship Saluda, which had on board the Baptist missionaries, Fielding and Constantine, with their wives, which sailed from Norfolk, Virginia, and in a few days returned to Philadelphia for repairs, has been obliged to return a second time, and is now in New York. She was bound to Africa.

Another fire occurred in New Orleans on the night of the 14th of September.—It broke out in the third municipality, in Bagatelle street, and consumed twenty dwelling houses with kitchens and back buildings. The fire originated in Crape street and extended to Bagatelle, and from thence the flames destroyed nearly all the buildings on the right side of Bagatelle street to Union. The half of the square was destroyed. The probable loss is almost $60,000.

TERRIBLE ACCIDENT.—On Monday afternoon, about six o'clock, George Hansell, a resident of Philadelphia county, was run over by a car, on the Columbia rail road, near the Green Tree Tavern, and both his legs and one arm cut off.—He died before reaching Paoli, and was brought to his brother who keeps the hotel at the head of the inclined plane. The accident occurred by his attempting to get on the car when moving.

VILLAGES DESTOYED BY AN EARTHQUAKE.—A shock of an earthquake has been felt at Tabreez, (Persia,) which had been seriously damaged several buildings, and, according to the accounts received there, it had been felt severely at other places. Several villages were completely destroyed, and even part of Mount Ararat had been thrown down, overwhelming and crushing the villlages at its base.

UNIVERSALISM.—The Editor of the N. Y. Evangelist says that "it will probably be rather startling to Universalists in the country, to learn that there it not now one pastor in this city who dares to preach that there is no punishment in the world to come?" There are three Universalist societies in New-York. Two of them are destitute of pastors. Rev. T. J. Sawyer is invited to come out boldly in the pulpit, or the Universalist Union, and give demonstration that the above is incorrect. We shall see what his sentiments are.—Baptist Register.

POLITICAL ABOLITION.—The Abolition State Convention held at Hartford, Connecticut, voted against nominating an Anti-Slavery Electoral Ticket. A recent Abolition State Convention held in New Jersey decided against forming an Electoral Ticket. So has the Anti-Slavery State Convention in Indiana. The Convention in Michigan, divided on the subject, and the Executive Committee of the State have protested against the measure.

A New York contemporary remarks, that the object of the union of the Four Powers against Mehemit Ali appears to have been the well-grounded apprehension that Russia would get such a foothood in Turkey, under the pretence of aiding the Sultan, as would have disturbed the balance of European power.

We learn that the evidence in the D'Hauteville case has been brought to a conclusion, and that a decision will probably be obtained in the course of the present week. Public sympathy appears to be universally in favor of the young and interesting wife.

THE BUSINESS PROSPECT.—The money article in a late number of a New York paper says, and not without force and truth: "We have passed through a year of great depression, and in that time liquidated debts in a great measure at home and abroad. We now enter upon a new year with a balance in our favor, and with crops promising a greater abundance than than ever. These are the irresistable elements of future prosperity. If Europe goes to war or remains at peace, the United States hold the "whip hand," and must advance. The disastrous bungling of irredeemable financiers will scarcely retard the progress of business. The whole country, like the shattered state of a profligate, having remained a few years dormant, has recovered its standing."

A MYSTERIOUS AFFAIR—A FINE SHIP PICKED UP.—A correspondent of the New Orleans Bulletin, writing from Nassau, N. P., under date of August 27, states that a large French ship from Hamburg, bound to Havana, was picked up a fortnight ago, quite deserted. She was afloat with no sails set but a jib—not the least injured—having a very valuable cargo of wines, silks, fruits, &c,, and all in good order, and her papers and every thing else on board in their proper places.—When sounded, three feet water was found in her hold, which was immediately pumped out; and it was discovered that she had no leak. No one can conjecture why she was so abandoned. There are many cases on board addressed to different merchants in Havana, and a vessel has been despatched to gain some information on the subject. She is a large new ship, built this year, and is named the Rosalie.

A DESTRUCTIVE FIRE AT NEW ORLEANS. We learn from the New Orleans Bulletin that on the 24th ult. about 7, A. M., a fire broke out in the warehouse of Mr. Alcard, Crockery Merchant, 44 Old Levee, which immediately communicated to the adjoining warehouses of Livaudais & Charbonet, hardware, and T. G. Chamberlin, crockery, which, with their valuable contents, were consumed. The wind was blowing a gale at the time; and although the whole force of the fire department was exercised to deluge the premises, the flames raged for two hours.—Quantities of oil, packing straw, and the liquors in the warehouse of A. Grant & Co which finally caught fire and was nearly destroyed, fed the flames to such a degree, that for awhile they seemed to biddefiance to the torrents of water which was poured upon them. We have not obtained a correct estimate of the loss of all the parties, but it is believed to be between 40 and 60,000 dollars."

SPECIE.—The New York Express of Thursday says: "The British Queen which leaves to-day with other packets, will take out about a half a million of specie, chiefly for France,-which will carry back the half million Mr. Jaudon brought over in the Great Western, but still leave a balance in our favor of some 300,000 arrived during the week. This exportation of specie is caused by the rise in the rate of exchange, though the rates yet seem, on an average, to be in our favor, but such is the rapidity of movement now on the Atlantic, that specie must start quick, and at a lower rate of exchange than usual, to meet the coming demands of bills.—Thus, though money is plenty here now, at a low rate of interest, and banks seek good paper to discount as a favor, rather than as conferring a favor, yet the rise of exchange, and the consequent export of specie will have a tendency to restrict them just now, or at least to make them more circumspect in their operations."

The Philadelphia North American says the Grand Jury on Thursday last returned 9 true bills against Dr. Eldridge for forgery, and 3 more against Brookes, the swindler, alias Jesse D. E. Quantril.

RAILROADS IN THE UNITED STATES.—The Journal of the Franklin Institute contains a detailed account of the railroads in a number of the States, with the length, cost, &c., from the tables of which the National Gazette gives the following: In Pennsylvania the number of railroads are thirty-six, the number of miles opened five hundred and seventy-six and a half, the total length of road eight hundred and fifty miles and a quarter, and the amount already expended $15,640.450. In Virginia, the Corolinas, Georgia, and Florida, there are twenty-three roads, and nine hundred and ninety-four miles opened; total length, sixteen hundred and seventy-five miles and a half. Amount expended, $18,442,000. In Alabama, Louisiana, Mississippi, Tennessee, and Kentucky, there are twenty-seven roads, one hundred and nintety-five miles in operation; total length of roads, eleven hundred and forty-eight miles and a quarter. Already expended, $8,621,000. In Ohio, Indiana, Michigan and Illinois, there are twenty-nine roads, one hundred and ninty-six miles in operation; total length of roads, two thousand eight hundred and twenty-one miles and a half.—Amount expended, $5,523,640.

Dr. L. P. Bush has been appointed Port Physician of Wilminton, Del.

The Governor of Massachusetts has appointed Thursday, November 16th, as day of Thanksgiving.

FROM NEW ORLEANS.—The New Orleans correspondent of the Baltimore American writes under date of the 20th:

The market has not been so animated since my last report, with the exception of some considerable transactions in the Cotton line. The steamboat arrivals are still large—no serious impediment to navigation exists, nor is any anticipated until winter. The weather is uncommonly cool, and the city enjoys uninterrupted health.

Cotton.—Arrived since my last 3649 bales—cleared 893 bales—stock on hand 19,581 bales. A fair business has been done in the article and the market continues firm for every grade. The sales of the week amount to fully 5,000 bales, a considerable portion of which consists of the new crop.

Tobacco.—Stock on hand small, sales fair.

Sugar.—There is but a small quantity in the market, and the transactions are of course limited. Six to eight cents are quoted for the extremes of the market.

Corn.—Arrivals abundant, but prices still firm at from 60 to 62 cents.

Flour has declined to $5,25 and $5, in consequence of large supplies by flat boats and steamboats.

Exchange.—There is a fair supply of every description, but the demand continues limited. Sterling is dull at 10 1-2 to 11 per ct.

THE PAR OF EXCHANGE.—The par of exchange, says the Norfolk Beacon, between the foreign countries is that sum in the currency of each which is equivalent to a given weight of pure gold or pure silver; so that the par exists where a person with one ounce of gold, or one ounce of silver, can purchase a bill of exchange on a foreign country which will there command one ounce of gold or one ounce of silver of the same purity. Real par on London prior to the passage by Congress of the "gold bill" on the 24th June, 1734, was 8 per cent nominal premium, the act of Congress of 1832 having fixed £1 at $4,80 instead of $4,44.—The par of exchange became by the "Gold bill" about 9 7-10 per ct. nominal premium, which is proved as follows: The British Sovereign or pound sterling contains 113 grains and 18 112 14 parts of a grain of pure gold. The American half eagle of the present coinage contains 116 grains of pure gold, and is equivalent of five silver dollars; so that if 116 grains are equivalent to $5, 113 18-112 14 grains are equal to $4,87 7-120 which is as near as may be 97 10 per cent above that computed par.

OVERWHLMING ARGUMENT.—Dr. Lathrop, late of Springfield, Mass., in one of his sermons says "if it were true that there is no God, what evidence can the Atheist have that he shall not exist and be miserable after death? How came he to exist at all? Whatever was the cause of his existence here, may be cause of his existence hereafter. Or, if there is no cause, he may exist without a cause in another state as well as in this. And if his corrupt heart and abominable works make him so unhappy here, that he had rather be annihilated, than run the hazard of a future existence, what hinders but he may be unhappy forever? The man, then, is a fool, who wishes there were no God, hoping thus to be secure from future misery, for, admitting there were no God, still he may exist hereafter as well as here; if he does not exist, his corruptions and vices may render him miserable eternally, as well as for the present."

EARTHQUAKE.—A severe shock of an earthquake was felt at Hamilton, U. C., on Saturday week. There was a rumbling noise in the earth, and some buildings slightly shaken. To those who were in bed at the time, it seemed as if some heavy body had rubbed against the wall, followed by a tremulous motion.—At the bay shore, the noise is repsented to have been like the roaring of the sea, the lake at the same time being unruffled by a ripple. The whole passed off in about ten seconds. Its course apparently was from W. to E.

AWFUL CRUELTY.—The Chicago Patriot says: It seems that a colored man, living at Dubuque, who had been several times suspected of petty thefts, at length fell under suspicion of stealing a quantity of clothing. He was seized by a party of ruffians, taken to a remote place, and unmercifully flogged to the amount of three hundred lashes. During the merciless infliction, a confession was extorted from him, and an avowal—probably untrue—of the place where the stolen goods were hidden.

Search was made, but the goods not being found, he was flogged again upon his already mangled back—and this horrible process was thrice repeated. The end of it was, that the poor creature was brought back a corpse, with his back and ribs broken. If there is any law in Wisconsin, with power to enforce it, these detestable murderers will, let us hope, be discovered and brought to punishment.

GOOD HUMOR is the clear blue sky of the soul, on which every star of talent will shine more clearly, and the sun of genius encounters no vapors in his passage. 'Tis the most exquisite beauty of a fine face; a redeeming grace in a homely one. It is like the green in the landscape, harmonizing with every color, mellowing the glories of the bright, and softening the hues of the dark; or like a flute in a full concert of instruments, a sound, not at first discovered by the ear, yet filling up the breaks in the concord with its deep melody.

Business Department.

W. L. Baldwin, "satisfied."

As we reside out of town, any person who may have business with this office, can have it attended to, by calling on OLCUTT WHITE, No. 104, Main street.

The first quarterly meeting for Pennsville circuit will be held in Pennsville, on the first Sabbath in November next. Br. and sister Reeves are pressingly invited to attend. We also invite Brs. Woodruff, Marshall, Munhall and Kinney.

Our first quarterly meeting will be held at Phillips' school house, on the head of Wheeling creek, Green county, Pa., on the 14th of November next. Brs. J. Fordyce, Hopwood and Williams, of Tyler mission, are solicited to attend, with any others that can make it convenient.

JOSEPH ALLEN.

The Annual Conference passed a resolution that Br. Reeves, the Conference Missionary, should be permitted to take collections at all the meetings he attends for his support. As he is a man of much modesty, on the subject of money matters, we hope that the preachers and people will see that this thing is attended to, and that some effort be made to sustain him, for he is worthy.

OUR AFFAIRS.

Br. Joseph Allen states in a letter, dated the 8th inst., he had completed the first round on his charge, and taken in eleven members.

Br. Baldwin, of Coshocton circuit, under date 5th inst., "I have commenced operations on this circuit about eleven days since,—things are moving tolerably well, all things considered."

Wholesale Prices Current.

CORRECTED WEEKLY FOR THE WESTERN RECORDER.
BY SPERRY & ABBOT,
(Successors to Geo. Reeve & Son,)
Wholesale and Retail Grocers, No. 96, Main St Zanesville, Ohio.

ARTICLES.		FROM.	TO.
Almonds, hard shell, -	pound.	8	9
" soft shell, - -	"	16	18¾
Allum, - - - -	"		9
Alspice, - - - -	"		12½
Apples, green picked, -	barrel.	1.12½	1.50
Bacon, Hams, - - -	pound.		12½
" Shoulders, - -	"		8
" Sides, - - -	"	8½	11
Beans, white, - - -	bush'l.	62½
Butter, keg, - -	pound.	7	8
Beeswax, - - - -	"	23	25
Brazil Nuts, - - -	"	10	11
Corn, in ear, - - -	bush'l.	20	25
Candles, Sperm, - -	pound	48	49
" Mould, - -	"	18	23
" Dipped, - -	"		10
Coffee, Rio, - - -	"	14	14½
" Java, - - -	"	17	18
" Havana, - -	"	14	14½
" Laguira, - -	"	15	16½
Cheese, Western Reserve,	"	8	9
" Country, - -	"		8
Copperas, - - -	"	4½	5½
Cinnamon, - - -	"		28
Cloves, - - - -	"		45
Feathers, - - -	"		40
Flaxseed, - - -	bush'l.		62½
Flour, - - - -	barrel.		3.00
Filberts, - - - -	pound.	8	9
Fish—Mackerel, No. 1, -	barrel.		—
" No. 2,	"	18.50
" No. 3, -	"	14.50
Dry Cod, - -	pound.	6	6½
Herring, - -	box.	1.00	1.25
Ground Ginger, - -	"	13	15
Glass, 7 by 9, - -	box.		3.75
" 8 by 10, - -	"		3.75
" 10 by 12, - -	"		4.75
Hay, - - - - -	ton.	7	8
Indigo, - - - -	pound.	162½	1.75
Leather, Spanish Sole, -	"	24	26
" Country " -	"	—	—
Lead, bar, - - -	"	7	7½
Nutmegs, - - -	"		162½
Madder, - - - -	"	15½	18
Molasses, New Orleans, -	gallon.		45
" West India, -	"
Oil, Flaxseed, - -	"		87½
" W. Sperm, -	"	——	162½
" Refined whale, -	"	00	1.25
Oats, - - - -	bush'l.	18	20
Pepper, - - - -	pound.		12½
Potatoes, - - -	bush'l.	20	22
Plaster Paris, - -	ton.	23.00	2500
Rice, North Carolina, -	pound.	—	6½
Raisins, Bloom, -	box.	2.75	3 00
" Smyrna, - -	"	—	3.50
" Muscatil. -	"	2.50	3.00
Soap, Rosin, - - -	pound.	—	7
" Castile, -	"	19	20
Shot, Nos. 2, 3 and 4, -	bag.	2.25	237½
Salt, - - - -	bush'l.	31	35
Sugar, New Orleans, -	pound.	—	8½
" Muscavado, -	"	8½	10
" White Havana, -	"		15
" Brown " -	"		13½
Tea, Young Hyson, -	"	75	85
" Gunpowder, -	"	80	90
" Imperial, - -	"	—	70
" Black, - - -	"	—	—
Tobacco, Kentucky Twist,	"	12	12½
" Cavendish, -	"	31	44
Tallow, Rendered, -	"	8
Vinegar, - - - -	barrel.	4.50	6.00
Wheat, - - - -	bush'l.		50

PRICES OF IRON AND NAILS.
BY D. APPLEGATE & CO.

WHOLESALE PRICES.
Bar Iron, assorted sizes,	pound.		6
Round and square, -	"	6¾	10
Nails, 10d, 12d, 16d, 20d,	"		5¾
" 8d and 9d, - -	"		6
" 6d, - - - -	"		7½
" 5d, - - - -	"		7
" 4d, - - - -	"		7¾
" 3d, - - - -	"		8¼
Retail Nails, by the keg,	- -	1 cent	advance.
" Iron, - - - - - - -	1	"	"

STOLEN

FROM the stable of Hamisfar & Brown in Somerset, Perry county, O., on Saturday night, the 19th instant, an old

SORREL HORSE,

very hollow-backed, and much marked with the saddle, his mouth very much cut on one side with the bits, his foretop heavy and lately cut square off above his eyes, shod all round, and shoes much worn.

Any person giving information to the subscriber so that he can get said horse again, shall be rewarded, and receive the thanks of JEREMIAH L. LESSLIE.

Zanesville, O., Sept. 30, 1840. 60

CONFERENCE.

PITTSBURGH CONFERENCE.

Extracts from the Minutes of the seventh Annual Conference of the Methodist Protestant Church, for the Pittsburgh District.

[CONCLUDED.]

A Plan to relieve the Literary Institution

OF THE

METHODIST PROTESTANT CHURCH.

Whereas, the Methodist Protestant Church, of the Ohio and Pittsburgh Districts, for the purpose of establishing a Literary Institution, in the year 1836, purchased the farm of two hundred and fifty acres of land, known as the "Mount Pleasant Farm," situated about two miles north of Lawrenceburgh, in Indiana; the purchase money whereof, with other debts incurred and now due from said Methodist Protestant Church, amount to twelve thousand five hundred dollars: that the purchase money now due is a lien on said farm;—that John Haughton and William Disney, acting as Trustees for said Methodist Protestant Church, are personally liable for the payment of all the debts of said Institution.

Now in order to pay said debts, and release said Trustees from their liabilities, the said M. P. Church have released all their interest in the real estate aforesaid, to the said Haughton and Disney, who have heretofore held the legal title thereof, for the sole use of such subscribers as shall take up the stock, and donors, as specified in the following plan, for the purpose of liquidating the debts of said Literary Institution, on the plan here proposed, viz:

PLAN.

The beneficial and equitable interest of said real estate shall be and is hereby divided into two thousand five hundred shares of five dollars each, equal in all to twelve thousand five hundred dollars.

That each subscriber shall be a part owner or said premises in proportion to the stock by him subscribed and paid for; Provided, he pays all he is required to pay by the terms of this plan.

If any subscriber at any time shall refuse to pay up the balance that may be due on his stock subscription, that the money so by him then already paid shall be considered a donation to said Methodist Protestant Church, for the purpose of liquidating the debt of said Literary Institution generally, and may be so applied accor ngly.

The subscriber shall pay one dollar on each share subscribed, at the time of subscribing, and one dollar on each share so by him subscribed, on each succeeding ninety-one days, until his whole stock be paid up; Provided, it shall be, by Daniel H. Horn, Harvey Hall, and Shadford Easton, or a majority of them, Trustees, or their successors in office, thought necessary, and the subscribers shall be called on to pay the same.

Unless stock to the amount of eleven thousand dollars shall be subscribed, and the sum of two thousand two hundred dollars shall be paid in, no subscriber shall be bound by his subscription; but the money so by him paid, shall be refunded to him, within ninety days after the next Annual Conference.

Daniel H. Horn, H. Hall and Shadford Easton, are hereby named, appointed and vested Trustees, with full power to fill any vacancies that may occur in their board, and to direct the paying out of the money so raised on this plan.

The holders of a majority of the stock may at any time direct a sale of said premises, provided the premises shall sell for a sum sufficient to pay all the debts of said Institution, then unpaid.

The several stockholders shall have one vote for each share of stock, so by them held.

If after the debts of said Literary Institution are all paid, said property still remains on hand, unsold, the holders of a majority of the stock, may dispose of the property, and divide the proceeds among the stockholders and donators, as hereinafter provided, or may dispose of the whole property by donation to the Methodist Protestant Church, as they may in their judgment and liberality think proper.

All sums hereafter donated, shall be applied in payment of debts of the Literary Institution in the same manner, as money paid in on stock subscription.

If on sale of said property, a sum of money shall be procured, more than sufficient to pay the debts of said Literary Institution, then unpaid, the surplus over and above paying the said debts, shall be divided among the stockholders and donators, in proportion to the stock subscribed, and the sum so donated.

1. Resolved, This conference, acting for and on the behalf of the Methodist Protestant Church of the Ohio District, do hereby release, relinquish and convey to John Haughton and William Disney, and their heirs and assigns, all the interest and claim in and to said real estate of the Literary Institutinn of the said M. P. Church. To have and to hold the said property and interest therein for the sole benefit and use of such stockholders as may subscribe for the stock under the plan now proposed, for the purpose of liquidating the debts of said Institution.

2. Resolved, That Br. Green G. Moore be, and is hereby appointed an agent to obtain subscriptions of stock, and receive money thereon, and receive donations, and pay the same to the aforesaid Trustees.

3. Resolved, That it shall be the duty of the superintendent of each circuit and station, to obtain subscriptions for said stock, and receive the money thereon accordingly, and forthwith or as soon as convenient, transmit the same to the said agent at Cincinnati.

Resolved, That it be recommended to the preachers of this conference, to bring the subject of building houses and furnishing them with suitable furniture, before every quarterly conference, where such houses are not provided for the accommodation of the preachers.

Resolved, That a committee of five be appointed by this conference to inquire into the expediency of having a depository for books established in Pittsburgh, for the purpose of supplying our community in the western country, and that said committee report to the next Annual Conference.

Resolved, That should it be deemed expedient by said committee, to adopt and carry forward active measures preparatory to such an establishment, they be authorized to do so.

The following brethren were appointed said committee,—Asa Shinn, George Brown, E. W. Stevens, C. Avery, John Burns.

THE WESTERN RECORDER.

Whereas, this conference has under its patronage a periodical called the Western Recorder, published and edited by C. Springer; and, whereas, a considerable amount of pecuniary responsibility has been incurred by him, in consequence of the encouragement given by this conference for sustaining the same; Therefore,

Resolved, 1st. That we approve of the manner in which said paper has been conducted.

Resolved, 2d. That each minister and preacher be earnestly requested to make vigorous exertions for its support, by obtaining subscribers and collecting subscriptions due, as soon as possible after arriving at their respective circuits and stations.

REPORT ON BOUNDARIES.

Stations & Circuits.	No. in So.	Unst. Min.
Pittsburgh station	280	2
Allegheny	240	3
Pittsburgh circuit	200	1
Clearfield	207	7
Union	300	4
Brownsville	115	2
Middletown	705	5
Clarksburgh	300	3
Weston	280	5
Suttonsville	110	0
Monongahela	325	3
Ohio	226	3
Washington	30	0
Steubenville station	404	0
Wellsville	57	0
New Lisbon	62	1
Mahoning circuit	66	3
Youngstown	144	5
Grand river	78	6
Cleveland	257	16
Grainger	136	0
Sandusky	180	2
Bucyrus	117	2
Wayne	60	3
Mt. Vernon	238	3
Newark	150	5
Zanesville	359	1
Zanesville station	58	0
Lancaster	110	0
Pennsville circuit	134	3
Jackson	229	2
Cambridge	300	4
Pisgah	240	2
Coshocton	396	3
Adamsville	200	1
Deersville	200	3
Mt. Pleasant	260	2
Georgetown	227	4
Pleasant Hill	228	0
Woodsfield	111	3
Mill creek	160	0
Greenbrier	34	0
Ligonier mission*	75	0
Tyler*	48	0
Bear creek	40	0
Marshall circuit	49	1
Farmington	35	1

*Changed to circuits.

Members, 8759—unstationed preachers, 114—travelling preachers, 78—total, 8951. Increase the past year, 1878.

UNSTATIONED MINISTERS.

Pittsburgh station; W. Schooley, elder; J. Harrup, preacher.
Allegheny; C. Avery, Jas. Munden, elds.; W. Tyson, preacher.
Pittsburgh circuit; Ralph Lee, preacher.
Clearfield; J. Flezal, elder; J. McGee, deacon; S. Rank, D. Powell, J. C. Hazlett, J. Cox, W. Cox, preachers.
Union; J. Phillips, elder; I. W. Francis, S. Catlin, T. Nesmith, deacons.
Brownsville; T. Church, T. Moffit, prs.
Middletown; A. Pool, P. T. Laishley, A. Summers, S. Laishley, R. Smith, elds.
Clarksburgh; E. Bruen, elder; T. Maxen, deacon; J. Little, preacher.
Weston; H. Bannet, A. Morrison, elders; J. Laurence, J. Hardman, A. Spaur, deacons.
Monongahela; T. Mapel, elder; J. Headley, deacon; J. Leonard, preacher.
Ohio; C. Scott, sen., elder; J. Elliott, J. W. Brown, elders.
New Lisbon station; E. Jones, preacher.
Mahoning circuit; Jas. Gillespy, J. Burton, B. Welb, preachers.
Youngstown; E. Morse, elder; E. Hickox, J. Hoover, J. Burnett, deacons; E. S. Hoagland, preacher.
Grand river; T. Oliver, elder; D. Darling, A. B. Sperry, D. Rowland, P. Ketchman, S. Turner, preachers.
Cleveland; A. L. Spencer, A. Boid, J. Phesis, B. Reynolds, E. Burrel, deas.; W. Darril, P. Young, D. B. Jenks, W. Fry, T. Foster, B. Hourd, D. Richardson, W. Hoofman, C. Jenks, E. Mothes, T. Bush, preachers.
Bucyrus; J. Jack, W. Rice, preachers.
Wayne; L. A. Cass, elder; S. Loomis, deacon; U. Williams, preacher.
Mt. Vernon; D. Howell, elder; S. Longsworth, deacon; J. E. Wilson, preacher.
Newark; J. L. Fleming, J. Thrap, S. Montgomery, A. Edwards, elders; E. Morris, deacon.
Zanesville; F. L. Flowers, elder.
Pennsville; J. Edwards, S. Johnson, elds.; S. Aikens, deacon.
Jackson: J. Milligan, W. W. Reynolds, deacons.
Cambridge; S. Thomson, R. Galbreath, E. E. Parrish, elders; C. Lukans, dea.
Pisgah; J. Kreps, W. Tracy, preachers.
Coshocton; J. Ross, elder; J. Nugen, dea.; J. Baker, preacher.
Adamsville; J. L. Lesslie, elder.
Deersville; J. Stannart, John Morris, D. Miller, preachers.
Mt. Pleasant; J. McCoy, J. Wheeler, elds.
Georgetown; R. Scott, A. Jones, elders; H. Heberling, J. Roberson, deacons.
Woodsfield; H. Thompson, deacon; D. D. Hughes, R. Horton, preachers.
Marshall; G. Dowler, preacher.
Farmington; one, name recollected.

GEO. HUGHES, } Com.
D. B. DORSEY, } of
JOEL DALBEY. } Publi'n.

Steubenville, O., Sept. 21, 1840.

A child in Baltimore was seized by a hog a day or two ago, and considerably injured in one of its arms.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE SUPREMACY OF CONSCIENCE.

In contemplating that moral constitution of man, a very careful distinction should be drawn between subjective and objective ethics; that is, between the constitution of man which apprehends morality, and the morality which is so apprehended. We have always been of opinion that a great part of the confusion and obscurity which has so long existed in ethics, has arisen from not keeping steadily in view the difference between the constitution of morality, and the constitution of man's moral nature. There is a still more important distinction to be drawn between the laws of a system, and the collocation or disposition of the elements that constitute it: thus, for instance, there is more evidence of design in the structure of the eye, than in the construction of the solar system; the latter may be reduced perhaps to a law so simple, that it would seem an essential property of matter—the former requires the presence of so many minute circumstances, and the nice adjustment of so many distinct parts, that we at once pronounce it the result of contrivance.

For the purpose of argument, it is indifferent whether we regard the mind as endowed with different faculties or susceptible of different states. The latter has generally been deemed the more felicitous mode of viewing mental acts.—We hold a contrary opinion, because experience seems to prove that the mind can perform two or more acts in the same instant; and though it may exercise two independent functions, it would scarcely be in two different states at the same time. From the mental economy, an argument is derived from a God that has less semblance of demonstration, but really more force of conviction, than any furnished by the material universe. It is simply that the author of knowledge, and the bestower of the powers by which knowledge is obtained, must be an intelligent being. In this, and in similar propositions, the connexion between subject and predicate is discerned without the necessity of an intermediate; and it is from the celerity of the mental process, that some philosophers talk of intuition, others of innate ideas, and Dr. Abercrombie of what he is pleased to term "first principles."

The existence of a God is best proved by the consideration of the material universe; the character of the Deity is best shown by the sequences in the moral constitution of man. If, for instance, the exercise of benevolence always produces pleasure, and the indulgence of malign passions is always attended by pain, and that these sequences are notoriously laws of our moral nature,—it follows that "God is love." "The evidence of collocation (says the celebrated Dr. Chalmers) is not strong in the subjective mind, but is strong in the adaptation of the objective external world to the mind." We do not altogether agree with that eminent divine, because we think there is strong evidence of collocation in the harmonious adaptation of our faculties to each other; but we will not follow the point, for its consideration would lead us to the darkest depths of metaphysics.

The first general argument is derived from the Supremacy of Conscience,—a fact which can scarcely be disputed and which is totally independent of all inquiries into the nature and constitution of this internal Judge. This felt supremacy is thus described by Homer, with a force which has not since been equalled.

Pirates and conquerors of hardened mind,
The foes of peace, and scourges of mankind,
To whom offending men are made a prey,
When Jove in vengeance gives a land away:
Even these, when of their ill-got spoils possest,
Find sure tormentors in the guilty breast:
Some voice of God, close whispering within—
"Wretch, this is villany, and this is sin!"

By the supremacy of conscience, it is not meant, that this internal monitor always commands obedience, but that every man feels he ought to obey its dictates; and this phenomenon, whose existence is matter of experience, furnishes a strong argument for the character of God as a moral Governor. Nor is this evidence weakened by the apparent dissonance of moral judgments; because this dissonance arises, for the most part from the different preference given to the several classes of virtues, not to any dispute about the qualities that should be called virtuous. Conscience may pronounce different judgments respecting the same compound action, because one conscience will form its determination from one class of elements, and another from elements totally different. Thus, in the debate about slavery, it is not mooted whether humanity or justice are abstractedly virtuous, because the opponents of emancipation actually rest their case on justice and humanity. Different judgments then, do not result from want of uniformity in the principle that pronounces sentence, but from the different lights in which the understanding presents actions to the tribunal of conscience.

But not only is there a sentence pronounced within us on actions—there is also a direct pleasure in the exercise of the virtuous affections, and an indirect pain in the vicious. Here again we must attend to a very important distinction between the object and an affection, and the affection itself. The gratification of revenge is undoubtedly pleasant, but the feeling of revenge is as certainly painful; and it is scarcely going too far to say, that a great part of the pleasure arising from the accomplishment of revenge, results from the termination of the harrassing affection. This distinction, apparently subtle, but really substantial, is of the greatest importance in ethics: but we have neither leisure nor space, at present, to undertake giving an enumeration of the consequences that can be deduced from it.—Brother Jonathan.

YOUNG MAN OR WOMAN LAY ASIDE THAT NOVEL!—It is corrupting your mind, depraving your taste, and unfitting you for a relish of things substantial and profitable. Your excuse that it teaches you human nature, is vain. If you would learn human nature, learn it from the bible where you will find it more fully exhibited than in the effusions of a misguided, prolific imagination. Learn human nature from the emotions of your own heart, and not from the ever-wrought pictures of it, which have no foundation in fact. Your excuse is false, because you are not so much affected with the pretended exhibitions of human nature, as with sympathy for the "Hero of the Tale." Those tears you shed over your hero's sufferings are foolish tears, because they are shed over sorrows that never existed. And your sympathies are excited for those who have no existence but in a perverted imagination.

Are you a professed Christian? and yet burn "the midnight lamp" over tales of the fancy, while you remain unaffected at an exhibition of the Saviour's sorrows. Were ever any man's sorrows like his? and have you no desire to dwell upon the theme, and no tears of penitence to shed because your sins are the cause of them? If so, where is the evidence of your acceptance with God? We say, again, lay it aside! It is a bewitching snare that has been set to entrap you, and ruin your soul.

DIVINE PROVIDENCE.—From the bosom of obscurity and poverty, in which I drew my first breath and spent my earliest years, I have raised myself to a state of opulence, and to some degree of celebrity in the world. A constant good fortune has attended me through every period of my life to my present advanced age, and my descendants may be desirous of learning what were the means of which I made use, and which, thanks to the assisting hand of Providence, have proved so eminently successful.

And here let me with all humility acknowledge, that to Divine Providence, I am indebted for the felicity I have hitherto enjoyed. It is that power alone which has furnished me with the means I have employed, and that has crowned me with success. My faith in this respect leads me to hope, though I cannot count upon it, that the Divine goodness will still be exercised toward me, either by prolonging the duration of happiness to the close of my life, or by giving me fortitude to support any melancholy reverse which may happen to me as to so many others. My future fortune is known but to him in whose hand is our destiny, and can make our very afflictions subservient to our benefit.

The young reader would do well to pay attention to the history of the man, who by his industry, perseverance and economy, arrived to riches and honor. He is the first American philosopher. It is true that every man is not born with a genius like Franklin, but every man may and ought to be honest and industrious in his station.—Life of Franklin.

TO APPRENTICES.—The only way for a young man to prepare for usefulness, is to devote himself to study during his leisure hours. First, be industrious in your business. Never complain that you are obliged to work; go to work, go to it with alacrity and cheerfulness, and it will become a habit that will make you respect your employer and the community. Make it your business to see and promote his interest; by taking care of his you will learn to take care of your own. Second, be industrious in your studies. Few persons can complain of a harder master than Franklin's, yet he laid the foundation of his greatness while an apprentice. Success depends not on the amount of leisure you may have, but on the manner in which it is employed.

CHEATING THE WOMEN.—The Providence Journal of yesterday, gives some account of a fellow, dressed as a sailor, who has been, for a number of days past, practising upon the credulity of women in that city, who happened to have friends at sea. In one case, he called upon a poor woman, telling her he had seen her son in Valparaiso, and that he had sent to her, by him, a trunk or package, which was just then landing from the vessel, the expenses on which were $3 75; that if she would let him have the money, he would himself attend to getting it on shore and bring it immediately to her house. This woman was too sharp for him, however, but he soon found another who was not.

THE TOAD.—There is no animal more inoffensive and useful than a toad. As a protector of young garden vegetables from worms, his services are invaluable. A neighbor of ours gathers all of these animals about his garden, and builds temporary burrows, to which they may retire for protection under a hot sun. The toad goes forth in the shade of evening, or when clouds cover the sun, and so exceedingly quick is he in his operations, that the eye can scarcely detect him when he pounces upon his prey. It is said that the toad, if protected near a cabbage garden, will entirely clear that vegetable of the lice which are sometimes so troublesome.

COMMUNICATION.

NEW LISBON, O., SEPT. 24, 1840.

Br. Springer: Please do me the favor to publish the following appointments:

Youngstown circuit,	- - - October	4
Grand River "	- - - - "	11
Farmington "	- - - - "	18
Mahoning "	- - - - "	25
Wellsville station,	- - - Novem.	1
New Lisbon "	- - - - "	8
Monongahela circuit,	- - - - "	15
Clarksburgh "	- - - - "	22
Suttonsville "	- - - - "	29
Weston "	- - - Decem.	6
Middletown "	- - - - "	13
Brownsville "	- - - - "	20
Union "	- - - - "	27

Yours, truly,

Z. RAGAN..

For the Western Recorder.

There are two theories concerning the remission of sins now prevalent in the religious world. The first teaches faith, repentance, and prayer, in order to remission. The second teaches faith, repentance, baptism, and prayer, in order to remission. Those who practize upon the former of these theories call upon sinners who are desirous to get religion, to come to the altar or mourners bench, to pray, and to be prayed for; the righteous are then to pray for the unrighteous. The faith required of those who kneel at the bench is, that Jesus Christ will forgive them through the petitions of those who pray for them. Those who practice upon this theory, have mistaken the world for the church, and suppose that the Elders of the church are the Elders of the world also; they make no distinction between aliens and citizens, but apply what is made the duty of Elders to the sick members of the Church, to the sick of the world. In short, they include the world in the church, and have no aliens. All alike have the right of petition. With them God is the God of all men, and all are His people,—so that all are included in the New Covenant.

Those who practiced upon the latter of these theories, required aliens to believe the gospel, repent of their rebellion, and to submit to baptism, in order to become citizens,—then to call on the name of the Lord. They esteem all aliens until they are born citizens, by being born of water and the Spirit.

I am willing to submit these two theories and practices, to the good sense of your readers, that they may compare them with the scriptures. When I see men coming forward in a congregation to pray for sinners, quoting the passage "The effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much," I cannot help thinking of a Pharisee. This man (says I to myself) assumes to be a righteous man, and would have us believe, that because of his piety God pardoned sinners and caused them to leap for joy. O.

Puff! Puff! Puff!!

CHEAP!

CHEAPER THAN EVER! GREAT BARGAINS!

New York at your door!

SELLING OFF AT COST!

WE so heartily despise the "gull-catching" system that we seldom advertise at all. We however give our friends and the public notice that we have just received a fine stock of

FALL AND WINTER

GOODS.

We don't profess to have brought "New York to your doors," nor to undersell every body else, nor to be "selling off at cost," nor to be "closing up," and all that sort of things,—but we do say, that our goods are cheap enough to satisfy any reasonable person, even in these "hard times."

A. A. GUTHRIE & Co.

Putnam, Ohio, September 30, 1840. 3w58

William Green,

CLOCK AND WATCH REPAIRER, SILVERSMITH, AND JEWELLER,

CAN be found at his shop on Main street Putnam, a few doors north of J. C. Guthrie's store, where he will do his best to accommodate customers. He keeps on hand an assortment of spectacles, watch trimmings, pencils, &c.

As far as we have tried Mr. GREEN as a watch repairer he has given us good satisfaction.—ED.

April 22, 1840. 35tf.

Dissolution.

THE partnership heretojore existing between the subscribers in the PUTNAM FOUNDRY, under the firm of HARTLEY & ANDERSON, was this day dissolved by mutual consent.

The Putnam Foundry will hereafter be conducted by J. J. Anderson & Co.

LEVI HARTLEY,
JACOB J. ANDERSON.

Putnam, Jan. 1, 1840. (Jan. 29: 23.)

Notice.

ALL persons indebted to the late firm of Hartley & Anderson, are earnestly requested to call at the Foundry and make settlement, as the change of owners makes this step absolutely necessary. We ask the attention of all persons concerned, to this notice.

J. J. ANDERSON & Co.

Putnam, Jan. 1, 1840. (Jan. 29: 23.)

Dissolution.

THE partnership heretofore existing between S. B. Johnson and J. M. Kirkpatrick, under the firm of S. B. Johnson & Co. was dissolved by mutual consent, on Thursday 19th inst.

S. B. JOHNSON,
J. M. KIRKPATRICK.

Zanesville, March 31, 1840. 32tf

The New World.

The Largest, Cheapest, Handsomest most Comprehensive Newspaper in the United States.

EDITED BY

PARK BENJAMIN AND EPES SARGENT

WITH multiplied resources for rende the New World more valuable than as a compendious newspaper and repositor elegant literature, we enter upon the se volume (folio) on the 24th of October, dre in a beautiful garb of new type, cast expressl the purpose. It will therefore be a fitting to commence new subscriptions, as well a the renewal of those which may then expire

During the first year of the existence of New World, it has acquired a reputation circulation superior to that of any weekly p in the country; and has furnished to its sub bers, during that period, (besides all the cur news of the day, domestic and foreign) new valuable works by Talfourd, D'Israeli, The Moore, Miss Mitford, Mrs. Jameson, Cha Dickens, Ainsworth, Knowles, Bulwer, Mar and others—works, which in London could be purchased for fifty times the amount of subscription price of the New World. In a tion to works of interest by these eminent thors, it has contained the cream of the peri cal literature of the day, as well as original a cles from the pens of some of the most pop writers of America, among whom we may n tion Miss Sedgwick, Orville Dewey, Profe Longfellow, the author of "Yankee Notion Simms, Street, &c., &c.

In politics we shall, as hitherto, maintain armed neutrality. Our columns will as hith be unobjectionable in a moral point of view. criticism we shall, in justice to the public, ma tain a perfect independence, even though incur the vengeance of all the dunces. shall, in conclusion, earnestly strive to ren our sheet not only worthy of the unparalle favor it has experienced, but of a contin extending circulation. While we continue furnish with all possible promptitude the n attractive literature of the day, we shall, as means enlarge, afford that compensation to tive authors, which may induce them to m the New World the medium for presenting the public their best productions. Our excell London correspondence will be continued, due attention will be paid to the commerc agricultural and news departments of our pa

A QUARTO EDITION

Of sixteen large pages was commenced on sixth of June last, in order to meet the wis of a large number of subscribers, by giving th its rich and varied contents in a suitable fo for binding. This we have done without hav enhanced the price, so that new subscribers, others on the renewal of previous subscriptio can take their choice between the Quarto a Folio form. ☞But a few sets of the Quar from No. 1, now remain on hand in the off and we shall, therefore, not be able long to s ply them.

TERMS—Three Dollars a year in advan for either edition; or Five Dollars for two cop In all cases letters must be free, or post-paid, they will remain dead in the post-office.

☞All Postmasters who will act for us our authorized Agents, and may retain 25 cent. on the subscription price, (Three Dolla for commissions, if remitted in New York eastern money; or 50 cents on each, if in no of other solvent banks, which may be at a count here.

Letters relative to the editorial departme must be addressed to Park Benjamin and E Sargent, Editors: those relative to the busin department, to J. WINCHESTER, Publisher No. 30, Ann street, New Yo

September 16, 1840. 3t

S. C. Haver,

IN the flourishing town of Putnam has on ha 40 or 50 SADDLES ready for sale, of diff ent qualities, comprising nearly all the variet in fashion in our Buckeye State.

A good assortment of Bridles and Mart gales: Riding and driving Whips: between 1 and 200 Carriage and heavy draft Collars, wh will compare and wear with any others ma here or elsewhere.

Also, fine York, Dearborn, heavy team a common Farming Harness. A lot of first ra Carriage and Buggy Harness, (brass and sil plated.)

Trunks, vallises, saddle-bags, and double co ered wagon whips, varying in quality and pri to suit purchasers.

The only recommendation he now offers for work, is the testimony and long experience of old customers and friends. He is still anxio to please and accommodate those who may c on him, and hopes to share so much of the pub patronage as his attention to his business sh merit.

Putnam, April 29, 1840. 28tf

Glass Manufactory.

THE subscriber having dissolved his conne ion with the former company, has taken t GLASS WORKS below town under his ov management.

WINDOW GLASS, double and single, seizes, and of superior quality will be kept co stantly on hand for sale on reasonable terms. The experience of the proprietor, in the man facture of the article, will insure all made to of the best quality. Call and see.

S. B. JOHNSON.

Zanesville, Ohio, May 6, 1840. 37

O. WHITE, BOOK BINDER, No. 10 Main Street, Zanesville, Ohio.

January 15, 1840. 21tf

THE

WESTERN RECORDER

IS PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY.

☞ The office of the Recorder is five and a half miles west of Zanesville.

TERMS.

1. The WESTERN RECORDER will be publish ed weekly, on an imperial sheet, at $2 00 pe annum, in advance: $2 50 at the end of thre months; $3 00 at the end of the year.

2. No discontinuances will be allowed, e cept at the discretion of the publisher, until a arrearages are paid.

3. To all ministers having regular pastora charges, who do any thing at all for the pape if they will direct us where, a copy shall be sen gratis; any other who forward to us $10 0 for new subscribers, shall have six copies sent t any address he may give.

4. All letters designed for the paper, must b directed to "C. Springer, Meadow Farm, Mush ingum, Ohio."

5. A failure to notify a discontinuance be fore the expiration of the subscription year, wi be considered a new engagement.

CHARACTER.—The pages of the WESTER RECORDER will be open to discussion on all mo ral questions;—it will give articles on Litera ture, Mechanics, Agriculture,—an abstract o Religious and Political intelligence, and what ever may be interesting and instructive to fam ilies in general. A portion of its columns wi be open to Advertisements and Prices Current —another portion to sustain the interests of th Methodist Protestant Church in the West.— These two latter objects will not likely occup more than one page.

The RECORDER will take a firm stand agains Clerical Supremacy.

THE WESTERN RECORDER.

NGER, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER. | Vol. 2.--No. 9. | ZANESVILLE, OHIO, WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 21, 1840. | Whole No. 61. | JOHN W. WHITE, PRINTER.

OLLARS PER ANNUM IN ADVANCE. | $2.50, IN THREE MONTHS; $3, END OF YEAR.

IMUNICATIONS.

For the Western Recorder

or: I have just read Mr. PARR's val- mmunication, which I desire should immediate connection with my last. s the best possible evidence of the my cause.

mmunication to which I replied in my PARR stated what is not true. This merely insinuate, nor yet in "vulgar es." But whether this departure from in consequence of a corruption of r an excusable infirmity of human na- d not take upon me to determine; I nmunity to form its own opinion.

Mr. LAWDER shall show himself a gen- ze, says the Elder. How unfortunate find this out five or six months ago. ave saved both him and myself much it is now too late for the Elder to put of importance and throw himself thus dignity.

'ARR has been slandered by "vulgar es" and base insinuations which are ase," why did he not show the example stian and the gentleman? Why did h meekness and candor reply to the ged? Though I, as an individual, may attention, yet facts are respectable ought to be treated as such. The facts re not done in a corner; they are in rm, and known to hundreds in this . Let Mr. PARR, therefore, prove as affirmed. But this is a task too for Mr. PARR's performance. He at- easier method of dodging the force of ent. Like the boy whose petulence him into difficulty, and who has been the field, he commences calling names: oundrel, "he has not the moral hones- l courage to meet an opponent in an way," (honorable?) "wilful and mali- ier," (liar) "slanderer," "blackguard," wler," &c. How gentlemanly!—How ike!!

r, I am not astonished at this. I had to expect better things from one who urb the ashes of the dead, and tarnish earned reputation of one now in hea- o am I, that I should expect better n a man who can charge Dr. Adam h "forgery of the basest character?"

n another consideration, I had no rea- pect better things. The Elder's argu- exhausted, and this was his last resort; ldsmith says, "the mouths that want are filled with abuse."

clusion, I think it will be no difficult etermine from Mr. PARR's last effort the right, and who in the wrong. And rpose of illustration, permit me to in- case from "Buck's Religious and Mis- anecdotes." A cobler at Leyden, to attend the public disputations held demy, was asked if he understood latin. plied the mechanic, "but I know who is the argument." How? inquired his Why, by seeing who is angry first."

Yours, &c.

W. H. LAWDER.

ille, Oct. 1840.

For the Western Recorder.

RESS TO THE PITTSBURGH CONFER- OF THE METHODIST PROTESTANT CH, published on the author's own nsibility.

y Beloved Brethren: The Pitts- nnual Conference of the Metho- scopal Church, at its session in burgh, in July last, adopted the g resolutions:

Resolved, That in the judgment of sburgh Conference of the M. E. , the doctrine of the Rev. Asa book, on the Benevolence and le of the Supreme Being, in ref- to future punishment, is contrary Bible.

Resolved, hat the foregoing reso- be published in the Pittsburgh an Advocate.

"W. SMITH,
"J. DRUMMOND."

design of the above resolution, it presumed, was to deter people ading my late publication, and to a prejudice against it, prior to ex- ion; and it was introduced into the nce by the man who had publicly bed the book on the 2d of July, d announced his determination, as ed in the Pittsburgh Conference l of that date, to use his utmost ors to "prevent its circulation."

w, brethren, the same principle influenced me to write and publish ok in question, influences me to the lawful means in my power, to ract this summary method of hav- condemned without a hearing: and ore, I appeal to you in the hope ou will sustain me against a pro- on so uncandid and so unfair.

rote this book under the influence eep solicitude to promote the hap- of mankind, honestly believing he doctrines I advanced were no n conformity with the Bible, than were with the clearest dictates of tional and moral faculties. But in dgment of the Pittsburgh Confer- f the Methodist Episcopal Church, the doctrine of my book which refers to future punishment, "is contrary to the Bible." The resolution does not inform the public what the doctrine is, or upon what grounds they base their judgment, that it "is contrary to the Bible." Now, as intelligent men commonly have reasons for their official votes, it is to be presumed that those brethren had read the book, and had compared it with the Bible; and hence, had judged that th re was a want of conformity between them. As they have not given any reasons for their vote, the only common sense inference ppears to be, that all people should sit down and read the book for themselves, as the only way whereby they can find the ground of the official action of the conference. In regard to the special subject referred to in the conference resolution, it is not my purpose, at present, to enter formally into the argument, but to solicit your friendly co-operation, so far as may be necessary to sustain me in the fair and full enjoyment of the liberty of the press, and I am confident that I can make it appear to your satisfaction, that the principles which I advocate, when correctly explained and understood, have no injurious tendency whatever; but that they are, on the contrary, calculated to clear away many obscure and false views in theology, which have greatly dishonored God, and injured the souls of men, for more than three hundred years. I have a work on hand, to which I have devoted much attention since my return from Philadelphia, intended to illustrate and to make manifest the correctness of the proposition just now advanced. This work will be a very necessary appendix to that on the Benevolence and Rectitude of the Supreme Being, and if I mistake not, will give an amount of satisfaction to every intelligent reader that he could not derive from the work alone that is already before the public. The principles advanced in it are further illustrated—other connected principles are introduced—and additional sources of argument are carried forward to their legitimate results, whereby, as I think, the matter is put beyond doubt, that my supposed heresies are really incontrovertable truths, and truths too, of the very first importance to human happiness. I do not wish you to take my word for this, but I wish and respectfully solicit you to lend me your friendly assistance, so far as will be necessary to give me a fair opportunity to lay before you and the public the evidence on which the proposition rests.

You see there are efforts in progress, not by individuals only, not by conductors of the public press only, but by organized bodies of men, using their official influence to cast public suspicion and odium upon my sentiments, with a view to conceal them and to prevent my having an impartial hearing. Will Mthodist Protestants of the nineteenth century be indifferent spectators, when they thus witness attempts to revive and act over again, those authoritative and uncandid practices of former times which had such a deplorable efficiency in bringing about the death-like silence and the mental degradation of the dark ages? I cannot believe it. The design of the above measures was probably two-fold—to prevent the circulation of the book which I have already published, and either to discourage me from writing any more upon the subject, or to render such an effort entirely fruitless. I will not be put to silence in this manner, if I can help it; because the same conviction of duty which influences me to write and publish my views and arguments, also influences me to use my best endeavors to cause these truths to circulate through the community. As a respectable body of men have thus commenced operations to defeat my object, I entreat the respectable body now before me, to aid me in counteracting their premature and unfriendly course of action. I do not ask this conference to act officially on the subject, but I wish to have their cordial sanction, for individuals, both in our ministry and membership, to use persevering efforts to promote the circulation of my work on the Benevolence and Rectitude of the Supreme Being, and also to open the way for me to bring before the religious community a subsequent publication, in further illustration of the principles in question.

It would take up too much of your time for me now to give an epitome of the work just referred to, or an exhibition of its contents; otherwise, I would gladly present them, so far as they are in a state of maturity. It will require most of my leisure hours through the ensuing fall and winter to furnish the matter which I have on hand; and it is hardly probable that it will be judicious to put it to press in less than one year from this time. The number of pages it will contain, I cannot now determine; but I intend that the retail price shall not exceed one dollar, and not even so much, unless the size of the book shall necessarily require it. I hope the brethren, and especially our travelling ministers, will ascertain as well as they can, the number of copies that may probably be disposed of within their respective bounds, and that they will give me due information, that I may know how large an edition to publish of the new work, and also, how I may conveniently dispose of the balance of those which have been already published.

The sincerity of those brethren who have opposed the circulation of my arguments is not called in question, they doubtless think they do God and His church service; but the mistake which operates at the bottom of their measures has too long hampered the intelligence of the christian world: namely, that we ought not to follow any chain of argument when we perceive it is likely to lead us away from the traditions of the fathers, and ought not to give such evidence a hearing when others shall have the presumption to advance it, on the ground that whatever will excite doubts in regard to any part of the common system, will agitate society and weaken the foundation of present ecclesiastical establishments. This is the very argument that influenced the zeal of the Jews against the Lord Jesus Christ;—the zeal of the Heathen priests and magistrates against the Apostles;—the zeal of the Roman Catholics against Luther and Melancthon, and the violence of the clergy and laity of the Church of England, as well as that of many orthodox dissenters, against the persevering efforts of John Wesley and John Fletcher. It is an argument which is alike good, or rather which is alike good for nothing, among all the sects of christendom; for it assumes that every one of their plat-forms ought to be perpetuated to the end of the world; and yet, each denomination wonders at the selfish bigotry of all its neighbors, without seeming to be aware that its own pretensions rest precisely on the same foundation.

It is time for these inconsistencies to be given to the moles and to the bats, and for all orders of christians to leave reason and revelation free as air, and to consent that He who is King of kings and Lord of lords, should also be Head over all things to the church, which He cannot be so long as reason and revelation are made to surrender to the dictates of human authority, and truth and falsehood are decided by the amount of argument that is contained in the greatest number of ecclesiastical votes!

The question will probably be pressingly urged upon me: What is it that I am aiming to establish by all this labored argument, that requires the writing of two books for its ample and sufficient exhibition? I am aiming to prove, and to put the matter beyond all successful controversy, that the truth of God, when correctly understood, does not make a demand upon the mind of man, to embrace an infinite contradiction: that when the Bible reports to us the character of our Creator as being an uncompounded fountain of LOVE, it reports an eternal reality: that God will be as much disposed to promote universal holiness and happiness to all eternity, as He has been through all past duration: that any doctrine which represents Him as being of a double character, or of a changeable character, is utterly false: and that full justice can be done to all the threatenings of the Bible, in perfect accordance with the immutable and unmixed loveliness of God which the Bible every where testifies.

My life is rapidly drawing to a close, and while the Lord is pleased to favor me with health, and vigor of body and of mind, I feel that every hour is precious; and I am conscious of a deep solicitude to ascertain how I can most effectually contribute to the promotion of His honor and glory who has spoken me into life, and to the present and eternal well-being of my fellow creatures. The theme on which I write has been adopted, not as an amusing speculation, but as one which, of all others, has the most efficient influence upon the morals of mankind. A man that is reformed by the mere force of terror, is little, if any better after his reformation than before, as it respects either the state of his morals or of his happiness; and nothing but just views of the holy and gracious character of God can save him from either painfully fluctuating between confidence and distrust, or from settling down as a mere sectarian bigot, trusting to his zeal and faithfulness in some other cause than that of our Lord Jesus Christ for the final salvation of his soul.

Viewing the subject in this light, it is my honest conviction that the course of investigation which I pursue is better calculated than any other which I can pursue, "to spread scripture holiness over these lands;" but if there may be any improvement in the exercise of my mental faculties, whereby I can, to better advantage, fill up the fleeting balance of my life, I hope God will reveal even this unto me, and that when the Divine Master shall appear, He may find me watching. With the best wishes for your success in the Lord's vineyard, and with earnest prayers that we may all have a happy meeting in the untroubled regions of immortality, I remain your brother and fellow-laborer in the kingdom and patience of Jesus Christ. A. SHINN.

For the Western Recorder.

Friend Springer: In the xxi. chapter of the Acts, from the 17th to the 26th verses, we find the following facts recorded:

1st. All the believing Jews were zealous of the law, hence James said to Paul, "Thou seest, brother, how many thousands of Jews there are which believe, and they are all zealous of the law."

2d. A report had been circulated among the believing Jews, that Paul taught the Jews among the Gentiles not to circumcise their children.

3d. This report so enraged the Jews that they attempted to kill Paul.

Now what inferences can we fairly and honestly draw from the above facts?

1. That the christian Jews continued to circumcise their children for nearly thirty years after the ministry of Jesus began.

2. That the Jews did not baptize their children in the room of circumcising them, for they still continued to circumcise them.

If the Jews did not substitute baptism for circumcision, pray who did? Surely not the Gentiles, for they never had any such rite among them as circumcision.

The above facts shew clearly that the believing Jews continued to circumcise their children, and the unbelieving Jews still continue to do so.

Therefore it is evident that the Jews never substituted baptism for circumcision. Consequently baptism never came in the room of circumcision.

Refute this if you can.

M. WINANS.

OBITUARY.

For the Western Recorder.

OBITUARY NOTICE OF URIAH M'KINNON.

"Mark the perfect man, and behold the upright: for the end of that man is peace." PSALM xxxvii.

Our beloved brother, Uriah M'Kinnon, was born in the State of Kentucky, the 14th of April, A.D., 1800. His parents emigrated to Champaign county, in this State, at a very early period, and were among the first white settlers of that region of country. They were members of the Methodist Episcopal church,—traversed the path of piety with firm and unwavering steps, and early instructed their offspring in lessons of religion, in whom, by the grace of God, has been amply verified the declaration of inspired wisdom, "that a child will not depart from his youthful instructions."

Uriah was of a mild, unoffending disposition, and although respected and admiredby the world, he lived without a full sense of his obligations to God until his eighteenth or nineteenth year. He then, being awakened by the Spirit, sought the Lord by repentance and faith. He soon became an active member in public worship,—lived an exemplary life. After sufficient experience he was licensed to exhort; he was industrious in the services of his divine Master, and proved himself to be a workman that needeth not to be ashamed.

When the perplexed state of the Methodist E. Church led to an investigation of the principles of episcopacy, he was found among the dissenters of whom was organized the Methodist P. Church.

Br. M'Kinnon removed about seven years ago, into the then wilderness of Hardin county, and labored profusely from that time till his death, in organizing and building up the circuit of Lima. He was licensed to preach by the M.P.Church soon after his removal to Hardin county. His manner of enforcing the word of divine truth was practical and searching. His last effort was a few days before his departure at a camp-meeting held on Lima circuit. He selected the impressive words of our Saviour, where He foretold the wicked generation unto whom He was sent, that they would be condemned in judgment by the Queen of the South; and raised his warning voice to blow the gospel trumpet in Zion, which proved to be the last time. His devotional mind seemed to be deeply engaged in spiritual things from the commencement till the close of our camp-meeting.

His rapid improvement and growing usefulness, since his residence on this circuit, has been constantly remarked and admired throughout the circle of his acquaintance. His christian character before the world; his pious devotion in daily life, and the light which he reflected around him, stand a living testimony that he was ripe for immortality.

On Wednesday, the day after his return from camp-meeting, he was attacked with bilious fever, from which he never recovered; but no particular danger was apprehended until the Tuesdey following, when it appeared evident that he was growing worse and the disease increasing. He soon relapsed into a slumber, much as a person in common sleep. In this situation he continued till Thursday, the 27th of August, 15 minutes past 1, afternoon, the weary wheels of life stood still—the silver cord was loosed, and his precious soul entered into the joy of his Lord.

He has left a wife and seven children, a mother and brothers and sisters to mourn his death, and that loss which, no doubt, is his infinite gain. The whole church in this vicinity, and every friend of truth and morality, greatly laments the solemn breach his decease has caused in society. He lived and died our servant. May we be prepared to meet him at God's right hand, and may the rising generation retain a spark of that vital religion which shone with such brilliant lustre in the life and character of that servant of the Most High. All that is contained in earthly youth and beauty will soon vanish like a "cloud in the summer sun," but he who seeks the protection of God by piety and prayer, secures an ever-during bloom in a happier, holier realm.

Farewell Uriah 'till we meet
Beyond the wreck of death,
In social strains forever sweet,
To breathe a holier breath.

ANDREW T. MORRISON.

Westminster, Ohio, Sept. 22, 1840.

TRIAL OF MRS. FLOOR FOR MURDER.—The readers will undoubtedly recollect, that Mr. Floor, a butcher, in the Catharine Market, was poisoned, some months ago, by having eaten of some cakes, which it was said were furnished him by Phœbe Ann Floor, who was, or who passed as his wife, with whom he had lived. The cause of the act was supposed to be jealousy of another woman, towards whom it was said Floor had formed a partiality.

The trial has this week been in progress. The first witness called, Margaret Phillips, (as we learn from the Sun,) testified that she resides at 86 Ridge st.; is a single woman: had resided with Mrs. Fisher; did so on the 24th of November, but left on the Tuesday before the cake was baked. Mrs. Fisher then lived in Lewis street. Mrs. Simonson and she went there together; by Mrs. Simonson she meant Mrs. Floor, as she was called. Mrs. Floor went away on the Tuesday to Bergen, and did not return until the following Saturday; she then saw her with two cakes; the small one was in the stove; it was in the second story in Mrs. Fisher's room. The large cake was on the table. There was no one else in the room at that time. The small cake was in a saucer, and the large one in a brown dish, it was as big again as the small one. Mrs. Floor did not tell me what kind of cake it was. I thought the one in the saucer a pound cake, and the other one a common sugar cake. She left the room for a short time and came back and set down by the window. She said she had got some pearl ash upon her apron, and it had taken the color out. Witness saw the spots. She took the cakes out of the stove. The large one first, which she placed on the stove, and took the small one out of the room. When she took them out of the stove, a little boy asked her to give him some, and she refused, but said he should have some of the large one next day.—She said she wanted the cake for a particular use. The boy was about four years old. Mr. Fisher was in the room at the time, but no one else. Mrs. Floor then went out, taking the small cake with her: the next time witness saw her she was at the halls of justice. Don't remember the day of the month or the month, but thinks it was the Saturday before Christmas day. Knew her before this as Mrs. Simonson; never heard her called Floor until after the murder. Did not know Floor. The jury returned a verdict of not guilty.—New York paper.

YOUTH'S DEPARTMENT

A BOY TELLING HIS TROUBLES TO THE SAVIOUR.—Several years since, there lived a boy in the Great Valley of the West, who had wicked parents. They were so wicked, and cared so little about God or His word, that they took their little son from the Sabbath School and forbid his ever attending again. This was a great trial to the dear boy; for during the short time he had attended, he was very happy—and he became much attached to his class-mates and his pious teacher.—How could he think of never meeting them again, and restrain his bitter tears?

One Sabbath morning, his father had locked him into a chamber, for fear he would run away to the Sabbath school.—After his parents had shut and locked the chamber door, and gone down, he began to think how his kind teacher once told the class that, "if they ever had any difficulty or trouble, they must go and tell the Saviour of it, and pray to him." As he sat there alone, and remembered his Sabbth School and his dear teacher, the poor child thought with himself, "I am now in difficulty and trouble surely, and I will go and tell the Saviour." So he knelt down and began to pray.

His mother, knowing how strong was his love to the Sabbath School, thought he might try to escape by the window, and perhaps get hurt, so she went up softly to his chamber door and looked through the key-hole. And O, what a scene did she behold! There was her dear boy upon his knees, crying unto God in prayer. His father and mother had forsaken him, and he was asking the Lord to take him up. The mother could not witness such a scene unmoved. Her heart was melted; she opened the door, went in, and kneeling by his side, begged that he would pray for her. Presently the father came in, and went to the chamber for the same reason that the mother had gone before, to see if the child was there, and what he was doing. As he ascended the stairs, he saw that the door was a-jar. His first thought was, that the monther had let the boy out, and he was very angry. But when he entered the room, and saw his little son on his knees, and the mother kneeling by his side, his anger gave place to the most tender affection for his child, and an overwhelming sense of his own wickedness, and he knelt down on the other side, and begged that he too might be remembered in prayer! The result of that affecting scene was, the wicked father and mother's hopeful conversion to God.

Youthful readers! With this story before you, ought you not to be thankful for the privilege of attending the Sabbath School? Your parents not only permit, but wish you to attend. Again: will you not learn from this story, to carry all your difficulties and troubles to the Saviour in prayer? You too have a kind and sympathizing Saviour. He is more ready to hear than you are to cry unto him. He loves to have you come to him just as you go to your kind parents, and tell him all your joys and all your sorrows. If you have a wicked heart, tell him of it; and ask him to take it away and give you a new one. If you have a bad temper, tell him of that; if you are tempted to disobey your parents, or break the Sabbath, or do any thing wrong, spread it all out before the Saviour. Do not fear to tell him your smallest difficulties and troubles; and tell him too, with thanksgiving and praise, of all your joys and happiness. The more you go to him, if you go with right feelings, the more you will love to go.—Sabbath School Visiter.

A henpecked husband says that instead of he and his wife being one, they are ten; for she is 1 and he is 0.

WESTERN RECORDER.

ZANESVILLE:

WEDNESDAY,.....OCTOBER 21, 1840.

THE D'HAUTEVILLE CASE.—This case, now before the Philadelphia Court of Sessions, was carried there by an application on the part of the husband, for a writ of habeas corpus, to bring forward his child, and have cause shown why it should not be returned to his custody. As in all other cases of this description, there are points thrown before the public which the world cannot appreciate; and the little evidences of affection, and causes of offence which are amply sufficient to bless or make unhappy, in domestic life, are poor, and even ridiculous matters of legal evidence. To submit a butterfly to dissection with a Bowie knife, to ascertain its structure and organization, were as wise as it is to bring these connubial matters before a tribunal, to ascertain their weight and relation. Cupid and Hymen acknowledge no jurisdiction to such authorities. The language of a glance of the eye—the character of a tone of the voice—the thousand "trifles light as air" which make the aggregate of connubial happiness or misery, cannot be weighed by John Doe and Richard Roe.

In the D'Hauteville case, nothing is involved in any of the charges, but incompatability of temper. We subjoin, from the Philadelphia American, a sketch of the plea of the counsel for the appellant; and when we find the other side reported, will publish that also. M. D'Hauteville, it may be necessary to tell some of our readers, is a Swiss gentleman, tho lady who now refuses to fulfil her marriage vows to him, is a native of Boston, a daughter of Robert Sears, Esq. The marriage took place in Switzerland.—The case which has been interrupted by the illness of a relative of Judge Conrad, was to have been resumed to-day.—Br. Jonathan, 10th inst.

The following is a report of the argument of Mr. Scott, counsel for Mr. D'Hauteville, in the case of habeas corpus, now pending in Philadelphia. On the cause of separation between that gentleman and his wife, the argument went to show that this lady had loved her husband before marriage, and did not, as was contended by her counsel, sacrifice herself to a sense of honor; that at least, from her letters, and those of her parents; from her and their repeated declarations; from her engaging herself to him three weeks after his introduction to the family—from all the circumstances of the case, he was justified in thinking, what he hoped—that she loved him, and excused for not appreciating her sacrifice. That his alleged unkind conduct, even allowing he had done all charged, evidently and confessedly had arisen from his deep affection for his wife, and his wish to have her society, almost exclusively, for the first few weeks of the marriage. To his affection only could be attributed his alleged coldness to Mrs. Sears, (Mrs. D'H.'s mother.) and neglect of her, which no one pretended had been caused by any thing but the doubt, whether well grounded or not, that she exercised an undue and unfavorable influence over her daughter.

The overt acts of unkindness at Hauteville, complained of, such as his objecting to her riding with her mother, his declining to let her see a letter to him from her sister in America, his being displeased with her reclining on her mother's shoulder, his frequently calling her away from her mother's chamber to his, his want of attention to Mrs. Sears at table, and his failing to find her shawl after an evening party, when he found the shawls of his wife and her sister—these and other acts of the same kind, the Court could not properly appreciate, without knowing the circumstances, the manner, the language, which generally were not in evidence. They certainly were not a sufficient cause of separation. They were capable of an easy explanation, which relieved Mr. D'H. from all reproach; unless, perhaps, for occasional want of judgment. It was evident that Mr. D'H. was of a very placable temper, and easily softened. His wife, though amiable and lovely, was said by her parents to be very firm and decided. Her own letters and statements showed, conclusively, the same thing—a decision more proper and estimable, perhaps, in a woman her own mistress, than in a married lady. This decision often appeared in cases where she should have submitted, or used a very different means of influence. Supposing Mr. D'Hauteville wrong in many instances, there could be no doubt there was much wrong on the other side.

What was alleged in regard to his unkindness at Geneva was still more trifling, and so were the allegations as to the first eight weeks in Paris, those preceding the events that led to Mrs. D'H.'s flight to the house of the American Minister, Governor Cass. To understand the latter event, it was necessary to inquire as to the alleged ante-nuptial promises in regard to visits to America after marriage. These visits were the subjects of much negotiation. The result had been the understanding, not that she should come to this country whenever she pleased, but that she and her husband alone should influence the decision, his parents not interfering; her health and happiness, indeed, to be the motive of visits, but she not to urge going, when his duty or any accident or misfortune, should demand his presence at home. No visit was contemplated within at least one year after marriage. Yet in six or seven months—as soon as she perceived her delicate situation—she asked to come to America, that her first child might be born here—a thing naturally disagreeable to her husband. Still he consented, though not without a groan, and many subsequent attempts to dissuade her. The sickness of his father called him to Geneva—that sickness continued, and he wrote, retracting his consent and telling her he would come to take her back. About the time of this letter's arrival, he reached Paris, and did not go to her mother's house, but wrote to her that he would be, at a certain hour, at her door, with the travelling carriage. This may have been an ill-judged course; but certainly it was no just cause for divorce. She fled to the American minister's—announced these domestic difficulties to the Parisian world. He obtained an interview, renewed his consent to her visit to America, and she returned with him to her mother's.

No wonder, after these occurrences, that he expostulated with her, and tried to dissuade her from the visit; but even this ceased, when Dr. Warren advised him that her health required that visit. No unkindness after this is pretended. At Havre they parted affectionately. Her first letter from New York was affectionate. The succeeding one from Boston clearly announced her intention to abandon him, though it is said that she had no such intention till the middle of November, after the receipt of his letter of the 24th of July. That letter contains nothing justifying such an intention. The child was born on the 27th of September, 1838. The father was informed of its birth only through a third person. Mr. D'H. came to this country in July, 1839. He is reproached with crossing the ocean under an assumed name, when his wife, in her subsequent flight from him, and those she was with, for six or eight weeks or more, did the same thing. He seeks her at her father's house. She flies, and remains some months in concealment.—What is the obstacle to re-union? Nothing but this lady's alleged determination, sworn to, indeed, by her. The Court cannot decree any thing, which, as a precedent, at least, must lead to such immoral results, removing all motive to re-union. The best interest of the child demand a re-union—its health, its wealth, its morals.

THE MURDER IN MOYAMENSING.

Wife killed by her Husband—His arrest—Attempt at Suicide.

Thomas H. Shuster is a blacksmith by trade. He is about 23 years of age.—Two years since he married Ann ———, and lived in a house in a court running out of Spafford street, which is between Shippen and Fitzwater and Sixth and Seventh streets. After the first month they did not live happily together, in consequence of the jealousy of the husband. He had been exceedingly uneasy, and even carried his feelings so far, that about two weeks ago he purchased a quantity of arsenic, for the purpose of poisoning the deceased. He gave her some in a cup, and after she drank it, he told her she was poisoned. She immediately rushed out of the house, and obtained an emetic from a druggist in the neighborhood, swallowed it, and saved her life to lose it in a more dreadful manner. As the poison did not do the deed, the husband beat and kicked the wife very badly.—"From this time he was moody and sullen. On Thursday night, as he was walking along in Spafford street near Shippen, he met his wife, without speaking to her, he stopped and looked fixedly in her face—and then deliberately levelling a pistol, shot her through the left breast. She shrieked once—advanced several steps—and then fell upon the pavement. Attracted by the noise of the report, Alderman Hoffner, and Messrs. Ed. M'Gowan, Wonderly and Ashman, with numerous others, were immediately upon the spot; and by some of them the woman was borne into her house, and medical aid sent for, but she expired before its arrival. Alderman Hoffner, on reaching the spot, immediately despatched officers and citizens in pursuit of the murderer. He had run hastily to the corner of Small street, where, as he afterwards said, "a nigger undertook to stop him, but he knocked him." When he was out of the way of the excitement, he walked leisurely up Sixth street, and turned up Washington st., in which, near Seventh, he was arrested by officer Whisner, of Moyamensing. He made no resistance, but begged of him permission "to go to David Paul Brown's, where he started for." Two pistols were taken from his pockets, one loaded with ball, the other empty. He was taken to Alderman Hoffner's office, but the crowd was so excessive, that the Alderman had him taken to an upper room of Mr. Paisley's public house, under the conduct of proper officers, where he remained until, about two hours after, he asked permission to be taken to see the body of his wife, which was granted him. On his way thither, he told those who had him in charge that "he had been drinking a good deal—had spent forty dollars in rum since Saturday." He looked coldly upon the dead body of his wife, and then stooped down and kissed her several times. He was taken from thence to the Moyamensing prison, where he remained, during the night, tranquil enough. Friday morning he attempted to kill himself by swallowing laudanum that he had concealed in two bottles which he had placed in the tops of his boots. The draught was so great that vomiting was the consequence, and this saved his life. He said, however, that he would yet kill himself—that "he would not cost the State any thing." The Coroner was soon sent for, and held an inquest on the body. The deceased was about twenty-five years of age, and was of prepossessing appearance and countenance. Verdict of the jury, "death by a wound from a pistol ball, inflicted by the hand of Thomas H. Shuster, her husband."

The loaded pistol which was found in the possession of Shuster, was purposed by him to kill the man who had seduced the affections of his wife. Of late he had been in the habit of excessive drinking. He was calm after his arrest, freely confessed the act, and declared that it was done because his happiness had been wholly destroyed, by occular proof which he had had of his wife's infidelity. He is a good-looking man, quite gentlemanly in his personal appearance, and, we are told, belongs to a very respectable family.—Saturday Courier.

BROOKLYN MURDER—MOST MYSTERIOUS CASE.—The Express gives us the particulars of a most extraordinary event. It appears that a fine little boy, aged 11 years, only son of Mr. L. A. Phelps, residing at No. 90, Warren street, Brooklyn, and doing business in New York as a forwarding agent, in South street, went from his home in the forenoon, and was seen no more till evening, when he was found in a vacant lot on the corner of Bond and Bergen streets, about half a mile from his home, lying dead on the ground, his throat cut so deep as to leave the mark of the knife on the neck bone, with jugular vein and windpipe severed. The mystery which surrounds this horrid deed of blood seems almost improbable. Mr. Phelps is certain his son had no enemies, nor is he aware that he has any. The deceased it is certain had nothing of value about him, and his pockets were not even rifled, but a small knife he carried about him was found there.

What adds to the mystery is that there were persons but a few yards from the spot during the time the murder was committed, and they heard no noise or cry to excite their alarm. Marks are seen near the spot, as if bloody hands had been wiped there, and large puddles of blood were perceptible near two stones, on which it is probable the boy and his murderer had been sitting. It is more than probable, that he must be stained with the blood of his victim, which may lead to his discovery. Suspicion of course attaches to the strange young man who was last seen in company of the boy.—He is unknown to all the neighbors, and has not yet been discovered. He was dressed in black or dark coat or pantaloons, light vest, black hat and boots; had a broad black ribbon for a watch chain, black stock or handkerchief, with collar turned over the stock. He is of a slim figure, rather full or round faced and fresh or florid countenance, dark hair, and about 5 feet 4 inches in height.

The following is the amount of the evidence given before Coroner's Jury:

The unfortunate boy accompanied his father to New York at about 9 o'clock in the morning, for the purpose of having his hair cut, which being done he returned to the South Ferry, his father having given him a shilling, with which he paid his ferriage and received the change. On his way home he stopped at a grocery store for the purpose of carrying home some articles, as his father had directed him, and got there about 10 o'clock, in company with a young man—a stranger—who is described as about 19 years of age, tall and slender, genteelly dressed, black pantaloons, black hat and black neck ribbon. The stranger accompanied George into his father's house and went with him into the yard for the purpose of seeing some fishing tackle George had there, and then again left the house with George, neither having apparently anything about them. This is the last known of the murdered boy until his body was found.—Saturday Courier.

THE BROOKLYN MURDER.—A young man has been arrested, who, in all probability, is the murderer of the lad Phelps, in Brooklyn, under the terrible circumstances of atrocity which we have already published. The following is from the Courier:—

On Monday morning it appears, a lad answering the description of the one last seen in company with the unfortunate boy, was found on board the steamboat New York which plies between New Haven and this city.—He had got on board at the dock unperceived, and was not noticed until the boat had reached Throg's Neck, when being called upon for his fare, his conduct evidently showed that he was crazy. Among other things, he said he thought he was on board a sloop bound to Boston—that he had just come from Brooklyn, where there was a great talk of a murder which had been committed there, that he was pursued by soldiers, and so on. The Captain of the New York in consequence, on meeting the steamboat coming from New Haven, sent him back by her to the city, and the Captain on his arrival here, gave notice to the Mayor of Brooklyn, Mr. C. P. Smith, of the suspicious passenger he had on board.

Mr. Smith immediately went to the boat and took the lad in a carriage with him to Brooklyn. He admitted to Mr. Smith that he had been in Brooklyn some days ago, that on one day he had gone from the river with a boy, with whom he went into a house, and through it into the yard; that he saw there a fort and a flag, that he left the house again with the boy; that he had also seen there a fishing rod and tackle; that the rod was a good one, but that he did not think much of the tackle. It is here necessary we should observe, that in the yard of Mr. Phelps' house his unfortunate son had a miniature log cabin with a flag flying from it, and that the female who testified to his return home in company with a lad, saw this lad poising the fishing rod in his hand, as if trying its pliability. During the whole of this conversation, or rather during the interrogatories put to him by the Mayor, the lad evinced evident marks of insanity. Finally the Mayor, with Mr. Udall, the Sheriff of King's county, conveyed him to the county jail.

Yesterday afternoon the Mayor, accompanied by two citizens of Brooklyn and two physicians, took him to the spot where the murder was committed, and to Mr. Phelps' house. He showed great reluctance to enter the house, and frequently cried bitterly, and then laughed. The medical men, who critically scrutinized his conduct, thought his pulse at times indicated considerable agitation; but no confession that he had committed the murder escaped him. When reminded of his admissions the day before, he said Mr. Phelps' house might be the house; that he thought he had seen forts and flags the whole way from the river to the house; and in short, appeared perfectly crazy. By some present, notwithstanding, it was thought there was a good deal of method in his madness. He was taken back to the county jail.

The young man is about 18 or 19 years of age; says his name is David Wade; that his native place is Elizabethtown, New Jersey; that he was bound apprentice to a shoemaker living in a small town adjacent to Elizaberhtown, and ran away from him because "he strapped him."—He has a brother, a respectable ship carpenter, of the name of Hamilton Wade, who works at the Navy Yard in Brooklyn, but resides in the city at No. 72, Houston street.

It is probable that he has been lurking about the South Ferry in Brooklyn, and in the vicinity, from time the murder was committed; and any individual who may have observed a person of this description, during the period in question, will probably facilitate the ends of justice, by giving information to the Mayor of Brooklyn.

The female servant of Mr. Phelps and another female who had seen the unfortunate boy return home with a companion, were not able to identify the individual in question. They say he is like the young man who accompanied him, but they cannot swear to his identity. This is not astonishing, as they had no opportunity to observe him closely.

The Mayor of Brooklyn, in pursuance of his investigations, had caused to be arrested two boys of bad character, called "Butcher Bill and "Crow." The Express states that after the committal of Wade, he was placed in the yard with the two already in custody, and at once recognized "Butcher Bill" as an old acquaintance. When left with the other two, the officer heard them all talking together as though disputing, and the words "I didn't kill him," frequently repeated. It will be remembered that one of the surgeons said the wound seemed to have been made with a shoemaker's knife, or some similar sharp instrument. The wretched prisoner appears to be insane, and during the whole of last night in prison, raved about blood, and the Almighty canons against its being shed by man.—Brother Jonathan, 10th instant.

TRIAL OF MADAME LAFFARGE FOR POISONING HER HUSBAND.

Paris, Sept. 8, 1840.

The trial of Madame Laffarge for poisoning her husband is now going on at Tulle. It creates the greatest interest. From what appears there are now some doubts whether the unfortunate woman is guilty. There are some differences of opinion as to the chemical test at the post mortem examination. This is the most favorable point, so far, for her defence.—The circumstances are something as follows: M. Laffarge lived at Glandier; he was a widower, and resided with his mother and sister. He was of fair property, invested in iron works. Though not of extremely refined manners, he possessed an amiable disposition. To carry on his business to more advantage he wished for an increase of capital, and to effect this desired to form a contract of marriage with some lady of fortune. He applied to a matrimonial agent, through whose procuration he was introduced to Mlle. Marie Capelle; they were married in August last. She was possessed of 40,000 frances in money, and an annual income of 4,000 frances. Three days after the marriage she gave to her husband a letter of a most extraordinary nature, part of it is as follows:

"Charles.—I solicit your pardon on my knees! I have shamefully deceived you. I do not love you, and I love another! O, my God, I have suffered so much, let me die! Tell me, you whom I so highly esteem, 'Die, and I will pardon,' and to-morrow I shall have ceased to exist. My head is distracted; will you come to my assistance?—Listen to me for pity's sake—his name is Charles—he is handsome—he is noble—he was brought up near me—we have loved each other since we have been able to love. Two years ago a woman deprived me of his love. I thought I should have died. In spite I determined on marriage. Alas! I saw you. I was ignorant of the mysteries of marriage.—My heart had throbbed with delight on feeling the pressure of his hand. Unfortunate that I am, thought that a kiss on the brow would be all that was due to thee, that you would be good like a father.

"Charles, when I offend so terribly, snatch me from you and him. Tell me this evening that you consent, prepare two horses, and show me the road to Brives. I will take the mail to Bordeaux, and embark for Smyrna.

"I will leave you my whole fortune.—God grant that it may thrive with you as you deserve. I will live on the produce of my hands, in giving lessons.—I entreat you never to let my existence be suspected.

"If you like I will take arsenic. I have some in my possession, and then all will be terminated. You have been so kind that I can give you my life, though I cannot my affection, but never shall I be able to receive your caresses. In the name of God, pardon me. I await your answer as a criminal awaits his sentence. Oh alas! did I not love him more than life, I might have loved you through excess of esteem; but, as things are, your caresses disgust me. Kill me—I deserve death; nevertheless, I trust in you.—Push a paper beneath my door this evening, or I shall be dead in the morning. Do not concern yourself about me.—I will go on foot to Brives, if necessary, but remain here I cannot. Even mother's tenderness and sister's kindness are more than I can bear. I am a horror to my very self. Oh, be generous, and save me from self-destruction. In whom can I confide if not in you? Shall I apply to him? Oh, never. I will not be yours, neither will I be his! I am dead to all affection. Be a man—you do not love me yet—pardon me. Horses would discover our traces;—procure two old peasant dresses. Pardon me. May God reward you for the suffering I cause you!

"I will take away nothing but a few jewels, as tokens of remembrance of my friends. Whatever article you may please to send me of my property to Smyrna I shall consider as coming from you.—The rest is yours.

"Do not accuse me of falsehood—ever since Monday, ever since the hour when I learned that I should be unto you as a sister—ever since my aunt informed me what it was to belong to a man, I swore to die. I took poison, but the dose was trifling, and I brought it up at Orleans.

"Yesterday I held a loaded pistol to my temple whilst travelling, but I was afraid. To-day, and I shall not flinch.

"Save me—be the patron angel of the orphan, or kill her, or tell her to kill herself. Write to me, for without your word of honor, and I believe in you—without a letter from you I will not open my door. MARIE."

The distraction of the husband may be imagined; he consulted a friend who recommended his endeavor to obtain his wife's affection by assiduous attentions. It apparently succeeded, when again she wrote a note to the effect that she must leave him or else destroy herself.

This state of feeling, however, suddenly left her, and in turn she became extreme in her attention and kindness. She made her will, leaving M. Laffarge the whole of her property, without reserve. So soon as her husband became acquainted with this, he likewise made a will bequeathing to her all his effects. For three months they lived in the most affectionate manner. In December Mons. Laffarge had occasion to go to Paris on business.

They left each other with regret, and letters passed daily between them of the tenderest nature. A package was sent to M. Laffarge from his wife, with her picture and a cake. This last she begged him to eat at a particular hour, saying she had another which she would likewise eat at the same time. The husband ate the cake, or part of it, and was suddenly seized with severe illness, which continued for two days dangerously so. Previous to this it is known that Madame Laffarge had sent for some arsenic, ostensibly to kill rats. Her husband returned home on the 5th of January, extremely ill. She uniformly prepared his drinks, and on several occasions was observed to put a white powder in them.—She said this was Gum Arabic, and intended to make it more nourishing. On the 10th she went for more arsenic. A composition was prepared to destroy the rats. On examination this is found not to contain any arsenic. On the 14th of the month M. Laffarge died in the most dreadful agony—previous to his death repelling the attention of his wife, whom he stated had acted towards him so as to create his suspicions.

On examining part of these drinks prepared by Madame Laffarge, they were declared to contain arsenic. The prisoner, it will be recollected, was found guilty some two months ago, of purloining her friend's jewels. She is represented to be of the first family, and to possess remarkable intelligence. All describe her as extremely good looking, although now much reduced by her prolonged imprisonments. Till the trial every one believed her guilty, but there are a few now who have doubts.

It appears hard to credit, that one so young and beautiful, gifted with so many natural graces, and so uniformly affectionate in all appearance, could thus carry on such a system of duplicity. Our sympathies would fain impel us to believe her guiltless of the crime.—Paris correspondent of the New World.

We learn from the Savannah Georgian, that an affair of honor took place at Amelia Island, on the seventh instant, between Lieut. May, of the Army, and Lieut. Gregory, of Jacksonville, late of the Army. An exchange of shots passed, when the difficulty was settled.—They fought with pistols, and Lieut. G. was slightly wounded in the leg.

THE STEAMBOAT SWIFTSURE I... EIGHT PERSONS SCALDED.—The ... Argus of a recent date says:

For the first time in many y... have to record a steamboat expl... the waters of the Hudson river. ... day, the boiler of the steamboat S... Capt. Murray, of the tow boat ... ploded, as the boat was on her d... passage, nearly opposite Castleto... miles below this city.) Eight n... we understand, belonging to the b... including the engineer and his s... badly scalded; four of them sup... be now beyond recovery.

Our informant saw the engineer ... situation was such as to render h... certain in a few hours; but who ... his senses, and his power of speec... stated that some time before the ... sion took place, he observed that ... ter in the boiler was getting raf... and directed the firemen to keep d... fire and supply all the water the ... while he attended to some defec... other part of the machinery. ... posed in his absence, the men mu... increased the fire, as the explosi... place almost immediately after his ... to the fire-room. The boiler, we ... was a new one.

The Swiftsure was towed to t... by the Troy, yesterday afternoon ... March, of this city, was in attenda... the sufferers, and every thing tha... be was done to alleviate their con...

The following are the names an... dences of the persons scalded:

Thos. Haven, engineer; Daniel ... man, fireman; Geo. White, firema... Shrewsbury, New Jersey; and ... Graves, fireman, of New York, ... scalded and not expected to recove...

H. Yates, fireman, dangerously s...
John Corney, deck hand, badly ...
Nicholas Davis, of Albany, slig...
Thos. Havenss, jr., of Shrewsbu...

ly, but not dangerously scalded.

Six o'clock this morning.—But o... survives the unfortunate calamity, ... him all hopes of existence for h... hour are abandoned. Mr. Haven ... about 9 o'clock last night; Grav... about 4 o'clock this morning; John... ney died in the course of the nigh... White about 5 o'clock this mo... Henry Yates will no doubt be dead ... our paper goes to press.

MORE OF THE STEAMBOAT EXPLOS... Capt. H. L. Murray, who comman... Swiftsure, communicates the foll... account of the disaster:

"Near Van Wie's Point, the gas ... one of the hand-hold plates burst ... stop which occupied the engineer s... minutes. During this time the wat... often tried by the engineer and fi... in my presence, and invariably sho... full cock. Soon after the engineer ... ped the leak, I went into the fire-roo... inquired about the water. It was ... tried, and as before, produced a fu... cock. I then said to the fireman, yo... soon have a full head on, as Mr. H... has stopped the leak. I then wen... ward to look out for a sloop that wa... ly to crowd us into a narrow channe... as soon as she altered her course I ... to the upper deck and stood over the ... when it burst. I think that not ... than eight or ten minutes elapsed ... the leak was stopped before the exp... took place. No steam escaped fro... safety valve, and the engine was m... some fourteen or fifteen evolutions, ... cating a low head of steam."

REVOLT AMONG THE SLAVES.—Th... ward, Maryland, Free Press of Sat... says:

A most desperate affray took plac... Mr. Green's plantation, in Anne Ar... county, on Friday, but which fortun... terminated without any serious inju... the parties concerned. Three or fo... the negroes employed by Mr. G. re... to obey the orders of the overseer, ... threatened to murder his family, an... attempted to chastise them; but they ... ted his attempts. He found it necessa... summon a 'posse comitatus,' and an o... was immediately sent for, who arrive... good season, but not before the neg... had armed themselves with scythes ... clubs, ready to resist all attempts to a... them. The officer together with the o... seer attacked them, but after a despe... effort, they were compelled to give u... conflict.

The negro who was armed wi... scythe made a pass at the head of the ... cer, who barely escaped having his ... severed from his body, the weapon ... sing immediately over it; the office... this issue discharged a pistol at the ... and lodged the contents immediately ... der the left shoulder, but with no ser... effect. The negro, who was a strong ... muscular man, made another pass at ... overseer and struck him on the arm, ... weapon, however, glancing downwa... and only severing the flesh from the b... The officer & the overseer then four... necessary to retreat & recruit their fo... they were, however, pursued by the ... groes, and only made their escape by ... fleetness of their horses. The negr... with one exception, have since been ... rested and committed to jail.

There will be six eclipses next yea... four of the sun, invisible—and two of ... moon, both total and visible in this co... try. One takes place on the 5th of F... ruary; the other on the 2d of Augus...

A man died recently in the prison ... Ghent, who had been confined there ... years, having been condemned in 1... for highway robbery.

HE RECORDER.

ZANESVILLE:

ONESDAY, ... OCTOBER 21, 1840.

r. D. W. RHODES, of this town, de- ed this life on last Sabbath;—disease, estion of the brain.

union is likely to be effected be- n the Free-will and Free-communion ists of the State of New York.

ennsylvania and New Jersey are not entirely reported. Both parties, we ve, claim the former; but the Whigs, said, have succeeded in the latter.

secession of some sixty members the Methodist Episcopal Church, has ntly taken place in Utica, New York, ney say, on account of the principles measures of that church.

OHIO ELECTIONS.—The last accounts have seen exhibit the votes of all the nties of this State but six. The Whig ority for Governor in the counties re- ted, is 19,282. The Whigs are said ave a decided majority in the Legisla- , and a gain of five members to Con- ss.

The editor of the Lowell Souvenir has mmenced publishing a black list, in ch he places the names of his delin- nt subscribers, one of whom he sus- ds at the head of the list by the waist, a rope and tackle, thus making an mple of him to the rest, who looks y much distressed indeed. He then rches the whole with a severe poetic sion.

On Wednesday the 14th of this inst., of the boilers belonging to the steam of JOHN YONTZ & Co., of Browns- e, Licking county, Ohio, burst and flew n its bed, and landed about fifty yards n the mill. It Providentially happen- t the time of dinner when there were few about the mill, or there must have n more or less destruction of life.— B. DUM, who was preparing a card- machine, was badly injured by the k of the furnace falling upon, bruis- and covering him up; but there is some hopes that he will recover. A red man and a boy were knocked n, but not much injured. The boiler hed through the hog pen, and killed mangled about nineteen porkers.

We call the attention of our brethren he communication of Br. Snethen, in ition to the Literary Institution, dated tember 1st, which we re-publish in number, with a view to this task, it ring escaped our recollection in the ry of business after our return from conference. It contains a moral wor- of its author. The pressure of the es, which has effected thousands, has effected this enterprize. Some of brethren have become seriously in- ved in the matter, and they ought not e permitted to suffer. If every one id do a little, which might be done hout injury to him, it would relieve se that must otherwise be essentially cted. We will give the communica- alluded to, and the Plan proposed the Ohio Conference for the relief of concern, several insertions.

We have received a letter from Br. . Wheeler, of Jefferson county, Ohio, ed the 21st ultimo, in which he states, t after Br. Ross had closed his sermon day before, in Smithfield, that he e and requested a certificate of with- awal from the church; and the ground this withdrawal, if we understand n, is because the conference did not ss a resolution condemning certain trines contained in Br. Shinn's late k, which doctrines, he considers, are culated to do the church more injury an any event that has happened her. Br. Wheeler will see, by a resolution the conference, that it did neither con- mn nor commend the book. It left the k where it found it, without passing y opinion in relation thereto. For the nt of time to examine its doctrine, the nference was not prepared to give an inion. Many of its members had not en read the book.

We think our esteemed brother was ematurе in the step he has taken. If e book contains erroneous sentiments, e public will, assuredly, be able to de- t them, and the book will, no doubt, be timately appreciated according to its erits.

OHIO CONFERENCE.

The following are the stations of the eachers, at the late conference of the ethodist Episcopal Church held in this place, which we forgot to publish last week:

Cincinnati District.—W. H. Raper, P. E.

Cincinnati: Eastern Charge—E. W. Schon, Isaac Ebbert, M. P. Gaddis, Supt.
Western Charge—Wm. Herr, J. L. Grover,
Asbury Charge—John W. White,
Fulton Charge—Ed. D. Roe,
Western Book Concern—J. F. Wright and L. Swormstedt, Agents; C. Elliott, L. L. Hamline, Editors; William Nast, Editor Christian Apologist, Augusta College—Burr H. M'Cown, Professor of Languages,
Milford—E. B. Chase, And. Carroll,
Batavia—W. Parrish, M. G. Perkiser,
New Richmond—G. R. Jones, W. H. Fyffe,
White Oak—Ed. Estill, Wesley Rowe,
Georgetown—John Stewart, Jon. F. Conrey,

Lebanon District.—G. W. Walker, P. E.

Madison—C. R. Lowell, J. G. Dimmott,
Lebanon—John W. Weekly,
Hamilton and Rossville—John Miley, A. W. Elliott, Supt.
West Chester—Levi White, Joseph Casner,
New Haven—Levi P. Miller, Jos. A. Waterman, B. Lawrence, Sup.
Oxford—Granville Moody,
Germantown—G. W. Maley, W. R. Davis,
Franklin—Asa B. Stroud, D. Kemper,
Monroe—C. W. Swain, Stephen H. Molland,

Dayton District.—James P. Finley, P. E.

Dayton—David Whitcomb,
Union—Joseph Newson, John C. Brooke,
Xenia—Joseph Hill,
Milton—Daniel D. Davidson,
Troy—S. F. Conrey, Eb. B. Owen,
Piqua—Solomon Howard,
Fletcher—James Smith, Asbury Lowry,
Eaton—Joseph M'Dowell, W. O. Conner, Joseph A. Bruner,

Urbana District.—Zac. Connell, P. E.

Springfield Station—William Young,
South Charleston—S. Clarke, Geo. Gonzales,
Urbana Station—Wm. B. Christie,
Mechanicsburgh—Josh. Boucher, R. Cheney,
Jamestown—Eb. T. Webster,
London—John W. Steele, Noah Hough,
Marysville—J. C. Havens, Jer. B. Ellsworth,
Franklinton—William Sutton, J. Gilruth,
Wilmington—J. M. Howland, James Quinn,
East Liberty—Silas H. Chase, I. B. Cartlich,

Chillicothe District.—M. Marlay, P. E.

Chillicothe—A. Brown,
Portsmouth—W. H. Lawder,
Piketon—J. Laws, O. P. Williams,
Bainbridge—H. Wharton, Benj. L. Jefferson,
Frankfort—David Reed,
Deer Creek—Elijah H. Field, Wm. M. D. Ryan,
Washington—J. A. Reoder, B. A. Cassat,
Hillsborough—Wm. J. Ellsworth, R. S. Foster,
West Union—J. W. Clarke, F. A. Timmons,
Jacksonville—Joseph W. Smith, Thos. Hurd,

Columbus District.—John Ferree, P. E.

Columbus Station—Joseph M. Trimble,
Worthington—J. C. Bontecou, Thos. Perkins,
Lancaster Station—Henry Baker,
Royalton—Thos. Larkin, Alex. Morrow,
Circleville—A. M. Lorrain, C. C. Lybrand,
Lithopolis—Jacob Young, T. A. G. Phillips,
Adelphi—James Parcels, Richard Doughty,
McArthurstown—Daniel Poe,
Jackson—James T. Donahoo,

Zanesville District.—R. O. Spencer, P. E.

Zanesville Station—U. Heath, J. W. Stone,
Irville—Moses A. Milligan, Abner Goff,
Newark Station—Cyrus Brooks,
Granville—Wm. T. Hand, James Hooper,
Hebron—Benj. F. Myers, David Lewis,
Rushville—M. P. Kellogg, A. S. Murphy,
Somerset—W. P. Strickland, Sheldon Parker,
Putnam—James Gurley, James T. Holliday, Samuel Harvey, Supt.
Malta—Joseph S. Brown, George G. West.

Marietta District.—Sam. Hamilton, P. E.

Marietta Station—William Simmons,
Belpre—James B. Austin, Samuel Maddux,
Cooleville—J. W. Young, J. W. Deevilbiss,
Chester—Sam. Bateman, Wm. T. Metcalf,
Gallipolis—Wm. R. Anderson, Jacob Delay,
Athens—Joseph Carper, John Dillon, jr.
Burlington—Mighill Dustin, Joseph Morris,
French Grant—A. M. Alexander, J. Longman,
Logan—Benjamin Ellis, James W. Southard,

Kenhawa District.—I. C. Hunter, P. E.

Guyandotte—A. Hance, J. H. M'Culchen,
Logan C. H.—Joseph Barringer, R. A. Arters,
Charleston—Jas. Armstrong, M. P. Wolf,
Point Pleasant—J. Fitch, Lorenzo D. Huston, Ripley—David Smith, Joseph Brooks,
Parkersburg—Philip Nation,
Little Kenhawa—O. C. Shelton, H. S. Thrall,
Sutton—Elijah V. Bing, Samuel Black,
Summersville—John Barton, Addison Hite.

ITEMS.

A fashionable in Boston with more money then wit, paid twenty-one dollars premium for choice of boxes at the Tremont Theatre a few days since.

Several houses were lately destroyed by fire in the village of Lockport, New York.

Several cases of canine madness have recently occurred at Charleston.

A new paper has been started in New York, called the Philanthropic Law Reform Journal. One of its chief objects is to urge the adoptiom of a Bankrupt Law. It is published by William H. Hudson.

Young Pelby, who committed the ruffianly assault upon Mr. English, has been arrested. He admits his guilt.

According to the Assessor's statements, the value of property in the city of New York has decreased within the last year thus: Decrease in the value of real estate for 1840, $9,607,500; decrease in the value of personal estate, $4,336,286.—Total decrease, $13,943,786.

A MARTYR.—Jno. Thorogood, the shoemaker, imprisoned two years since for church rates, to the amount of 4s. 6d., and whose case was recently before Parliament, has been finally released by his friends, who paid the costs, amounting to £80! John had sturdily resolved to be a "martyr" to the last.—English paper.

The amount of tolls received on the New York State Canals during the fourth week in September is $79,859 90, and in the month of September, $271,550 70.

The Baltimore American states that a new item of trade has reached that market from Chester County, Pa., by way of the Tide Water Canal. It is kiln dried Oat-meal, manufactured with great care for family use; and retails at $7 per barrel.

The Acadia made the run from Liverpool to Boston and back to Liverpool, in twenty-five days.

The fall trade is said to be tolerably active in New York at the present time—but the purchases are limited, compared with former seasons.

Dr. Brandreth has commenced suits against several druggists in New York and Albany, selling Brandreth's Pills, but not the genuine one.

SICKNESS IN ALABAMA.—The interior of Alabama was still afflicted with sickness at the last accounts. The Wetumpka Argus of the 23d ultimo, states: that sickness in that section of the country, and indeed in every other that can be heard from, is on the increase, and the cases also attended with more obstinacy. This year will long be remembered as a fatal one, even in the high, dry, and hitherto healthy pine woods of the country.

MINUTE INSTRUCTION.—All that is needed is to graft the tree properly, not to inoculate every bough, and count every leaf, and color the blossoms—this, nature will do for herself.

THE ELECTIONS.—The Whigs have carried the primary elections in Delaware, by an aggregate majority of six hundred and seventy-five votes.

The Whigs have carried the first election in Maryland, by an average majority of about three thousand five hundred votes.

As far as heard from in Georgia, the Whigs have made a gain in thirty-three counties of two thousand five hundred votes. In 1836, Georgia went for White by abount 4000 majority.—Bicknell.

THE BANK OF THE UNITED STATES AND A RESUMPTION.—The New York Express says: "If three millions are provided in Philadelphia, it is almost certain that if any further amount is required, it can be had at the eastward and in this city to almost any extent. There are now no Post Notes of the bank in circulation, but if they could be had, capitalists would be glad to get hold of them at 6 or 7 per cent; under these circumstances, there can be but little doubt that the Bank will resume specie payments on or before the day required by law."

Dr. Wm. Denny has been appointed Cashier of the United States Branch Bank at Pittsburgh.

The French are now building fourteen 100 gun ships, nine of 90 guns, and 20 frigates.

The Germantown Telegraph states that an arithmetician in that place has figured up and found that not less than 5,547,000 buckwheat cakes were destroyed by the late frost. Bad news for lovers of slap-jacks.

The New York Courier and Enquirer has changed hands. It is now owned by James G. Morrison.

"The new building at the corner of Wood and Eleventh streets," says the Philadelphia Saturday Courier, "designed for the congregation under the pastoral charge of the Rev. Thomas H. Stockton, of the Independent Methodist persuasion, is nearly ready to receive the roof."

Capt. James Locke, of Boston, threw himself from the third story window of the Suffolk Hotel, and his head striking against the curb stone, he expired immediately.

A laboring man was buried alive at Flatbush (L. I.) on Wednesday, by the caving in of a well which he was digging. A whole day's digging had not enabled the workmen to extricate him.

A rogue sentenced to hard labor in the Boston Penitentiary for stealing, on Wednesday last, to disable himself from work, attempted to cut off his hand with a stone hammer. He made successive blows, but succeeded only in mashing the hand, which was afterwards splintered at the hospital. Seven or eight years ago a prisoner was more successful, and cut his hand clean off with an axe, but as soon as the stump was healed they set him to work turning a grindstone, and kept him at it till his time expired.

A Merchants Clerks' Society is about to be formed in London, for the relief of indigent clerks, whether in poverty or sickness; it is a matter of surprise to us that this large and important class of men, who do all the actual work in business, has not in all places elicited a greater share of public attention.

Mr. F. W. Brown, while returning home from Boston, on Thursday evening, was knocked down in the street by two men, and robbed of his pocket-book, containing nearly $500. The thing was so sudden that he scarcely saw his assailants.

RECOGNITION OF TEXAS.—The New York Courier says:—We learn from an authentic source, that advices were received by the Great Western to the effect that the Governments of Holland and Belgium had authorized their ministers in London to treat with General Hamilton, for the conclusion of a treaty of recognition, amity and commerce with the new Republic of Texas; and that Gen. Hamilton, the diplomatic plenipotentiary of Texas, was about to repair to London for that purpose.

THE AMISTAD.—The famous schooner, and her cargo, are to be sold at New London on the 15th inst., by order of the U. S. Circuit Court, for the district of Connecticut. The cargo consists of dry goods, hardware, crockery, vermicelli, &c., selected for a Spanish market. Also, a mill for grinding sugar cane. This last ought to be purchased for the Colony of Liberia. The negroes of the Amistad are still at Westville, New Haven, in charge of Mr. Wilcox, U. S. Marshal, and are very comfortable situated. Their case is now in the hands of the Supreme Court of the United States, who meet at Washington in January next. If this Court confirms the decision of the Court below, the Africans will be immediately set at liberty.—Journal of Commerce.

DESTRUCTIVE FIRE AT QUEBEC.—The New York Sun of a recent date says:

A destructive fire broke out at Quebec on the morning of the 1st instant, in the premises of Messrs. J. H. Joseph & Co. wholesale tabocco merchants, and Mr. D. Fraser, West India, fish and oil merchant, on the south side of the Napoleon wharf. The wind was blowing stifly from the north-east, which rendered unavailing any attempt to stop its progress towards the adjoining property. The brig Margaret and Sarah, lying alongside the Napoleon wharf, caught fire, and was with much difficulty saved, with the loss of her masts, rigging, &c.

The number of buildings destroyed is as follows: three stores; three hotels; three taverns; five dwelling houses—total, fourteen.

The fire originated from a spark that flew from the chimney of the Lady Aylmer steamer, then lying at the north side of the Napoleon wharf. The total loss is estimated at THIRTY THOUSAND POUNDS.

THE CASE OF AN ALTERED CHECK.—We learn from the New York American that the Supreme Court of that State, Judge Oakley presiding, an action was brought by F. W. Schmidt and others vs. the Bank of New York, to recover the amount of an altered check paid by the Bank. The circumstances of the case were these.—The plaintiffs on discharging one of their young men, gave him a check on the Bank for $45, balance due for his services. The body of the check was written by the clerk, and altered by him, after being signed, by adding the word "hundred," and placing two 00 after the figures, making the check for $4,500 instead of $45. The check was paid, but the fraud being afterwards discovered, $3,910 of the money was obtained from the young man. For the balance with interest, about $700, the present suit was brought, on this ground that the Bank had acted carelessly in paying the check. The Bank contended that the plaintiffs had been careless in not drawing a stroke with the pen after the words and figures, and that the check so drawn was substantially a blank check, which could be filled up to any amount, and which, provided the handwriting was all the same, and it was duly signed, the Bank would pay as matter of course.—The jury, after some hours' deliberation, could not agree, and were discharged.

THE BANK OF THE UNITED STATES.—The following is from the New York Herald, a paper decidedly hostile to the Bank of the United States. We give it for what it is worth, and in order to place our readers in possession of every thing that appears to have an important bearing upon the monetary world:

"Events which have transpired since the arrival of the last steamer from Europe, are of such a nature as to increase the probability of the dissolution of the institution. It is well known that since Mr. Jaudon's establishment in Europe, as agent of the Bank, he has been its main stay. On Mr. Jaudon's first arrival in London, he was the object of dislike. The petty jealousies of those who were formally agents of the bank, and the powerful monied interests, who imagined his establishment there would conflict with their interests, were arrayed in opposition to him. In a very short time, however, his great urbanity of manner, strict business habits, and the gradual developement of immense resources of mind, gained for him the respect and admiration of the mercantile men of Europe. His high qualities saved the bank from destruction last year, and sustained it since. On his late return to Philadelphia, he had occasion to express his disapprobation of the management of the bank for the last year, in which opinion he has been seconded by Mr. Biddle, Mr. Cowperthwaite, and other officers, who had left the concern, and a serious breach has arisen. The new directors and many stockholders are no longer disposed to take assertion for facts, and are determined to investigate. One of the stockholders recently, for his own satisfaction, spent three days in examining the affairs of the bank, and found every thing in such utter confusion, that no correct decision could be arrived at. He, however, satisfied himself that, with the best management, and the most judicious application to the assest, the stock might be worth 80 cents—no more."

Mr. Jaudon will probably go into a mercantile house in London—but he will still act as agent for the bank, although we are informed that the bank's indebtedness of fourteen millions in Europe is secured there by State Stocks worth fourteen millions at present prices, so that no further difficulty need be apprehended on the other side of the water. No dividend will, in all probability, be declared for the next 18 months.—Bicknell.

Business Department.

RECEIVED PAY FOR RECORDER.

From Jer. Springer for Jos. Parker,	$2	00
" R. Beckham,	2	00
" W. L. Baldwin for C. G. Jones, 1&2vol.	4	00
" " for Mrs. C. Mullvean,	2	00
" " for David Mullvean,	2	00
" Dr. Knight for 1st and 2d volume,	4	00
" A. Smith for N. Warder,	2	00
" " for W. H. Shields,	2	00
" S. Rodman,	1	00
" A. Fesler,	2	00
" O. White for S. Galbreath,	1	00

LETTERS RECEIVED.

J. Gorsuch,
D. Crall,
J. Brown, 2 subscribers.
J. Richey, 1 "
A. Jones, 2 "
J. Sively,
Potts & Grayham, 1 sub.
W. Schustian,
A. M. Scott,
A. H. Bassett,
A. T. Morrison,
G. Lanham, 1 sub'r.
W. L. Baldwin, 1 sub.
D. Y. Ostrom,
J. Allen,
J. DeGarmo, 1 sub'r.
A. Smith,
R. Rose, 1 sub'r.
M. B. Lucas, and others.

Br. Bassett, your letter dated, "Mount Tabor, October 1st," did not reach us until the 17th.

As we reside out of town, any person who may have business with this office, can have it attended to, by calling on OLCUTT WHITE, No. 104, Main street.

A. M. Scott, your letter post marked, Evansville, Ark., 25th ultimo, did not reach us until the 17th instant, and the letter you refer to, as having been previously sent, has not yet reached us.

The Post Master informs us that Geo. Beyte, of Greenfield, Indiana, does not take his paper from the office. We have sent him the paper to the 60th number. He is due $3;—wish some of our agents would see to it for us.

In carrying out the moneys forwarded by Br. Bassett, from the Ohio Conference, into the book, (which we detained for want of time,) we found the money from Br. Williams for Br. Dobson, of Indiana, to which we alluded in a former number. All right.

Br. Ragan: We take this opportunity of apprising you that Br. Browning has not, and we believe (from correct information) does not design coming to Deersville circuit. We, therefore, request you to send a single man to us, by the first Sabbath in November, if you can; as that will be the time of the first quarterly meeting held at Deersville. Br. Thomas W. Stephens is requested, if the Youngstown circuit is willing. Please supply us as soon as possible, and confer a favor on Deersville circuit.

M. B. LUKENS, Del.
JAMES O. BARNES,
ISRAEL LEWIS,
LEVI HAYS,
JAMES LEWIS,
THOMAS E. BILLING.

October 10, 1840.

MT. TABOR, MONROE, INDIANA, October 1, 1840.

Mr. Editor: In view of my peculiar situation, the Ohio Conference granted me indulgence to finish my engagements in Indiana, before entering upon the immediate duties of my present calling.—Having charge of a circuit in this State up to the time of the division of the District, and the Ohio Conference holding their session sooner than the Indiana division, my conference year was not at that time closed, and our fourth quarterly meeting was appointed to be held early in September, the Sabbath immediately following the adjournment of the Ohio Conference. Furthermore, I should need the allowance of a little time for my removal to the State of Ohio, and the conference enjoined upon me, in view of a special important object, to attend the session of the Indiana Conference, now about to take place.

I wish to observe that our quarterly meeting at Utica, was an interesting, comfortable season. Contrary to previous fears, we were favored with sufficient help on the occasion, for which we were thankful. A junior brother was licensed to preach, and recommended for the itineracy. If he look not back, we doubt not, he will become useful in the vineyard. Almost immediately after quarterly meeting, I experienced an attack of intermittent fever, which for a time, threatened me with a serious prostration. But, by the divine blessing, with the vigorous use of means, I am again upon my feet, and on my way. O! blessed be God for His mercies.

I have taken leave of Charlestown circuit. My moveables are stored at the river for shipment to Cincinnati. And I, last evening, arrived at this place to attend the Conference. Allowing about a week for the session of that body, I expect then to make my journey immediately to Ohio, which will require another week. This will bring me to the middle of October, when I trust, with the leave of divine Providence, to commence my tour in the Ohio District. It is painful to me, thus to be removed for a season, from my brethren and fellow-laborers, with whom I am so intimately connected. But with this, my explanation, I trust I shall escape the imputation of official delinquency. I was anxious to announce some appointments soon as possible after conference. But the state of my health heretofore, would not have justified it—therefore, my brethren will excuse the short notice given of the appointments named below. I have thought best to commence my route as follows:

Twin creek circuit,	3d	Sabbath in	Oct'r.
Cincinnati station,	4th	"	"
Cincinnati circuit,	1st	"	in Nov.
Eeagle creek "	2d	"	"
Highland "	3d	"	"
Washington "	4th	"	"
Rehoboth "	5th	"	"

Respectfully, yours,
A. H. BASSETT.

Wholesale Prices Current.

CORRECTED WEEKLY FOR THE WESTERN RECORDER.
BY SPERRY & ABBOT,
(Successors to Geo. Reere & Son,)
Wholesale and Retail Grocers, No. 96, Main St Zanesville, Ohio.

ARTICLES.		FROM.	TO.
Almonds, hard shell, -	pound.	8	9
" soft shell, -	"	16	18½
Allum, - - - -	"		9
Alspice, - - - -	"		12½
Apples, green picked, -	barrel.	1.12½	1.50
Bacon, Hams, - - -	pound.		12½
" Shoulders, - -	"		8
" Sides, - - -	"	½	11
Beans, white, - - -	bush'l.	62½
Butter, keg, - -	pound.	7	8
Beeswax, - - - -	"	23	25
Brazil Nuts, - - -	"	10	11
Corn, in ear, - - -	bush'l.	20	25
Candles, Sperm, - -	pound	48	49
" Mould, - -	"	18	23
" Dipped, - -	"		10
Coffee, Rio, - - -	"	14	14½
" Java, - - -	"	17	18
" Havana, - -	"	14	14½
" Laguira, - -	"	15	16½
Cheese, Western Reserve,	"	8	9
" Country, - -	"		8
Copperas, - - -	"	4½	5½
Cinnamon, - - - -	"		28
Cloves, - - - -	"		45
Feathers, - - -	"		40
Flaxseed, - - - -	bush'l.		62½
Flour, - - - -	barrel.		3.00
Filberts, - - - -	pound.	8	9
Fish—Mackerel, No. 1, -	barrel.		——
" No. 2,	"	18.50
" No. 3, -	"	14.50
Dry Cod, - -	pound.	6	6½
Herring, - -	box.	1.00	1.25
Ground Ginger, - -	"	13	15
Glass, 7 by 9, - -	box.		3.75
" 8 by 10, - -	"		3.75
" 10 by 12, - -	"		4.75
Hay, - - - -	ton.	7	8
Indigo, - - - -	pound.	162½	1.75
Leather, Spanish Sole, -	"	24	26
" Country " -	"	—	—
Lead, bar, - - -	"	7	7½
Nutmegs, - - -	"		162½
Madder, - - - -	"	15½	18
Molasses, New Orleans, -	gallon.		45
" West India, -	"
Oil Flaxseed, - - -	"		87½
" W. Sperm, -	"	——	162½
" Refined whale, - -	"	00	1.25
Oats, - - - -	bush'l.	18	20
Pepper, - - - -	pound.		12½
Potatoes, - - -	bush'l.	20	22
Plaster Paris, - -	ton.	23.00	2500
Rice, North Carolina, -	pound.	—	6½
Raisins, Bloom, -	box.	2.75	3 00
" Smyrna, -	"	—	3.50
" Muscatil. -	"	2.50	3.00
Soap, Rosin, - - -	pound.	—	7
" Castile, - -	"	19	20
Shot, Nos. 2, 3 and 4, -	bag.	2.25	237½
Salt, - - - -	bush'l.	31	35
Sugar, New Orleans, -	pound.	—	8½
" Muscavado, -	"	8½	10
" White Havana, -	"		15
" Brown " -	"		13½
Tea, Young Hyson, -	"	75	85
" Gunpowder, -	"	80	90
" Imperial, - -	"	—	70
" Black, - - -	"	—	—
Tobacco, Kentucky Twist,	"	12	12½
" Cavendish, -	"	31	44
Tallow, Rendered, -	"	8
Vinegar, - - - -	barrel.	4.50	6.00
Wheat, - - - -	bush'l.		50

PRICES OF IRON AND NAILS.
BY D. APPLEGATE & CO.
WHOLESALE PRICES.

Bar Iron, assorted sizes,	pound.		6
Round and square, -	"	6¾	10
Nails, 10d, 12d, 16d, 20d,	"		5¾
" 8d and 9d, - -	"		6
" 6d, - - -	"		7½
" 5d, - - -	"		7
" 4d, - - -	"		7¾
" 3d, - - -	"		8¼
Retail Nails, by the keg, - -	1 cent advance.
" Iron, - - - - - -	1 "	"

PRICE OF CORDAGE.
BY G. L. SHINNICK.

Manilla Bedcords, - -	90 feet.	3	25
" " - -	60 "	2	00
Hemp " - -	90 "	3	00
" " - -	60 "	2	00
Plough Lines - - -	30 "	1	00

Cattle for Sale.

J. P. SPRINGER, four miles west of Zanesville, Ohio, on the Lancaster road, has for sale sixty steers, fours and fives, in prime order.

October 21, 1840. 61.

DEFERRED ARTICLES.

The Belgian giant returns to Europe at the next trip of the British Queen.

The Baltimore American estimates the whole population of that city at from 105,000 to 110,000.

The Planters' Hotel at New Orleans was lately sold at auction for $79,950—half cash in hand.

The New York Express says there is evidently more confidence in the stock market, since the arrival of the news from England.

Jenks, of the Nantucket Inquirer, in speaking of a cotemporary, calls him a "drowsy driveller, who blots paper to the amount of a column per week."

Col. Warren C. Whittaker, of Clinton, Louisiana, was shot dead in his own yard on the 7th ult. Some of his negroes have been arrested on suspicion.

The Queen of England has appointed the Rt. Hon. Charles Baron Sydenham to be Governor of the Province of Canada.

We learn from Lynchburgh Virginian that three persons were arrested in that town last week, for passing counterfeit $5 notes of the Bank of Kentucky.

Macklin's Advice to his Son.—I have often told you that every man must be the maker or marrer of his own fortune. I repeat the doctrine. He who depends upon incessant industry and integrity, depends upon patrons of the noblest, the most exalted kind. They are creators of fortune and fame, the founders, and never can disappoint or desert you. They control all human dealings, and turn even vicissitudes of fortune's tendency to a contrary nature. You have genius, you have learning, you have industry at times, but want perseverance—without it you can do nothing. I bid you bear this motto in your mind constantly—Perseverance.

Every Word True.—It is a great and prevalent eorror, that children may be left to run wild in every sort of street temptation for several years, and that it will then be time enough to break them in. This horrid mistake makes half our spendithrifts, gamblers, thieves and drunkards. No man would deal so with his garden or lot; no man would raise a colt or puppy on such a principle. Take notice, parents, unless you till the new soil and throw in the good seed, the devil will have a crop of poison weeds before you know what is taking place. Look at your dear child, and think whether you will leave his safety or ruin at hazard.

To Cure Botts in Horses.—Every body who has a favorite horse should be acquainted with the remedies that may be useful, if the horse should be attacked. The following remedy for the grub, comes from a good source: "To make the bott or grub let go his hold, give the horse a quart of molasses or dissolved sugar, with a quart of milk—in thirty minutes you will find the horse at ease; then pulverise two ounces of alum—dissolve in a quart of warm water, and drench your horse—after two hours or less, give the horse one pound of salts, and you will effect a cure. I have never failed."

Patrick Henry.—A friend who visited this celebrated man not long before his death, found him engaged in reading his Bible: "Here," said he, holding it up. "is a book worth more than all the other books that ever were printed; yet it is my misfortune never to have found time to read it with the proper attention and feeling till lately. I trust in the mercy of God that it is not yet too late." Thus a friend of Mr. Henry's writes respecting him. Hr. Henry in a letter to his daughter says: "Amongst other strange things said of me, I hear it said by the deists, that I am one of their number; and indeed, that some good people think that I am no Christian. This thought gives me much more pain than the appellation of Tory, because I think religion of infinitely higher importance than politics; and I find much cause to reproach myself that I have lived so long, and have given no decided and public proofs of my being a Christian.

Educate your Children.—The following elegant extract ought to be read by every parent, and particularly every farmer.

"If the time shall ever come when this mighty republic shall totter; when the beacon which now rises in a pillar of fire, a sign and a wonder of the world, shall wax dim, the cause will be found in the ignorance of the people. If our Union is still to continue to cheer the hopes and animate the efforts of the oppressed of every nation; if our fields are to be untrod by the hirelings of despotism; if long days of blessedness are to attend our country in her career of glory; if you would have the sun continue to shed its unclouded rays upon the face of freemen, then educate all the children in the land. This alone startles the tyrant in his dreams of power, and rouses the slumbering energies of an oppressed people. It was intelligence that reared up the majestic column of our national glory; and this alone can prevent them from crumbling into ashes."—T. Fisk.

Cost of Good and Evil.—All the benevolent religious societies in the world spend but about three millions of dollars annually, even at this late day, when these operations have so largely increased. The whole cost involved in the use of ardent spirit, in the United States alone, is estimated at one hundred million of dollars annually. The money annually consumed in tobacco is also enormous. If out of our fourteen millions of inhabitants, only one person in twenty-eight smokes cigars, and spends for them on on an average two cents a day, the sum is nearly four millions of dollars per annum, which is probably short of the reality. If the immense sums spent in these hurtful modes were but used for the benefit of mankind, what a new aspect would be given to the world.

Maxims of Bishop Middleton.—Persevere against discouragement. Keep your temper. Employ leisure in study, and always have some work on hand. Be punctual and methodical in business, and never procrastinate. Never be in a hurry. Preserve self possession, and do not be talked out of conviction. Rise early, and be an economist of time. Maintain dignity, without the appearance of pride; manner is something with every body, and every thing with some. Be guarded in discourse; attentive and slow to speak. Never acquiesce in immoral or pernicious opinions. Be not forward to assign reasons to those who have no right to ask. Think nothing in conduct unimportant and indifferent. Rather set, than follow example. Practice strict temperance, and in all your transactions, remember the final account.

The two Roses.—Being with my friend in a garden, we gathered each of us a rose. He handled his tenderly, smelt it but seldom and sparingly. I always kept mine to my nose, or squeezed it in my hand; whereby, in a very short time it lost both its color and sweetness, but his still remained as sweet and fragrant as if it had been growing on its own root.—The roses, said I, are true emblems of the best and sweetest enjoyments in the world, which being moderately and cautiously used and enjoyed, may for a long time yield sweetness to the possessor of them; but if once the affections seize too greedily upon them, and squeeze them too hard, they quickly wither in our hands, and we loose the comfort of them. It is a point of excellent wisdom to keep the golden bridle of moderation upon the affections.

The Atmosphere Railway.—The experiment on the line of railroad which runs from the Uxbridge road, near Shepherd's-bush, across Wormwood Scrubs, to the Line of the Great Western Railroad, and on which carriages are compelled by means of the atmosphere forcing its way into an exhausted tube or pipe laid down between the rails, on the principle for which Messrs. Clegg and Samuda have obtained patents, have attracted considerable attention. The experiments were a few days ago attended by the Government commissioners, Sir Frederic Smith and Professor Barlow, who examined every part with the most minute attention, and witnessed the transit of the carriages along the line. Several of the most eminent engineers and practical men were also present, and expressed themselves perfectly satisfied with the results. The carriages travel at the rate of 30 miles an hour, apparently by magic. Those who have been accustomed to see the cumbrous locomotive engines roaring and smoking along the lines of railroad, will be astonished to see a train moving with the rapidity of 30 miles an hour without any perceptible power to put it in motion, and it is difficult to persuade many persons of the fact that trains can be impelled by means so simple as those employed.—English paper.

What Ardent Spirits has done in ten Years, in the United States.—1. It has cost the nation a direct expense of six hundred millions of dollars.

2. It has cost an indirect expense of six hundred millions of dollars.

3. It has destroyed three hundred thousand lives.

4. It has sent 100,000 children to the poor house.

5. It has consigned at least one hundred and fifty thousand persons to the jails and state prisons.

6. It has made at least one thousand maniacs.

7. It has instigated to the commission of one thousand five hundred murders.

8. It has caused two thousand persons to commit suicide.

9. It has burnt or otherwise destroyed property to the amount of at least five millions of dollars.

10. It has made not less than 200,000 widows.

11. It has made at least one million orphan children.

12. It has endangered the inheritance left us by our fathers, and fixed a foul blot upon the fair fame of America.

For these and other considerations it is that every patriot and every friend of man should feel himself bound to take arms against the common enemy, and expel him from our borders.—Gov. Everett.

"Let me jest and live to-day,
And kiss the fleeting hours away."

The life a coquette is very like that of a drunkard or an opium eater; and its end is the same—the utter extinction of intellect, of cheerfulness, of generous feeling, and of self-respect.

The First and Last Visit to the Dram Shop.—Timothy Truesdall is the name we shall assign to a very worthy, thriving, and industrious mechanic of New York, who was a burthen to himself, a curse to his family, and a nuisance to society at large: in short, one of the most shameless and abandoned drunkards that ever took the measure of an unmade grave in a Gotham gutter. He was not weaned from his degrading propensity by the Temperance, or the Tract, or any other society. Their logic was labor lost on Tim, who would have uncorked the bottle amongst the quakings and thunders of Mount Sinai, and drained it by the crater of exploding Vesuvius. It was woman's love that cured him, and all women may get a just idea of their own importance in society from this story.

Though he had a wife and five beautiful children, Tim seemed to be unconscious of the fact. He neglected his work, squandered his earnings, which daily grew smaller and smaller, and spent his time at the pot house, till the nigh prostration of all his faculties, or the distasteful words "No more trust!" warned him to seek the shelter of his wife's care and protection. His children could not go to school, because learning was dear and rum was cheap; the landlord dunned for his rent, and Mrs. Truesdall was obliged to keep the house, because she had no dress fit to appear abroad in, having pawned the last to pay the last fine imposed on her spouse by the Police Court. Misery, utter destitution and famine, stared the unhappy family in the face. It is impossible to exaggerate the picture, even had we room and inclination.

Mrs. T. was a heroine, though not of romance. She loved her worthless husband, and had borne his neglect, the tears of her children, the gripe of famine, and the railing of the drunkard, without repining. Never had her exertions slackened; never had a harsh word passed her lips. At night when she put her children to sleep, she wept and watched for his coming, and when he did come, drunk, as usual, she undressed and assisted him to bed without a murmer of reproach. At last, her courage well nigh exhausted, she resolved upon one last desperate effort.

At night, having disposed of her three oldest children, she took her two youngest by the hand and bent her steps to the groggery her husband was accustomed to frequent. She looked into the window, and there he sat, in the midst of his boon companions, with his pipe in his mouth and his glass in his hand. He was evidently excited, though not yet drunk.—Great was the astonishment of that bad company, and enormous Mr. Truesdall's dismay and confusion, when his wife, pale as marble, and leading two tattered and bare-footed babes, stepped up to the bar, called for three glasses of brandy toddy, and then set down by his side.

"What brings you here, Mary?" said he morosely.

"It is very lonesome at home, and your business seldom allows you to be there," replied the meek wife. "There is no company like yours, and as you cannot come to me I must come to you. I have a right to share your pleasures as well as your sorrows."

"But to come to such a place as this!" expostulated Tim.

"No place can be improper where my husband is," said poor Mary. "Whom God hath joined together let no man put asunder?" She took up the glass of alcohol.

"Surely you are not going to drink that?" asked Tim in huge astonishment.

"Why not? You say that you drink to forget sorrow, and if brandy has that effect, I am sure no living creature has so good an excuse for drinking as I. Besides I have not eaten a mouthful to-day, and I really need something to support my strength."

"Woman! woman! you are not going to give the children such stuff as that!" cried Tim, as she handed each of the children a glass of liquor.

"Why not? Can children have a better example than their father's? Is not what is good for him good for them also? It will put them to sleep, and they will forget that they are cold and hungry.—Drink, my children; this is fire, and bed, and food, and clothing. Drink—you can see how much good it does your father."

With seeming reluctance, Mary suffered her husband to conduct her home, and that night he prayed long and fervently, which he had not done before for years.

The next evening as, O miracle! he returned with a steady step, he saw his oldest boy run into the house, and heard him exclaim, "Oh, mother! here comes father, and he is not drunk!" Tears coursed down the penitent's cheek, and, from that hour, he has not tasted strong drink. He had never been vicious or unfeeling, and, as soon as his emancipation from the thraldom of a debasing appetite became known, friends, employment and prosperity returned to him.—As for Mrs. Truesdall, she is the happiest of women, and never thinks without pride, of her first and last visit to the dram shop.—N. Y. Sun.

Florida War.—Col. Worth, one of the most heroic and valuable officers attached to the army, has just been ordered to Florida to take command of that prolonged war. He is now with his family at his residence at Waterliet, N. Y., but will soon leave, with a large body of troops, for that region.

A paper has started in Philadelphia called the Dirty Shirt! O, soapsuds!

We hear nothing more of the talked of pardon of Dr. Dyott. The Governor is not likely to venture upon so rash an experiment. The Doctor has robbed many an honest and hard working individual of the earnings of years, and it is right that he should be adequately punished.

Bicknell.

A Plan to relieve the Literary Institution of the Methodist Protestant Church.

Whereas, the Methodist Protestant Church, of the Ohio and Pittsburgh Districts, for the purpose of establishing a Literary Institution, in the year 1836, purchased the farm of two hundred and fifty acres of land, known as the "Mount Pleasant Farm," situated about two miles north of Lawrenceburgh, in Indiana; the purchase money whereof, with other debts incurred and now due from said Methodist Protestant Church, amount to twelve thousand five hundred dollars; that the purchase money now due is a lien on said farm;—that John Haughton and William Disney, acting as Trustees for said Methodist Protestant Church, are personally liable for the payment of all the debts of said Institution.

Now in order to pay said debts, and release said Trustees from their liabilities, the said M. P. Church have released all their interest in the real estate aforesaid, to the said Haughton and Disney, who have heretofore held the legal title thereof, for the sole use of such subscribers as shall take up the stock, and donors, as specified in the following plan, for the purpose of liquidating the debts of said Literary Institution, on the plan here proposed, viz:

PLAN.

The beneficial and equitable interest of said real estate shall be and is hereby divided into two thousand five hundred shares of five dollars each, equal in all to twelve thousand five hundred dollars.

That each subscriber shall be a part owner or said premises in proportion to the stock by him subscribed and paid for; Provided, he pays all he is required to pay by the terms of this plan.

If any subscriber at any time shall refuse to pay up the balance that may be due on his stock subscription, that the money so by him then already paid shall be considered a donation to said Methodist Protes ant Church, for the purpose of liquidating the debt of said Literary Institution generally, and may be so applied accor ngly.

The subscriber shall pay one dollar on each share subscribed, at the time of subscribing, and one dollar on each share so by him subscribed, on each succeeding ninety-one days, until his whole stock be paid up; Provided, it shall be, by Daniel H. Horn, Harvey Hall, and Shadford Easton, or a majority of them, Trustees, or their successors in office, thought necessary, and the subscribers shall be called on to pay the same.

Unless stock to the amount of eleven thousand dollars shall be subscribed, and the sum of two thousand two hundred dollars shall be paid in, no subscriber shall be bound by his subscription; but the money so by him paid, shall be refunded to him, within ninety days after the next Annual Conference.

Daniel H. Horn, H. Hall and Shadford Easton, are hereby named, appointed and vested Trustees, with full power to fill any vacancies that may occur in their board, and to direct the paying out of the money so raised on this plan.

The holders of a majority of the stock may at any time direct a sale of said premises, provided the premises shall sell for a sum sufficient to pay all the debts of said Institution, then unpaid.

The several stockholders shall have one vote for each share of stock, so by them held.

If after the debts of said Literary Institution are all paid, said property still remains on hand, unsold, the holders of a majority of the stock, may dispose of the property, and divide the proceeds among the stockholders and donators, as hereinafter provided, or may dispose of the whole property by donation to the Methodist Protestant Church, as they may in their judgment and liberality think proper.

All sums hereafter donated, shall be applied in payment of debts of the Literary Institution in the same manner, as money paid in on stock subscription

If on sale of said property, a sum of money shall be procured, more than sufficient to pay the debts of said Literary Institution, then unpaid, the surplus over and above paying the said debts, shall be divided among the stockholders and donators, in proportion to the stock subscribed, and the sum so donated.

1. Resolved, This conference, acting for and on the behalf of the Methodist Protestant Church of the Ohio District, do hereby release, relinquish and convey to John Haughton and William Disney, and their heirs and assigns, all the interest and claim in and to said real estate of the Literary Institutinn of the said M. P. Church. To have and to hold the said property and interest therein for the sole benefit and use of such stockholders as may subscribe for the stock under the plan now proposed, for the purpose of liquidating the debts of said Institution.

2. Resolved, That Br. Green G. Moore be, and is hereby appointed an agent to obtain subscriptions of stock, and receive money thereon, and receive donations, and pay the same to the aforesaid Trustees.

3 Resolved, That it shall be the duty of the superintendent of each circuit and station, to obtain subscriptions for said stock, and receive the money thereon accordingly, and forthwith or as soon as convenient, transmit the same to the said agent at Cincinnati.

For the Western Recorder.

To the preachers and members of the Methodist Protestant Church, in the Western Conferences, (formerly the Ohio Annual Conference.)

The plan of the Ohio Annual Conference, held in Cincinnati, August, 1840, respecting the college property and debts, being submitted to you, I take leave to address you, through the medium of our paper, the Western Recorder, in my own individual name. I witnessed the origin, progress and failure of the Cokesbury College in the old church, and was present when Mr. Asbury received the news of its being burned, and heard his remarks upon the occasion. Not many among us, perhaps, can recollect so far back, even among those of my own age. The part I acted in our case, was that of a servant. I had no responsibility. I offer the advice of an old friend, only. Providence still favors us with a name, and an existence among the churches. We have a name to secure, or to loose. Justice has claims upon us, and we can be just. As a whole people, we are not bankrupt. Our failure in the college enterprize is matter of history. Let us furnish another item for history. Let the pen which records our failure, have to record that we were just, as a people; and then, whenever our history shall be read in the whole world, this shall be spoken of to our praise. Every body will say, that such a people deserved better success. Let us secure the good will of our contemporaries and of posterity, by this test of our public equity and public spirit. Nothing could have happened that will have raised our church reputation so high. Our God and Father who loveth a cheerful giver, loveth also, cheerful justice.—What a spectacle for men and angels to behold! In this new and comparatively poor church, twenty-five hundred men stepping forward, willingly, to pay the uttermost farthing! This being done, will it ever again be said, that we are incapable of self-government? Rather, will it now be the general belief, that such men are capable of any thing great and good. Let us deserve public confidence. Our friends, for whom we should do this thing, I am a witness, were generous and confiding to a failing; they not only regarded our word as being good as our bond, but they intrusted their property, for our use, without our word. Let it never be said that such confidence remains unrequitted. Let us be just to such noble generosity.

Your affectionate brother,

Nicholas Snethen.

Cincinnati, Sept. 1, 1840.

COMMUNICATION.

New Lisbon, O., Sept. 24, 1840.

Br. Springer: Please do me the favor to publish the following appointments:

Youngstown circuit,	- - - October	4
Grand River "	- - - - "	11
Farmington "	- - - - "	18
Mahoning "	- - - - "	25
Wellsville station,	- - - Novem.	1
New Lisbon "	- - - - "	8
Monongahela circuit,	- - - "	15
Clarksburgh "	- - - "	22
Suttonsville "	- - - "	29
Weston "	- - - Decem.	6
Middletown "	- - - "	13
Brownsville "	- - - "	20
Union "	- - - "	27

Yours, truly,

Z. Ragan.

Puff! Puff! Puff!!

CHEAP!

CHEAPER THAN EVER! GREAT BARGAINS!

New York at your door!

SELLING OFF AT COST!

We so heartily despise the "gull-catching" system that we seldom advertise at all. We however give our friends and the public notice that we have just received a fine stock of

FALL AND WINTER

GOODS.

We don't profess to have brought "New York to your doors," nor to undersell every body else, nor to be "selling off at cost," nor to be "closing up," and all that sort of thing,—but we do say, that our goods are cheap enough to satisfy any reasonable person, even in these "hard times."

A. A. Guthrie & Co.

Putnam, Ohio, September 30, 1840. w58

STOLEN

From the stable of Hamisfar & Brown in Somerset, Perry county, O., on Saturday night, the 19th instant, an old

SORREL HORSE,

very hollow-backed, and much marked with the saddle, his mouth very much cut on one side with the bits, his foretop heavy and lately cut square off above his eyes, shod all round, and shoes much worn.

Any person giving information to the subscriber so that he can get said horse again, shall be rewarded, and receive the thanks of Jeremiah L. Lesslie.

Zanesville, O., Sept. 30, 1840. 60

William Green,

CLOCK AND WATCH REPAIRER, SILVERSMITH, AND JEWELLER,

Can be found at his shop on Main street Putnam, a few doors north of J. C. Guthrie's store, where he will do his best to accommodate customers. He keeps on hand an assortment of spectacles, watch trimmings, pencils, &c.

As far as we have tried Mr. Green as a watch repairer he has given us good satisfaction.—Ed.

April 22, 1840. 35tf.

Dissolution.

The partnership heretofore existing between the subscribers in the Putnam Foundry, under the firm of HARTLEY & ANDERSON, was this day dissolved by mutual consent.

The Putnam Foundry will hereafter be conducted by J. J. Anderson & Co.

Levi Hartley,
Jacob J. Anderson.

Putnam, Jan. 1, 1840. (Jan. 29: 23.)

Notice.

All persons indebted to the late firm of Hartley & Anderson, are earnestly requested to call at the Foundry and make settlement, as the change of owners makes this step absolutely necessary. We ask the attention of all persons concerned, to this notice.

J. J Anderson & Co.

Putnam, Jan. 1, 1840. (Jan. 29: 23.)

Dissolution.

The partnership heretofore existing between S. B. Johnson and J. M. Kirkpatrick, under the firm of S. B. Johnson & Co. was dissolved by mutual consent, on Thursday 19th inst.

S. B. Johnson,
J. M. Kirkpatrick.

Zanesville, March 31, 1840. 32tf

The New World.

The Largest, Cheapest, Handsomest and most Comprehensive Newspaper in the United States.

EDITED BY
PARK BENJAMIN AND EPES SARGENT.

With multiplied resources for rendering the New World more valuable than ever as a compendious newspaper and repository of elegant literature, we enter upon the second volume (folio) on the 24th of October, dressed in a beautiful garb of new type, cast expressly for the purpose. It will therefore be a fitting time to commence new subscriptions, as well as for the renewal of those which may then expire.

During the first year of the existence of the New World, it has acquired a reputation and circulation superior to that of any weekly paper in the country; and has furnished to its subscribers, during that period, (besides all the current news of the day, domestic and foreign) new and valuable works by Talfourd, D'Israeli, Thomas Moore, Miss Mitford, Mrs. Jameson, Charles Dickens, Ainsworth, Knowles, Bulwer, Marryat and others—works, which in London could not be purchased for fifty times the amount of the subscription price of the New World. In addition to works of interest by these eminent authors, it has contained the cream of the periodical literature of the day, as well as original articles from the pens of some of the most popular writers of America, among whom we may mention Miss Sedgwick, Orville Dewey, Professor Longfellow, the author of "Yankee Notions," Simms, Street, &c., &c.

In politics we shall, as hitherto, maintain an armed neutrality. Our columns will as hitherto be unobjectionable in a moral point of view. In criticism we shall, in justice to the public, maintain a perfect independence, even though we incur the vengeance of all the dunces. We shall, in conclusion, earnestly strive to render our sheet not only worthy of the unparalleled favor it has experienced, but of a continuall extending circulation. While we continue to furnish with all possible promptitude the most attractive literature of the day, we shall, as our means enlarge, afford that compensation to native authors, which may induce them to make the New World the medium for presenting to the public their best productions. Our excellent London correspondence will be continued, and due attention will be paid to the commercial, agricultural and news departments of our paper.

A QUARTO EDITION

Of sixteen large pages was commenced on the sixth of June last, in order to meet the wishes of a large number of subscribers, by giving their rich and varied contents in a suitable form for binding. This we have done without having enhanced the price, so that new subscribers, and others on the renewal of previous subscriptions can take their choice between the Quarto and Folio form. ☞But a few sets of the Quarto from No. 1, now remain on hand in the office and we shall, therefore, not be able long to supply them.

TERMS—Three Dollars a year in advance for either edition; or Five Dollars for two copies. In all cases letters must be free, or post-paid, or they will remain dead in the post-office.

☞All Postmasters who will act for us as our authorized Agents, and may retain 25 per cent. on the subscription price, (Three Dollars,) for commissions, if remitted in New York or eastern money; or 50 cents on each, if in notes of other solvent banks, which may be at a discount here.

Letters relative to the editorial department must be addressed to Park Benjamin and Epes Sargent, Editors: those relative to the business department, to J. Winchester, Publisher, No. 30, Ann street, New York.

September 16, 1840. 3t

S. C. Haver,

In the flourishing town of Putnam has on hand 40 or 50 SADDLES ready for sale, of different qualities, comprising nearly all the varieties in fashion in our Buckeye State.

A good assortment of Bridles and Martingales: Riding and driving Whips: between 150 and 200 Carriage and heavy draft Collars, which will compare and wear with any others made here or elsewhere.

Also, fine York, Dearborn, heavy team and common Farming Harness. A lot of first rate Carriage and Buggy Harness, (brass and silver plated.)

Trunks, vallises, saddle-bags, and double covered wagon whips, varying in quality and price to suit purchasers.

The only recommendation he now offers for his work, is the testimony and long experience of his old customers and friends. He is still anxious to please and accommodate those who may call on him, and hopes to share so much of the public patronage as his attention to his business shall merit.

Putnam, April 29, 1840. 28tf

Glass Manufactory.

The subscriber having dissolved his connexion with the former company, has taken the GLASS WORKS below town under his own management.

WINDOW GLASS, double and single, always seizes, and of superior quality will be kept constantly on hand for sale on reasonable terms.—The experience of the proprietor, in the manufacture of the article, will insure all made to be of the best quality. Call and see.

S. B. Johnson.

Zanesville, Ohio, May 6, 1840. 37

O. White, BOOK BINDER, No. 104, Main Street, Zanesville, Ohio.

January 15, 1840. 21tf

THE

WESTERN RECORDER

IS PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY.

☞The office of the Recorder is five and a half miles west of Zanesville.

TERMS.

1. The Western Recorder will be published weekly, on an imperial sheet, at $2 00 per annum, in advance: $2 50 at the end of three months; $3 00 at the end of the year.

2. No discontinuances will be allowed, except at the discretion of the publisher, until all arrearages are paid.

3. To all ministers having regular pastoral charges, who do any thing at all for the paper, if they will direct us where, a copy shall be sent gratis; any other who forward to us $10 00 for new subscribers, shall have six copies sent to any address he may give.

4. All letters designed for the paper, must be directed to "C. Springer, Meadow Farm, Muskingum, Ohio."

5. A failure to notify a discontinuance before the expiration of the subscription year, will be considered a new engagement.

CHARACTER.—The pages of the Western Recorder will be open to discussion on all moral questions;—it will give articles on Literature, Mechanics, Agriculture,—an abstract of Religious and Political intelligence, and whatever may be interesting and instructive to families in general. A portion of its columns will be open to Advertisements and Prices Current,—another portion to sustain the interests of the Methodist Protestant Church in the West.—These two latter objects will not likely occupy more than one page.

The Recorder will take a firm stand against Clerical Supremacy.

THE WESTERN RECORDER.

RINGER, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.
O DOLLARS PER ANNUM IN ADVANCE.

Vol. 2.--No. 10. ZANESVILLE, OHIO, WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 28, 1840. Whole No. 62.

JOHN W. WHITE, PRINTER.
$2.50, IN THREE MONTHS; $3, END OF YEAR.

OMMUNICATIONS.

For the Western Recorder.

—

icite eis qui vos infectantur; benedicite, let ne imprecamini.—St. Paul.

Editor: The South Western Christ- vocate, a paper published in Nash- ennessee, under date of the 8th st, has paid its respects to me, in which merits a reply. But I hum- e, that, when attending to the no- those things which that editor has d against me, I shall possess a spirit h like that of the meek and lowly s to enable me to make my defence, dipping my pen in gall, or drag- rom the sepulchre of departed ny thing calculated to give offence, any of my Master's "little ones." Rev. Editor is remarkably unfor- in his outset; so much so, in fact, makes at least one error in his ntence. He accuses me of having "a long letter" to the editor of the rn Recorder, in which I announced t, that I had joined the Methodist ant Church. I never did, in all , write a letter, long or short, on ject whatever, to the editor of that until about one month after this f the Advocate, had gone abroad he winged winds. The letter to e alludes was written for, and pub- in, the Methodist Protestant and Visitor, in Baltimore, and copied e Western Recorder with due cre- low Mr. Stringfield, who is an ex- ed editor, could have thus erred. ediogly strange. Surely his eyes xing "dim with coming age;" or, enture, in the vast conglutination ure's atoms, some small particle. am," may have come in contact is argus optic, which hinders him ulling the mote from his brother's principal charge which he urges t his fated victim, is that of being ostate Methodist preacher." I shall relate one or two facts, concerning ort history, and leave a candid world e whether the sayings of this chris- inister, in that Christian Advocate, like apples of gold in pictures of " I was born and educated of dist parents; and "what's bred in ne is hard to get out of the flesh," uently, I, embracing religion when rs of age, was persuaded against rn inclination, by my father and di- thers of the Methodist ministry, to e a candidate for the ministry, and ad seen the close of my seventeenth er I was licensed to preach: and y afterwards sent 500 miles from into this, then wilderness country, itinerant preacher. After the ex- on of about two years, I considered f badly treated by a leading minis- nder whose care I had been placed; eing a poor boy, and he a great a Presiding Elder, I knew that I have no redress: so I quietly with- from the ministry, and finally from aurch. All these transpired before 19 years of age. And there never charge of any sort, brought against any church. Having at that time, dy, become the head of a family, and eing worth as much as $150 in the , I then followed the bent of my r inclination, and turned my atten- oward the study, and afterward the ice of Law. I had removed to Ten- e, and was the editor and proprietor political paper; and had become, as kly confess, and as deeply deplore, nger to God and an alien from the nonwealth of Israel; and had arri- t the age of 24, when I was awa- l to a sense of my condition, and he prodigal son resolved to "arise go to my Father." I did so. I join- e M. E. Church as an humble seeker, shortly after, was told to "go in ," and charged "to sin no more." I red up my law and politics, and ex- ged Blackstone for the Bible, Kent Wesley's sermons, and Chitty's lings for Clarke's Commentary; and barteri g away the exciting topics h agitate our political world for the stirring story of the cross, I was re- sed to preach, and entered again in- y Master's vineyard. For about years I maintained a stand, unsulli- d unstained in the Methodist minis- and received from most of their principal ministers, in the West, testimonials of confidence.

Having been employed to take charge of the Literary Institution, at the head of which I now am, I removed at the close of 1839. again to Arkansas. And though I came with clear credentials duly authenticated and clearly certified, I soon found that the same man who had injured me before was still my enemy, and threatened to appear at the first quarterly conference, and take special care to prevent my reception. I had done all that I could do—all that God's word commanded me to do. And now, rather than have a second difficulty, I, for the sake of peace, and the good of immortal souls, joined the Methodist Protestant Church, by giving into their quarterly conference my credentials and church letter from the M E. Church. If this is "shameful apostacy," then I am guilty: if this is imposing upon Reformers, then have I imposed. But in all this, I have the testimony that I have pleased Him with whom I have to do. So much then for the charge of apostacy.

My "long letter" contained nothing "bitter against the M. E. Church:" nothing calculated to offend one of its members. God forbid that I should ever pen a word, or utter a sentence, which might wound the feelings of any pious individual in that or any other branch of Christ's church. I acknowledge the M. E. Church as my mother: yes, as my mother who twice raised me. I revere her memory and cherish her name. But I am of age: and that same good old mother permitted some of her elder sons to lord it over my conscience: she would not let me have a shelter in her house: not a crumb from her table: nor even allow me to stand and weep in her outer court. So I left my mother, lingering at her door, and weeping aloud, at the parting. I soon found one that was young and lovely, and learning that she was one of Wesley's children, and seeing the family favor, I clave unto her, and pray in humble faith, that we may long be one in heart—one in love —and one in Christ.

Mr. Stringfield admonishes me to come to that city, and "settle up old accounts" —to leave off "besetting sins," and become respectable. With regard to accounts, I know of none of mine in Nashville which are unsettled, except what I owe Mr. S· for that kind notice he takes of me in his Advocate, and the reader will perceive, I hope, some little omens of a desire to pay him. Did I say that I had no other accounts in that city? I mistake. I have another which is unsettled—unpaid—and I fear I never can pay it in this life. It is a debt of gratitude to that venerable sire, to that gray-headed father, superanuated with age, and worn down with the labors of almost half a century in the itinerant ministry of the Methodist E. Church, and against whom this same editor directs his missiles—I mean the Rev. L. GARRETT. Venerable father, oft have you rocked the cradle of my infant slumbers—oft have you gladdened the heart of my sainted mother, as you sat by her sparkling fires, and told her to bring up her prating boy in the nurture and admonition of the Lord. She has long since gone. You are almost home, and her once prating boy, now the man of seven-and-twenty seasons, is still, as I perceive from your circular in my defence, now on my table, an object of your care and solicitude. Go on! You will soon gain that unclouded realm where the voice of the oppressor shall be heard no more! And if the writer still lingers, may your mantle fall on him!

As to "besetting sins," I have them. I deplore the fact that I have too many besetting sins. I can say with the Apostle, that I am the chief of sinners: but I beg leave to add, that I have the chief of Saviours too! Oh! I am glad to find so sweet a passage as this: "And if any man sin. we have an advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the righteous."

But, Mr. Editor, I have transgressed upon your columns, and must desist.— This controversy I never courted or anticipated. I perhaps had never seen the notice in the Advocate, only for your kindness in sending it to me. I find that I am a doomed man. Papal execrations fall upon me like showers of sulphur.— Well was it for Peter that he lived at another time: for we learn, that when he did wrong and came back repenting, his Master's voice melted into the most delicious tones, when it said "Simon Peter, lovest thou me?" Had his lot fallen in the 19th century, in this

"The land of the free,
And the home of the brave,"

he would have been published in some Christian Advocate, as guilty of "shameful apostacy." ALLEN M. SCOTT.

EVANSVILLE, ARK., SEPT. 22, 1840.

For the Western Recorder

A FEW THOUGHTS ON A FEW THINGS.

NO. I.

ON THE EXCELLENCY OF THE GOSPEL.

The first thing then, that lights upon my mind, is the excellence of the gospel. Now, whether the gospel of Jesus Christ be abstractly viewed or comparatively considered, its superior excellence is evidently manifest. If the former,—the simplicity of its style, the purity of its morality, the beauty of its doctrine, and the glorious end which it contemplates, all plainly declare its goodness. If the latter,—its originality, its perfection, its utility and general adaptation, its power to raise degraded man when other systems have failed, and its bringing life and immortality to light, cause it to triumph over every system of religion and philosophy which has ever been propogated in the world.

To the two last particulars, the reader's attention is directed. Says the Apostle Paul, in his epistle to the Romans: "I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ, for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth." And in his first epistle to the Corinthians, "the preaching of the cross is to them which are saved—the power of God." Rome and Corrinth are justly celebrated as having been the resort of the learned and wise, both of statesmen and philosophers; and, at the same time, are equally notorious for their licentiousness and crime. This shows us, more clearly, how weak and unprofitable all merely human institutions are in reclaiming a depraved world. Though lessons were given upon morality,—immorality abounded,—and though good and wise maxims were delivered, they produced not the desired effect—corruption still reigned. But when the simple and unadulterated gospel of Jesus Christ is introduced, we see at once, a change. It raises the abject sinner; it takes the poor wretched inebriate from his midnight revelry and "flowing bowl," and converts him into a sober man. It lays hold of the liscentious wretch with a firm grasp, and brings him up from his state of ignominy and death; it over-awes the profane, and causes, where oaths were formerly heard, prayer to almighty God to arise. It says to corruption, "stay thy impetuous and destructive course," and it is stayed. Well might the Apostle say, "I am not ashamed of such a system as this. It is, indeed, the power of God." But the gospel is the same yesterday, to-day and forever. See what it has done for the Hottentot of South Africa and for the Indian of our own western wilds. It, at once, christianizes and moralizes them. In a word, the gospel makes what God designed them to be—men. Without the gospel, the world is a moral Golgotha; with it, it is the Eden of God!

But farther: "Jesus Christ hath abolished death, and hath brought life and immortality to light through the gospel." Though mankind are subject to disease and death—the aged may sink into the grave—the middle-aged may fall by the shafts of mortality—the opening bud may be nipped by an untimely frost; yet, in the gospel, we are promised life beyond the grave. "Though he die, yet shall he live," saith the gospel. We can hardly conceive of the consolation which this truth of our holy religion affords the bereaved and dying. The fond father deposits the remains of his virtuous and lovely son in the grave, but he consoles himself with, "he shall rise again."— Weeping friends gather around the tomb of their beloved Lazarus, and while they mourn over his departure and their loss, they hear the voice of the Saviour, saying: "I am the resurrection and the life." The affectionate husband, perhaps, in quite early life, possessed of his youthful vigor, and in the full enjoyment of his sensitive faculties, has his beloved wife torn from his embrace by the ruthless hand of death;—the object of his warmest affections, the partner of his joys and sorrows, his companion in weal or in wo, she who held his aching head and smoothed his pillow in the hour of sickness, is no more. He follows his dearest earthly object to the grave. The last office of kindness is performed—he returns to his habitation, tho' surrounded with many friends, solitary and alone; and while he realizes, ah, too sensibly, alas! that part of himself lies embosomed in the earth, his consolation is

"Spring shall visit the mouldering urn;
Day shall dawn on the night of the grave."

We enter the room of the sick and dying man. The fatal hour is come; the world recedes and begins to disappear; when, with a faltering voice, but an energy of soul, he exclaims, "though worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh, shall I see God!" Who can contemplate these two excellencies of the gospel, without being enamored of them? Surely none. The more we understand of the ways of God to man, the great love wherewith he hath loved us, the more will our souls exult in God. Let, then, this gospel be spread. It will make the solitary places glad, the wilderness bud and blossom as the rose. Yes, blessed be God, it places a lamp upon the Indian's grave and raises a star, nay, a sun, over heathen lands! "God forbid that I should glory, save in the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ."

The people that in darkness lay,
In sin and error's deadly shade,
Have seen a glorious gospel day,
In Jesus's lovely face displayed.

J. D. G.

For the Western Recorder.

Mr. Editor: With your permission, I wish to tax the patience of your readers for a few moments again. Perhaps, those who read my former communication, concluded I closed rather abruptly. It will be recollected that in my other article I stated, that in 1833, there was a society of Protestant Methodists organized in the neighborhood where I reside. I stated it was predicted by my old side brethren, that the M. P. Church would soon go to sticks. So far from this prophesy being fulfilled, directly the reverse is the fact in regard to this church. God has watered the seed and it has taken root and brought forth abundantly—so that it affords a comfortable home for the follower of the cross; and the cause is spreading in this region.

I believe, sir, the motives and principles of the Protestant Methodists, have been, and still are, much misrepresented in a great many places. I speak from experience. I recollect the time when I thought about all the difference there was between the Episcopal and Protestant Methodists was, that the class-leaders in the former were appointed by the preachers, and that they were elected in the latter. I have no doubt, but there are thousands in the old church as ignorant of the principles of the new as I was; and, I believe, if the government of the latter was properly explained and understood, it would not be long until her numbers would be greatly augmented.

Toward the M. E. Church, I entertain no unfriendly feelings or prejudice.— With many of her members, I have taken sweet counsel while walking to the house of God together. And I think I can say, that in leaving the M. E. Church, I have no other motive in view than to glorify God and discharge the duties of conscience. I am of opinion, that the M. P. Church, holds forth to the world as sound doctrines, and as liberal and scriptural a government as any church in the land· My soul has been abundantly blessed, with the consolations of divine grace, since I have cast in my lot with this church. Yours, &c.,

B. DOTSON.

East Bethlehem, Pa., Aug. 24, 1840.

REV. MR. NEWTON AT HOME.—The Wesleyan Conference commenced its sittings, according to appointment, in Brunswick chapel, Newcastle-upon-Tyne. The Rev. Robert Newton, lately returned from his visit to America, was elected president by a very large majority. The place of secretary was filled up by the election of the Rev. Dr. Hannah to that office. The Wesleyan connection, so far as reports have been made, is in a state of great peace in all its departments; and it is expected that the actual increase of members to the society, during the year, will not be less than 20,000, including about 6000 reported as the increase on the Mission stations.

MISCELLANEOUS.

PRIVATE HISTORY OF MR. OWEN.

Robert Owen is a native of Wales, and of very humble extraction. Early in life he made his way to Manchester, where he obtained employment in one of the cotton factories. Possessed of more than ordinary endowments of mind, he was not long in making himself master of the "craft and mystery" of cotton spinning, and being of a very enthusiastic turn, and noted for some speculative ingenuity, he succeeded ere long in ingratiating himself in the good opinion of his employers, whose processes he was enabled, in some instances, to simplify in a mechanical point of view, and otherwise diminish their expensiveness. At last, he succeeded so well in the contest of life as to obtain charge of the factory.

About the commencement of the present century, the universally respected and beloved David Dale, one of the best men that Scotland ever produced, and the founder of that New Lanark of which so much has been heard, having lost his only son, and being blessed with an abundance of the gifts of Providence, disposed of his establishment at New Lanark to a company of English merchants, who gladly availed themselves of Mr. Owen's services, and sent him down to New Lanark to superintend their establishment.— Owen was here distinguished by the punctuality of his attendance at the Independent chapel, of which Mr. Dale was pastor, and in his entire demeanor, he was religious, nay, even to all appearance, devout.

David Dale had a daughter, distinguished, like her father, for religious zeal, charity, and in short, every moral quality that can adorn either sex. It is quite plain, that no man, whose abstract opinions or conduct were at all at variance with religious convictions, could have the slightest chance of obtaining this lady's hand. Robert Owen was successful in his suit, and Miss Dale became his wife. At the period to which we refer, the inhabitants of New Lanark were noted, even amongst the Scottish population, for their zeal in the cause of religion and morality. During the entire period of Mr. Dale's proprietorship, they had been taught to regard themselves as one great family; and mutual kindness and brotherly love was the lesson which he was never done inculcating. His instructions were not thrown away. The example which Mr. Dale individually set, he endeavored to multiply by the care which he employed in the selection of men of tried moral worth and religious principles, for his overseers and managers. An excellent school was established under the superintendence of the late Mr. Lyon, who "never forgot to impress upon his pupils the principles and practices of religion, or to invoke the blessings of the Almighty upon the commencement of his daily labors." The children, under their respective teachers, where regularly taken to church every Sabbath. Family worship was performed in almost every house once, and on Sabbath twice a-day; and the most beautiful morality, order, peace and harmony, prevailed for many years at New Lanark.

At the death of Mr. Dale, Mr. Owen came into the possession of his wife's fortune, amounting to nearly thirty thousand pounds; and then it was, that he avowed amongst his friends his direct hostility to the institutions, both social and religious, of this every day world. At first, he prudently shrouded his hatred of revealed religion, and applied himself solely, in appearance, to the melioration of the social condition of mankind. He speedily, however, manifested a desire to work out his real principles, by endeavoring to coerce the schoolmaster appointed by his deceased benefactor, to discontinue the teaching of the scriptures; and because he would not consent, this poor man felt obliged to resign his situation.

The eyes of his doating wife were at length opened, and she remonstrated, but without the slightest effect, except in throwing over her husband's projects, for a time, a thin veil of hypocrisy. Prudential considertions rendered this desirable. Had he broached, at that period, the infamies of his "New Moral World," the bubble would have burst at the outset: and the co-operative, self-sustaining system, with its accompanying infidelity, kept in the back ground, imposed, for a time, upon Mr. Wilberforce and other philanthropists. Upon a close examination of Owen's doctrines, however, Mr. Wilberforce detected and repudiated their irreligious and scandalously immoral tendencies, as appears in a passage in the fifth volume of his interesting dairy.

For a very long period, Mr Owen kept the pseudo-philanthropic portion of his scheme merely before the public, & it was not until he was fortified by the deep root which his system struck in the soil of the U. States of America, and its more extravagant features were adopted, and publicly professed, by the St. Simonians in France, that he laid aside the last shred of the mask which he had hitherto worn. Ever since that period his system has been undergoing modification after modification, until at last it came forth as "The Universal Community Association Rational Religionists." Hundreds of thousands of pamphlets and other writings have been disseminated under Mr. Owen's immediate inspection, in which the notion of a Deity and the inspired word of God are alike scoffed at and reviled; the marriage tie has been described as a Satanic invention; lecturers have been appointed to make plausible statements in all the principal cities and towns throughout England; brazen-fronted females have had the audacity to assail the gospel of God and the divine institution of marriage, in the metropolis, as well as in the provinces; professed lecturers upon physiology have been the covert and well paid advocates of Socialism; and, to facilitate the proposed "melioration of the condition of society," numerous works have been disseminated, some of unblushing obscenity, and all of the most demoralizing tendency.

If David Dale could but see to what uses his wealth has been applied, he would curse the day upon which his misled bounty conceded the means of setting the world in a flame, to minister to Mr. Owen's depraved appetite for distinction.

ITEMS.

One of the first houses in Liverpool, in a postscript to a private letter dated 19th ult. says:—"Our cotton market is decidedly better."

CASUALTY.—Fifteen children were lately ran over consecutively, in the streets of a western town. No blame can be attached to the driver, as he says he was in a great hurry to reach the steamboat landing with his passengers.—N. Y. Sun.

It is a poor thing indeed to have religion enongh to save our credit; but not enough to save our souls.

The African M. E. Church closed their meeting at Attleborough, Bucks Co. on the 1st ult. The numbers of persons that were in attendance, is estimated at sixteen thousand, all of whom conducted themselves with the utmost order and propriety.

Father Matthew recently administered the temperance pledge to 100,000 persons in Dublin in two days.

The stables attached to the Washington Hotel, Huntingdon, Pa. were destroyed by fire a few days since. Mr. Jacob Africa was somewhat injured, but not seriously.

Col. Samuel Birch, for the last thirty years chief clerk of the office of the House of Representatives, at Washington, has been removed, and Benjamin B. French, Esq., appointed in his stead.

John Evans was executed for the murder of John C. Ritter, at Sandusky, Ohio, He addressed the spectators, and was understood to say that drunkenness and infidelity had brought him to his miserable situation.

The Belfast (Me.) Republican announces the death of John B. Nealy, Esq., one of the Van Buren candidates for Presidential Electors in that State. He resided at Monroe, in Waldo county.— His death took place on Monday the 5th instant.

The Governor of Pennsylvania has signed the death warrant of Robert McConachy, who for the sake of a few dollars, murdered the whole of the Browne family, six in number. He is to be executed on the 6th of November.

We learn from the New Orleans Native American, that a diabolical attempt was made on the 28th ultimo, to fire the St. Louis Exchange. A small phial containing phosphorus and wrapped round with pieces of linen dipped in brimstone, and also a number of loco foco matches were found among some shavings.

We learn from the New Hampshire Courier, that Ferguson, who lately shot his wife in Exeter, has been captured in woods near Sanbornton, and conveyed to Portsmouth jail.

A company of traders, under the command of Mr. C. Trestoe, on the 11th ult., arrived at Independence, Missouri, with $60,000 in specie.

Mr. Jacob Reese, of Tamqua, Pa., was killed on the 2d instant, by the accidental explosion of a keg of powder while at work in the coal mines near Pottsville. Mr. R. was in the 54th year of his age, and a worthy member of society. He has left a large family.

The Boston Banks declared their half yearly dividend on the 1st inst. Highest dividend three and a half per cent., lowest do. two per cent. The Market Bank none.

We learn from the Charleston Courier, that a rumor had reached that city through Matamoras, that the whole State of New Mexico had declared for Texas.

The number of white males in New Orleans exceeds the number of white females 10,292. The number of colored females exceeds the number of colored males 6,222.

The expense up to January last, on the Girard College, amounted to the colossal sum of $1.272,712, and the college reported by the architect to be about two-thirds completed.

WESTERN RECORDER.

ZANESVILLE:

WEDNESDAY, ...OCTOBER 28, 1840.

ELECTION RETURNS.

PENNSYLVANIA.

The past has been an amusing week for merely lookers-on in politics. Both parties have been shouting out, victory! victory!! so far as relates to Pennsylvania; and the uninitiated have been sadly puzzled to discover the truth. This condition of things will in all probability continue a month longer, when the mists will slowly disappear from the public eye, and our humbugged fellow citizens will ascertain in truth, which party is uppermost in the Key Stone State. In illustration, we may give the flourishing headings from two extras with which we have been favored. The first is from the office of the Harrisburgh Intelligencer, and is to the following effect:

POPULAR VOTE.

WHIG GAIN IN TWENTY-SIX COUNTIES

5099 votes!!!

Majority now, ☞10,370!

The second is from the Pennsylvanian of this city, a Van Buren paper, and runs thus:

PENNSYLVANIA ELECTION.

"We give below all the returns which were received by last night's mails. It will be seen that the democratic majority is increased 1500 on the vote of 1836. We have not the slightest doubt that the vote at the recent election will continue to show considerable gain over that of 1836. The State is certainly safe for Van Buren. The Legislature is doubtful. This is in consequence of the iniquitous apportionment bill of 1838, which, notwithstanding the majority in the popular vote, may and does frequently deprive the democratic party of their just representation."

Now, taking the foregoing accounts as genuine, both parties are victorious in Pennsylvania. The probabilities are, that the Whigs have gained two members of Congress, and have also a majority in both branches of the Legislature, while the friends of Mr. Van Buren have the popular vote of the State, by a majority of from 3000 to 3500. Whether or not, the result will be different on Friday week, remains to be seen.—Bicknell of the 20th instant.

THE RESUMPTION QUESTION IN PHILADELPHIA.—We think we can now announce with confidence, says Bicknell's Reporter of the 20th instant, to our readers, that all the Banks of Philadelphia, will resume specie payments, on the 15th of January ensuing. The arrangement between the United States Bank and other Banks of Philadelphia, to which we have several times alluded, has now been definitely agreed upon, and will be carried into effect all in good time. The Bank of the United States having submitted her books to the examination of a committee of one from each Bank, the Institutions that hesitated—namely, the Commercial, the Farmers' & Mechanics', and the Mechanics' Bank, satisfied themselves as to the security of any loan that might be made, in order to assist resumption, and the difficulty was at once obviated. It now remains to be seen what will be done by the Eastern Banks, who have been so clamorous for a movement of this kind on the part of Philadelphia. Will or will they not take a portion of the Post Notes, about to be issued by the United States Bank, in order to postpone the Eastern debt for a time, and thus render resumption practicable. Doubtless they will. They are pledged in some sense to this course by honor—but it is their interest to assist the arrangement to which we have referred. They will run no risk, while they cannot but derive much benefit in a business and commercial point of view.

THE AMISTAD AFRICANS.—At the Circuit Court held at Hartford on the 17th inst, the case of the Amistad Africans having been continued from the last term of the court, to enable the counsel to agree on a statement of the facts preparatory to the appeal to the Supreme Court, a motion was made by R. S. Baldwin to dismiss the appeal from the District Court, on the ground that it appeared from the record of the District Court, that the allegations in the libels of Ruiz and Montez that the Africans were their property, were found not to be true; and that no appeal having been taken by them from the decree of that court, the question of property was conclusively settled; that the United States had no interest to authorise an appeal in their name; and that it appeared from the published correspondence between the Spanish Minister and the Secretary of State, that the Africans were not demanded by the Minister, "as slaves, but as Africans," for trial and punishment in Cuba.

Judge Thompson, however, considered appeal as taken from his pro forma decree at the last session of the court, though not entered on record, and that consequently the motion could not be entertained in the Circuit Court. He remarked that no prejudice to the Africans could be occasioned by a refusal to entertain the motion here, as it could be made in the Supreme Court.

It was stated by Mr. Baldwin that in the case of Holmes, a majority of the Supreme Court had expressed the opinion, that in the absence of stipulation, no power exists in the executive of any department of government to surrender fugitive criminals to a foreign government for trial.—Journal of Commerce.

THE UNITED STATES AND MEXICO.—We learn with regret, from the National Intelligencer, that very little progress had been made by the Joint Commissioners under the treaty with Mexico for the adjustment of the claims of citizens of the U. States against Mexico.

Owing to some causes with which we are unacquainted, says that paper, the commissioners on the part of Mexico did not arrive in this city, the place designated in the convention for their meeting, until the middle of August.

Since the 17th of August, the Commissioners have had regular meetings until within a few days past, when they adjourned for a short time without having established any rules for their future government in the adjudication of the multifarious claims that will be presented to their consideration. A painful anxiety is naturally felt on this subject by the claimants, to whose position the public cannot be supposed to be insensible.

Where the responsibility rests for this procrastination, or rather from this omission to act at all, we are unable to determine. Judging of the future by the past, we apprehend that the time designated in the convention for the completion of the labours of the Board will be far too short. —N. Y. Star.

O. K.—"Vat zey mean ze letter O. K. vich I see every day, almost two, three, eleven times in ze journal politique of zé day?" asked a French gentleman in a crowd yesterday. "I ze grand national affair, and ven I come to ze end I behold O. K! I glance my eye to ze report of election, and he begin wiz O. K. Every ting has O. K.—and I never shall comprehend him.

"Why, sir," answered one of the company, looking very knowing, "it means oll korrect."

"No, monseer," said another, "it stands for orful katastrophe."

"You're mistaken," says a third, "it means oll for Kent."

"Wrong," exclaims a fourth, "it means oll konfirmed."

"Not right," says a fifth, "it means oll komplete."

"It means old Kentuck," says a sixth.

"No it is'nt," roars out a seventh, who appeared to be a Cockney, "it is orrid kalamity."

"That's wrong," says an eighth, "it means that the political writers having exhausted all the words in the English dictionary, have been compelled to resort to single letters to express themselves.—Therefore it's oll kompelled."

So the Frenchman was just as wise as ever.

The Late Gale on the Lakes has proved more destructive than was at first reported. Additional damage to vessels has been ascertained, with great loss of property. Fears are entertained of the loss of one or two schooners, with their crews, and among others is mentioned the Helen Mar, of Sandusky, Capt. J. W. Ransom, with 3000 bushels of Wheat on board, and no insurance. The schooner was a staunch one, and Captain R. an experienced navigator—hopes were entertained of her having found shelter in some of the Canadian ports, but these seem now to be relinquished. The gale exceeded in violence any that has been experienced for several years.—Ohio State Journal.

SHIPWRECK.—The Br. schr. Adventure, Lowe, 10 days from Abaco, at Baltimore, reports—that the schooner Delight, Stevens, of N. York, from this port, whence she sailed on the 5th September, bound to New Orleans, was driven ashore in a gale of wind on the 12th September, at Abaco. Captain, mate, two seamen and a female passenger named Walker, of this place, saved; the remaining three of the crew and four passengers were supposed to be lost.

